VER. 12. First-fruits, &c., to be voluntarily given to the priests, in honour of God. The honey arising from dates might also be offered. C.—It was inferior to that of bees. Joseph. Bel. v. 3. See Num. xv. 19.

VER. 13. Salt. In every sacrifice salt was to be used, which is a symbol of wisdom and discretion, without which none of our performances are acceptable to God. Ch.—Salt is not prescribed in the sacrifices of animals. But it is used in them, as we learn from the Jews, and from S. Mark ix. 48, shall be salted.—Covenant. It is so called, because it was a perpetual and durable condition of the alliance with God, which was renewed in the blood of the covenant. (C.); or it may signify "the salt prescribed" by God: for the Jews are often used synonymously. M.—Let your speech be seasoned with salt, Col. iv. 6. See Num. xviii. 19.

14 But if thou offer a gift of the first-fruits of thy corn to the Lord, of the ears yet green, thou shalt dry it at the fire, and break it small like meal, and so shalt thou offer thy first-fruits to the Lord, 15 Pouring oil upon it, and putting on frankincense, because it is the oblation of the Lord.

16 Whereof the priest shall burn for a memorial of the gift, part of the corn broken small, and of the oil, and all the frankincense.

CHAP. III.

Of peace-offerings.

AND if his oblation be a sacrifice of peace-offerings, and he will offer of the herd, whether male or female, he shall offer them without blemish before the Lord.

2 And he shall lay his hand upon the head of his victim, which shall be slain in the entry of the tabernacle of the testimony, and the sons of Aaron, the priests, shall pour the blood round about upon the altar.

3 And they shall offer of the sacrifice of peace-offerings, for an oblation to the Lord, the fat that covereth the entrails, and all the fat that is within :

4 The two kidneys, with the fat wherewith the flanks are covered, and the caul of the liver with the two little kidneys.

5 And they shall burn them upon the altar, for a holocaust, putting fire under the wood : for an oblation of most sweet savour to the Lord.

6 But if his oblation, and the sacrifice of peace-offering, be of the flock, whether he offer male or female, they shall be without blemish.

7 If he offer a lamb before the Lord,

8 He shall put his hand upon the head of his victim : and it shall be slain in the entry of the tabernacle of testimony : and the sons of Aaron shall pour the blood thereof round about upon the altar.

9 And they shall offer of the victim of peace-offerings a sacrifice to the Lord : the fat and the whole rump,

10 With the kidneys, and the fat that covereth the belly and all the vitals, and both the little kidneys, with the fat that is about the flanks, and the caul of the liver with the little kidneys.

^a A. M. 2514.—^b Exod. xxix. 13.

VER. 14. And break, &c. Heb. has simply, "corn beaten out (or ready to be beaten out) of full ears." H.—These were to be offered at the Passover. D.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Peace-offerings. Peace, in the Scripture language, signifies happiness, welfare, or prosperity ; in a word, all kind of blessings. Such sacrifices, therefore, as were offered either on occasion of blessings received, or to obtain new favours, were called pacific or peace-offerings. In these some part of the victim was consumed with fire on the altar of God : other parts were eaten by the priests, and by the persons for whom the sacrifice was offered. Ch.—Female beasts might here be sacrificed, but not birds. The victims were either offered to praise God for past favours, or to comply with some vow, or were perfectly free. Chap. vii. 12.

VER. 3. Fat. All the fat was carefully presented to the Lord.

VER. 4. Flanks. S. Jerom sometimes translates the Heb. loins, as the Sept. and Sym. do (Psal. xxxvii. 7) ; and this Bochart believes is the most proper signification. C.—Two is not specified in the Latin, nor little in the Hebrew.

VER. 8. It. Heb. and Sept. "he shall slay," ver. 2, 13. C.

VER. 9. Whole rump. Sept. "the loin without blemish." The tail of the Arabian sheep is extremely large and fat, weighing eight or ten pounds ; so that it is necessary to support it on a vehicle. Busbecq. ep. 3. The tail was not sacrificed in any other species. M.

VER. 17. Fat. It is meant of the fat which by the prescription of the law was to be offered on God's altar : not of the fat of meat, such as we commonly eat.

11 And the priest shall burn them upon the altar, for the food of the fire, and of the oblation of the Lord.

12 If his offering be a goat, and he offer it to the Lord,

13 He shall put his hand upon the head thereof : and shall immolate it in the entry of the tabernacle of the testimony. And the sons of Aaron shall pour the blood thereof round about upon the altar.

14 And they shall take of it for the food of the Lord's fire, the fat that covereth the belly, and that covereth all the vital parts :

15 The two little kidneys, with the caul that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the fat of the liver with the little kidneys :

16 And the priest shall burn them upon the altar, for the food of the fire, and of a most sweet savour. All the fat shall be the Lord's,

17 By a perpetual law for your generations, and in all your habitations : neither blood nor fat shall you eat at all

CHAP. IV.

Of offerings for sins of ignorance.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses,^e saying :

2 Say to the children of Israel : The soul that sinneth through ignorance, and doth any thing concerning any of the commandments of the Lord, which he commanded not to be done :

3 If the priest that is anointed shall sin, making the people to offend, he shall offer to the Lord for his sin, a calf without blemish.

4 And he shall bring it to the door of the testimony before the Lord, and shall put his hand upon the head thereof, and shall sacrifice it to the Lord.

5 He shall take also of the blood of the calf, and carry it into the tabernacle of the testimony.

6 And having dipped his finger in the blood, he shall sprinkle with it seven times before the Lord, before the veil of the sanctuary.

7 And he shall put some of the same blood upon the horns of the altar of the sweet incense most acceptable to the Lord, which is in the tabernacle of the testimony. And he shall pour all the rest of the blood at the foot of the altar of holocaust in the entry of the tabernacle.

8 And he shall take off the fat of the calf for the sin

^e A. M. 2514.

Ch.—This distinction is sufficiently insinuated (chap. vii. 25) ; whence it also appears that the fat, here forbidden, is only that which, in all sacrifices, appertains to the Lord, ver. 9, 10. The fat which was intermingled with the flesh might be eaten, and even the rest if the animal was not sacrificed. God repeatedly forbids the use of blood. Chap. xvii. 13.

CHAP. IV. VER. 2. Ignorance. To be ignorant of what we are bound to know is sinful : and for such culpable ignorance, these sacrifices, prescribed in this and the following chapter, were appointed. Ch.—Not to be done. Hence the Rabbin admit sins of ignorance, only against the negative precepts. But when God forbids one thing, he commands the contrary ; and we may sin by ignorance against any of his ordinances. If the ignorance be voluntary, it enhances the crime. But if the ignorance were perfectly involuntary, and inculpable, no sacrifice was required ; so that God here speaks only of that sort of ignorance which involved some degree of negligence.

VER. 3. Anointed. That is, "the high priest," Sept. Inferior priests were not anointed, except the sons of Aaron, at the beginning. C.—Offend, in some smaller matter. If he engaged his brethren in the crime of idolatry, he should die. Deut. xiii. 15. C.—Before the solemn unction, he might be expiated, like one of the princes. M.—Calf. Heb. por, does not specify the age. C.

VER. 5. The blood. As the figure of the blood of Christ shed for the remission of our sins ; and carried by him into the sanctuary of heaven.

VER. 6. Seven. A number consecrated in Scripture, (C) and not superstitious. W.—Sanctuary, or most holy place. M. offering, as well that which covereth the entrails, as all the inwards:

9 The two little kidneys, and the caul that is upon them which is by the flanks, and the fat of the liver, with the little kidneys,

10 As it is taken off from the calf of the sacrifice of peace-offerings, and he shall burn them upon the altar of holocaust.

11 But the skin and all the flesh, with the head and the feet, and the bowels, and the dung,

12 And the rest of the body, he shall carry forth without the camp into a clean place, where the ashes are wont to be poured out: and he shall burn them upon a pile of wood, they shall be burnt in the place where the ashes are poured out.

13 And if all the multitude of Israel shall be ignorant, and through ignorance shall do that which is against the commandment of the Lord,

14 And afterwards shall understand their sin, they shall offer for their sin a calf, and shall bring it to the door of the tabernacle.

15 And the ancients of the people shall put their hands upon the head thereof before the Lord. And the calf being immolated in the sight of the Lord,

16 The priest that is anointed, shall carry of the blood into the tabernacle of the testimony, 17 And shall dip his finger in it, and sprinkle it seven times before the veil.

18 And he shall put of the same blood on the horns of the altar that is before the Lord, in the tabernacle of the testimony: and the rest of the blood he shall pour at the foot of the altar of holocaust, which is at the door of the tabernacle of the testimony.

19 And all the fat thereof he shall take off, and shall burn it upon the altar:

20 Doing so with this calf, as he did also with that before: and the priest praying for them, the Lord will be merciful unto them.

21 But the calf itself he shall carry forth without the camp, and shall burn it as he did the former calf: because it is for the sin of the multitude.

22 If a prince shall sin, and through ignorance do any one of the things that the law of the Lord forbiddeth, 23 And afterwards shall come to know his sin, he shall offer a buck-goat without blemish, a sacrifice to the Lord.

24 And he shall put his hand upon the head thereof;

VER. 12. Ashes of the victims. They were first laid beside the altar of holocausts. By this ceremony, the priest begged that his sins might be removed from the sight of God, (M.) by virtue of Christ's sacrifice, who suffered out of the gate of Jerusalem. Heb. xiii. 13. The high priest was obliged to offer this sacrifice himself, to expiate his own sin, as well as that of the people. Heb. ix. 7.

VER. 13. Multitude assembled. Sept. add, "he involuntarily ignorant, and no one of the congregation perceive the truth, (or word,) and shall transgress, by commission or omission, one of all the precepts of the Lord." Such was the offence of Saul and of the people. 1 Kings xiv. 33. On these occasions, the elders were to put their hands on the victim, to acknowledge the general offence, if it were not of too heinous a nature to be expiated by sacrifice. See Deut. xiii. 12.

VER. 22. A prince. King, magistrate, general, chief of a tribe, or great family; in a word, one elevated above the rest (Nossia); as appears, Num. i. 4; vii. 2.

VER. 24. Hc. Sam. and Sept. read, "they shall have," referring it to the priests.

VER. 26. Him. Moses does not here specify what was to be done with the flesh. But (chap. vi. 26) he commands it to be given to the priests. C.—In the sacrifices for the sins of the multitude, or of the priest, all was consumed; to and when he hath immolated it in the place where the holocaust is wont to be slain before the Lord, because it is for sin,

25 The priest shall dip his finger in the blood of the victim for sin, touching therewith the horns of the altar of holocaust, and pouring out the rest at the foot thereof

26 But the fat he shall burn upon it, as is wont to be done with the victims of peace-offerings: and the priest shall pray for him, and for his sin, and it shall be forgiven him.

27 And if any one of the people of the land shall sin through ignorance, doing any of those things that by the law of the Lord are forbidden, and offending, 28 And shall come to know his sin, he shall offer a she-goat without blemish.

29 And he shall put his hand upon the head of the victim that is for sin, and shall immolate it in the place of the holocaust.

30 And the priest shall take of the blood with his finger, and shall touch the horns of the altar of holocaust, and shall pour out the rest at the foot thereof.

31 But taking off all the fat, as is wont to be taken away of the victims of peace-offerings, he shall burn it upon the altar, for a sweet savour to the Lord: and he shall pray for him, and it shall be forgiven him.

32 But if he offer of the flock a victim for his sin, to wit, an ewe without blemish:

33 He shall put his hand upon the head thereof, and shall immolate it in the place where the victims of holocausts are wont to be slain.

34 And the priest shall take of the blood thereof with his finger, and shall touch the horns of the altar of holocaust, and the rest he shall pour out at the foot thereof.

35 All the fat also he shall take off, as the fat of the ram that is offered for peace-offerings is wont to be taken away: and shall burn it upon the altar, for a burnt-sacrifice of the Lord: and he shall pray for him and for his sin, and it shall be forgiven him.

CHAP. V.

Of other sacrifices for sins.

IF any one sin,* and hear the voice of one swearing, and is a witness either because he himself hath seen, or is privy to it: if he do not utter it, he shall bear his iniquity.

express a greater detestation of such offences, (T.) and that the priests might derive no benefit from them. Theod. q. 3. S. Tho. i. 2, q. 102, a. 3. W.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Swearing. We are accountable for the sins of others to which we are accessory, as appears from this and part of the following chapter. No distinction of persons is here noticed. If any one, therefore, be witness to another's promise, confirmed by oath, and, being cited to the bar, refuse to speak, he shall be guilty of sin, and offer the sacrifice prescribed, (ver. 6.) for all the preceding cases. Restitution must also be made to the injured person. M.—But others suppose that no sacrifice was allowed for such an obstinate wretch as would not answer when the judge swore or adjured him. He was liable to be put to death. The associate of the thief fell under the like punishment as the thief himself, when he would not reveal the theft to the judge. Prov. xxix. 24. Others again understand this swearing to mean blaspheming God. If the hearer do not reprehend him, he shall suffer as his accomplice. Orig. Philo. C.—When perjury prejudiceth another's cause, we are bound to reveal what we know to the judge, if it can be done so as to avoid scandal. W.

VER. 2. Beast. All wild beasts were deemed unclean; but domestic clean cattle, though slain, did not defile (C.); while some of the unclean did, even other creeping thing : and forgetteth his uncleanness, he is guilty, and hath offended :

3 And if he touch any thing of the uncleanness of man, according to any uncleanness wherewith he is wont to be defiled, and having forgotten it, come afterwards to know it, he shall be guilty of an offence.

4 The person that sweareth, and uttereth with his lips, that he would do either evil or good, and bindeth the same with an oath, and his word, and having forgotten it afterwards understandeth his offence,

5 Let him do penance for his sin,

6 And offer of the flocks an ewe-lamb, or a she-goat, and the priest shall pray for him and for his sin :

7 But if he be not able to offer a beast, let him offer two turtles,^a or two young pigeons to the Lord, one for sin, and the other for a holocaust,

8 And he shall give them to the priest : who shall offer the first for sin, and twist back the head of it to the little pinions, so that it stick to the neck, and be not altogether broken off.

9 And of its blood he shall sprinkle the side of the altar, and whatsoever is left, he shall let it drop at the bottom thereof, because it is for sin.

10 And the other he shall burn for a holocaust, as is wont to be done : and the priest shall pray for him, and for his sin, and it shall be forgiven him.

11 And if his hand be not able to offer two turtles, or two young pigeons, he shall offer for his sin the tenth part of an ephi of flour. He shall not put oil upon it, nor put any frankincense thereon, because it is for sin :

12 And he shall deliver it to the priest : who shall take a handful thereof, and shall burn it upon the altar for a memorial of him that offered it :

13 Praying for him and making atonement : but the part that is left, he himself shall have for a gift.

14 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying :

15 If any one shall sin through mistake, transgressing the ceremonies in those things that are sacrificed to the Lord, he shall offer for his offence a ram without blemish out of the flocks, that may be bought for two sicles, according to the weight of the sanctuary :

16 And he shall make good the damage itself which he hath done, and shall add the fifth part besides, delivering it to the priest, who shall pray for him, offering the ram, and it shall be forgiven him.

17 If any one sin through ignorance, and do one of those things which by the law of the Lord are forbidden, and being guilty of sin, understand his iniquity,

18 He shall offer of the flocks a ram without blemish to the priest, according to the measure, and estimation of the sin ; and the priest shall pray for him, because he did it ignorantly : and it shall be forgiven him,

19 Because by mistake he trespassed against the Lord.

CHAP. VI.

Oblations for sins of injustice : ordinances concerning the holocausts and the perpetual fire : the sacrifices of the priests, and the sin-offerings.

THE Lord spoke to Moses,^b saying :

2 Whosoever shall sin, and despising the Lord, shall deny to his neighbour the thing delivered to his keeping, which was committed to his trust ; or shall by force extort any thing, or commit oppression,

3 Or shall find a thing lost, and denying it, shall also swear falsely, or shall do any other of the many things, wherein men are wont to sin,

4 Being convicted of the offence, he shall restore

5 All that he would have gotten by fraud, in the principal,^c and the fifth part besides to the owner, whom he wronged.

6 Moreover for his sin he shall offer a ram without blemish out of the flock, and shall give it to the priest, according to the estimation and measure of the offence :

7 And he shall pray for him before the Lord, and he shall have forgiveness for every thing in doing of which he hath sinned.

8 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying :

9 Command Aaron and his sons : This is the law alive. Chap. xi. 26, 31. H.—Fishes are comprised under the name of reptiles ; yet some were not unclean. Chap. xi. 9. The Sept. neglect reptiles, and put "the carcasses of impure abominations ;" by which they probably mean dogs, and such things as the Egyptians adored. T.

VER. 4. Lips. This is necessary before he can be punished by men : but every secret promise binds before God. Tostat.—Evil or good : any thing whatsoever, whether favour or punishment, whether the completion of it be difficult or easy. C.—Thus parents sometimes foolishly swear that they will chastise their children unmercifully ; libertines, that they will live in luxuries as long as they have any money ; ill-natured people, that they will never speak to such a one, that they will murder, &c. To execute such promises, even confirmed by an oath, would be a double crime. Let them ask pardon of God for their rash oath. Philo.—Herod made his oath a pretext for killing the Baptist, deluding himself, perhaps, with a false interpretation of this law. H.

VER. 5. Let, &c. Heb. "and surely when he is guilty in one of these things, he shall confess that he hath sinned therein ; (6.) and he shall bring his sin-offering unto the Lord, for his transgression," &c. Confession to the priest was requisite, before all the other sacrifices for sin. See Josep. iii. 10. H.

VER. 9. Sin. The flesh belonged to the priest. Chap. vi. 26.

VER. 11. Ephi, or a gomer, which is the tenth part of three pecks and three quarts, English. Arbuthnot.—For sin, and therefore to show how odious sin is to God, he will not allow any frankincense to be offered. M.

VER. 12. Memorial. See chap. ii. 2. At the end, the Heb. and Sept. add, "It is a sin-offering ;" peccatum. C.—Hence the priests are said to eat the sins of the people. Osee iv. 8.

VER. 15. The ceremonies : omitted in Heb. and Sept.—Sacrificed, neglecting to pay the first-fruits ; or, by mistake, eating any of the victims reserved for God, or for the priests.

VER. 18. Sin. If it were grievous, the priest required a more valuable victim. VER. 15.

VER. 19. Lord. Heb. "It is a victim for the sin which he has committed against the Lord." From this chapter, as well as from Num. v. 7, it is obvious that a special confession was necessary, not only for those who had fallen into the disorder of leprosy, which was a figure of sin, and often inflicted by God in punishment of it ; but also, when they had given way to the smallest transgression against the commands and ceremonies of the Lord. H.—This custom is still observed by the Jews. Galatinus x. 3.

CHAP. VI. VER. 2. Despising : interpretatively ; not formally, as Num. xv. Estius.—The Lord, who knows the truth, and is an avenger of all injustice, even the most secret. H.—The law inflicts indeed a smaller punishment, as these offences are supposed to be secret, and the offender is thus invited to repent, and to repair the injury done. When the crime is public, the law is more severe. C.—Heb. "If a soul transgress and sin against the Lord." Sept. "If any one willfully despise the commands," &c. H.—Trust. Heb. and Sept. "or a sum given for traffic for their common benefit."—Oppression, by any means whatsoever, detaining the wages of the labourer, &c.

VER. 3. Lost. We acquire no title to the thing by finding it. The Roman law, as well as divines, condemn those who appropriate the thing found to their own use, as guilty of theft, whether they knew to whom it belonged or not. We may, however, take up what is lost, (C.) and endeavour to find the owner, who must indemnify us for our trouble ; and, if we never find him, we are directed to give the price to the poor, for the owner's welfare. H.

VER. 4. Convicted, by his own conscience, and by the judgment of the priest to whom he has confessed his sin.

VER. 5. Wronged. Heb. and Chaldee add, "in the day of his sin-offering ;" and the Sept. "in which he is convicted." No unnecessary delay in making restitution can be allowed to the sincere penitent, who wishes to make his peace with God.

VER. 9. Holocaust. The regulations respecting it, as they regard the priests are here given, as chap. i. Directions were given to those who presented the of a holocaust : It shall be burnt upon the altar, all night until morning : the fire shall be of the same altar.

10 The priest shall be vested with the tunic and the linen breeches ; and he shall take up the ashes of that which the devouring fire hath burnt, and putting them beside the altar,

11 Shall put off his former vestments, and being clothed with others, shall carry them forth without the camp, and shall cause them to be consumed to dust in a very clean place.

12 And the fire on the altar shall always burn, and the priest shall feed it, putting wood on it every day in the morning, and laying on the holocaust, shall burn thereupon the fat of the peace-offerings.

13 This is the perpetual fire which shall never go out on the altar.

14 This is the law of the sacrifice and libations, which the children of Aaron shall offer before the Lord, and before the altar.

15 The priest shall take a handful of the flour that is tempered with oil, and all the frankincense that is put upon the flour : and he shall burn it on the altar for a memorial of most sweet odour to the Lord :

16 And the part of the flour that is left, Aaron and his sons shall eat, without leaven : and he shall eat it in the holy place of the court of the tabernacle.

17 And therefore it shall not be leavened, because part thereof is offered for the burnt-sacrifice of the Lord. It shall be most holy, as that which is offered for sin and for trespass.

18 The males only of the race of Aaron shall eat it. It shall be an ordinance everlasting in your generations concerning the sacrifices of the Lord : every one that toucheth them shall be sanctified.

19 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying :

20 This is the oblation of Aaron, and of his sons, which they must offer to the Lord, in the day of their anointing : They shall offer the tenth part of an ephi of flour for a perpetual sacrifice, half of it in the morning, and half of it in the evening :

21 It shall be tempered with oil, and shall be fried in a frying-pan.

22 And the priest that rightfully succeedeth his father, shall offer it hot, for a most sweet odour to the Lord, and it shall be wholly burnt on the altar.

victims.—Morning. All the parts of the victim were not laid on at the same time. The like was observed during the day also, when no other sacrifices were to be offered on this altar.—Of the same, not strange, unhallowed fire, but such as was kept continually burning on the altar of holocausts, as the Heb. intimates ; “the fire of the altar shall be burning in it.” During the marches in the desert, it is not written how this fire was preserved.

VER. 13. The perpetual fire. This fire came from heaven, (infra, chap. ix. 24,) and was always kept burning on the altar : as a figure of the heavenly fire of Divine love, which ought to be always burning in the heart of a Christian. Ch.—It must be fed by assiduous meditation on the Scripture and holy things. D.

VER. 18. Lord. As long as this law shall be in force. M.—Sanctified. Theodoret (q. 5) seems to assert, that all such were obliged to serve the altar in some function or other.

VER. 22. Rightfully. According to the law, which decides that, if the first-born be deformed, the next shall succeed. Chap. xxi. 18. Heb. “the priest, of his sons, who is anointed in his stead, shall offer it.” No mention is made of its being hot, either here or in the Sept. H.

VER. 23. Sacrifice of flour, not of animals. Exod. xxix. 26

23 For every sacrifice of the priest shall be consumed with fire, neither shall any man eat thereof.

24 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying :

25 Say to Aaron and his sons : This is the law of the victim for sin : In the place where the holocaust is offered it shall be immolated before the Lord. It is holy of holies

26 The priest that offereth it, shall eat it in a holy place, in the court of the tabernacle.

27 Whatsoever shall touch the flesh thereof, shall be sanctified. If a garment be sprinkled with the blood thereof, it shall be washed in a holy place.

28 And the earthen vessel, wherein it was sodden, shall be broken ; but if the vessel be of brass, it shall be scoured, and washed with water.

29 Every male of the priestly race shall eat of the flesh thereof, because it is holy of holies.

30 For the victim that is slain for sin,* the blood of which is carried into the tabernacle of the testimony to make atonement in the sanctuary, shall not be eaten, but shall be burnt with fire.

CHAP. VII.

Of sacrifices for trespasses and thanks-offerings. No fat nor blood is to be eaten.

THIS^b also is the law of the sacrifice for a trespass, it is most holy :

2 And where the holocaust is immolated, the victim also for a trespass shall be slain : the blood thereof shall be poured round about the altar.

3 They shall offer thereof the rump and the fat that covereth the entrails :

4 The two little kidneys, and the fat which is by the flanks, and the caul of the liver, with the little kidneys.

5 And the priest shall burn them upon the altar, it is the burnt-sacrifice of the Lord for a trespass.

6 Every male of the priestly race, shall eat this flesh in a holy place, because it is most holy.

7 As the sacrifice for sin is offered, so is also that for a trespass : the same shall be the law of both these sacrifices : it shall belong to the priest that offereth it.

8 The priest that offereth the victim of holocaust, shall have the skin thereof.

9 And every sacrifice of flour that is baked in the oven, and whatsoever is dressed on the gridiron, or in the frying-pan, shall be the priest's that offereth it :

10 Whether they be tempered with oil, or dry, all the sons of Aaron shall have one as much as another.

VER. 25. Sin of individuals. The victims offered by the priest, or by the whole people, were to be burnt. Chap. iv. 7.

VER. 26. Tabernacle. No part shall be given to those who are not of the sacerdotal race. C.

VER. 27. Place, in the court, that so it may be worn again. M.

VER. 28. Sodden, or boiled. Such vessels, of private people, as had been used to boil part of the victim, (1 Kings ii. 13,) were either to be abandoned to the service of the altar, or broken, &c. C.

VER. 30. Fire. As they are the victims for the sins of the priest and of the people. Chap. iv. 6, 18. M.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Trespass. Trespasses, for which these offerings were to be made, were less offences than those for which the sin-offerings were appointed. Ch. See chap. iv. 2.—Victim. Sept. “ram.”—Holy. To be eaten by priests, and in the court of the tabernacle, ver. 6. C.—Sins of commission, peccata, and of omission, delicta, are equally offensive to God. S. Aug. q. 20. W.

VER. 9. Priest's ; to be divided among his brethren, ver. 10. They officiated a week by turns. C.—Each, therefore, claimed the parts allotted by God to the priest on duty.

11 This is the law of the sacrifice of peace-offerings that is offered to the Lord.

12 If the oblation be for thanksgiving, they shall offer loaves without leaven tempered with oil, and unleavened wafers anointed with oil, and fine flour fried, and cakes tempered and mingled with oil:

13 Moreover loaves of leavened bread, with the sacrifice of thanks, which is offered for peace-offerings:

14 Of which one shall be offered to the Lord for first-fruits, and shall be the priest's that shall pour out the blood of the victim.

15 And the flesh of it shall be eaten the same day, neither shall any of it remain until the morning.

16 If any man by vow, or of his own accord, offer a sacrifice, it shall in like manner be eaten the same day: and if any of it remain until the morrow, it is lawful to eat it:

17 But whatsoever shall be found on the third day shall be consumed with fire.

18 If any man eat of the flesh of the victim of peace-offerings on the third day, the oblation shall be of no effect, neither shall it profit the offerer: yea rather whatsoever soul shall defile itself with such meat, shall be guilty of transgression.

19 The flesh that hath touched any unclean thing, shall not be eaten, but shall be burnt with fire: he that is clean shall eat of it.

20 If any one that is defiled, shall eat of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace-offerings, which is offered to the Lord, he shall be cut off from his people.

21 And he that hath touched the uncleanness of man, or of beast, or of any thing that can defile, and shall eat of such kind of flesh, shall be cut off from his people.

22 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

23 Say to the children of Israel: The fat of a sheep, and of an ox, and of a goat you shall not eat.

24 The fat of a carcass that hath died of itself, and of a beast that was caught by another beast, you shall have for divers uses.

25 If any man eat the fat that should be offered for the burnt-sacrifice of the Lord, he shall perish out of his people.

26 Moreover you shall not eat the blood of any creature whatsoever, whether of birds or beasts.

27 Every one that eateth blood, shall perish from among the people.

28 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

29 Speak to the children of Israel, saying: He that offereth a victim of peace-offerings to the Lord, let him offer therewith a sacrifice also, that is, the libations thereof.

30 He shall hold in his hands the fat of the victim, and the breast: and when he hath offered and consecrated both to the Lord, he shall deliver them to the priest, 31 Who shall burn the fat upon the altar, but the breast shall be Aaron's, and his sons'.

32 The right shoulder also of the victims of peace-offerings, shall fall to the priest for first-fruits.

33 He among the sons of Aaron, that offereth the blood and the fat, he shall have the right shoulder also for his portion.

34 For the breast that is elevated, and the shoulder that is separated, I have taken of the children of Israel, from off their victims of peace-offerings, and have given them to Aaron the priest, and to his sons, by a law for ever, from all the people of Israel.

35 This is the anointing of Aaron and his sons, in the ceremonies of the Lord, in the day when Moses offered them, that they might do the office of priesthood, 36 And the things that the Lord commanded to be given them by the children of Israel, by a perpetual observance in their generations.

37 This is the law of holocaust, and of the sacrifice for sin, and for trespass, and for consecration, and the victims of peace-offerings:

38 Which the Lord appointed to Moses in Mount Sinai, when he commanded the children of Israel, that they should offer their oblations to the Lord in the desert of Sinai.

7 He vested the high priest with the strait linen garment, girding him with the girdle, and putting on him the violet tunic, and over it he put the ephod,

8 And binding it with the girdle, he fitted it to the rational, on which was Doctrine and Truth.

9 He put also the mitre upon his head: and upon the mitre over the forehead, he put the plate of gold consecrated with sanctification, as the Lord had commanded him.

10 He took also the oil of unction, with which he anointed the tabernacle, with all the furniture thereof.

11 And when he had sanctified and sprinkled the altar seven times, he anointed it, and all the vessels thereof, and the laver with the foot thereof he sanctified with the oil.

12 *And he poured it upon Aaron's head, and he anointed and consecrated him:

13 And after he had offered his sons, he vested them with linen tunics, and girded them with girdles, and put mitres on them, as the Lord had commanded.

14 He offered also the calf for sin: and when Aaron and his sons had put their hands upon the head thereof, 15 He immolated it: and took the blood, and dipping his finger in it, he touched the horns of the altar round about. Which being expiated, and sanctified, he poured the rest of the blood at the bottom thereof.

16 But the fat that was upon the entrails, and the caul of the liver, and the two little kidneys, with their fat, he burnt upon the altar:

17 And the calf with the skin, and the flesh, and the dung, he burnt without the camp, as the Lord had commanded.

18 He offered also a ram for a holocaust: and when Aaron and his sons had put their hands upon its head, 19 He immolated it, and poured the blood thereof round about upon the altar.

20 And cutting the ram into pieces, the head thereof, and the joints, and the fat he burnt in the fire, 21 Having first washed the entrails, and the feet, and the whole ram together, he burnt upon the altar, because it was a holocaust of most sweet odour to the Lord, as he had commanded him.

22 He offered also the second ram, in the consecration of priests: and Aaron and his sons put their hands upon the head thereof:

23 And when Moses had immolated it, he took of the blood thereof, and touched the tip of Aaron's right ear, and the thumb of his right hand, and in like manner also the great toe of his right foot.

24 He offered also the sons of Aaron: and when with the blood of the ram that was immolated, he had touched the tip of the right ear of every one of them, and the thumbs of their right hands, and the great toes of their right feet, the rest he poured on the altar round about:

25 But the fat, and the rump, and all the fat that covereth the entrails, and the caul of the liver, and the two kidneys with their fat, and with the right shoulder, he separated.

26 And taking out of the basket of unleavened bread, which was before the Lord, a loaf without leaven, and a cake tempered with oil, and a wafer, he put them upon the fat, and the right shoulder

27 Delivering all to Aaron, and to his sons: who having lifted them up before the Lord, 28 He took them again from their hands, and burnt them upon the altar of holocaust, because it was the oblation of consecration, for a sweet odour of sacrifice to the Lord.

29 And he took of the ram of consecration, the breast for his portion, elevating it before the Lord, as the Lord had commanded him.

30 And taking the ointment, and the blood that was upon the altar, he sprinkled Aaron, and his vestments, and his sons and their vestments with it.

31 And when he had sanctified them in their vestments, he commanded them, saying: Boil the flesh before the door of the tabernacle, and there eat it. Eat ye also the loaves of consecration, that are laid in the basket, as the Lord commanded me, saying: "Aaron and his sons shall eat them:"

32 And whatsoever shall be left of the flesh and the loaves, shall be consumed with fire.

33 And you shall not go out of the door of the tabernacle for seven days, until the day wherein the time of your consecration shall be expired. For in seven days the consecration is finished:

34 As at this present it hath been done, that the rite of the sacrifice might be accomplished.

35 Day and night shall you remain in the tabernacle, observing the watches of the Lord, lest you die: for so it hath been commanded me.

The high priest had seven special ornaments: 1. white linen, to denote purity; 2. a curious girdle, intimating that he must use discretion in all things; 3. the long tunic of various colours, with bells, &c., signifying heavenly conversation upon earth, union and harmony in faith and morals; 4. an ephod with two precious stones on the shoulders, teaching him to support the failings of the multitude; 5. the rational, with its ornaments, show that the pontiff should be solicitous to teach sound and profitable doctrine; 6. the mitre indicates, that all his actions should be referred to God above; and lastly, the plate of gold denotes that he should have God always in view, and never forget that consummate holiness which He requirerh. CHAP. IX.

Aaron offereth sacrifice for himself and the people. Fire cometh from the Lord upon the altar.

AND when^a the eighth day was come, Moses called Aaron and his sons,^b and the ancients of Israel, and said to Aaron :

2 Take of the herd a calf for sin, and a ram for a holocaust, both without blemish, and offer them before the Lord.

3 And to the children of Israel thou shalt say : Take ye a he-goat for sin, and a calf, and a lamb, both of a year old, and without blemish, for a holocaust,

4 Also a bullock and a ram for peace-offerings : and immolate them before the Lord, offering for the sacrifice of every one of them flour tempered with oil ; for to-day the Lord will appear to you.

5 They brought therefore all things that Moses had commanded before the door of the tabernacle : where when all the multitude stood,

6 Moses said : This is the word which the Lord hath commanded : do it, and his glory will appear to you.

7 And he said to Aaron : Approach to the altar, and offer sacrifice for thy sin : offer the holocaust, and pray for thyself and for the people : and when thou hast slain the people's victim, pray for them, as the Lord hath commanded.

8 And forthwith Aaron approaching to the altar, immolated the calf for his sin :

9 And his sons brought him the blood of it : and he dipped his finger therein, and touched the horns of the altar, and poured the rest at the foot thereof.

10 And the fat, and the little kidneys, and the caul of the liver, which are for sin, he burnt upon the altar, as the Lord had commanded Moses :

11 But the flesh and skins thereof he burnt with fire without the camp.

12 He immolated also the victim of holocaust : and his sons brought him the blood thereof, which he poured round about on the altar.

13 And the victim being cut into pieces, they brought to him the head and all the members, all which he burnt with fire upon the altar, 14 Having first washed the entrails and the feet with water.

15 Then offering for the sin of the people, he slew the he-goat : and expiating the altar,

16 He offered the holocaust :

17 Adding in the sacrifice the libations, which are offered withal, and burning them upon the altar, besides the ceremonies of the morning holocaust.

18 He immolated also the bullock and the ram, the peace-offerings of the people : and his sons brought him the blood, which he poured upon the altar round about.

19 The fat also of the bullock, and the rump of the ram, and the two little kidneys, with their fat, and the caul of the liver,

20 They put upon the breasts. And after the fat was burnt upon the altar, 21 Aaron separated their breasts, and the right shoulders, elevating them before the Lord, as Moses had commanded.

22 And stretching forth his hands to the people, he blessed them. And so the victims for sin, and the holocausts, and the peace-offerings, being finished, he came down.

23 And Moses and Aaron went into the tabernacle of the testimony, and afterwards came forth and blessed the people. And the glory of the Lord appeared to all the multitude :

24 And behold a fire coming forth from the Lord, devoured the holocaust, and the fat that was upon the altar : which when the multitude saw, they praised the Lord, falling on their faces.

Nadab and Abiu, for offering strange fire, are burnt by fire. Priests are forbidden to drink wine, when they enter into the tabernacle. The law of eating the holy things.

FABIOL.—The three ornaments of the priests put them in mind of purity, discretion, and a right intention, to be observed in all their conduct. On this occasion, a change was introduced in the priesthood, as the law was new ; the first-born being obliged to give place to Aaron's family. Thus, when these were deprived of the exclusive privilege, and people from any family were chosen by Christ, the law of Moses ceased to exist. Heb. vii. Thus God was pleased to show his approbation of the priests and victims, (C.) and at the same time to impress a religious awe upon the minds of the spectators. H.—A fire of the same nature came down upon the victims when Solomon dedicated his temple, (2 Par. vii. 1,) and was kept burning till the captivity, when it was hidden in a cistern. Being found afterwards, like a muddy water, God kindled it again, (2 Macc. i. 18 ; ii. 10,) and it was not lost till the persecution of Epiphanes.

VER. 24. The Lord : 2 Mac. ii. 10, explains this text. Fire came down from heaven, appearing like a flash of lightning, in the midst of the victims. Jos. Ant. iii. 9. C.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. The eldest sons, as they are mentioned first. Exod. vi. 23.—Censers. On the same evening of their consecration.—Fire. Not taken from the altar of holocausts. Chap. vi. 9. Some imagine that no formal precept had yet been given. But had not God commanded (chap. vi. 9, 12) that the victims should be burnt with the perpetual fire on the altar, and were not these young priests guilty of rashness in doing any thing of their own head, without positive instructions ? Hence some infer that their offence was mortal, and their punishment a prelude of eternal torments ; while others piously hope that their sin was only venial, and that it was expiated by their repentance and violent death, in which sense Philo explains they died before the Lord. Hence they were buried honourably.

2 And fire coming out from the Lord, destroyed them, and they died before the Lord.

3 And Moses said to Aaron: This is what the Lord hath spoken: I will be sanctified in them that approach to me, and I will be glorified in the sight of all the people. And when Aaron heard this, he held his peace.

4 And Moses called Misael and Elisaphan, the sons of Oziel, the uncle of Aaron, and said to them: Go and take away your brethren from before the sanctuary, and carry them without the camp.

5 And they went forthwith and took them as they lay, vested with linen tunics, and cast them forth, as had been commanded them.

6 And Moses said to Aaron, and to Eleazar and Ithamar, his sons: Uncover not your heads, and rend not your garments, lest perhaps you die, and indignation come upon all the congregation. Let your brethren, and all the house of Israel, bewail the burning which the Lord has kindled:

7 But you shall not go out of the door of the tabernacle, otherwise you shall perish: for the oil of the holy unction is on you. And they did all things according to the precept of Moses.

8 The Lord also said to Aaron:

9 You shall not drink wine nor any thing that may make drunk, thou nor thy sons, when you enter into the tabernacle of the testimony, lest you die: because it is an everlasting precept through your generations:

10 And that you may have knowledge to discern between holy and unholy, between unclean and clean:

11 And may teach the children of Israel all my ordinances, which the Lord hath spoken to them by the hand of Moses.

12 And Moses spoke to Aaron, and to Eleazar and Ithamar, his sons, that were left: Take the sacrifice that is remaining of the oblation of the Lord, and eat it without leaven beside the altar, because it is holy of holies.

13 And you shall eat it in a holy place: which is given to thee and thy sons of the oblations of the Lord, as it hath been commanded me.

14 The breast also that is offered, and the shoulder that is separated, you shall eat in a most clean place, thou and thy sons, and thy daughters with thee. For they are set aside for thee and thy children, of the victims of peace-offerings of the children of Israel:

15 Because they have elevated before the Lord the shoulder and the breast, and the fat that is burnt on the altar, and they belong to thee, and to thy sons, by a perpetual law, as the Lord hath commanded.

16 While these things were a doing, when Moses sought for the buck-goat, that had been offered for sin, he found it burnt: and being angry with Eleazar and Ithamar, the sons of Aaron that were left, he said:

17 Why did you not eat in the holy place the sacrifice for sin, which is most holy, and given to you, that you may bear the iniquity of the people, and may pray for them in the sight of the Lord,

18 Especially whereas none of the blood thereof hath been carried within the holy places, and you ought to have eaten it in the sanctuary, as was commanded me?

19 Aaron answered: This day hath been offered the victim for sin, and the holocaust before the Lord: and to me what thou seest has happened: how could I eat it, or please the Lord in the ceremonies, having a sorrowful heart?

20 Which when Moses had heard he was satisfied.

CHAP. XI.

The distinction of clean and unclean animals.

AND the Lord spoke^b to Moses and Aaron, saying:

2 Say to the children of Israel:^c These are the animals which you are to eat of all the living things of the earth.

3 Whatsoever hath the hoof divided, and cheweth the cud among the beasts, you shall eat.

4 But whatsoever cheweth indeed the cud, and hath a loof, but divideth it not, as the camel and others, that you shall not eat, but shall reckon it among the unclean.

VER. 19. How, &c. My children are slain. Heb. “and if I had eaten the sin-offering to-day, would it have been agreeable to the Lord?” H.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Aaron. God shows him this honour after his consecration, though not always. See chap. xii. and xvii., &c. W.

VER. 2. Animals which you are to eat, &c. The prohibition of so many kinds of beasts, birds, and fishes, in the law, was ordered, 1. to exercise the people in obedience and temperance; 2. to restrain them from the vices of which these animals were symbols; 3. because the things here forbidden were for the most part unwholesome, and not proper to be eaten; 4. that the people of God, by being obliged to abstain from things corporally unclean, might be trained up to seek a spiritual cleanness. Ch.—Those who chose rather to die than to transgress in this point, are justly honoured by the Church as martyrs, 2 Macc. vi. and vii. S. Greg. or. 20. H.

VER. 3. Hoof divided, and cheweth the cud. The dividing the hoof, and chewing the cud, signify discretion between good and evil, and meditating on the law of God: and where either of these is wanting, a man is unclean. In like manner, fishes were reputed unclean that had not fins and scales: that is, souls that did not raise themselves up by prayer, and cover themselves with the scales of virtues, (Ch.) particularly of mortification and penance. W.

VER. 4. Camel, which hath a hard skin connecting its hoof below. The Arabs and Persians eat its flesh. God will have his people keep at a distance from imitating them; and that is one of the reasons for this and similar precepts. C.

5 The cherogrillus which cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof, is unclean.

6 The hare also: for that too cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoof.

7 *And the swine, which, though it divideth the hoof, cheweth not the cud.

8 The flesh of these you shall not eat, nor shall you touch their carcasses, because they are unclean to you.

9 These are the things that breed in the waters, and which it is lawful to eat. All that hath fins, and scales, as well in the sea, as in the rivers, and the pools, you shall eat.

10 But whatsoever hath not fins and scales, of those things that move and live in the waters, shall be an abomination unto you,

11 And detestable: their flesh you shall not eat, and their carcasses you shall avoid.

12 All that have not fins and scales, in the waters, shall be unclean.

13 Of birds these are they which you must not eat, and which are to be avoided by you: The eagle, and the griffon, and the osprey,

14 And the kite, and the vulture, according to their kind.

15 And all that is of the raven kind, according to their likeness.

16 The ostrich, and the owl, and the larius, and the hawk according to its kind.

17 The screech-owl, and the cormorant, and the ibis,

18 And the swan, and the bittern, and the porphyryon,

19 The heron, and the charadriion according to its kind, the houp also, and the bat.

20 Of things that fly, whatsoever goeth upon four feet, shall be abominable to you.

21 But whatsoever walketh upon four feet, but hath the legs behind longer, wherewith it hoppeth upon the earth, 22 That you shall eat, as the bruchus in its kind, the attachus, and the ophiomachus, and the locust, every one according to their kind.

23 But of flying things, whatsoever hath four feet only, shall be an abomination to you:

24 And whosoever shall touch the carcasses of them, shall be defiled, and shall be unclean until the evening:

25 And if it be necessary that he carry any of these things when they are dead, he shall wash his clothes, and shall be unclean until the sun set.

26 Every beast that hath a hoof, but divideth it not, nor cheweth the cud, shall be unclean: and he that toucheth it shall be defiled.

27 That which walketh upon hands, of all animals which go on all four, shall be unclean: he that shall touch their carcasses shall be defiled until evening.

28 And he that shall carry such carcasses, shall wash his clothes, and shall be unclean until evening; because all these things are unclean to you.

29 These also shall be reckoned among unclean things, of all that move upon the earth, the weasel, and the mouse, and the crocodile, every one according to their kind:

30 The shrew, and the chameleon, and the stellio and the lizard, and the mole:

31 All these are unclean. He that toucheth their carcasses shall be unclean until the evening.

32 And upon what thing soever any of their carcasses shall fall, it shall be defiled, whether it be a vessel of wood, or a garment, or skins or hair-cloths; or any thing in which work is done, they shall be dipped in water, and shall be unclean until the evening, and so afterwards shall be clean.

33 But an earthen vessel, into which any of these shall fall, shall be defiled, and therefore is to be broken.

34 Any meat which you eat, if water from such a vessel be poured upon it, shall be unclean; and every liquor that is drunk out of any such vessel, shall be unclean.

* 2 Mac. vi. 18.

VER. 5. The cherogrillus. Some suppose it to be the rabbit, others the hedge-hog: S. Jerom intimates that it is another kind of animal common in Palestine, which lives in the holes of rocks, or in the earth. We choose here, as also in the names of several other creatures that follow, (which are little known in this part of the world,) to keep the Greek or Latin names. Ch.

VER. 6. Chereth. Some copies of the Sept. add not, which agrees with the nature of the hare; though the people to whom Moses addresses himself were of a different persuasion. Its hoof is not divided into two parts only, and therefore it is accounted unclean.

VER. 7. Swine. This animal was abhorred by many other nations. If an Egyptian happened to touch one, he plunged into the Nile. Herod. ii. 47. Few are to be seen in the East. C.—The Jews would hardly name them, but called them “the beast.” Old Eleazar was strongly instigated to pretend at least to eat swine’s flesh, but preferred a painful death before the transgression of God’s law. 2 Mac. vi. 18. H.

VER. 8. Carcasses. They might be touched while alive, ver. 24.

VER. 9. Ent. The Egyptians, and the priests of the Syrian goddess, abstained from fish.—Pools. Heb. and Sept. torrents. C.—Eels are prohibited, &c. M.

VER. 13. The griffon. Not the monster which the painters represent, which hath no being upon earth; but a bird of the eagle kind, larger than the common. Ch.—Osprey. The sea or black eagle, which is very clear-sighted, and expert in catching fish.

VER. 16. Ostrich; which was served up at the tables of the Persian kings. Heb. “the daughter of the henna;” (both éâne) or the swan. Isa. xiii. 21.—Owl, or perhaps the male ostrich, which cruelly abandons its young.—Larus, the water-hen. C.—Some have the cuckoo. H.

VER. 17. Owl, or the onocrotalus, which makes a hideous noise like an assibis, a bird adored in Egypt. Bochart takes the Heb. to mean an owl, as well as the following term, swan, (C.) which is not probable.

VER. 18. Bittern, onocrotalum. See ver. 17. Prot. version has “pelican and the gier-eagle,” for porphyryon. H.—Its beak and long legs are red. Plin. x. 46. Bochart understands the vulture, and the Samaritan version the pelican; both of which are remarkable for the care they take of their young.

VER. 19. Heron, or “stork,” noted for the same quality: éside, means “piety.”—Charadriion, a kind of heron, (C.) mentioned by Aristot. viii. 3. It is found in deep holes and rocks. M.—Some translate parrot, peacock, kite, &c. C.—Houp, or lapwing. H.

VER. 22. Locust. The three former are species of the same kind. The bruchus is a young locust, without wings, (S. Aug. in Psal. civ.) and the attachus the least of all. Plin. xxix. 5. The ophiomachus is large, “encounters serpents,” and is destitute of wings. The nations called Acridophagi, received their name from their feeding upon locusts, which are the food of the common people in Syria and Africa. See Plin. xi. 29, &c. Clenard, in 1541, wrote from Fez, that he had seen the sky darkened with clouds of locusts, which the people endeavoured presently to destroy, and filled waggon with their bodies, for food. Kirsten says, they are very delicious. Arnulph assures us, that they are a finger’s breadth, and are fried in oil by the poor. Raban. in Matt. iii. 4. See Joel ii. C.

VER. 23. Only. Equal in length, ver. 20, 21. M.

VER. 24. Evening. If he were guilty of sin in so doing, contrition would be necessary to regain God’s favour. W.—But the legal uncleanness would not be removed till the evening; as the one might subsist while the other was remitted. H.

VER. 25. Necessary. To prevent the obstruction of the road, or the infection of the air. M.—When any person touched these carcasses, he was obliged to wash his clothes immediately, and still to refrain from touching any thing sacred till sun-set. Estius.

VER. 26. It. When dead. It was lawful to ride on a camel, but not to eat its flesh.

VER. 27. Hands. Like a monkey, frog, &c., the fore-feet of which rather resemble hands.

VER. 30. Chameleon, feeds upon air, and assumes various colours. Plin. vii. 33. It resembles a lizard, as does the stellio, ib. xxix. 4.—Lizard. Prot. “snail.” H.

VER. 33. Broken. See chap. vi. 28, where a similar injunction is given. M.—And (ver. 35) ovens and pots, made of earthenware, according to Pollux are to be destroyed. T.

VER. 34. Water, unclean, or in a polluted vessel.

35 And upon whatsoever thing any of these dead beasts shall fall, it shall be unclean: whether it be oven, or pots with feet, they shall be destroyed, and shall be unclean.

36 But fountains and cisterns, and all gatherings together of waters shall be clean. He that toucheth their carcasses shall be defiled.

37 If it fall upon seed-corn, it shall not defile it.

38 But if any man pour water upon the seed, and afterwards it be touched by the carcasses, it shall be forthwith defiled.

39 If any beast die, of which it is lawful for you to eat, he that toucheth the carcass thereof, shall be unclean until the evening:

40 And he that eateth or carrieth any thing thereof, shall wash his clothes, and shall be unclean until the evening:

41 All that creepeth upon the earth shall be abominable, neither shall it be taken for meat.

42 Whatsoever goeth upon the breast on four feet, or hath many feet, or traileth on the earth, you shall not eat, because it is abominable.

43 Do not defile your souls, nor touch aught thereof, lest you be unclean.

44 For I am the Lord your God: *be holy, because I am holy. Defile not your souls by any creeping thing, that moveth upon the earth.

45 For I am the Lord, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, that I might be your God.

46 You shall be holy, because I am holy. This is the law of beasts and fowls, and of every living creature that moveth in the waters, and creepeth on the earth.

47 That you may know the differences of the clean and unclean, and know what you ought to eat, and what to refuse.

CHAP. XII.

The purification of women after child-birth.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses,^b saying: 2 Speak to the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them: *If a woman having received seed shall bear a man-child, she shall be unclean seven days, according to the days of the separation of her flowers.

3 *And on the eighth day the infant shall be circumcised:

a 1 Pet. i. 16.—b A. M. 2514.—c Luke ii. 22.

VER. 39. Beast die a natural death, or be suffocated, or slain by a wild beast. C.

VER. 42. Abominable. Serpents, worms, and reptiles are proscribed. M.

VER. 44. Holy, and detest the uncleanness of the Gentiles, in their sacrifices and feasts. S. Aug. de C. D. vi. 7.

CHAP. XII. VER. 2. Child. By this manner of expressing himself, Moses excludes the blessed Virgin, as the ancient Fathers and the moderns generally remark. She conceived without concupiscence, and was subject to none of the usual inconveniences of child-birth. Suarez.

VER. 3. Eighth. Nothing but the child's health could retard the day, (C.) unless the parents were under the necessity of taking a journey, as they were in the desert, &c. H.

VER. 4. Sanctuary, or court of the tabernacle, where the women had probably a place apart. C.

VER. 6. Lamb, to thank God for her happy delivery.—Sin, or uncleanness, which was esteemed a legal offence. Perhaps this sacrifice was also designed to expiate the sins she might have fallen into, (M.) since she was last able to offer one; and likewise the original sin of her female offspring. That of males was effaced by circumcision. H.

VER. 7. Blood, which has caused her legal uncleanness

4 But she shall remain three and thirty days in the blood of her purification. She shall touch no holy thing, neither shall she enter into the sanctuary, until the days of her purification be fulfilled.

5 But if she shall bear a maid-child, she shall be unclean two weeks, according to the custom of her monthly courses, and she shall remain in the blood of her purification sixty-six days.

6 And when the days of her purification are expired, for a son, or for a daughter, she shall bring to the door of the tabernacle of the testimony, a lamb of a year old for a holocaust, and a young pigeon, or a turtle, for sin, and shall deliver them to the priest:

7 Who shall offer them before the Lord, and shall pray for her, and so she shall be cleansed from the issue of her blood. This is the law for her that beareth a man-child or a maid-child.

8 And if her hand find not sufficiency, and she is not able to offer a lamb, she shall take two turtles, or two young pigeons, one for a holocaust, and another for sin: and the priest shall pray for her, and so she shall be cleansed.

CHAP. XIII.

The law concerning leprosy in men, and in garments.

AND the Lord spoke^c to Moses and Aaron, saying.

2 The man, in whose skin or flesh shall arise a different colour or a blister, or as it were something shining, that is, the stroke of the leprosy, shall be brought to Aaron the priest, or any one of his sons.

3 And if he see the leprosy in his skin, and the hair turned white, and the place where the leprosy appears lower than the skin and the rest of the flesh; it is the stroke of the leprosy, and upon his judgment he shall be separated.

4 But if there be a shining whiteness in the skin, and not lower than the other flesh, and the hair be of the former colour, the priest shall shut him up seven days.

5 And the seventh day he shall look on him: and if the leprosy be grown no farther, and hath not spread itself in the skin, he shall shut him up again other seven days.

6 And on the seventh day he shall look on him: if the leprosy be somewhat obscure, and not spread in the skin, he shall declare him clean, because it is but a scab: and the man shall wash his clothes, and shall be clean.

d John vii. 22.—e Supra, v. 7, and 11; Luke ii. 24.—f A. M. 2514.

VER. 8. Lamb. This was the case of the blessed Virgin (Luke ii. 24); so poor was she! M.—It seems difficult to conceive, how all the women of Palestine could present themselves before the tabernacle, 40 or 80 days after child-birth. Perhaps the law regarded those only who lived in the neighbourhood. The priests explained to the rest what they had to do, whether they might defer bringing their offering till the next great festival, or they might send it by another hand. We read that Anna came to the temple after she had weaned Samuel, 1 Kings i. 21. C.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 2. Colour, &c. Heb. "a tumour, abscess, or white spot," which are three marks of leprosy. C.—Leprosy. The leprosy was a figure of sin: and the observances prescribed in this and the following chapter, intimate what ought spiritually to be done in order to be delivered from so great an evil, or preserved from it. Ch.—The authority of the priests in the new law to bind or loose sins, was hereby prefigured. S. Chrys. de Sacerd. 3. W.

VER. 3. Flesh. These two signs indicated the species of leprosy called volatile, or impetigo, (M.) resembling a scab, which did not penetrate the flesh or bones, as our leprosy or elephantiasis does. Vales. C. xix.—Separated from society. Heb. "he shall contaminate him." See ver. 11. H.—Some assert that the physician was first to be consulted. But none but the priests could declare them unclean, or set them at liberty. After they had pronounced sentence, the lepers might apply for medicines to others.

7 But if the leprosy grow again, after he was seen by the priest, and restored to cleanness, he shall be brought to him,

8 And shall be condemned of uncleanness.

9 If the stroke of the leprosy be in a man, he shall be brought to the priest,

10 And he shall view him. And when there shall be a white colour in the skin, and it shall have changed the look of the hair, and the living flesh itself shall appear :

11 It shall be judged an inveterate leprosy, and grown into the skin. The priest therefore shall declare him unclean, and shall not shut him up, because he is evidently unclean.

12 But if the leprosy spring out running about in the skin, and cover all the skin from the head to the feet, whatsoever falleth under the sight of the eyes,

13 The priest shall view him, and shall judge that the leprosy which he has is very clean : because it is all turned into whiteness, and therefore the man shall be clean.

14 But when the live flesh shall appear in him,

15 Then by the judgment of the priest he shall be defiled, and shall be reckoned among the unclean : for live flesh, if it be spotted with leprosy, is unclean.

16 And if again it be turned into whiteness, and cover all the man, 17 The priest shall view him, and shall judge him to be clean.

18 When also there has been an ulcer in the flesh and the skin, and it has been healed,

19 And in the place of the ulcer, there appeareth a white scar, or somewhat red, the man shall be brought to the priest :

20 And when he shall see the place of the leprosy lower than the other flesh, and the hair turned white, he shall declare him unclean ; for the plague of leprosy is broken out in the ulcer.

21 But if the hair be of the former colour, and the scar somewhat obscure, and be not lower than the flesh that is near it, he shall shut him up seven days.

22 And if it spread, he shall judge him to have the leprosy :

23 But if it stay in its place, it is but the scar of an ulcer, and the man shall be clean.

24 The flesh also and skin that hath been burnt, and after it is healed hath a white or a red scar,

25 The priest shall view it, and if he see it turned white, and the place thereof is lower than the other skin : he shall declare him unclean, because the evil of leprosy is broken out in the scar.

26 But if the colour of the hair be not changed, nor the blemish lower than the other flesh, and the appearance of the leprosy be somewhat obscure, he shall shut him up seven days, 27 And on the seventh day he shall view him : if the leprosy be grown farther in the skin, he shall declare him unclean.

28 But if the whiteness stay in its place, and be not very clear, it is the sore of a burning, and therefore he shall be cleansed, because it is only the scar of a burning.

29 If the leprosy break out in the head or the beard of a man or a woman, the priest shall see them,

30 And if the place be lower than the other flesh, and the hair yellow, and thinner than usual : he shall declare them unclean, because it is the leprosy of the head and the beard.

31 But if he perceive the place of the spot is equal with the flesh that is near it, and the hair black he shall shut him up seven days :

32 And on the seventh day he shall look upon it. If the spot be not grown, and the hair keep its colour, and the place of the blemish be even with the other flesh :

33 The man shall be shaven all but the place of the spot, and he shall be shut up other seven days.

34 If on the seventh day the evil seem to have staid in its place, and not lower than the other flesh, he shall cleanse him, and his clothes being washed he shall be clean.

35 But if after his cleansing, the spot spread again in the skin,

36 He shall seek no more whether the hair be turned yellow, because he is evidently unclean.

37 But if the spot be staid, and the hair be black, let him know that the man is healed, and let him confidently pronounce him clean.

38 If a whiteness appear in the skin of a man or a woman,

39 The priest shall view them. If he find that a darkish whiteness shineth in the skin, let him know that it is not the leprosy, but a white blemish, and that the man is clean.

40 The man whose hair falleth off from his head, he is bald and clean :

41 And if the hair fall from his forehead, he is bald before and clean.

42 But if in the bald head, or in the bald forehead, there be risen a white or reddish colour, 43 And the priest perceive this, he shall condemn him undoubtedly of leprosy, which is risen in the bald part.

44 Now whosoever shall be defiled with the leprosy, and is separated by the judgment of the priest,

45 Shall have his clothes hanging loose, his head bare,

VER. 8. Uncleanness, or permanent leprosy.

VER. 11. Inveterate. Celsus says, this sort of leprosy is hardly ever cured.

—Up. But, as the Rom. Sept. reads, “shall separate him” from the people.

VER. 13. Clean. The white leprosy causeth no itching. Gorrheus. Cels. v. 28. Theodoret (q. 16) says, it is incurable ; and therefore the person infected is not shut up, out of pity. But others assert, it is not so difficult to cure as that which is partial, ver. 14. The hand of Moses was stricken with this white leprosy. Exod. iv. 6. C.

VER. 14. Live flesh, raw, the skin being consumed in various parts.

VER. 16. Whiteness. after the red flesh is covered with skin as usual.

VER. 20. Ulcer, as before, ver. 3.

VER. 26. Obscure. Heb. may be, “stopped,” as it is opposed to ver. 22, “if spread.” See ver. 55. 56.

VER. 30. Leprosy, or scurf. C.—This species causes the hair to be yellow, and not white. M.

VER. 31. Black. The Heb., Sam., &c. prefix “not,” which ought probably to be away, as the natural colour of the hair, in that country, is black ; while yellow, or white hair, give reason to suspect the leprosy ; and (ver. 32) the Heb. says, “if there be no yellow hair in it,” which insinuates that it was black before. The Sept. have explained both verses in the same sense, as they found the negation also. If we admit it, we may distinguish black hair from that which approaches to brown, or light-coloured hair. When therefore a person, who had before black hair, has experienced some change, he must be shut up seven days ; after which, if his hair be not become yellow or reddish, he must be shaved, &c. C.

VER. 45. Loose, both for the benefit of the leper, and that others may beware of him. M.—Bare, letting the hair grow. (chap. xxi. 5, 10,) in testimony of his mouth covered with a cloth, and he shall cry out that he is defiled and unclean.

46 All the time that he is a leper and unclean, he shall dwell alone without the camp.

47 A woollen or linen garment that shall have the leprosy

48 In the warp, and the woof, or a skin, or whatsoever is made of a skin, 49 If it be infected with a white or red spot, it shall be accounted the leprosy, and shall be shown to the priest.

50 And he shall look upon it, and shall shut it up seven days:

51 And on the seventh day, when he looketh on it again, if he find that it is grown, it is a fixed leprosy: he shall judge the garment unclean, and every thing wherein it shall be found:

52 And therefore it shall be burnt with fire.

53 But if he see that it is not grown,

54 He shall give orders, and they shall wash that part wherein the leprosy is, and he shall shut it up other seven days.

55 And when he shall see that the former colour is not returned, nor yet the leprosy spread, he shall judge it unclean, and shall burn it with fire, for the leprosy has taken hold of the outside of the garment, or through the whole.

56 But if the place of the leprosy be somewhat dark, after the garment is washed, he shall tear it off, and divide it from that which is sound.

57 And if after this there appear in those places that before were without spot, a flying and wandering leprosy: it must be burnt with fire.

58 If it cease, he shall wash with water the parts that are pure, the second time, and they shall be clean.

59 This is the law touching the leprosy of any woollen or linen garment, either in the warp or woof, or any thing of skins, how it ought to be cleansed, or pronounced unclean.

CHAP. XIV.

The rites or sacrifices in cleansing the leprosy. Leprosy in houses.

VER. 47. Garment that shall have the leprosy. These prescriptions, with relation to garments and houses infected with the leprosy, are to teach us to fly all such company and places as are apt to be the occasion of sin.

VER. 49. White. Heb. and Sept. "greenish."

VER. 51. Grown. Heb. adds here, (and ver. 53, 56, 57, 59,) "in the garment, either in the warp, or in the woof, or in a skin, or in any work that is made of a skin."

VER. 57. Flying, as that in man, ver. 12. Heb. it is a leprosy, which returns and is rooted. Chal. "it spreads." C. See Calmet's Diss. on the Leprosy. —This dreadful disorder is very common in Arabia and Palestine. During the holy wars many of the Europeans were infected with it.—The providence of God often visited those who would not obey his ministers, with this disorder. Deut. xxiv. 8; Num. xii. Theod. q. 18. T.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 3. Camp. The leper was not left to his own judgment to mix with society, as soon as he perceived himself cleansed. He had to send for a priest; and one of the most discerning among those who made it their employment to study in the court of the tabernacle, was commissioned to examine him. Grotius.

VER. 4. Sparrows. Heb. tsoprim. Sept. "little birds," which the law only determines must be clean; such probably as might be procured most easily. The leper was to present them, and kill one. But the priest sprinkled with its blood the other bird, which was tied with a scarlet riband to the cedar-wood and hyssop, in such a manner that its tail and wings were not much wet, as it was to fly

3 ^bWho, going out of the camp, when he shall find that the leprosy is cleansed,

4 ^cShall command him, that is to be purified, to offer for himself two living sparrows, which it is lawful to eat, and cedar-wood, and scarlet and hyssop.

5 And he shall command one of the sparrows to be immolated in an earthen vessel, over living waters:

6 But the other that is alive he shall dip, with the cedar-wood, and the scarlet and the hyssop, in the blood of the sparrow that is immolated:

7 Wherewith he shall sprinkle him that is to be cleansed seven times, that he may be rightly purified: and he shall let go the living sparrow, that it may fly into the field.

8 And when the man hath washed his clothes, he shall shave all the hair of his body, and shall be washed with water; and being purified, he shall enter into the camp, yet so that he tarry without his own tent seven days:

9 And on the seventh day he shall shave the hair of his head, and his beard and his eye-brows, and the hair of all his body. And having washed again his clothes, and his body,

10 On the eighth day he shall take two lambs without blemish, and an ewe of a year old without blemish, and three tenths of flour tempered with oil for a sacrifice, and a sextary of oil apart.

11 And when the priest that purifieth the man, hath presented him, and all these things before the Lord, at the door of the tabernacle of the testimony,

12 He shall take a lamb, and offer it for a trespass-offering with the sextary of oil: and having offered all before the Lord,

13 He shall immolate the lamb, where the victim for sin is wont to be immolated, and the holocaust; that is, in the holy place: for as that which is for sin, so also the victim for a trespass-offering pertaineth to the priest: it is holy of holies.

14 And the priest taking of the blood of the victim that was immolated for trespass, shall put it upon the tip of the right ear of him that is cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and the great toe of his right foot.

VER. 7. Rightly. According to law. H.—The number seven is used to denote perfection, ver. 15, &c. M.—Field. An emblem of the liberty which the leper would soon enjoy. H.

H.—But why so many prescriptions for a disease so involuntary, (C.) which must have already caused the unhappy sufferer so much pain? H.—It was often the effect of intemperance or negligence; and the sacrifices were exacted, to make some reparation to God for remaining in the camp and near the tabernacle, at the commencement of the disorder. C.—This foul cutaneous disease was also very infectious, and the law was designed to impress people with a horror of it, and to teach them to prevent its ravages as much as possible. H.

VER. 10. A sextary; Heb. log: a measure of liquids, which was the twelfth part of a hin; and held about as much as six eggs. Ch.—For each of the victims a sacrifice of flour and oil was required. H.

15 And he shall pour of the sextary of oil into his own left hand,

18 And upon his head.

19 And he shall pray for him before the Lord, and shall offer the sacrifice for sin: then shall he immolate the holocaust,

20 And put it on the altar with the libations thereof, and the man shall be rightly cleansed.

21 But if he be poor, and his hand cannot find the things aforesaid: he shall take a lamb for an offering for trespass, that the priest may pray for him, and a tenth part of flour tempered with oil for a sacrifice, and a sextary of oil,

22 *And two turtles, or two young pigeons, of which one may be for sin, and the other for a holocaust:

23 And he shall offer them on the eighth day of his purification to the priest, at the door of the tabernacle of the testimony before the Lord.

24 And the priest receiving the lamb for trespass, and the sextary of oil, shall elevate them together.

25 And the lamb being immolated, he shall put of the blood thereof upon the tip of the right ear of him that is cleansed, and upon the thumb of his right hand, and the great toe of his right foot:

26 But he shall pour part of the oil into his own left hand,

27 And dipping the finger of his right hand in it, he shall sprinkle it seven times before the Lord:

28 And he shall touch the tip of the right ear of him that is cleansed, and the thumb of his right hand, and the great toe of his right foot, in the place of the blood that was shed for trespass,

29 And the other part of the oil that is in his left hand, he shall pour upon the head of the purified person, that he may appease the Lord for him.

30 And he shall offer a turtle, or young pigeon,

31 One for trespass, and the other for a holocaust, with their libations.

32 This is the sacrifice of a leper, that is not able to have all things that appertain to his cleansing.

with the blood of the little bird, the washing himself and his clothes, the shaving his hair and his beard, signify the means which are to be used in the reconciliation of a sinner, and the steps by which he is to return to God, viz. by the repeated application of the blood of Christ; the washing his conscience with the waters of compunction; and retrenching all vanities and superfluities, by employing all that is over and above what is necessary in alms deeds. The sin-offering, and the holocaust or burnt-offering, which he was to offer at his cleansing, signify the sacrifice of a contrite and humble heart, and that of adoration in spirit and truth, with gratitude and thankfulness, for the forgiveness of sins, with which we are ever to appear before the Almighty. The touching the right ear, the thumb of the right hand, and the great toe of the right foot, first with the blood of the victim, and then with the remainder of the oil, which had been sprinkled seven times before the Lord, signify the application of the blood of Christ and the unction of the sevenfold grace of the Holy Ghost to the sinner's right ear, that he may duly hearken to and obey the law of God; and to his right hand and foot,

33 And the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying:

34 When you shall be come into the land of Chanaan, which I will give you for a possession, if there be the plague of leprosy in a house,

35 He whose house it is, shall go and tell the priest, saying: It seemeth to me, that there is the plague of leprosy in my house.

36 And he shall command, that they carry forth all things out of the house, before he go into it, and see whether it have the leprosy, lest all things become unclean that are in the house. And afterwards he shall go in to view the leprosy of the house,

37 And if he see in the walls thereof as it were little dints, disfigured with paleness or redness, and lower than all the rest,

38 He shall go out of the door of the house, and forthwith shut it up seven days,

39 And returning on the seventh day, he shall look upon it. If he find that the leprosy is spread,

40 He shall command, that the stones wherein the leprosy is, be taken out, and cast without the city into an unclean place:

41 And that the house be scraped on the inside round about, and the dust of the scraping be scattered without the city into an unclean place:

42 And that other stones be laid in the place of them that were taken away, and the house be plastered with other mortar.

43 But if, after the stones be taken out, and the dust scraped off, and it be plastered with other earth,

44 The priest going in perceive that the leprosy is returned, and the walls full of spots, it is a lasting leprosy, and the house is unclean:

45 And they shall destroy it forthwith, and shall cast the stones and timber thereof, and all the dust, without the town into an unclean place.

46 He that entereth into the house when it is shut, shall be unclean until evening.

47 And he that sleepeth in it, and eateth any thing, shall wash his clothes.

48 But if the priest going in perceive that the leprosy is not spread in the house, after it was plastered again, he shall purify it, it being cured.

49 And for the purification thereof he shall take two sparrows, and cedar-wood, and scarlet and hyssop:

VER. 36. Become. If any thing was left in the house, it was deemed unclean as soon as the priest had declared that the house was infected; and therefore it was to be removed before he came, (C.) and might be used without scruple, unless some marks of leprosy appeared afterwards upon the garments. Chap. xiii. 47.

VER. 37. Paleness. Heb. "greenish." H.

VER. 41. Scraped. Heb. "he shall scrape." But the Sam. copy has, more properly, "they shall scrape." Houbig.

51 He shall take the cedar-wood, and the hyssop, and the scarlet, and the living sparrow, and shall dip all in the blood of the sparrow that is immolated, and in the living water, and he shall sprinkle the house seven times :

52 And shall purify it as well with the blood of the sparrow, as with the living water, and with the living sparrow, and with the cedar-wood, and the hyssop, and the scarlet.

53 And when he hath let go the sparrow to fly freely away into the field, he shall pray for the house, and it shall be rightly cleansed.

Other legal uncleannesses.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying :
2 Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them : The man that hath an issue of seed, shall be unclean.

3 And then shall he be judged subject to this evil, when a filthy humour, at every moment, cleaveth to his flesh, and gathereth there.

4 Every bed on which he sleepeth, shall be unclean, and every place on which he sitteth.

5 If any man touch his bed, he shall wash his clothes : and being washed with water, he shall be unclean until the evening.

6 If a man sit where that man hath sitten, he also shall wash his clothes : and being washed with water, shall be unclean until the evening.

7 He that toucheth his flesh, shall wash his clothes : and being himself washed with water shall be unclean until the evening.

8 If such a man cast his spittle upon him that is clean, he shall wash his clothes : and being washed with water, he shall be unclean until the evening.

9 The saddle on which he hath sitten shall be unclean :

10 And whatsoever has been under him that hath the issue of seed, shall be unclean until the evening. He that carrieth any of these things, shall wash his clothes : and being washed with water, he shall be unclean until the evening.

14 And on the eighth day he shall take two turtles, or two young pigeons, and he shall come before the Lord, to the door of the tabernacle of the testimony, and shall give them to the priest :

15 Who shall offer one for sin, and the other for a holocaust : and he shall pray for him before the Lord, that he may be cleansed of the issue of his seed.

16 The man from whom the seed of copulation goeth out, shall wash all his body with water : and he shall be unclean until the evening.

24 If a man copulateth with her in the time of her flowers, he shall be unclean seven days : and every bed, on which he shall sleep, shall be defiled.

25 The woman that hath an issue of blood many days out of her ordinary time, or that ceaseth not to flow after the monthly courses, as long as she is subject to this disease, shall be unclean, in the same manner as if she were in her flowers.

26 Every bed on which she sleepeth, and every vessel on which she sitteth, shall be defiled.

27 Whosoever toucheth them shall wash his clothes : and himself being washed with water, he shall be unclean until the evening.

CHAP. XVI.

When and how the high priest must enter into the sanctuary. The feast of expiation.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses,^a after the death of the two sons of Aaron,^b when they were slain upon their offering strange fire:

2 And he commanded him saying: Speak to Aaron thy brother,^c that he enter not at all into the sanctuary, which is within the veil before the propitiatory, with which the ark is covered, lest he die, (for I will appear in a cloud over the oracle,)

3 Unless he first do these things: He shall offer a calf for sin, and a ram for a holocaust.

4 He shall be vested with a linen tunic, he shall cover his nakedness with linen breeches: he shall be girded with a linen girdle, and he shall put a linen mitre upon his head: for these are holy vestments: all which he shall put on, after he is washed.

5 And he shall receive from the whole multitude of the children of Israel two buck-goats for sin, and one ram for a holocaust.

6 And when he hath offered the calf, and prayed for himself, and for his own house,

7 He shall make the two buck-goats to stand before the Lord, in the door of the tabernacle of the testimony:

8 And casting lots upon them both, one to be offered to the Lord, and the other to be the emissary-goat:

9 That whose lot fell to be offered to the Lord, he shall offer for sin:

10 But that whose lot was to be the emissary-goat, he shall present alive before the Lord, that he may pour

^a A. M. 2514.—^b Supra, x. 1.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. Fire. It was upon this occasion that the feast of expiation (copurim) was instituted, to enforce the reverence due to holy things, and particularly to the tabernacle. Heb. adds, "before the Lord," (H.) and does not specify strange fire; but the Chaldee and Syriac do. C.

VER. 2. Enter not. No one but the high priest, and he but once a year, could enter into the sanctuary: to signify that no one could enter into the sanctuary of heaven till Christ our High Priest opened it by his passion, Heb. x. 8. Ch.—When the tabernacle was to be removed, and when he had to consult the Lord, he might also enter, arrayed in his pontifical attire. If the high priest was prevented by any legal uncleanness, the next priest was substituted to perform his office. Josep. xvii. 8.

VER. 6. Calf, or young bull, which Aaron offered for himself and all the family of Levi, to expiate the sins which they might have committed during the year. If their sins were voluntary, they were obliged also to have perfect charity and contrition. The ram was offered for the sins of the people. Moses speaks of the red heifer, (Num. xix.,) which was also offered, out of the camp, for the people. This solemn day was to be kept by all as a rigid "fast from meat, drink, washing, anointing, wearing shoes, or using marriage." C.—On the day of expiation the Jews made a tenfold confession of their sins. Morin. Pœnit. ii. 22.

VER. 8. The emissary-goat: caper emissarius; in Greek, apopompaios; in Hebrew, Azazel. The goat to go off, or as some translate it, the scape-goat. This goat, on whose head the high priest was ordered to pour forth prayers, and to make a general confession of the sins of the people, laying them all, as it were, on his head, and after that to send him away into the wilderness, to be devoured out prayers upon him, and let him go into the wilderness.

11 After these things are duly celebrated, he shall offer the calf, and praying for himself and for his own house, he shall immolate it:

12 And taking the censer, which he hath filled with the burning coals of the altar, and taking up with his hand the compounded perfume for incense, he shall go in within the veil into the holy place:

13 That when the perfumes are put upon the fire, the cloud and vapour thereof may cover the oracle, which is over the testimony, and he may not die.

14 He shall take also of the blood of the calf, and sprinkle with his finger seven times towards the propitiatory to the east.

15 And when he hath killed the buck-goat for the sin of the people, he shall carry in the blood thereof within the veil, as he was commanded to do with the blood of the calf, that he may sprinkle it over against the oracle,

16 And may expiate the sanctuary from the uncleanness of the children of Israel, and from their transgressions, and all their sins. According to this rite shall he do to the tabernacle of the testimony, which is fixed among them in the midst of the filth of their habitation.

17 "Let no man be in the tabernacle when the high priest goeth into the sanctuary, to pray for himself and his house, and for the whole congregation of Israel, until he come out.

18 And when he is come out to the altar that is before the Lord, let him pray for himself, and taking the blood of the calf, and of the buck-goat, let him pour it upon the horns thereof round about:

19 And sprinkling with his finger seven times, let him expiate, and sanctify it from the uncleanness of the children of Israel.

20 After he hath cleansed the sanctuary, and the tabernacle, and the altar, then let him offer the living goat:

21 And putting both hands upon his head, let him confess all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their offences and sins: and praying that they may light on his head, he shall turn him out, by a man ready for it into the desert.

VER. 12. Censer, which resembled one of our chalices; without any chains, &c. Apoc. v. 8. C.

VER. 13, 14. The cloud,—The blood, &c. This is to teach us, that if we would go into the sanctuary of God, we must take with us the incense of prayer, and the blood, that is, the passion of Christ. Where also note, that the high priest, before he went into the holy of holies, was to wash his whole body; and then to put on white linen garments; to signify the purity and elasticity with which we are to approach to God. Ch.

VER. 15. Oracle. He probably took this blood at the same time with that of the calf. Heb. ix. 7. M.—Though some Rabbin assert, the high priest entered the holy of holies four times on that day. Drusius. C.

VER. 16. Filth. God deigned to have his tabernacle in the midst of the camp, where so many sins and marks of disrespect, as well as legal uncleanness were found. H.—Sin so defileth the soul, that the most holy place is contaminated thereby. Theod. q. 22.

VER. 17. Out. Even the other priests were excluded from the tabernacle. The high priest placed incense on the censer as soon as he entered within the veil, and prayed for all blessings, in few words, that the people might not be uneasy, fearing lest something had befallen him.

VER. 18. Let him pray for himself. Heb. "he shall expiate or purify it," the altar of incense. Josephus says he also sprinkled with blood the great altar of holocausts, ver. 20. Ant. iii. 10.

22 And when the goat hath carried all their iniquities into an uninhabited land, and shall be let go into the desert,

23 Aaron shall return into the tabernacle of the testimony, and putting off the vestments, which he had on him before when he entered into the sanctuary, and leaving them there,

24 He shall wash his flesh in the holy place, and shall put on his own garments. And after that he is come out and hath offered his own holocaust, and that of the people, he shall pray both for himself and for the people :

25 And the fat that is offered for sins, he shall burn upon the altar.

26 But he that hath let go the emissary-goat, shall wash his clothes, and his body with water, and so shall enter into the camp.

27 But the calf and the buck-goat, that were sacrificed for sin, and whose blood was carried into the sanctuary, to accomplish the atonement, they shall carry forth without the camp,* and shall burn with fire, their skins, and their flesh, and their dung :

28 And whosoever burneth them, shall wash his clothes and flesh with water, and so shall enter into the camp.

29 And this shall be to you an everlasting ordinance :
*The seventh month, the tenth day of the month, you shall afflict your souls, and shall do no work, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger that sojourneth among you.

30 Upon this day shall be the expiation for you, and the cleansing from all your sins : you shall be cleansed before the Lord.

31 For it is a sabbath of rest, and you shall afflict your souls by a perpetual religion.

32 And the priest that is anointed, and whose hands are consecrated to do the office of the priesthood in his father's stead, shall make atonement : and he shall be vested with the linen robe and the holy vestments, 33 And he shall expiate the sanctuary, and the tabernacle of the testimony, and the altar, the priests also and all the people.

34 And this shall be an ordinance for ever, that you pray for the children of Israel, and for all their sins once in a year. He did therefore as the Lord had commanded Moses

CHAP. XVII.

No sacrifices to be offered but at the door of the tabernacle : a prohibition of blood.

AND the Lord spoke^c to Moses, saying :

2 Speak to Aaron and his sons, and to all the children of Israel, saying to them : This is the word which the Lord hath commanded, saying :

3 Any man whosoever of the house of Israel, if he kill an ox, or a sheep, or a goat, in the camp or without the camp,

4 And offer it not at the door of the tabernacle an oblation to the Lord, shall be guilty of blood : as if he had shed blood, so shall he perish from the midst of his people.

5 Therefore the children of Israel shall bring to the priest their victims, which they kill in the field, that they may be sanctified to the Lord before the door of the tabernacle of the testimony, and they may sacrifice them for peace-offerings to the Lord.

6 And the priest shall pour the blood upon the altar of the Lord, at the door of the tabernacle of the testimony, and shall burn the fat for a sweet odour to the Lord.

7 And they shall no more sacrifice their victims to devils, with whom they have committed fornication. It shall be an ordinance for ever to them and to their posterity.

8 And thou shalt say to them : The man of the house of Israel, and of the strangers who sojourn among you, that offereth a holocaust or a victim,

9 And bringeth it not to the door of the tabernacle of the testimony, that it may be offered to the Lord, shall perish from among his people :

10 If any man whosoever of the house of Israel, and of the strangers that sojourn among them, eat blood, I will set my face against his soul, and will cut him off from among his people :

11 Because the life of the flesh is in the blood : and I have given it to you, that you may make atonement with it upon the altar for your souls, and the blood may be for an expiation of the soul.

Chap. xxxiii. 32.—Afflict, by a rigid abstinence from all that might give delight to the body. Children of seven years old begin to join in this mortification. Boys of thirteen, and girls of eleven years old complete, were obliged to fast. See ver. 6. The Samaritans pray all the day, and give no food even to infants during the 24 hours. C.—Moses was the first who showed them the example; and this was the only day which he prescribed to be kept as a fast. The Jews afterwards appointed many more. H.—Maimonides says this festival was instituted in memory of the descent of Moses from Mount Sinai the third time, when he came to announce to the people that God had pardoned their idolatry. Usher thinks it was in memory of Adam's fall. The Jews still observe it in some degree.—Stranger; a proselyte of justice, such as were bound to observe the law.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 3. If he kill, &c. That is, in order to sacrifice. The law of God forbids sacrifices to be offered in any other place but at the tabernacle or temple of the Lord : to signify that no sacrifice would be acceptable to God, out of his true temple, the one, holy, Catholic Apostolic Church. Ch.—On other occasions many believe that the blood of oxen, sheep, and goats, was to be poured out in honour of God by the priest, who received a part of each. Deut. xviii. 3; xii. 15, 22. Theod. q. 23. Perhaps this law regards the time when the Hebrews sojourned in the desert; and that of Deuteronomy has a reference to those times when they should obtain possession of Chanaan. C.—We read of some private people like Manu and Elias, who offered sacrifice at a distance from the tabernacle. But this was done by a particular inspiration of God, who dispensed with his own law. S. Aug. q. 56. 3 Kings xviii. 23; Judges xiii. 19. M. See Jos. viii. 31.

VER. 7. Devils. Heb. śāirim; which some translate goats, (the hairy ones,) satyrs, &c. The Egyptians adored the goat, particularly in the territory of Mendes, near which the Hebrews had dwelt. C.—Ezekiel (xvi. 22) intimates that the Hebrews were given to idolatry in Egypt. They had also recently adored the calf. H.

VER. 10. Eat blood. To eat blood was forbidden in the law; partly because God reserved it to himself, to be offered in sacrifices on the altar, as to the Lord of life and death; and as a figure of the blood of Christ; and partly to give men a horror of shedding blood. Gen. ix. 4, 5, 6. Ch.

VER. 11. Life (anima). The sensitive soul depends on the blood. The soul and the blood are often used in the same sense. Deut. xii. 23; Psal. cxix. 10.

12 Therefore I have said to the children of Israel: No soul of you, nor of the strangers that sojourn among you, shall eat blood.

13 Any man whosoever of the children of Israel, and of the strangers that sojourn among you, if by hunting or fowling, he take a wild beast or a bird, which is lawful to eat, let him pour out its blood, and cover it with earth.

14 *For the life of all flesh is in the blood: therefore I said to the children of Israel: You shall not eat the blood of any flesh at all, because the life of the flesh is in the blood, and whosoever eateth it, shall be cut off.

15 The soul that eateth that which died of itself, or has been caught by a beast, whether he be one of your own country or a stranger, shall wash his clothes and himself with water, and shall be defiled until the evening: and in this manner he shall be made clean.

16 But if he do not wash his clothes, and his body, he shall bear his iniquity.

Marriage is prohibited in certain degrees of kindred: and all unnatural lusts.

VER. 7. Father. All relations in a right line are excluded for ever, according to the emperor Justinian. The reason of these various impediments is, 1. That God's people may not resemble infidels, who permitted such things, ver. 3. 2. By this law the bands of society are strengthened, and families become connected. S. Aug. C. D. 15, 16. 3. Disorders which would easily take place under the same roof, on the prospect of a future marriage, are prevented. 4. The contrary practice would often prove contrary to order and decency, as the son would be raised above his mother. These regulations seem to have been made from the beginning, or at least from the time of the deluge; since the nations not subject to the law of Moses are condemned for the transgression of them, ver. 24. 17 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy wife, and her daughter. Thou shalt not take her son's daughter, or her daughter's daughter, to discover her shame: because they are her flesh, and such copulation is incest.

18 Thou shalt not take thy wife's sister for a harlot, to rival her, neither shalt thou discover her nakedness, while she is yet living.

19 Thou shalt not approach to a woman having her flowers, neither shalt thou uncover her nakedness.

20 Thou shalt not lie with thy neighbour's wife, nor be defiled with mingling of seed.

21 *Thou shalt not give any of thy seed to be consecrated to the idol Moloch, nor defile the name of thy God: I am the Lord.

VER. 11. Sister, by thy step-mother.

VER. 12. Father. Nearly related, and springing from the same source. M.

VER. 14. Who... affinity. Heb. "she is thy aunt." Some say that, in the old law, a person might marry his niece, but not his aunt; as the order of nature would be inverted if the aunt were subject to her nephew. But others assert that the law was reciprocal, and excluded the marriage of both.

VER. 16. Brother; though she may be even divorced from him. S. Aug. q. 61. If the brother were dead without offspring, the next relation was bound to marry her (Deut. xxv. 5); and the kinsman of Booz was accounted infamous for neglecting this duty. Ruth iv. 6.

VER. 18. Rival her (in pellicatum). Heb., Chal. "to trouble her." After the death of one sister, it seems, another might be taken. Jacob had two at once. Some think that polygamy is here forbidden. But the law seems to have tolerated it; and only condemns many, or too great a number, with respect to the king. Deut. xvii. 17. The impediments specified in this chapter may be comprised in these four verses:

*Nata, soror, neptis, matertera, fratris et uxor,
Et patruj conjux, mater, privigna, noverca,
Uxorisque soror, privigni nata, nurusque,
Atque soror patris, conjungi lege vetantur. C.*

VER. 21. Consecrated. Heb. "to pass through the fire to Moloch." Sept. "to serve the ruler." Syr. "to marry strange women;" as also chap. xx. 2. One of the sons of Achaz was offered to this idol of the Ammonites; and yet, perhaps, succeeded his father (4 Kings xvi. 3; xviii. 1); which shows that the children were not always burnt to death, but only lustrated, or made to pass over or between two fires. Yet many assert that the children were frequently consumed in the flames, and God condemns the cruel parents to be punished with death. Chap. xx. 2. The brazen idol was heated red hot, and the unhappy victim was placed in its arms, or the priests dragged the child over or between the 22 Thou shalt not lie with mankind as with woman-kind, because it is an abomination.

23 Thou shalt not copulate with any beast, neither shalt thou be defiled with it. *A woman shall not lie down to a beast, nor copulate with it: because it is a heinous crime.

24 Defile not yourselves with any of these things, with which all the nations have been defiled, which I will cast out before you,

25 And with which the land is defiled: the abominations of which I will visit, that it may vomit out its inhabitants.

26 Keep ye my ordinances and my judgments, and do not any of these abominations: neither any of your own nation, nor any stranger that sojourneth among you.

27 For all these detestable things, the inhabitants of the land have done that were before you, and have defiled it.

28 Beware then lest in like manner, it vomit you also out, if you do the like things, as it vomited out the nation that was before you.

29 Every soul that shall commit any of these abominations, shall perish from the midst of his people.

30 Keep my commandments. Do not the things which they have done, that have been before you, and be not defiled therein. I am the Lord your God.

Divers ordinances, partly moral, partly ceremonial or judicial.

THE Lord spoke to Moses,^b saying:

2 Speak to all the congregation of the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them:^c Be ye holy, because I, the Lord your God, am holy.

3 Let every one fear his father and his mother. Keep my sabbaths. I am the Lord your God.

fires.—God; by causing any to suppose that he is cruel, like the idols. We must mention his name with the utmost respect. "The mouth, which utters the sacred name of God, ought never to pronounce a shameful word." Philo de 10. præc. C.

VER. 28. Vomited. Moses speaks of what would shortly happen, as if it had already come to pass, which is familiar with the prophets. C.—He represents the earth as sick and disgusted with the crimes of its inhabitants, in the same manner as the Book of Wisdom (v. 23) says, the water of the sea shall rage (or foam, excandescet) against them.

VER. 29. People. Heb. erom. The same temporal punishment is inflicted upon all the aforesaid crimes, though they were not all equally grievous. The smallest of them deserved to be treated with such severity, to prevent the spreading of such contagious vices. H.—The regulations respecting marriage were not immutable, or all determined by the law of nature, which admits of no dispensation. Only those relations in a right line, and the first in the collateral line, can be esteemed of this description. D.—If Protestants maintain that all these regulations of Moses are part of the natural law, and bind Christians, they must also allow that a person must marry the widow of his deceased brother, if he has left no children. Deut. xxv. God would never have established this general rule for his people, if it were in opposition to the natural law; which is clear and obvious to all people by the light of reason, according to Aristotle. Polit. 2. Neither would so many holy men have violated this law without reproof, if it had prohibited the marriages of two sisters, of aunts, &c. See Gen. xxix.; Exod. vi. 20. God never dispensed in the right line (1 Cor. v. 1); and such relations, or even people in the first collateral degree of consanguinity, marrying, are punished with death. Chap. xx. Whereas those in the second degree, or in the first of affinity, undergo a smaller punishment; which shows that the transgression, in both cases, is not against the law of nature. No man ever undertook to dispense with the marriage of brothers and sisters; though Beza lays this to the charge of Pope Martin V. But the person alluded to only obtained leave to retain the sister of her whom he had privately dishonoured, when his marriage could not be dissolved without great scandal. S. Antonin. 3. p. tit. i. 11. As, therefore, some of these impediments were introduced by the positive ceremonial law of the Jews, which was abrogated by Jesus Christ, they have no other force at present than what they derive from the authority of Christian republics, which have adopted some and changed others, appointing, in some countries, death for the punishment of theft, and not of adultery, though the old law enjoined the reverse. See chap. xx. 10, and Gen. xxxviii. 24; Exod. xxii. 1. The Church may, therefore, surely dispense with those laws which she has enacted. W. Trid. Ses. xxiv. 3.—She has indeed restricted marriage between relations to the fourth degree included, both of consanguinity and of affinity. See the C. of Lateran, under Inn. III. But she will not allow people to marry their aunts, brothers' widows, or sisters of their deceased wife, as the Jews do. T.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 3. Sabbaths. Both those which occur every week, and extraordinary ones, ver. 30.

VER. 10. Strangers. Sept. and Syr. "proselytes," who might dwell in the country. As the soil did not belong to them, great compassion was requisite: otherwise they must have perished, or become slaves.—Lord; the sole proprietor. C.

VER. 11. Lie. Even lies of jest and of excuse are contrary to the gravity and open-dealing of a Christian; and God never speaks of lying without marks of disapprobation. H.

VER. 13. Morning. Pay what is due to the labourer, immediately, if he desire it. H.—It was customary among the Jews to pay their workmen in the evening. Matt. xx. 8.

VER. 14. Deaf. The word Kophos, used by the Sept., means also the dumb, as these defects are generally found in the same person. Nothing can be more base, than to attack those who are unable to defend themselves. Solon forbids any one "to speak ill of the dead," though he may receive an injury from his children. Those who undermine and ruin the reputation of the absent, are no less to be condemned.

VER. 16. Detractor, whisperer. Heb. roci, stands for both these terms. Some translate a parasite, a merchant, vilifying the goods of others to enhance the price of his own; or a spy, seeking to discover and laugh at others' faults.—Neighbour; accusing him wrongfully, to the danger of his life; or lying in wait for him like an assassin. But strive rather to rescue those who are attacked.

17 "Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thy heart, ^bbut reprove him openly, lest thou incur sin through him.

18 Seek not revenge, nor be mindful of the injury of thy citizens. "Thou shalt love thy friend as thyself. I am the Lord.

19 Keep ye my laws. Thou shalt not make thy cattle to gender with beasts of any other kind. Thou shalt not sow thy field with different seeds. Thou shalt not wear a garment that is woven of two sorts.

20 If a man carnally lie with a woman that is a bond-servant and marriageable, and yet not redeemed with a price, nor made free: they both shall be scourged, and they shall not be put to death, because she was not a free woman.

21 And for his trespass he shall offer a ram to the Lord, at the door of the tabernacle of the testimony:

22 And the priest shall pray for him, and for his sin, before the Lord, and he shall have mercy on him, and the sin shall be forgiven.

23 When you shall be come into the land, and shall have planted in it fruit trees, you shall take away the first-fruits of them: the fruit that comes forth shall be unclean to you, neither shall you eat of them.

24 But in the fourth year, all their fruit shall be sanctified, to the praise of the Lord.

^a 1 John ii. 11, and iii. 14.—^b Eccl. xix. 13; Matt. xviii. 5; Luke xvii. 3.

VER. 17. Openly, is not in the Heb. or other versions. Instead of bearing malice at the heart, we are authorized to demand our right in a legal manner, or to correct in a fraternal manner, the person who may have injured us, lest we incur sin for our neglect, and the offender continue impenitent. Jesus Christ instructs us to do this with as little disturbance as possible. Matt. xviii. 15. Yet public sins must undergo a public correction. 1 Tim. v. 20. S. Aug. ser. 82. Love should regulate our complaints. Id. q. 70.

VER. 18. Revenge, by private authority, or out of passion, which the pagans themselves acknowledged was more becoming a brute than a man, feræ est. Muson. Sen. de Ira ii. 32.—Citizens. Heb. "observe or lie not in wait." Sept. "act not with fury against the son of thy people." C.—Heb. notor, means to upbraid when doing a kindness.—Friend. Heb. recha, may denote a neighbour, or any one with whom we have any thing to do. Thus God orders us to love strangers as ourselves, (ver. 34,) and to help our enemy. Exod. xxiii. 4. The false insinuations of the Jews are fully exploded by Jesus Christ. Matt. xxii. 39. We must love the offender, but detest the offence. S. Aug. c. Faust. xix. 24. If God required his people to exterminate the Chanaanites, he did not authorize them to entertain any personal animosity against their persons, but they were to act as ministers of his justice. C.

VER. 19. Kind. Mules were therefore either brought from other countries, (3 Kings x. 28,) or they were produced by some of the same species, as, good authors assert, is frequently the case in Syria, Cappadocia, &c. Plin. viii. 44. Pineda. T.—Different seeds, &c. This law tends to recommend simplicity and plain-dealing in all things; and to teach the people not to join any false worship or heresy with the worship of the true God. Ch.—Draw not the yoke with infidels, 2 Cor. vi. Theod. q. 27. These different colours were not in themselves evil, since they were used in the priests' vestments. They insinuate that we must avoid scisms. W.—The sowing of different seeds tends to impoverish the soil. Plin. xviii. 10. The Flamen, among the Romans, could not wear a woollen garment sewed with thread, without committing a sin; piaculum erat, says Servius. These precepts were to be literally observed, though they concealed a moral instruction of the greatest consequence, importing that all unnatural intercourse was to be avoided. Pythagoras conveyed his instructions under similar enigmatical expressions, saying, "We must not stir up the fire with a sword," &c., as Solomon does likewise. Prov. xxx. 15; Eccles. xii. 3, 6. C.

VER. 20. Marriageable. Heb. "promised, or given in marriage." Sept. "reserved for another . . . she shall," &c. Onkelos and the Arabic version suppose also, that the woman alone was to be scourged with leather thongs; a punishment to which the Samaritan copy condemns only the man. The Rabbin agree with the Sept.

VER. 22. Pray. Heb. and Sept. "shall atone for him with the ram of the sin-offering, before the Lord, for his sin."

VER. 23. The first-fruits. In some countries, people take off the buds to strengthen the tree. C.—Unclean. Heb. "three years shall it be as uncircumcised unto you; it shall not be eaten." H.

VER. 24. Lord. It was to be brought to the holy city, and offered with the other tithes, out of which a feast was made for the poor, &c. Josep. iv. 8. Besides the first-fruits for the priests, and the tithes for the Levites, out of which they again paid tithes to the priests, there was an annual tithe prescribed, (Deut. xii. 12,) to supply a feast for the indigent, &c., at Jerusalem, along with this fruit; and another, every third year, designed for the poor alone (Deut. xiv. 28,) at the place of each one's abode. T

25 And in the fifth year you shall eat the fruits thereof, gathering the increase thereof. I am the Lord your God.

26 You shall not eat with blood. You shall not divine nor observe dreams.

27 Nor shall you cut your hair round-wise: nor shave your beard.

28 You shall not make any cuttings in your flesh, for the dead, neither shall you make in yourselves any figures or marks: I am the Lord.

29 Make not thy daughter a common strumpet, lest the land be defiled, and filled with wickedness.

30 Keep ye my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary. I am the Lord.

31 Go not aside after wizards, neither ask any thing of soothsayers, to be defiled by them: I am the Lord your God.

32 Rise up before the hoary head, and honour the person of the aged man: and fear the Lord thy God. I am the Lord.

33 "If a stranger dwell in your land, and abide among you, do not upbraid him:

34 But let him be among you as one of the same country: and you shall love him as yourselves: for you were strangers in the land of Egypt. I am the Lord your God.

^c Matt. v. 43, and xxii. 39; Luke vi. 27; Rom. xiii. 9.—^d Exod. xxii. 21.

VER. 26. Blood. The flesh of any animal. The blood must belong to God. The Sept. read erim, "on the mountains;" and another version has, "on the roof," as if the worship of idols on high places were forbidden. H.

VER. 27. Cut your hair, &c. This, and other such like things, of themselves indifferent, were forbidden by God, that they might not imitate the Egyptians or other infidels, who practised these things out of superstition, in honour of their false deities. Ch.

VER. 28. Dead. At funerals it was customary to cut off the hair. The Egyptians, Assyrians, &c., cut their hair on the like occasions, and the Hebrews did so too; whether they neglected this law, or it was rather designed only to hinder them from joining in a superstitious lamentation for some idol. They also cut their bodies, Gen. i.; Jer. xli. 5. The Roman and Athenian laws restrained this cruelty of women towards themselves. But in Persia the children and servants of great men still make an incision upon their arms, when their father or master dies. The women in Greece also observe a solemn mourning, with loud lamentations, tearing their cheeks and hair, and reciting the memorable actions of the deceased. The Christians and Jews of Syria inflict still more serious wounds upon themselves. The latter have always esteemed it lawful to adopt the customs of the nations with whom they lived, provided they were not attended with superstition; which makes us conclude, that what Moses here forbids was done in honour of some idol.—Marks, made with a hot iron, representing false gods, as if to declare that they would serve them for ever. Philo.—The Assyrians had generally such characters upon their bodies. Philopator ordered the converts from the Jewish religion to be marked with ivy, in honour of Bacchus. 3 Macc. Theodoret (q. 18) mentions, that the pagans were accustomed to cut their cheeks, and to prick themselves with needles, infusing some black matter, out of respect for the dead, and for demons. Allusion is made to these customs, Apoc. xiii. 16, and Isa. xlix. 15. Christians have sometimes marked their arms with the cross, or name of Jesus. Procop. in Isa. xlii. 5. C.—As S. Jane Frances de Chantal did her breast. Brev. Aug. 21. Nomen pectori insculpsit. S. Paul says, I bear the marks of the Lord Jesus in my body, Gal. vi. 17. The Church historians relate, that S. Francis and S. Catharine received miraculously the prints of his wounds. H.

VER. 29. Strumpet, which was done formerly in honour of idols.

VER. 31. Wizards. Heb. aubuth, denotes familiar spirits, (1 Kings xviii. 7,) which gave answers from the belly or breast, as from a bottle; whence such wizards are called by the Greeks, engastrimouthoi; and by Sophocles, sternomantes. C.—Soothsayers, are properly those who judge what will happen by inspecting victims. M.—Heb. idāunim, means connoisseurs, intelligent people, gnostics, or those who pretend that they can penetrate the secrets naturally impenetrable to the mind of man. Sept. epaoidoi, "enchanters," who undertake to keep off all misfortunes. "Surely," (says Pliny, xxx. 1,) to learn this art, (of magic,) Pythagoras . . . and Plato undertook long voyages by sea, or rather went into banishment. This they extolled at their return; this they kept as a secret. Hanc in arcanis habuerunt.

VER. 32. Aged man. Such are supposed to be possessed of wisdom and experience. The Egyptians and Lacedæmonians rose up out of respect to an old man. Herod. ii. 80. The Rabbin pretend that a person ought to rise up when the old man is four cubits distant, provided he be, as he ought, a man of wisdom: for otherwise he is entitled to no honour. But this would be making inferiors judges of their merit. The Chaldee, Philo, &c., comprise those "learned in the law," under the name of old men.

35 Do not any unjust thing in judgment, in rule, in weight, or in measure.

36 Let the balance be just, and the weights equal, the bushel just, and the sextary equal. I am the Lord your God, that brought you out of the land of Egypt.

37 Keep all my precepts, and all my judgments, and do them. I am the Lord.

CHAP. XX.

Divers crimes to be punished with death.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses,* saying:

2 Thus shalt thou say to the children of Israel: "If any man of the children of Israel, or of the strangers, that dwell in Israel, give of his seed to the idol Moloch, dying let him die: the people of the land shall stone him.

3 And I will set my face against him: and I will cut him off from the midst of his people, because he hath given of his seed to Moloch, and hath defiled my sanctuary, and profaned my holy name.

4 And if the people of the land neglecting, and as it were little regarding my commandment, let alone the man that hath given of his seed to Moloch, and will not kill him:

5 I will set my face against that man, and his kindred, and will cut off both him and all that consented with him, to commit fornication with Moloch, out of the midst of their people.

6 The soul that shall go aside after magicians and soothsayers, and shall commit fornication with them, I will set my face against that soul, and destroy it out of the midst of its people.

7 "Sanctify yourselves, and be ye holy, because I am the Lord your God.

8 Keep my precepts, and do them. I am the Lord that sanctify you.

9 "He that curseth his father or mother, dying let him die: he hath cursed his father and mother, let his blood be upon him.

10 "If any man commit adultery with the wife of another, and defile his neighbours wife, let them be put to death, both the adulterer and the adulteress.

11 If a man lie with his stepmother, and discover the nakedness of his father, let them both be put to death: their blood be upon them.

12 If any man lie with his daughter-in-law, let both die, because they have done a heinous crime: their blood be upon them.

13 If any one lie with a man as with a woman, both have committed an abomination, let them be put to death: their blood be upon them.

14 If any man, after marrying the daughter, marry her mother, he hath done a heinous crime: he shall be burnt alive with them: neither shall so great an abomination remain in the midst of you.

15 He that shall copulate with any beast or cattle, dying let him die: the beast also ye shall kill.

16 "The woman that shall lie under any beast, shall be killed together with the same: their blood be upon them.

17 If any man take his sister, the daughter of his father, or the daughter of his mother, and see her nakedness, and she behold her brother's shame: they have committed a crime: they shall be slain, in the sight of their people, because they have discovered one another's nakedness, and they shall bear their iniquity.

18 If any man lie with a woman in her flowers, and uncover her nakedness, and she open the fountain of her blood, both shall be destroyed out of the midst of their people.

19 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy aunt by thy mother, and of thy aunt by thy father: he that doth this, hath uncovered the shame of his own flesh both shall bear their iniquity.

20 If any man lie with the wife of his uncle by the father, or of his uncle by the mother, and uncover the shame of his near akin, both shall bear their sin: they shall die without children.

21 He that marrieth his brother's wife, doth an unlawful thing, he hath uncovered his brother's nakedness: they shall be without children.

22 Keep my laws, and my judgments, and do them; lest the land, into which you are to enter to dwell therein, vomit you also out.

23 Walk not after the laws of the nations, which I will cast out before you; for they have done all these things, and therefore I abhorred them.

24 But to you I say: Possess their land, which I will give you for an inheritance, a land flowing with milk and

VER. 6. Them. To have recourse to them, is to deal with the devil and to commit idolatry. See chap. xix. 31.

VER. 8. Sanctify you, and order you to keep at a distance from the impure worship of other nations. H.

VER. 9. Die. The Rabbin say, by being strangled, when nothing farther is added: but if the following addition be made, stoning is understood. But their authority is not of much weight, and is contradicted, ver. 2. Stoning was the most usual method of putting to death in the days of Moses, and is commonly meant; or perhaps the judges might determine the mode of execution.—Upon him. He deserves to die. He can blame no other. See Matt. xxvii. 25. C.—For greater infamy, the person to be stoned or hung was stripped of his clothes. J.—The punishment of lapidation (ver. 2) seems to be designed for the following crimes, as it was for adultery, Deut. xxii. 24. M. John viii. 5.

VER. 10. Adulteress. Philo (de Joseph.) says, whoever discovered a man in the very act, might kill him; and the Roman law allowed the same liberty, impune necata. But God requires a juridical process, and witnesses, as we see in the case of Susanna, (Dan. xiii.) and in that of the woman who was brought to our Saviour. One witness might authorize a person to put his wife away, and if he then retained her, he was esteemed a fool. Prov. xviii. 23. But more witnesses were requisite before she could be put to death. They put their hands on the heads of the guilty, thus taking their blood upon themselves, if they accused them wrongfully. Solon allowed the husband to kill the adulterer. The woman was not permitted to wear any ornaments, or to enter any temple afterwards. If she did, any one might tear her clothes, and beat, but not kill her.

VER. 11. Father. See chap. xviii. 8. It is supposed that the father was dead, otherwise the punishment would probably be greater than for adultery. The Sam. "with the wife of his father's brother." C.

VER. 14. Alive, is not in the original; but must be understood. The Rabbin say melted lead was to be poured down the throats of the guilty. The words of Moses seem rather to refer to external fire. C.—With them, if they both gave their consent to the crime. M.

VER. 15. The beast also ye shall kill. The killing of the beast was for the greater horror of the crime, and to prevent the remembrance of such abomination. Ch.—The beast was to be killed with clubs; the man was stoned to death. Jonathan.

25 Therefore do you also separate the clean beast from the unclean, and the clean fowl from the unclean: defile not your souls with beasts, or birds, or any things that move on the earth, and which I have shown you to be unclean.

26 *You shall be holy unto me, because I the Lord am holy, and I have separated you from other people, that you should be mine.

27 ^aA man, or woman, in whom there is a pythonical or divining spirit, dying let them die: they shall stone them; their blood be upon them.

CHAP. XXI.

Ordinances relating to the priests.

THE Lord said also to Moses: ^cSpeak to the priests, the sons of Aaron, and thou shalt say to them: Let not a priest incur an uncleanness at the death of his citizens:

2 But only for his kin, such as are near in blood, that is to say, for his father and for his mother, and for his son, and for his daughter, for his brother also,

3 And for a maiden sister, who hath had no husband:

4 But not even for the prince of his people, shall he do any thing that may make him unclean.

5 ^dNeither shall they shave their head, nor their beard, nor make incisions in their flesh.

6 They shall be holy to their God, and shall not profane his name: for they offer the burnt-offering of the Lord, and the bread of their God, and therefore they shall be holy.

7 *They shall not take to wife a harlot or a vile prostitute, nor one that has been put away from her husband: because they are consecrated to their God,

8 And offer the loaves of proposition. Let them therefore be holy, because I also am holy, the Lord, who sanctify them.

9 If the daughter of a priest be taken in whoredom, and dishonour the name of her father, she shall be burnt with fire.

10 The high priest, that is to say, the priest who is the greatest among his brethren, upon whose head the oil of unction hath been poured, and whose hands have been consecrated for the priesthood, and who hath been vested with the holy vestments, shall not uncover his head, he shall not rend his garments:

11 Nor shall he go in at all to any dead person: not even for his father, or his mother, shall he be defiled.

12 Neither shall he go out of the holy places, lest he defile the sanctuary of the Lord, because the oil of the holy unction of his God is upon him. I am the Lord.

13 ^eHe shall take a virgin unto his wife:

14 But a widow, or one that is divorced or defiled, or a harlot, he shall not take, but a maid of his own people:

15 He shall not mingle the stock of his kindred with the common people of his nation: for I am the Lord who sanctify him.

16 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

17 Say to Aaron: Whosoever of thy seed throughout their families, hath a blemish, he shall not offer bread to his God,

18 Neither shall he approach to minister to him: If he be blind, if he be lame, if he have a little, or a great, or a crooked nose,

19 If his foot, or if his hand be broken,

20 If he be crook-backed, or blear-eyed, or have a pearl in his eye, or a continual scab, or a dry scurf in his body, or a rupture:

VER. 26. Mine. This is the reason of these different prescriptions, that they may know the dignity to which they have been raised, and may avoid the manners of the profane. C.

VER. 27. Spirit. Heb. nub, means also a bottle. See chap. xix. 31. If those who consult such people be guilty, the authors of the delusion deserve death still more. H.—The spirit of python is no other than the spirit of the devil, or of Apollo, who was called Pythius, on account of his having slain the serpent python. His oracles were in great request, as he was supposed to know the secrets of nature. C.

CHAP. XXI. VER. 1. An uncleanness; viz. such as was contracted in laying out the dead body, or touching it; or in going into the house, or assisting at the funeral, &c. Ch. —At the death. Heb. “for a soul;” by which name the carcass is here denoted, because it had once been ruled by the soul. S. Aug. q. 81. This law related only to the family of Aaron, when no absolute necessity or near relationship required their attendance. C.—To account for all these regulations, we only need to observe that such was the will of God; and here it may surely be said, stat pro ratione voluntas. He might thus intend to exercise their obedience; to keep their minds from being too much depressed by the sight of the dead, and to remind us all that we ought carefully to avoid sin, which kills the soul, and renders us really unclean before God. H.

VER. 3. Sister, of the same parents. Vatable.—Husband; for if she have, he ought to bury his wife, and to mourn for her. To be deprived of these advantages was then esteemed a great misfortune.

VER. 4. Prince. Heb. “Let not the prince (of the priests, Acts xxiii. 5) render himself unclean,” by attending the funerals of any of the people; or “let not the husband,” &c. He may be allowed to attend his wife to the grave: or, as others more probably assert, even this is not permitted. She is not one of the persons privileged, ver. 2, and Ezech. xlv. 25. Ezechiel (xxiv. 16) receives a command not to bewail the death of his wife.

VER. 5. Flesh. This would indicate an impotent grief, and want of patience. H.—They were not allowed to put on the usual signs of mourning, as the common people were, provided they did it not in honour of an idol. Chap. xix. 27.

VER. 8. And offer. Heb. addresses this to Moses. “Thou shalt sanctify him, therefore, because he offereth the bread of thy God.”

VER. 9. Fire. Provided she be betrothed, and still in her father's house; so that the infamy fall upon him. Jonathan.—For if she be with her husband, she must undergo the usual punishment of stoning. Other young women received no corporal chastisement for simple fornication: the man was bound to marry them, if the father consented; and, at any rate, he was forced to give them a dowry. Exod. xxii. 16. C.—But if the women pretended falsely that they were virgins, they were stoned. Deut. xxii. 20.

VER. 10. Head. Sept. “by taking off his cizaris, or tiara.” He shall not shave his head. Chap. x. 6.—Garments, at funerals, nor the sacred vestments at all. C.

VER. 12. Places. *This is to be understood in the same sense. He must not leave his sacred functions to attend any corpse whatever. Having the honour of representing God, and being his first minister upon earth, the utmost purity is required of him. Inferior priests may mourn on some occasions; and the Levites are not distinguished, in this respect, from the people; to show that God requires a sanctity in his officers proportionate to their exaltation.—Oil. Heb. “He is the Nozor; or the crown of the anointing oil of,” &c. Joseph has the title of Nazir, (Gen. xlix. 26,) which is borne by the prime ministers of the Eastern kings. Such is the high priest in the temple. Let Christian priests hence learn what sanctity will be required of them. C.—Priests must be detached, as much as possible, from all things which might divert them from their sacred offices. The greatest holiness is required of those who receive the body of Jesus Christ. D.

VER. 14. Widow. Other priests might marry the widows of their fellow-priests. Ezech. xlv. 22.

VER. 15. Nation. The wife of the high priest must be of noble birth, that he may speak to kings and princes with more authority. M.—Heb. “he shall not defile his race,” &c. by marrying one of another nation, or contrary to law. If he do, the children shall have no share in the priesthood.

VER. 17. A blemish. These corporal defects or deformities, which disqualified the priests from officiating in the old law, were figures of the vices which priests are to beware of in the new law. S. Gregory, Cura pastorum. Ch.

blemish, he shall not approach to offer sacrifices to the Lord, nor bread to his God.

22 He shall eat nevertheless of the loaves that are offered in the sanctuary,

23 Yet so that he enter not within the veil, nor approach to the altar, because he hath a blemish, and he must not defile my sanctuary. I am the Lord who sanctify them.

24 Moses therefore spoke to Aaron, and to his sons, and to all Israel, all the things that had been commanded him.

CHAP. XXII.

Who may eat the holy things: and what things may be offered.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses,* saying:

2 Speak to Aaron and to his sons, that they beware of those things that are consecrated of the children of Israel, and defile not the name of the things sanctified to me, which they offer. I am the Lord.

3 Say to them, and to their posterity: Every man of your race, that approacheth to those things that are consecrated, and which the children of Israel have offered to the Lord, in whom there is uncleanness, shall perish before the Lord. I am the Lord.

4 The man of the seed of Aaron, that is a leper, or that suffereth a running of the seed, shall not eat of those things that are sanctified to me, until he be healed. He that toucheth any thing unclean by occasion of the dead, and he whose seed goeth from him as in generation,

5 And he that toucheth a creeping thing, or any unclean thing, the touching of which is defiling,

6 Shall be unclean until the evening, and shall not eat those things that are sanctified: but when he hath washed his flesh with water,

7 And the sun is down, then being purified, he shall eat of the sanctified things, because it is his meat.

8 That which dieth of itself, and that which was taken by a beast, they shall not eat, nor be defiled therewith. I am the Lord.

9 Let them keep my precepts, that they may not fall into sin, and die in the sanctuary, when they shall have defiled it. I am the Lord who sanctify them.

10 No stranger shall eat of the sanctified things: a sojourner of the priests, or a hired servant, shall not eat of them.

VER. 23. Veil, which separates the sanctuary from the court.

CHAP. XXII. VER. 2. Offer. He does not speak of such things as fell to the share of the priests (M.); but orders them to behave with great reverence when they perform their sacred offices, lest others should take occasion to treat the name of God and holy things with disrespect. Heb. and Sept. "let them not profane my holy name, which they are bound to sanctify; or in what they consecrate to me." Such things must not be used for ordinary purposes. S. Bas. ser. de Bapt. ii. 2, and 3.

VER. 3. Approacheth, &c. This is to give us to understand with what purity of soul we are to approach to the blessed sacrament, of which these meats that had been offered in sacrifice were a figure. Ch.—Such as were unclean either fasted till the evening, or eat unconsecrated meats till they were purified.

VER. 4. And he, &c. Hence it is plain, even the Jewish priests were bound to observe continence during the time of their ministry. C.—For the same reason the priests of the new law, who may be called at any time to perform their more sacred functions, engage voluntarily in the state of perpetual celibacy. H.

VER. 5. Or any. Heb. "or a man who may contaminate," as lepers, &c. M.

VER. 8. That. See chap. xvii. 15.

VER. 10. Sojourner. "Guest," or friend, Syriac. None but priests could taste this meat, except they were going to remain in the family for ever. Hence servants and slaves of the Jewish nation, who would one day regain their liberty, are excluded.

11 But he whom the priest hath bought, and he that is his servant, born in his house, these shall eat of them.

12 If the daughter of a priest be married to any of the people, she shall not eat of those things that are sanctified, nor of the first-fruits.

13 But if she be a widow, or divorced, and having no children return to her father's house, she shall eat of her father's meats, as she was wont to do when she was a maid; no stranger hath leave to eat of them.

14 He that eateth of the sanctified things through ignorance, shall add the fifth part with that which he ate, and shall give it to the priest into the sanctuary.

15 And they shall not profane the sanctified things of the children of Israel, which they offer to the Lord;

16 Lest perhaps they bear the iniquity of their trespass, when they shall have eaten the sanctified things I am the Lord who sanctify them.

17 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

18 Speak to Aaron, and to his sons, and to all the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them: The man of the house of Israel, and of the strangers who dwell with you, that offereth his oblation, either paying his vows, or offering of his own accord, whatsoever it be which he presenteth for a holocaust of the Lord,

19 To be offered by you, it shall be a male without blemish, of the beeves, or of the sheep, or of the goats.

20 If it have a blemish, you shall not offer it, neither shall it be acceptable.

21 The man that offereth a victim of peace-offerings to the Lord, either paying his vows, or offering of his own accord, whether of beeves or of sheep, shall offer it without blemish that it may be acceptable: there shall be no blemish in it.

22 If it be blind, or broken, or have a scar or blisters, or a scab, or a dry scurf: you shall not offer them to the Lord, nor burn any thing of them upon the Lord's altar.

23 An ox or a sheep, that hath the ear and the tail cut off, thou mayst offer voluntarily: but a vow may not be paid with them.

24 You shall not offer to the Lord any beast that hath the testicles bruised or crushed, or cut and taken away: neither shall you do any such thing in your land.

25 You shall not offer bread to your God, from the VER. 18. Strangers: proselytes of justice, or converts to the Jewish religion. See ver. 25.

VER. 19. Without blemish. To teach us to aim at perfection in all our offerings and performances.

VER. 22. Scar. Sept. "If its tongue be cut out, or slit," which was a blemish among the heathens. The idea of God's perfection has taught all nations to present to Him nothing but what is perfect, particularly when they offer victims.

VER. 25. Bread, which always accompanies the sacrifices for sin. Holocausts must be offered by the Gentiles, 2 Mac. iii. 3; 1 Esd. vi. 9. Joseph. Ant. xviii. 7. Seld. Jur. 3, 4, 7.—Them. To reconcile this with ver. 18, we must understand because in the sense of in as much as; they are all corrupted, when contrary to these regulations. The strangers shall not be allowed to offer any hand of a stranger, nor any other thing that he would give: because they are all corrupted, and defiled: you shall not receive them.

26 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

27 When a bullock, or a sheep, or a goat, is brought forth, they shall be seven days under the udder of their dam: but the eighth day, and thenceforth, they may be offered to the Lord.

28 Whether it be a cow, or a sheep, they shall not be sacrificed the same day with their young ones.

29 If you immolate a victim for thanksgiving to the Lord that he may be favourable, 30 You shall eat it the same day, there shall not any of it remain until the morning of the next day. I am the Lord.

31 Keep my commandments, and do them. I am the Lord

32 Profane not my holy name, that I may be sanctified in the midst of the children of Israel. I am the Lord who sanctify you, 33 And who brought you out of the land of Egypt, that I might be your God: I am the Lord.

CHAP. XXIII.

Holy-days to be kept.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses,* saying:

2 Speak to the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them: These are the feasts of the Lord, which you shall call holy.

3 Six days shall ye do work: the seventh day, because it is the rest of the sabbath, shall be called holy. You shall do no work on that day: it is the sabbath of the Lord in all your habitations.

4 These also are the holy-days of the Lord, which you must celebrate in their seasons.

5 ^bThe first month, the fourteenth day of the month at evening, is the Phase of the Lord:

6 And the fifteenth day of the same month, is the solemnity of the unleavened bread of the Lord. Seven days shall you eat unleavened bread.

7 The first day shall be most solemn unto you, and holy: you shall do no servile work therein:

8 But you shall offer sacrifice in fire to the Lord seven days. And the seventh day shall be more solemn, and more holy: and you shall do no servile work therein.

9 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

10 Speak to the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them: When you shall have entered into the land which I will give you, and shall reap your corn, you shall bring sheaves of ears, the first-fruits of your harvest, to the priest:

11 Who shall lift up the sheaf before the Lord, the next day after the sabbath, that it may be acceptable for you, and shall sanctify it.

12 And on the same day that the sheaf is consecrated, a lamb without blemish, of the first year, shall be killed for a holocaust of the Lord.

13 And the libations shall be offered with it, two tenths of flour tempered with oil, for a burnt-offering of the Lord, and a most sweet odour: libations also of wine, the fourth part of a hin.

14 You shall not eat either bread, or parched corn, or frumenty of the harvest, until the day that you shall offer thereof to your God. It is a precept for ever throughout your generations, and all your dwellings.

15 ^cYou shall count therefore from the morrow after the sabbath, wherein you offered the sheaf of the first-fruits, seven full weeks,

16 Even unto the morrow after the seventh week be expired, that is to say, fifty days, and so you shall offer a new sacrifice to the Lord.

17 Out of all your dwellings, two loaves of the first-fruits, of two tenths of flour leavened, which you shall bake for the first-fruits of the Lord.

18 And you shall offer with the loaves seven lambs without blemish of the first year, and one calf from the herd, and two rams, and they shall be for a holocaust with their libations, for a most sweet odour to the Lord.

19 You shall offer also a buck-goat for sin, and two lambs of the first year, for sacrifices of peace-offerings.

20 And when the priest hath lifted them up with the loaves of the first-fruits before the Lord, they shall fall to his use.

blemished victim. Heb. "Neither from the hand of a stranger shall you offer the bread (or victims) of your God of any of these; because . . . blemishes are in them: they shall not be accepted (by God) for you (or them)." The Chal. and other versions explain it in the same sense. Presents of gold, &c. were accepted, and kept in the temple. C.

CHAP. XXIII. VER. 2. Holy. The Heb., Chal., and Sept. add, "and meet together; or, these are my feasts of assembly." On these days the people were called together to hear the word of God, &c. M.

VER. 3. Sabbath. Heb. "the rest of rest;" a day in which no unnecessary servile work must be done, no more than on the great holidays, ver. 6, 8. H.—Called holy, because it shall be really so; in which sense the word is often used. Isa. ix. 6, &c.—Day; you must not even dress meat, which was also forbidden on the day of expiation.—Lord, on which he ceased from work, and which you must keep in his honour.

VER. 6. Bread. The obligation of eating none but this sort of bread began at the second evening of the 14th, which was the beginning of the 15th of Nisan. Exod. xii. 6, 12. M.

VER. 8. In fire. Sept. "holocausts," extraordinary ones, besides the daily burnt-offerings. Num. xxviii. 19.

VER. 10. Land of Chanaan, at which time these feasts began to be observed. M. See Lev. ii. 14.—Before the harvest commenced first-fruits were offered to the Lord. This custom is almost as ancient as the world, (Gen. iv. 3.) and we may say that it forms a part of natural religion, which all nations have observed. The Jews might reap their wheat, but they could not taste it, before they had offered the first-fruits, at Pentecost. Chap. xxiii. 17; Exod. xxiii. 16.—Of ears. Heb. amor, or gomer, "a sheaf," denotes also a measure, which was called an amaron, containing almost three pints.

VER. 11. Sabbath. Onkelos has "the good day," from which the fifty days of Pentecost were counted. C.

VER. 14. Corn (polentam). Some translate bruised corn, or a sort of cake. See chap. ii. 14.—Dwellings, even out of the holy land, which was peculiar to this law. Grotius.

VER. 15. Sabbath. Not the ninth day of the week, but the first day of the Passover; from the morrow of which seven weeks or forty-nine days were reckoned; and the next day was Pentecost. M.—They began, therefore, to count on the 16th of Nisan, and end on the 6th of the third month Sivan. All the intermediate days took their denomination from this second day of the Passover; so that the next Saturday was called the first sabbath after the second day; in Greek Deuteroptoton, the second-first (Luke vi. 1); a term which had puzzled all the interpreters till Jos. Scaliger made this discovery. Emend. G. The Samaritans count from the day after that sabbath which follows the Passover; so that if the festival fall on Monday, they celebrate Pentecost later than the Jews. See their Letter to Huntington. C.

VER. 16. Sacrifice. Heb. mon'ee, or mincha, which relates to the offerings of corn and liquors. Two loaves of wheaten flour leavened, were presented probably by the nation. This festival was instituted in memory of the law being given from Mount Sinai, which was a figure of the law of grace promulgated by the Holy Ghost and by the apostles, on the day of Pentecost. C.

VER. 17. Loaves. The Protestants supply wave loaves, (H.) though their Heb. text has nothing. The Sam. is more correct. Houbigant.

VER. 18. Lambs. More were prescribed. Num. xxviii. 27. Josephus joins all together. B. iii. 10.

VER. 20. Use. None of the peace-offerings were burnt upon the altar, as the bread was leavened. C.

21 And you shall call this day most solemn, and most holy. You shall do no servile work therein. It shall be an everlasting ordinance in all your dwellings and generations.

22 *And when you reap the corn of your land, you shall not cut it to the very ground: neither shall you gather the ears that remain: but you shall leave them for the poor and for the strangers. I am the Lord your God.

23 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

24 ^bSay to the children of Israel: The seventh month, on the first day of the month, you shall keep a sabbath, a memorial, with the sound of trumpets, and it shall be called holy.

25 You shall do no servile work therein, and you shall offer a holocaust to the Lord.

26 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

27 ^cUpon the tenth day of this seventh month shall be the day of atonement, it shall be most solemn, and shall be called holy: and you shall afflict your souls on that day, and shall offer a holocaust to the Lord.

28 You shall do no servile work in the time of this day: because it is a day of propitiation, that the Lord your God may be merciful unto you.

29 Every soul that is not afflicted on this day, shall perish from among his people:

30 And every soul that shall do any work, the same will I destroy from among his people.

31 You shall do no work therefore on that day: it shall be an everlasting ordinance unto you in all your generations, and dwellings.

32 It is a sabbath of rest, and you shall afflict your souls, beginning on the ninth day of the month: from evening until evening you shall celebrate your sabbaths.

33 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

34 Say to the children of Israel: From the fifteenth day of this same seventh month, shall be kept the feast of tabernacles seven days to the Lord.

35 ^aThe first day shall be called most solemn and most holy: you shall do no servile work therein. And seven days you shall offer holocausts to the Lord.

36 The eighth day also shall be most solemn and most holy, and you shall offer holocausts to the Lord: for it is the day of assembly and congregation: you shall do no servile work therein.

37 These are the feasts of the Lord, which you shall call most solemn and most holy, and shall offer on them oblations to the Lord, holocausts and libations according to the rite of every day.

38 Besides the sabbaths of the Lord, and your gifts, and those things that you shall offer by vow, or which you shall give to the Lord voluntarily.

39 So from the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when you shall have gathered in all the fruits of your land, you shall celebrate the feast of the Lord seven days: on the first day and the eighth shall be a sabbath, that is, a day of rest.

40 And you shall take to you on the first day, the fruits of the fairest tree, and branches of palm trees, and boughs of thick trees, and willows of the brook, and you shall rejoice before the Lord your God.

41 And you shall keep the solemnity thereof seven days in the year. It shall be an everlasting ordinance in your generations. In the seventh month shall you celebrate this feast,

42 And you shall dwell in bowers seven days: every one that is of the race of Israel, shall dwell in tabernacles:

43 That your posterity may know, that I made the children of Israel to dwell in tabernacles, when I brought them out of the land of Egypt. I am the Lord your God.

44 And Moses spoke concerning the feasts of the Lord to the children of Israel.

^a Supra, xix. 9.—^b Num. xxix. 1.

VER. 21. Most holy. Heb. "a holy convocation." H.—It is generally supposed that it had an octave, though the Scripture says nothing of it.

VER. 24. Memorial, or a memorable sabbath. This third great festival sanctified the commencement of the civil year in Tisri, the sabbatical month, according to the ecclesiastical calculation. T. See Num. xxix. 3.—The sound of trumpets, which ushered in the year with great solemnity, reminded the Jews of the approaching fast, ver. 27, (Maimon,) and of those terrible sounds which had been heard at Sinai. Theodoret, q. 32.

VER. 28. Servile is not in the original, or in the other versions, nor in the Vulg. ver. 30; whence it is inferred, that this day of atonement was to be kept like the sabbath: so that even meat could not be made ready on it lawfully. Chap. xvi. 29. C.

VER. 29. Every. It was difficult for any grown-up person to be entirely guiltless, amid such a variety of precepts, (M.) which S. Peter says neither they nor their fathers could bear, Acts xv. 10: and S. James (iii. 2) observes, in many things we all offend. If any proved so happy as to keep without blame, (Luke i. 6, H.) they were bound, at least, to grieve for the injury done to God by their fellow members. See Dan. ix. 5. M.

VER. 32. Sabbaths. The Church adopts this custom in her divine office. The Jewish day began and ended with sun-set. Exod. xii. 6. C.—No part of the ninth of Tisri belonged to this feast, (ver. 27,) which only began at the expiration of it. H.

VER. 34. Seven days, during which the people were bound to rejoice, but not to abstain from servile work; except on the first and eighth day. T.—Tabernacles: Gr. Scenopegia; because, during the octave, the Jews lived in tents, or booths, made of branches, &c., ver. 42.

VER. 36. Most holy. Heb. "an holy assembly." The great day of the festivity, John vii. 37.—Congregation. Heb. atsroth, "retention." All were bound to wait till this day was over. In other festivals it was sufficient if they were present one day. This was the concluding day of the feast of tabernacles. Sept. exodion.

VER. 39. Eighth. On the feast of the Passover, the 7th day after the 15th was kept holy, because the 14th, or the Phase, made also a part of the solemnity, ver. 5, 8. H.

VER. 40. Fairest tree, branches of the orange or citron tree, laden with blossoms and fruit. T.—Josephus (iii. 10) says, they took branches of myrtle, willows, and palm trees, on which they fixed oranges.—Thick trees, of any species; though Josephus, &c., restrain it to the myrtle, which was certainly used on this occasion. 2 Esd. viii. 12.—Willows. Sept. adds also, "branches of agnus from the torrent." Perhaps Moses only meant that these branches should be used in forming the tents; but the Jews hold them in their hands, while they go in solemn procession round the pulpit in their synagogues, during every day of the octave, before breakfast, crying out Ana hosiah na, &c., "Save us, we beseech thee, O Lord; we beseech thee, grant us good success." They gave the title of hosannah to those branches; in allusion to which, the children sung in honour of Jesus Christ, Hosanna to the Son of David.—Rejoice; dancing and singing before the altar of holocausts, 2 Kings vi. 14. C.—In this chapter we find six festivals specified: 1. sabbath; 2. Passover; 3. Pentecost; 4. trumpets; 5. expiation; 6. tabernacles, lasting till the octave day of assembly and collection. These three last were celebrated in the 7th month, the 1st of the civil year. There was also a feast on all the new moons. Num. xxviii. 11. H.

VER. 44. Feasts. In the institution of these feasts, as in the other regulations of Moses, there was something ceremonial, which might be altered, and something moral, which regards even those times when the Jewish religion was to cease. S. Aug. q. 43.—Hence we must conclude, that the obligation of keeping certain days holy must always remain. But those appointed for the Jews, as they foretold the future Messias, must be changed, lest otherwise we might seem to confess that he is still to come. Rom. xiv.; Gal. iv.; Colos. ii. We are not therefore allowed to Judaize abstaining from work on the Jewish sabbath, (C. of Laodicea,) as Antichrist will require. S. Greg. ep. xi. 3.—But we must keep Sunday instead, (as even Protestants maintain, though there be no Scripture for it,) by authority of tradition, in memory of Christ's resurrection, &c. S. CHAP. XXIV.

The oil for the lamps. The loaves of proposition. The punishment of blasphemy.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses,^a saying:
2 Command the children of Israel, that they bring unto thee the finest and clearest oil of olives, to furnish the lamps continually,

3 Without the veil of the testimony in the tabernacle of the covenant. And Aaron shall set them from evening until morning before the Lord, by a perpetual service, and rite in your generations.

4 They shall be set upon the most pure candlestick before the Lord continually.

5 Thou shalt take also fine flour, and shalt bake twelve loaves thereof, two tenths shall be in every loaf:

6 And thou shalt set them six and six, one against another, upon the most clean table before the Lord:

7 And thou shalt put upon them the clearest frankincense, that the bread may be for a memorial of the oblation of the Lord.

8 Every sabbath they shall be changed before the Lord, being received of the children of Israel by an everlasting covenant:

9 And they shall be Aaron's and his sons', that they may eat them in the holy place: because it is most holy of the sacrifices of the Lord, by a perpetual rite.

10 And behold there went out the son of a woman of Israel, whom she had of an Egyptian, among the children of Israel, and fell at words in the camp with a man of Israel.

11 And when he had blasphemed the Name, and had cursed it, he was brought to Moses: (now his mother was called Salumith, the daughter of Dabri, of the tribe of Dan:)

12 And they put him into prison, till they might know what the Lord would command.

13 And the Lord spoke to Moses,

14 Saying: Bring forth the blasphemer without the camp, and let them that heard him, put their hands upon his head, and let all the people stone him.

CHAP. XXIV. VER. 2. Command. It is probable that this order was given while Beseleel was working at the tabernacle. C.—The people were to furnish the necessary sacrifices, &c., by the half sicle, Exod. xxx. 13, and by voluntary contributions on the three great festivals, on which no one was to appear empty-handed, Exod. xxiii. 15. Some chose to put their contributions towards the temple in the treasury, Luke xxi. 1.—Oil: Heb. "pure oil of the olive beaten, for light to," &c.

VER. 5. Bake. The family of Caath had to perform this office, 1 Par. ix. 32; xxiii. 29. M.

VER. 7. Incense. Sept. add, "salt." Villalpand also places wine on the table. B. iv. 57.—Memorial for the Lord to bless his people, and for them to make their oblations to him as to the living God, from whom all blessings are derived. H.—The incense was burnt instead of the bread, when fresh loaves were placed there. C.

VER. 8. Of the, &c. The Israelites gave a sufficient maintenance to the ministers of religion, out of which these provided the loaves; as S. Jerom testifies, Mal. i.

VER. 10. Egyptian. Many of these came out along with the Hebrews. Exod. xii. 38.

VER. 11. The Name. Some Latin copies add, "of God;" but the best omit it, with the Heb. &c. This is, however, the meaning. C.—The son of Salumith being in a rage, cursed that sacred name (ver. 15); and, as he perhaps had attempted to vent his fury upon whatever came in his way, God here reiterates the laws against murder, &c., ver. 17. C.

VER. 14. Head. To testify, that if they witness falsehood, they are willing to suffer the like punishment; and to beg that God would accept this victim, and not afflict all his people. T.

15 And thou shalt speak to the children of Israel The man that curseth his God, shall bear his sin.

16 And he that blasphemeth the name of the Lord dying let him die: all the multitude shall stone him, whether he be a native or a stranger. He that blasphemeth the name of the Lord, dying let him die.

17 ^bHe that striketh and killeth a man, dying let him die.

18 He that killeth a beast, shall make it good, that is to say, shall give beast for beast.

19 He that giveth a blemish to any of his neighbours: as he hath done, so shall it be done to him:

20 ^cBreach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth shall he restore. What blemish he gave; the like shall he be compelled to suffer.

21 He that striketh a beast, shall render another. He that striketh a man, shall be punished.

22 Let there be equal judgment among you, whether he be a stranger or a native that offends: because I am the Lord your God.

23 And Moses spoke to the children of Israel: and they brought forth him that had blasphemed, without the camp, and they stoned him. And the children of Israel did as the Lord had commanded Moses.

CHAP. XXV.

The law of the seventh and of the fiftieth year of jubilee.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses^d in Mount Sinai, saying:

2 Speak to the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them: When you shall have entered into the land which I will give you, observe the rest of the sabbath to the Lord.

3 ^eSix years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard, and shalt gather the fruits thereof:

4 But in the seventh year there shall be a sabbath to the land, of the resting of the Lord: thou shalt not sow thy field, nor prune thy vineyard.

5 What the ground shall bring forth of itself, thou shalt not reap: neither shalt thou gather the grapes of Matt. v. 38.—^d A. M. 2514.—^e Exod. xxiii. 10.

VER. 19. Blemish. Heb. mum, denotes any thing by which the body is disfigured or hurt. M.

VER. 20. Breach, or fracture: if he break a bone, the like detriment shall he receive.

VER. 21. Striketh, so as to kill or render useless, percussit, (II.) ver. 18.—Punished. Sept. "slain." They omit the first part of this verse.

VER. 22. Stranger. The Jews improperly restrain this law to those nations only which have embraced their religion. God requires that the judges shall not show more favour to their countrymen than to others who may dwell among them. C.

CHAP. XXV. VER. 2. The rest (sabbathises sabbatum). The land was to enjoy the benefit of rest every seventh year, to remind God's people that he had created the world, and that he still retained dominion over it, (S. Aug. q. 91, 92,) requiring the spontaneous fruits of that year as a tribute, part of which he gave to the poor. In the mean time, all creatures rested from their labours, and the people were taught to have an entire confidence in Providence. C.—This law was given in the desert of Sinai, in the month of Nisan, the second year after the exit: but it did not begin to be in force till the Hebrews entered into the land of Chanaan. H.

VER. 5. Reap entirely, but only take a part, ver. 6.—First-fruits. None shall be this year presented to the Lord. Heb. has the word Nozir, "Nazareat," alluding to the custom of those who, out of devotion, let their hair grow; as here only the spontaneous fruits of the unpruned vine were to be eaten; they were separated, as the word also means, or "sanctified," (Sept.,) being abandoned indifferently for the use of any one that pleased to eat of them, and no longer fenced in by the proprietor, (C.) though he might take the first, or choicest fruit, for his own use. (M.) or at least he might take his share like the rest. T.

the first-fruits as a vintage: for it is a year of rest to the land:

6 But they shall be unto you for meat, to thee and to thy man-servant, to thy maid-servant and thy hireling, and to the strangers that sojourn with thee:

7 All things that grow shall be meat to thy beasts and to thy cattle.

8 Thou shalt also number to thee seven weeks of years, that is to say, seven times seven, which together make forty-nine years:

9 And thou shalt sound the trumpet in the seventh month, the tenth day of the month, in the time of the expiation in all your land:

10 And thou shalt sanctify the fiftieth year, and shalt proclaim remission to all the inhabitants of thy land: for it is the year of jubilee. Every man shall return to his possession, and every one shall go back to his former family:

11 Because it is the jubilee and the fiftieth year. You shall not sow nor reap the things that grow in the field of their own accord, neither shall you gather the first-fruits of the vines, 12 Because of the sanctification of the jubilee: but as they grow you shall presently eat them.

13 In the year of the jubilee all shall return to their possessions.

14 When thou shalt sell any thing to thy neighbour, or shalt buy of him, grieve not thy brother: but thou shalt buy of him according to the number of years from the jubilee,

15 And he shall sell to thee according to the computation of the fruits.

16 The more years remain after the jubilee, the more shall the price increase: and the less time is counted, so much the less shall the purchase cost. For he shall sell to thee the time of the fruits.

17 Do not afflict your countrymen, but let every one fear his God: because I am the Lord your God.

18 Do my precepts, and keep my judgments, and fulfil them: that you may dwell in the land without any fear, 19 And the ground may yield you its fruits, of which you may eat your fill, fearing no man's invasion.

20 But if you say: What shall we eat the seventh year, if we sow not, nor gather our fruits?

21 I will give you my blessing the sixth year, and it shall yield the fruits of three years:

22 And the eighth year you shall sow, and shall eat of the old fruits, until the ninth year: till new grow up, you shall eat the old store.

23 The land also shall not be sold for ever: because it is mine, and you are strangers and sojourners with me.

24 For which cause all the country of your possession shall be under the condition of redemption.

25 If thy brother, being impoverished, sell his little possession, and his kinsman will, he may redeem what he had sold.

26 But if he have no kinsman, and he himself can find the price to redeem it:

27 The value of the fruits shall be counted from that time when he sold it: and the overplus he shall restore to the buyer, and so shall receive his possession again.

28 But if his hands find not the means to repay the price, the buyer shall have what he bought, until the year of the jubilee. For in that year all that is sold shall return to the owner, and to the ancient possessor.

29 He that selleth a house within the walls of a city, shall have the liberty to redeem it, until one year be expired:

30 If he redeem it not, and the whole year be fully out, the buyer shall possess it, and his posterity for ever, and it cannot be redeemed, not even in the jubilee.

31 But if the house be in a village, that hath no walls, it shall be sold according to the same law as the fields: if it be not redeemed before, in the jubilee it shall return to the owner.

32 The houses of Levites, which are in cities, may always be redeemed:

33 If they be not redeemed, in the jubilee they shall all return to the owners, because the houses of the cities of the Levites are for their possessions among the children of Israel.

VER. 7. Cattle. This last term in Heb., Sept., &c., means "wild beasts," which must also live. At this period of the seventh year debts were to be remitted, the law read, &c., Exod. xxi. 2; Deut. xv. 2, and xxxi. 10. But in the jubilee year, even those Hebrew slaves whose ears had been pierced, and those who had sold their land, regained their liberty and possessions. C.—Their children and wives, according to Josephus, went out with them, ver. 41. Houses and suburbs for gardens, &c. might be sold for ever, if they were not redeemed the first year, excepting those of the Levites, ver. 34. T.

VER. 8. Years. It is dubious whether the 49th or the 50th year was appointed for the jubilee. The former year is fixed upon by many able chronologers, who remark, that if two years of rest had occurred together, it would have been a serious inconvenience; but others decide for the 50th year, ver. 10. Philo, Joseph. iii. 10. S. Aug. q. 92. Salien, &c. C.—On the feast of expiation of the 49th year they promulgated the following to be the year of jubilee. M.—Usher places the first A. M. 2609, 49 years after the partition of the land by Josue in 2560: Salien dates 50 years from the entrance (ver. 2) of the Hebrews into Chanaan, A. M. 2583, six years sooner; and places the first jubilee 2633, immediately after the sabbatic year, which fell in the 32nd year of Othniel. He supposes that both were proclaimed at the same time, on the 1st of Tisri, Ros Hassana, "the head of the year;" though the incense went about the country only on the 10th. The writers both of the Synagogue and of the Church generally adopt the 50th for the year of jubilee; and the pretended inconvenience of two years' rest is nugatory, since God promised a three years' crop, ver. 21. H.

VER. 10. Remission; that is, a general release and discharge from debts and bondage, and a reinstating of every man in his former possessions. Ch.—Jubilee: Heb. jubol means "liberty" (Joseph.); "re-establishment" (Philo); "deliverance" (Abenezra). Cunaus (Rep. i. 6) observes, that the jubilee was discontinued after the captivity, though the sabbatic year was still kept. C.—In the Christian dispensation, the jubilee denotes a time of indulgence, in consequence of the power left by Jesus Christ. Matt. xvi. 19; 2 Cor. ii. 10. The first was given by Boniface VIII. in 1300; and others were granted every century, till Clement VI. reduced the space to 50 years, 1342. Gregory XI. would have them dispensed to the faithful every 33 years, and Paul XI. every 25th, that more might partake of so great a benefit. This has been done since his time, and the Popes often grant them when the Church is in great danger, and also in the year when they are consecrated. C.—They are designed to promote the fervour of piety, and the remission of the punishment due to sin. H.

VER. 14. Grieve. Heb. "deceive not." S. Chrysostom observes, that to engage another to sell us any thing for what we know is beneath its value, is theft. Grot. Jur. ii. 12.

VER. 21. Three years. After the harvest of the sixth year was gotten in, the land rested from September to September, the beginning of the 8th year, when it was tilled again. Nothing would be ripe till about March; yet the harvest of the 6th year would suffice to furnish food till that time, or even for a year longer, as it would be requisite, when the year of jubilee succeeded that of rest, ver. 8. H.

VER. 23. For ever. Sam. version, "absolutely." The only exception to this law is, when a person makes a vow to give some land to the Lord, and will not redeem it. Chap. xxvii. 20. In that case God re-enters upon his property, and it belongs to his priests. C.

VER. 27. Fruits. An estimation shall be made of what the buyer would probably have gotten for the fruits of the land till the year of jubilee, and that sum shall be given to him (C.); or what benefit he has already derived from the land shall be computed. H.

VER. 33. Owners. The Levites had no other possessions, but these cities and 2000 cubits of land round them. The priests might buy of one another. Jer. xxxi. 7.

34 But let not their suburbs be sold, because it is a perpetual possession.

35 If thy brother be impoverished, and weak of hand, and thou receive him as a stranger and sojourner, and he live with thee, 36 Take not usury of him, nor more than thou gavest: fear thy God, that thy brother may live with thee.

37 Thou shalt not give him thy money upon usury, nor exact of him any increase of fruits.

38 I am the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, that I might give you the land of Chanaan, and might be your God.

39 If thy brother, constrained by poverty, sell himself to thee, thou shalt not oppress him with the service of bond-servants:

40 But he shall be as a hireling, and a sojourner. he shall work with thee until the year of the jubilee, 41 And afterwards he shall go out with his children, and shall return to his kindred and to the possession of his fathers.

42 For they are my servants, and I brought them out of the land of Egypt: let them not be sold as bond-men:

43 Afflict him not by might, but fear thy God.

44 Let your bond-men, and your bond-women, be of the nations that are round about you.

45 And of the strangers that sojourn among you, or that were born of them in your land, these you shall have for servants:

46 And by right of inheritance shall leave them to your posterity, and shall possess them for ever. But oppress not your brethren, the children of Israel, by might.

47 If the hand of a stranger, or a sojourner, grow strong among you, and thy brother being impoverished sell himself to him, or to any of his race:

48 After the sale he may be redeemed. He that will of his brethren shall redeem him:

49 Either his uncle, or his uncle's son, or his kinsman, by blood, or by affinity. But if he himself be able also, he shall redeem himself,

50 Counting only the years from the time of his selling unto the year of the jubilee: and counting the money, that he was sold for, according to the number of the years and the reckoning of a hired servant.

51 If there be many years that remain until the jubilee, according to them shall he also repay the price.

a A. M. 2514.—b Exod. xx. 4; Deut. v. 8;

VER. 40. Hireling, who has engaged to work for a term of years, either of six, or at most 49. After the year of the jubilee he might enter into fresh engagements with his late master. H.—The Hebrews have always hated slavery. We have never been slaves to any, John viii. 33. They were not allowed to part with their liberty, except from absolute distress (Maimonides); and then they do not submit to what they call intrinsic slavery.

VER. 41. Children. His wife and children were not made slaves with him.

VER. 45. Servants, or slaves, whom you may treat with greater severity than the Hebrews, and keep for ever, even though they may have embraced the true faith. But still you must remember that they are your brethren.

VER. 49. Himself. He might have saved up something by greater industry. The Athenians allowed their slaves the same privilege. C.

VER. 53. Wages. Heb. "as a yearly hired servant shall he be with him." What was customarily given to a hired servant for a certain number of years, might be a rule to judge how much was to be paid for redemption. H.

CHAP. XXVI. VER. 1. To adore it. This explains the prohibition of making graven things, &c. The Protestants translate as usual, "Ye shall make you no idols, nor graven image, neither rear ye up a standing image, neither shall ye set up any image of stone in your land to bow down unto it." They seem terribly afraid of images, as if they were all idols. See Exod. xx. 4. II.—Pillars.

52 If few, he shall make the reckoning with him according to the number of the years, and shall repay to the buyer of what remaineth of the years, 53 His wages being allowed for which he served before: he shall not afflict him violently in thy sight.

54 And if by these means he cannot be redeemed, in the year of the jubilee he shall go out with his children.

55 For the children of Israel are my servants, whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt.

CHAP. XXVI.

God's promises to them that keep his commandments. And the many punishments with which he threatens transgressors.

I AM the Lord^a your God: "you shall not make to yourselves any idol or graven thing, neither shall you erect pillars, nor set up a remarkable stone in your land, to adore it: for I am the Lord your God.

2 Keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary: I am the Lord.

3 "If you walk in my precepts, and keep my commandments, and do them, I will give you rain in due seasons,

4 And the ground shall bring forth its increase, and the trees shall be filled with fruit.

5 The threshing of your harvest shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing-time: and you shall eat your bread to the full, and dwell in your land without fear.

6 I will give peace in your coasts: you shall sleep, and there shall be none to make you afraid. I will take away evil beasts: and the sword shall not pass through your quarters.

7 You shall pursue your enemies, and they shall fall before you.

8 Five of yours shall pursue a hundred others, and a hundred of you ten thousand: your enemies shall fall before you by the sword.

9 I will look on you, and make you increase: you shall be multiplied, and I will establish my covenant with you.

10 You shall eat the oldest of the old store, and, new coming on, you shall cast away the old.

11 I will set my tabernacle in the midst of you, and my soul shall not cast you off.

12 "I will walk among you, and will be your God, and you shall be my people.

Psal. xvi. 7.—c Deut. xxviii. 1.—d 2 Cor. vi. 16.

Heb. motsbe, "statue, or monument." Such were erected by Jacob, Josue, and even by Moses himself, without any offence or danger of idolatry. Gen. xxviii. 18; Jos. iv. 4; Exod. xxiv. 4. Apuleius (Flor.) makes mention, among other species of superstition, "of a stone anointed, and of an altar crowned with flowers."—The stone, which is here condemned, is one set up "for adoration." Onkelos.—Heb. "a stone of sight," placed on some eminence, or on the high roads. C.

VER. 3. Due seasons. Before harvest, in spring; and after that in autumn, when they sow their wheat and barley in Palestine. C.

VER. 5. Time. So great shall be the abundance, that you will scarcely have time to get all the work done before you will be called off to something else. H.—These promises would be so much the more agreeable to them, as in Egypt they had been forced to keep in their houses two or three months together, on account of the overflowing of the Nile. In that country, as well as in Greece and Palestine, people sow both wheat and barley about October; while in other countries the latter is sown in spring. The harvest is ready in about six months, and that of wheat in seven. Plin. xviii. 18. Hesiod. ep. 2. C.

VER. 10. Old; being unable to consume all. M.—Heb. "ye shall eat old store, and bring forth the old because of the new." Sept. "you shall eat the old of old, and you shall bring out the old from the face of the new." II.

13 I am the Lord your God: who have brought you out of the land of the Egyptians, that you should not serve them, and who have broken the chains of your necks, that you might go upright.

14 *But if you will not hear me, nor do all my commandments,

15 If you despise my laws, and contemn my judgments, so as not to do those things which are appointed by me, and to make void my covenant:

16 I also will do these things to you: I will quickly visit you with poverty, and burning heat, which shall waste your eyes, and consume your lives. You shall sow your seed in vain, which shall be devoured by your enemies.

17 I will set my face against you, and you shall fall down before your enemies, and shall be made subject to them that hate you, you shall flee when no man pursueth you.

18 But if you will not yet for all this obey me, I will chastise you seven times more for your sins,

19 And I will break the pride of your stubbornness, and I will make to you the heaven above as iron, and the earth as brass:

20 Your labour shall be spent in vain, the ground shall not bring forth her increase, nor the trees yield their fruit.

21 If you walk contrary to me, and will not hearken to me, I will bring seven times more plagues upon you for your sins:

22 And I will send in upon you the beasts of the field, to destroy you, and your cattle, and make you few in number, and that your highways may be desolate.

23 And if even so you will not amend, but will walk contrary to me:

24 I also will walk contrary to you, and will strike you seven times for your sins.

25 And I will bring in upon you the sword that shall avenge my covenant. And when you shall flee into the cities, I will send the pestilence in the midst of you, and you shall be delivered into the hands of your enemies.

26 After I shall have broken the staff of your bread: so that ten women shall bake your bread in one oven, and give it out by weight: and you shall eat, and shall not be filled.

* Deut. xxviii. 15; Mal. ii. 2.

VER. 13. Upright; and be no longer bowed down with a heavy yoke, like oxen. "I have broken the locks of your prison, and have set you at liberty." Arab. C.

VER. 10. Heat. Heb. Kodēth, is rendered "scab and jaundice," by the Sept.; and by others "a dangerous wind," like that which causes so many diseases in Egypt. The precise meaning of some terms in this verse is not well known.

VER. 19. As brass (æneam). "Brazen," without moisture, and barren. Oukelos.

VER. 22. Desolate, none being left to frequent them; or the few who remain shall keep within doors, lest the wild beasts should meet and devour them. Isa. xxxiii. 8.

VER. 29. Daughters. To such extremities were the Jews reduced, at the sieges of Samaria and Jerusalem. 4 Kings vi. 28; Lament. iv. 10. Josep. Bel. vii. 8.

VER. 30. Places. The temple of Solomon was built on Mount Moria or Sion. The Persians sacrificed upon the mountains, and the Romans and Athenians built their most magnificent temples on the highest parts of their respective cities.—Idols. Heb. ēminim, denotes the chariots dedicated to the sun (4 Kings xxiii. 11); or the pyreia, or enclosures for the sacred fire, in honour of the god Homanus, (Strabo 15,) whose name is probably derived from this Hebrew word, (C.) as well as Hammon, a title of Jupiter. M.

VER. 34. Desolation. It shall be uncultivated; and though you would not 27 But if you will not for all this hearken to me, but will walk against me:

28 I will also go against you with opposite fury, and I will chastise you with seven plagues for your sins,

29 So that you shall eat the flesh of your sons and of your daughters.

30 I will destroy your high places, and break your idols. You shall fall among the ruins of your idols, and my soul shall abhor you, 31 Insomuch that I will bring your cities to be a wilderness, and I will make your sanctuaries desolate, and will receive no more your sweet odours.

32 And I will destroy your land, and your enemies shall be astonished at it, when they shall be the inhabitants thereof.

33 And I will scatter you among the Gentiles, and I will draw out the sword after you, and your land shall be desert, and your cities destroyed:

34 Then shall the land enjoy her sabbaths all the days of her desolation: when you shall be 35 In the enemies' land, she shall keep a sabbath, and rest in the sabbaths of her desolation, because she did not rest in your sabbaths when you dwelt therein.

36 And as to them that shall remain of you, I will send fear in their hearts in the countries of their enemies, the sound of a flying leaf shall terrify them, and they shall flee as it were from the sword: they shall fall, when no man pursueth them, 37 And they shall every one fall upon their brethren, as fleeing from wars, none of you shall dare to resist your enemies.

38 You shall perish among the Gentiles, and an enemy's land shall consume you.

39 And if of them also some remain, they shall pine away in their iniquities, in the land of their enemies, and they shall be afflicted for the sins of their fathers, and their own:

40 Until they confess their iniquities and the iniquities of their ancestors, whereby they have transgressed against me, and walked contrary unto me.

41 Therefore I also will walk against them, and bring them into the enemies' land, until their uncircumcised mind be ashamed: then shall they pray for their sins.

42 And I will remember my covenant, that I made with Jacob, and Isaac, and Abraham. I will remember also the land:

comply with my injunctions to let it rest one year out of seven, it shall now remain desolate for many years together. H.—Theodoret (q. 37) says for 70 years; the number of sabbatic years, from the reign of Saul till the captivity of Babylon, during the space of 490 years. This verse seems evidently to allude to those days of distress. C. 2 Par. xxxvi. 21.—But we can hardly suppose that none of the sabbatic years should have been duly observed during the reigns of David, Solomon, &c. H.—Instead of enjoy, Heb. may be "shall expiate her sabbaths," or the neglect of them. The same term, thortse, is used, (ver. 41, 43,) and the Vulg. generally renders it agreeable, speaking of sacrifices. Chap. i. 4; xxii. 20. C.

VER. 35. Your sabbaths, holidays and years of rest, and of jubilee. The earth is represented as entering into the views of God, and rejoicing at his judgments. H.

VER. 37. Brethren, in their flight; while each one is endeavouring to save himself. The Rabbin say they shall be punished for the sins of their brethren, if they have not endeavoured to prevent them.

VER. 41. Mind. Heb. "heart," wicked, rebellious, and unclean. M.—Pray for. Heb. and Syr. "please themselves in," &c. They shall see what advantage they have derived from their sins. C.—Then they shall enter into themselves, like the prodigal son. H.

VER. 42. Jacob is placed first, because he was the father of no other nation as Abraham and Isaac were. W.

43 Which when she shall be left by them, shall enjoy her sabbaths, being desolate for them. But they shall pray for their sins, because they rejected my judgments, and despised my laws.

44 And yet for all that when they were in the land of their enemies, I did not cast them off altogether, neither did I so despise them that they should be quite consumed, and I should make void my covenant with them. For I am the Lord their God.

45 And I will remember my former covenant, when I brought them out of the land of Egypt, in the sight of the Gentiles, to be their God. I am the Lord. These are the judgments, and precepts, and laws, which the Lord gave between him and the children of Israel, in Mount Sinai, by the hand of Moses.

CHAP. XXVII.

Of vows and tithes.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses,* saying :

2 Speak to the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them : The man that shall have made a vow, and promised his soul to God, shall give the price according to estimation.

3 If it be a man from twenty years old unto sixty years old, he shall give fifty sicles of silver, after the weight of the sanctuary :

4 If a woman, thirty.

5 But from the fifth year until the twentieth, a man shall give twenty sicles : a woman ten.

6 From one month until the fifth year, for a male shall be given five sicles : for a female three.

7 A man that is sixty years old, or upwards, shall give fifteen sicles : a woman ten.

8 If he be poor, and not able to pay the estimation, he shall stand before the priest : and as much as he shall value him at, and see him able to pay, so much shall he give.

9 But a beast, that may be sacrificed to the Lord, if any one shall vow, shall be holy,

10 And cannot be changed, that is to say, neither a better for a worse, nor a worse for a better. And if he shall change it : both that which was changed, and that for which it was changed, shall be consecrated to the Lord.

11 An unclean beast, which cannot be sacrificed to the Lord, if any man shall vow, shall be brought before the priest :

* A. M. 2514.

VER. 45. Moses. What has been hitherto recorded, was mostly prescribed by God at Mount Sinai, as some of the following laws were also. C.—It would seem as if this were the conclusion of Leviticus. We must remember, however, that these divisions were not introduced by Moses, as he wrote his five books without any interruption, like one verse. So S. John seems to conclude his Gospel, (chap. xx. 31.) though he afterwards adds another chapter. H.

CHAP. XXVII. VER. 2. Estimation. Heb. is obscure. "Whoever has separated, or made a singular vow; the souls to the Lord according to thy estimation." C.—Sept. "shall vow as it were the price of a soul to the Lord." H.—The person or the beast shall belong to the Lord; but if it be redeemed, the priests shall fix a price, according to the following regulations. Whatever was vowed must be subject to these rules, or it shall remain for the service of the altar. The priests may sell it, if it be an impure animal. Those which were fit for sacrifice were to be immolated, ver. 9, &c. No change of them was allowed, lest a worse should ever be substituted for a better (C.); and because God is better pleased with things that are offered to him by vow. W.

VER. 5. Fifth. The parents might make a vow of their children. M.

VER. 13. That offereth it. This addition of the Vulgate shows, that if any other purchased the animal, he would not have to give a fifth part more than the value. C.

VER. 15. House. The Rabbin say this fifth part went towards repairing the 12 Who judging whether it be good or bad, shall set the price :

13 Which if he that offereth it will give, he shall add above the estimation, the fifth part.

14 If a man shall vow his house, and sanctify it to the Lord, the priest shall consider it, whether it be good or bad, and it shall be sold according to the price which he shall appoint.

15 But if he that vowed, will redeem it, he shall give the fifth part of the estimation over and above, and shall have the house.

16 And if he vow the field of his possession, and consecrate it to the Lord, the price shall be rated according to the measure of the seed. If the ground be sowed with thirty bushels of barley, let it be sold for fifty sicles of silver.

17 If he vow his field immediately from the year of jubilee that is beginning, as much as it may be worth, at so much it shall be rated.

18 But if some time after : the priest shall reckon the money according to the number of years that remain until the jubilee, and the price shall be abated.

19 And if he that had vowed, will redeem his field, he shall add the fifth part of the money of the estimation, and shall possess it.

20 And if he will not redeem it, but it be sold to any other man, he that vowed it, may not redeem it any more ;

21 For when the day of jubilee cometh, it shall be sanctified to the Lord, and as a possession consecrated pertaineth to the right of the priests.

22 If a field that was bought, and not of a man's ancestors' possession, be sanctified to the Lord,

23 The priest shall reckon the price according to the number of years, unto the jubilee : and he that had vowed, shall give that to the Lord.

24 But in the jubilee, it shall return to the former owner, who had sold it, and had it in the lot of his possession.

25 All estimation shall be made according to the sicle of the sanctuary. ^bA sicle hath twenty obols.

26 The first-born, which belong to the Lord, no man may sanctify and vow : whether it be bullock, or sheep, they are the Lord's.

temple. We may suppose it was laid on to indemnify the priests for the loss which they sustained by selling a house, or a field, (ver. 16,) to the former owner; since if any other had purchased them, the priests would have been able to sell them again at the return of every jubilee. Tostat. C.

VER. 16. Possession, or inheritance. If he had only purchased the field, he could not, by his vow, transfer the property of it to the priests beyond the year of jubilee, ver. 22.—Seed, not of the produce, which is uncertain. The goodness of the soil must also be considered.—Silver : which rent must be paid every year, except on those of rest, when the earth was not cultivated. C.

VER. 21. Consecrated. Heb. "a field of anathema," devoted and separated from common uses for ever to the Lord. H.—Priests. They were bound to sell it from one jubilee to another to some of the same tribe to which the person, who vowed it, had belonged. M.—In the new law, religious people often consecrate themselves and their effects to the service of God; and it would be a sacrilege to alienate them from such pious uses to any thing profane. They are anathēma, a deposit or offering to the Lord; while those who violate them, are anathēma, accursed. H. T.

VER. 25. Obols. Heb. "geras," which were worth 1*d.*-2687; so that a sicle amounts to 2*s.* 3*d.*-375. Arbuthnot.

VER. 26. First-born. Sept. add "of beasts." Men, though belonging to the Lord on that title already, (Exod. xiii. 2,) might still be more particularly 27 And if it be an unclean beast, he that offereth it shall redeem it, according to thy estimation, and shall add the fifth part of the price. If he will not redeem it, it shall be sold to another, for how much soever it was estimated by thee.

28 *Any thing that is devoted to the Lord, whether it be man, or beast, or field, shall not be sold, neither may it be redeemed. Whatsoever is once consecrated, shall be holy of holies to the Lord.

29 And any consecration that is offered by man, shall not be redeemed, but dying shall die.

consecrated to him by vow, as Samuel was. C.—A vow must be concerning some greater good to which we are not otherwise bound. Such vows are agreeable to God, and can never be broken without sin. See Gen. xxxi. 13; 1 Tim. v. 12. W.

VER. 27. Unclean, either on account of some blemish, or because it is of those species which cannot be sacrificed; such as the horse, camel, &c., which might nevertheless be vowed to the Lord, and sold for the benefit of his priests.—By thee. Moses and the succeeding priests. Many MSS. read, with the Sept. and Chal., “by him,” leaving the matter to the person’s conscience; but the printed Hebrew and Vulgate agree. C.

VER. 28. Devoted. Heb. “anathema,” different from the other vows. In this case all that had life was slain, (or consecrated to God, 11.) houses were demolished, the land belonged to the priests for ever, so that they could only let it out to laymen for a certain rent. Moses thus devoted the Amalecites to destruction (Exod. xvii. 14); and Saul had orders to put in execution what he had denounced, 1 Kings xv. It is doubtful whether people could thus devote their children and slaves. Most authors suppose that it was necessary that God or the nation at large should pronounce such a sentence, as was done with respect to Achan. Jos. viii. See Num. xxi. 2; Judg. xi. 31. C.

VER. 30. Tithes. Abraham and Jacob paid tithes, out of devotion. Gen. xiv., and xxviii. 22. Moses first made a law on this subject, which began to be in force when the Hebrews had obtained quiet possession of Chanaan. The people the fruits of trees, are the Lord’s, and are sanctified to him.

31 And if any man will redeem his tithes, he shall add the fifth part of them.

32 Of all the tithes of oxen, and sheep, and goats, that pass under the shepherd’s rod, every tenth that cometh shall be sanctified to the Lord.

33 It shall not be chosen neither good nor bad, neither shall it be changed for another. If any man change it: both that which was changed, and that for which it was changed, shall be sanctified to the Lord, and shall not be redeemed.

34 These are the precepts which the Lord commanded Moses, for the children of Israel, in Mount Sinai.

paid them more exactly when they were determined to keep God’s law, and had pious princes at their head. 2 Par. xxxi. 5. At other times they were very negligent. Mal. iii. 10. This forced Esdras to appoint inspectors, Namnim, to collect them. The Pharisees affected a degree of exactitude in this respect, (Luke xi. 42; Matt. xxiii. 23,) paying what some Jews do not suppose to be necessary, though our Saviour says it was. Since the destruction of the temple the Jews pay none. The first-fruits and tithes of wheat, barley, figs, raisins, olives, pomegranates, and dates, were required, though it be not certain what quantity of the first-fruits was given; some say between the fortieth and the sixtieth part of the produce. Wine and wool were also to be offered. C.

VER. 32. Rod; on which was some red colouring, to mark the tenth animal as it passed through a narrow gate. If it was proper for sacrifice, its blood was poured out around the altar, and its flesh was returned to the giver. If it could not be offered in sacrifice, it was slain. The priest received none of the victim, no more than of the paschal lamb. Outram, sac. i. 11. But a feast was made of flesh for the person’s friends, and he gave a portion to the poor and to the Levites.—The Lord, as a sacrifice of thanksgiving, in which the greatest part of the victim is consumed by the person who offers it. The priests have but a small share. Chap. iii. C.

VER. 34. Sinai. The laws specified in the ten first chapters of the following book, were given here also. H.

THE BOOK OF NUMBERS.

This fourth Book of Moses is called NUMBERS, because it begins with the numbering of the people. The Hebrews, from its first words, call it VAZEDABREH. It contains the transactions of the Israelites, from the second month of the second year after their going out of Egypt, until the beginning of the eleventh month of the fortieth year; that is, a history almost of thirty-nine years. Ch.—In the nine first chapters various orders of people are described, and several laws are given or repeated. From the tenth to the thirty-third, the marches and history of God’s people are related (H.); from the twentieth of the second month, in the second year after their departure out of Egypt, till the eleventh month of the fortieth year, and the last of Moses: so that this Book contains the transactions of almost thirty-nine years (T.); whereas, the Book of Leviticus specified only some of the laws and occurrences of one month. Here we behold what opposition Moses experienced from Aaron and his sister, from Core, and from all the people; and yet God protected him, in the midst of all dangers, and confounded not only their attempts, but those also of Balaam, and of all his external foes. H.—Moses conquers the Madianites, and divides the conquered country between the tribes of Ruben, Gad, and half of the tribe of Manasses. In the three last chapters he describes the land of Chanaan, orders all the inhabitants to be exterminated, assigns cities for the Levites, and for refuge; and forbids such marriages as might cause any confusion in the distribution of the lands belonging to each tribe. Moses composed this part of the Pentateuch, as well as that of Deuteronomy, a little while before his death, out of the memoirs which he had carefully preserved. C.—According to Usher, the people were numbered this second time, A. M. 2514, chap. i.; after which they leave the desert of Sinai, (chap. x. 11,) go to Cadès-barne, and return thither again 2552. Soon after this, Mary and Aaron die; Moses lifts up the brazen serpent; and the Hebrews take possession of part of the promised land (2553) on the eastern banks of the Jordan. That on the western side, flowing with milk and honey, was conquered by Josue in the following years. H.

CHAPTER I.

The children of Israel are numbered: the Levites are designed to serve the tabernacle.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses* in the desert of Sinai in the tabernacle of the covenant, the first day of the second month, the second year of their going out of Egypt, saying:

* A. M. 2514, A. C. 1490.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. First day of the second month, called after the captivity, Mar, which partly corresponds with our April. These injunctions were given from the tabernacle, (C.) in the desert, the twelfth station, (H.) at the foot of Mount Sinai.

VER. 2 Houses. The families consisted of the immediate descendants of the twelve patriarchs; the houses were subdivisions of these.—Sex, between twenty and sixty years of age. Moses numbered the people once before, (Exod. xxx. 2,) and found exactly the same number of warriors, the dead being replaced by others, during the space of seven months. C.

VER. 3. Arms (fortium). “Strong or brave.” The Psalmist (clv. 37) says

- 4 And there shall be with you the princes of the tribes, and of the houses in their kindreds,
 5 Whose names are these: of Ruben, Elisur the son of Seder.
 6 Of Simeon, Salamiel the son of Surisaddai.
 7 Of Juda, Nahasson the son of Aminadab.
 8 Of Issachar, Nathanael the son of Suar.
 9 Of Zabulon, Eliab the son of Helon.
 10 And of the sons of Joseph: of Ephraim, Elisama the son of Ammiud: of Manasses, Gamaliel the son of Phadassur.
 11 Of Benjamin, Abidan the son of Gedeon.
 12 Of Dan, Ahiezer the son of Ammisaddai.
 13 Of Ascr, Phegiel the son of Ochran.
 14 Of Gad, Eliasaph the son of Duel.
 15 Of Nephtali, Ahira the son of Enan.
 16 These are the most noble princes of the multitude, by their tribes and kindreds, and the chiefs of the army of Israel:
 17 Whom Moses and Aaron took with all the multitude of the common people:
 18 And assembled them on the first day of the second month, reckoning them up by the kindreds, and houses, and families, and heads, and names of every one from twenty years old and upward,
 19 As the Lord had commanded Moses. And they were numbered in the desert of Sinai.
 20 Of Ruben the eldest son of Israel, by their generations and families, and houses, and names of every head, all that were of the male sex, from twenty years old and upward, that were able to go forth to war, 21 Were forty-six thousand five hundred.
 22 Of the sons of Simeon by their generations and families, and houses of their kindreds, were reckoned up by the names and heads of every one, all that were of the male sex, from twenty years old and upward, that were able to go forth to war,
 23 Fifty-nine thousand three hundred.
 24 Of the sons of Gad, by their generations and families, and houses of their kindreds, were reckoned up by the names of every one from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war,
 25 Forty-five thousand six hundred and fifty.
 26 Of the sons of Juda, by their generations and families, and houses of their kindreds, by the names of every one from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war,
 27 Were reckoned up seventy-four thousand six hundred.
 28 Of the sons of Issachar, by their generations and families, and houses of their kindreds, by the names of every one from twenty years old and upward, all that could go forth to war, 29 Were reckoned up fifty-four thousand four hundred.

there was not one feeble. M.—Troops. Heb. “army.” Sept. “force.” Their officers shall be at their head, and shall assist you in the work.

VER. 4. Princes; the first-born, or most ancient, (Lyrar,) the lineal descendants of the patriarchs (Jansen); or, in fine, such as were chosen for their merit, as all were equally noble; and hence Nahasson, prince of Juda, is mentioned, though he was not a descendant of the eldest son of Juda, but of Phares; and those who were at the head of those who were numbered a little before the death of Moses.

30 Of the sons of Zabulon, by their generations and families, and houses of their kindreds, were reckoned up by the names of every one from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war, 31 Fifty-seven thousand four hundred.

32 Of the sons of Joseph, namely of the sons of Ephraim, by their generations and families, and houses of their kindreds, were reckoned up by the names of every one, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war, 33 Forty thousand five hundred.

34 Moreover of the sons of Manasses, by their generations and families, and houses of their kindreds, were reckoned up by the names of every one from twenty years old and upward, all that could go forth to war, 35 Thirty-two thousand two hundred.

36 Of the sons of Benjamin, by their generations and families, and houses of their kindreds, were reckoned up by the names of every one from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war, 37 Thirty-five thousand four hundred.

38 Of the sons of Dan, by their generations and families, and houses of their kindreds, were reckoned up by the names of every one from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war, 39 Sixty-two thousand seven hundred.

40 Of the sons of Aser, by their generations and families, and houses of their kindreds, were reckoned up by the names of every one from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war, 41 Forty-one thousand five hundred.

42 Of the sons of Nephtali, by their generations and families, and houses of their kindreds, were reckoned up by the names of every one from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war, 43 Fifty-three thousand four hundred.

44 These are they who were numbered by Moses and Aaron, and the twelve princes of Israel, every one by the houses of their kindreds.

45 And the whole number of the children of Israel, by their houses and families, from twenty years old and upward, that were able to go to war, 46 Were six hundred and three thousand five hundred and fifty men.

47 But the Levites in the tribes of their families were not numbered with them.

48 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

49 Number not the tribe of Levi, neither shalt thou put down the sum of them with the children of Israel:

50 But appoint them over the tabernacle of the testimony, and all the vessels thereof, and whatsoever pertaineth to the ceremonies. They shall carry the tabernacle and all the furniture thereof: and they shall minister, and shall encamp round about the tabernacle.

were not the descendants of these. Chap. xxvi. 64. In effect, we find that Moses chose for his council able men out of all Israel, Exod. xviii. 25. Bonfrere. C.

VER. 16. Army. Heb. “of a thousand.” The Vulg. commonly styles them tribunes. They were “people of name in the assembly,” as the Heb. indicates. C.

VER. 26. Juda. This tribe was the most numerous. But it is not here placed first, because the order of birth in Lia’s children is observed. H.

VER. 47. Levites. As they attended the tabernacle, like God’s peculiar 51 When you are to go forward, the Levites shall take down the tabernacle: when you are to camp, they shall set it up. What stranger soever cometh to it shall be slain.

52 And the children of Israel shall camp every man by his troops, and bands, and army.

53 But the Levites shall pitch their tents round about the tabernacle, lest there come indignation upon the multitude of the children of Israel, and they shall keep watch, and guard the tabernacle of the testimony.

54 And the children of Israel did according to all things which the Lord had commanded Moses.

CHAP. II.

The order of the tribes in their camp.

AND the Lord spoke^a to Moses and Aaron, saying: 2 All the children of Israel shall camp by their troops, ensigns, and standards, and the houses of their kindreds, round about the tabernacle of the covenant.

3 On the east Juda shall pitch his tents by the bands of his army: and the prince of his sons shall be Nahasson, the son of Aminadab.

4 And the whole sum of the fighting men of his stock, were seventy-four thousand six hundred.

5 Next unto him, they of the tribe of Issachar encamped, whose prince was Nathanael, the son of Suar.

6 And the whole number of his fighting men were fifty-four thousand four hundred.

7 In the tribe of Zabulon, the prince was Eliab, the son of Helon.

8 And all the army of fighting men of his stock, were fifty-seven thousand four hundred.

9 All that were numbered in the camp of Juda, were a hundred and eighty-six thousand four hundred: and they, by their troops, shall march first.

10 In the camp of the sons of Ruben, on the south side, the prince shall be Elisur, the son of Seducur:

11 And the whole army of his fighting men, that were numbered, were forty-six thousand five hundred.

12 Beside him camped they of the tribe of Simeon: whose prince was Salamiel, the son of Surisaddai.

13 And the whole army of his fighting men, that were numbered, were fifty-nine thousand three hundred.

14 In the tribe of Gad, the prince was Eliasaph, the son of Duel.

15 And the whole army of his fighting men, that were numbered, were forty-five thousand six hundred and fifty.

16 All that were reckoned up in the camp of Ruben, were a hundred and fifty-one thousand four hundred and fifty, by their troops: they shall march in the second place.

17 And the tabernacle of the testimony shall be carried by the officers of the Levites and their troops. As it shall be set up, so shall it be taken down. Every one shall march according to their places, and ranks.

18 On the west side shall be the camp of the sons of Ephraim, whose prince was Elisama, the son of Ammiud.

19 The whole army of his fighting men that were numbered, were forty thousand five hundred.

20 And with them the tribe of the sons of Manasses, whose prince was Gamaliel the son of Phadassur.

21 And the whole army of his fighting men, that were numbered, were thirty-two thousand two hundred.

22 In the tribe of the sons of Benjamin, the prince was Abidan, the son of Gedeon.

23 And the whole army of his fighting men, that were reckoned up, were thirty-five thousand four hundred.

24 All that were numbered in the camp of Ephraim, were a hundred and eight thousand one hundred, by their troops: they shall march in the third place.

25 On the north side camped the sons of Dan: whose prince was Ahiezar, the son of Ammisaddai.

26 The whole army of his fighting men, that were numbered, were sixty-two thousand seven hundred.

27 Beside him they of the tribe of Aser pitched their tents: whose prince was Phegiel, the son of Ochran.

28 The whole army of his fighting men, that were numbered, were forty-one thousand five hundred.

29 Of the tribe of the sons of Nephtali, the prince of Ahira, the son of Enan.

30 The whole army of his fighting men were fifty-three thousand four hundred.

31 All that were numbered in the camp of Dan, were a hundred and fifty-seven thousand six hundred: and they shall march last.

32 This is the number of the children of Israel, of their army divided according to the houses of their kindreds and their troops, six hundred and three thousand five hundred and fifty.

33 And the Levites were not numbered among the children of Israel: for so the Lord had commanded Moses.

servants, and were not obliged to go forth to battle, it was not necessary to number them with the rest. C.

VER. 52. Army. Heb. "they shall have their respective camp, and follow their own standard, with their army." They were drawn up in four large bodies. Chap. ii. 2, &c. C.—The first contained 151,450, the second 186,400, the third 108,100, and the fourth 157,600, under Ruben, Juda, Ephraim, and Dan.

CHAP. II. VER. 2. By, &c. Heb. "by his own standard, in the ensigns of their father's house, far off, about," &c. Perhaps a general standard, belonging to the chief tribe, was set up for each of the four great bodies; while the two inferior tribes had their peculiar ensign, as well as the different companies. It is supposed that these standards were distinguished either by their colour, or by the representation of some animals. Jonathau says each of the great standards, made of silk, were of three colours, similar to those precious stones on which the names of the patriarchs were engraven on the rational; and also exhibited the figure or emblem of the principal tribe, with some text of Scripture, and the names of the three tribes. Thus the tribe of Juda, with those of Issachar and Zabulon, occupying the space of 4000 paces, had a lion's whelp on their standard, with this inscription, Let God arise, and his enemies be put to flight; Juda, Issachar, Zabulon. The tribes of Ruben, Simeon, and Gad, bore the figure of a stag; Hear, O Israel, the Lord thy God is one God. The standard of Ephraim, Manasses, and Benjamin, had a child embroidered, The cloud also of the Lord was over them by day, when they marched. Some give to the tribes of Dan, Aser, and Nephtali, the figure of a basilisk; others, that of an eagle; with these words, Return, O Lord, and dwell with thy glory in the midst of the host of Israel. See chap. x. 34—36; Deut. vi. 4. Some imagine that the standard of Juda was green, with a lion's whelp embroidered upon it; Ruben's, red, with the head of a man. That of Ephraim, yellowish, the colour of the chrysolite, and represented an ox, or a calf's head. The standard of Dan had a mixture of white and red, like the jasper, with an eagle grasping a serpent in its talons; all in allusion to various passages of Scripture, and to the cherubim of Ezechiel. We cannot, however, vouch for the accuracy of these Rabbinical accounts.—Covenant, at the distance of 2000 cubits, as at the passage of the Jordan, Jos. iii. 4. The tabernacle in the middle formed the camp of the Lord, the Levites were round it; the third camp was for the army, (C.) occupying a large square. The nearest soldiers were a mile distant from the centre.

VER. 23. Five, is omitted in the Samaritan copy.

34 And the children of Israel did according to all things that the Lord had commanded. They camped by their troops, and marched by the families and houses of their fathers.

CHAP. III.

The Levites are numbered, and their offices distinguished. They are taken in the place of the first-born of the children of Israel.

THESE are the generations of Aaron and Moses, in the day that the Lord spoke to Moses in Mount Sinai.

2 *And these the names of the sons of Aaron: his first-born Nadab, then Abiu, and Eleazar, and Ithamar.

3 These the names of the sons of Aaron, the priests that were anointed, and whose hands were filled and consecrated, to do the functions of priesthood.

4 ^bNow Nadab and Abiu died without children, when they offered strange fire before the Lord, in the desert of Sinai: and Eleazar and Ithamar performed the priestly office, in the presence of Aaron, their father.

5 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

6 Bring the tribe of Levi, and make them stand in the sight of Aaron the priest, to minister to him, and let them watch,

7 And observe whatsoever appertaineth to the service of the multitude, before the tabernacle of the testimony,

8 And let them keep the vessels of the tabernacle, serving in the ministry thereof.

9 And thou shalt give the Levites for a gift,

10 To Aaron and to his sons, to whom they are delivered by the children of Israel. But thou shalt appoint Aaron and his sons over the service of priesthood. The stranger that approacheth to minister, shall be put to death.

11 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

12 I have taken the Levites from the children of Israel, for every first-born that openeth the womb among the children of Israel, and the Levites shall be mine.

13 ^cFor every first-born is mine: since I struck the first-born in the land of Egypt: I have sanctified to myself whatsoever is first-born in Israel, both of man and beast, they are mine: I am the Lord.

14 And the Lord spoke to Moses in the desert of Sinai, saying:

15 Number the sons of Levi by the houses of their fathers and their families, every male from one month and upward.

* Exod. vi. 23.—^b Lev. x. 1, and 2; 1 Par. xxiv. 2.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Generations; descendants of Aaron, whose names are specified; and of Moses, whose children are left unnoticed among the rest of the Levites, ver. 27. This enhances the merit of the Jewish legislator, and shows his modesty and disinterestedness. H.

VER. 4. Presence; or as it is expressed, (1 Par. xxiv. 19,) under the hand of Aaron, by his direction, and in quality of his assistant, (C.) while he lived. Eleazar succeeded him in the high priesthood (Jos. xxiv. 33); and his children possessed that dignity till the posterity of Ithamar came in under Heli. Chap. xxv. 13. H.

VER. 10. To whom. Sam. and Sept. "to me." They must serve God in the persons of his priests. They are called a gift, people bestowed, as the Nothnim, to serve in the meanest functions; and hence the Natkineans take their name.—Over. Heb. "they shall retain," &c. They shall permit no stranger to interfere. Cuneus (Rep. ii. 11) observes, that if a Levite undertook to do the office allotted to another he was to be slain, after sentence had been passed by the judge. C.

VER. 12. Mine. God claimed the first-born, on account of having spared sem. Exod. xii. 23. He requires that all the males shall be redeemed, except 16 Moses numbered them as the Lord had commanded.

17 ^dAnd there were found sons of Levi, by their names, Gerson and Caath, and Merari.

18 The sons of Gerson: Lebni and Semei.

19 The sons of Caath: Amram and Jesaar, Hebron and Oziel:

20 The sons of Merari: Moholi and Musi.

21 Of Gerson were two families, the Lebrites, and the Semeites:

22 Of which were numbered, people of the male sex from one month and upward, seven thousand five hundred.

23 These shall pitch behind the tabernacle on the west,

• 24 Under their prince Eliasaph, the son of Lael.

25 And their charge shall be in the tabernacle of the covenant:

26 The tabernacle itself and the cover thereof, the hanging that is drawn before the doors of the tabernacle of the covenant, and the curtains of the court: the hanging also that is hanged in the entry of the court of the tabernacle, and whatsoever belongeth to the rite of the altar, the cords of the tabernacle, and all the furniture thereof.

27 Of the kindred of Caath, come the families of the Amramites and Jesaarites, and Hebronites and Ozielites. These are the families of the Caathites, reckoned up by their names:

28 All of the male sex from one month and upward, eight thousand six hundred: they shall have the guard of the sanctuary,

29 And shall camp on the south side.

30 And their prince shall be Elisaphan, the son of Oziel:

31 And they shall keep the ark, and the table and the candlestick, the altars, and the vessels of the sanctuary, wherewith they minister, and the veil, and all the furniture of this kind.

32 And the prince of the princes of the Levites, Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, shall be over them that watch for the guard of the sanctuary.

33 And of Merari are the families of the Moholites, and Musites, reckoned up by their names:

34 All of the male kind from one month and upward, six thousand two hundred.

35 Their prince Suriel, the son of Abihaiel: they shall camp on the north side.

those of the tribe of Levi, whom he claims as his peculiar portion, as the price of the redemption of those who were living in Egypt, when the destroying angel passed by. God seems to have revealed to Moses the destination of Aaron's family long before they were appointed to exercise the functions of the priesthood. Exod. xix. 22, 24; xxiv. 1. C.

VER. 17. Names. These had been long ago dead. M.

VER. 22. Five hundred, expressed by the letter c, has, according to Kennicott, been put for 200, which the Hebrews denote by a similar letter, r. See 2 Kings xxiii. 8, and 1 Par. xi. 11, for other mistakes. H.

VER. 26. Thereof. The Gersonites had the care of the veils round the court, and of the cords and gates. The priests guarded the tabernacle, ver. 32. The sons of Caath carried the altars, (ver. 31,) and the Merarites took care of the cords, which were attached to the pillars of the court. ver. 37. C.—Whatsoever, in the Vulg., must only be referred to the curtains.

VER. 28. Sanctuary, with respect to the things mentioned, ver. 31. M.—The Sam. copy observes, that they also carried the brazen laver, as we find they did, chap. iv. 14. All these things were folded up in the violet curtains of the sanctuary, while the ark was covered with the veil which hung before it. Chap. iv. 1.

36 Under their custody shall be the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars, and the pillars and their sockets, and all things that pertain to this kind of service :

37 And the pillars of the court round about with their sockets, and the pins with their cords.

38 Before the tabernacle of the covenant, that is to say, on the east side, shall Moses and Aaron camp, with their sons, having the custody of the sanctuary, in the midst of the children of Israel. What stranger soever cometh unto it, shall be put to death.

39 All the Levites that Moses and Aaron numbered* according to the precept of the Lord, by their families, of the male kind, from one month and upward, were twenty-two thousand.

40 And the Lord said to Moses : Number the first-born of the male sex of the children of Israel, from one month and upward, and thou shalt take the sum of them.

41 And thou shalt take the Levites to me for all the first-born of the children of Israel, I am the Lord : and their cattle for all the first-born of the cattle of the children of Israel :

42 Moses reckoned up, as the Lord had commanded, the first-born of the children of Israel :

43 And the males by their names, from one month and upward, were twenty-two thousand two hundred and seventy-three.

44 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying :

45 Take the Levites for the first-born of the children of Israel, and the cattle of the Levites for their cattle, and the Levites shall be mine. I am the Lord.

46 But for the price of the two hundred and seventy-three, of the first-born of the children of Israel, that exceed the number of the Levites, 47 Thou shalt take five sicles for every head, according to the weight of the sanctuary. ^b A sicle hath twenty obols.

48 And thou shalt give the money to Aaron and his sons, the price of them that are above.

49 Moses therefore took the money of them that were above, and whom they had redeemed from the Levites,

50 For the first-born of the children of Israel, one thousand three hundred and sixty-five sicles, according to the weight of the sanctuary,

VER. 39. And Aaron; a word omitted in the Sam. and Syriac, and in the oldest Heb. MS., and marked in the printed copies as dubious. Kennicott.—Thousand. If we collect the different sums, we shall find other 300; so that the Levites would be 27 more than the first-born of the other tribes, though Moses says (ver. 43—46) that they were fewer by 273. Some say that the 28th verse has been corrupted, (C.) or the 22nd, where we read 500 instead of 200. H.—Others observe, that in the 22,000, the first-born of the Levites and the priests of Aaron's family are not included, and these might amount to 300 men. Lyrani.—But Bonfrere rightly observes that this number is too small, as only one is allowed for 74 people. He thinks that the first-born who were heads of families are omitted, and those also who were born before the angel destroyed the Egyptians. On this supposition, however, 22,000 will appear too great a number to be produced by the Levites in the space of a year, when some were too young, and others too old, to have children, and others had children already before that event. We may, therefore, either admit the solution of Lyrani, or confess that some fault has crept into the number, though this must be very difficult, since Moses argues in the sequel on the supposition of its certainty. C.—S. Jerom hence infers, that these numbers are full of mystery. W.

CHAP. IV. VER. 3. Thirty. Moses speaks of those who had to carry the sacred vessels. Those of 25 years old might perform some offices (chap. viii.

51 And gave it to Aaron and his sons, according to the word that the Lord had commanded him.

CHAP. IV.

The age and time of the Levites' service : their offices and burdens.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying :
2 Take the sum of the sons of Caath from the midst of the Levites, by their houses and families,

3 From thirty years old and upward, to fifty years old, of all that go in to stand and to minister in the tabernacle of the covenant.

4 This is the service of the sons of Caath :

5 When the camp is to set forward, Aaron and his sons shall go into the tabernacle of the covenant, and the holy of holies, and shall take down the veil that hangeth before the door, and shall wrap up the ark of the testimony in it,

6 And shall cover it again with a cover of violet skins, and shall spread over it a cloth all of violet, and shall put in the bars.

7 They shall wrap up also the table of proposition in a cloth of violet, and shall put with it the censers and little mortars, the cups and bowls to pour out the libations: the loaves shall be always on it :

8 And they shall spread over it a cloth of scarlet, which again they shall cover with a covering of violet skins, and shall put in the bars.

9 They shall take also a cloth of violet, wherewith they shall cover the candlestick with the lamps and tongs thereof, and the snuffers, and all the oil vessels, which are necessary for the dressing of the lamps :

10 And over all they shall put a cover of violet skins, and put in the bars.

11 And they shall wrap up the golden altar also in a cloth of violet, and shall spread over it a cover of violet skins, and put in the bars.

12 All the vessels wherewith they minister in the sanctuary, they shall wrap up in a cloth of violet, and shall spread over it a cover of violet skins, and put in the bars.

13 They shall cleanse the altar also from the ashes, and shall wrap it up in a purple cloth,

14 And shall put it with all the vessels that they 24); and even at 20 they began to serve the tabernacle, in the reign of David, (1 Par. xxiii. 24,) the fatigue being then diminished, and the splendour of religion increasing. The Sept. read 25 instead of 30, in this and all other places, and some think that the Heb. should be so too. The time for the admission of priests to their more august functions is not specified, but was determined by themselves to be at 20 years of age. Ontram, Sacrif. i. 7.—To stand. This was the ordinary posture of the priests in the temple. The king alone was allowed to sit. Maimonides.—Heb. "all that enter into the host, or army, to do the work in the tabernacle of the assembly," shall be of a competent age and strength. H.

VER. 6. Put in the bars. Heb. "place the bars" upon the shoulders of the Levites; for they were never taken out of the sides of the ark. Exod. xxv. 15. Other bars, like hand-barrows, were used to carry the ark and the other different vessels, after they were folded up. Two Levites bore them on their shoulders. C.

VER. 7. Loaves. Some imagine this precept was not observed in the desert, as the people fed on manna. But might not they procure some flour of the neighbouring nations? and do not the princes offer flour, chap. vii. 1? See Deut. xii. 7. C.

VER. 13. Ashes, which might be upon the grate of the altar, where the sacred fire had been burning. This shows that the precept was already observed. The Sept. do not mention the ashes. But some copies, with Origen, (Hom. 4,) and the Samar. Pentateuch, insert some words at the end of ver. 14, which Grotius believes have been omitted by the Massorets, in the present Hebrew Bibles. "They shall take a purple veil, and fold up the laver and its foot, and put them in a covering of violet skins, and place them upon the bars." C.

use in the ministry thereof, that is to say, fire-pans, flesh-hooks and forks, pothooks and shovels. They shall cover all the vessels of the altar together with a covering of violet skins, and shall put in the bars.

15 And when Aaron and his sons have wrapped up the sanctuary and the vessels thereof at the removing of the camp, then shall the "sons of Caath enter in to carry the things wrapped up: and they shall not touch the vessels of the sanctuary, lest they die. These are the burdens of the sons of Caath: in the tabernacle of the covenant.

16 And over them shall be Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, to whose charge pertaineth the oil to dress the lamps, and the sweet incense, and the sacrifice, that is always offered, and the oil of unction, and whatsoever pertaineth to the service of the tabernacle, and of all the vessels that are in the sanctuary.

17 And the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying:

18 Destroy not the people of Caath from the midst of the Levites.

19 But do this to them, that they may live, and not die, by touching the holies of holies. Aaron and his sons shall go in, and they shall appoint every man his work, and shall divide the burdens that every man is to carry.

20 Let not others, by any curiosity, see the things that are in the sanctuary before they be wrapped up, otherwise they shall die.

21 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

22 Take the sum of the sons of Gerson also, by their houses, and families, and kindreds, 23 From thirty years old and upward, unto fifty years old. Number them all that go in and minister in the tabernacle of the covenant.

24 This is the office of the family of the Gersonites:

25 To carry the curtains of the tabernacle, and the roof of the covenant, the other covering, and the violet covering over all, and the hanging that hangeth in the entry of the tabernacle of the covenant,

26 The curtains of the court, and the veil in the entry that is before the tabernacle. All things that pertain to the altar, the cords, and the vessels of the ministry, 27 The sons of Gerson shall carry, by the commandment of Aaron and his sons: and each man shall know to what burden he must be assigned.

28 This is the service of the family of the Gersonites, in the tabernacle of the covenant, and they shall be under the hand of Ithamar, the son of Aaron the priest.

29 Thou shalt reckon up the sons of Merari also, by the families and houses of their fathers, 30 From thirty years old and upward, unto fifty years old, all that go in to the office of their ministry, and to the service of the covenant of the testimony.

31 These are their burdens: They shall carry the boards of the tabernacle and the bars thereof, the pillars and their sockets, 32 The pillars also of the court round about, with their sockets and pins and cords. They shall receive by account all the vessels and furniture, and so shall carry them.

33 This is the office of the family of the Merarites, and their ministry in the tabernacle of the covenant: and they shall be under the hand of Ithamar, the son of Aaron the priest.

34 So Moses and Aaron and the princes of the synagogue, reckoned up the sons of Caath, by their kindreds and the houses of their fathers,

35 From thirty years old and upward, unto fifty years old, all that go in to the ministry of the tabernacle of the covenant:

36 And they were found two thousand seven hundred and fifty.

37 This is the number of the people of Caath, that go in to the tabernacle of the covenant: these did Moses and Aaron number according to the word of the Lord by the hand of Moses.

38 The sons of Gerson also were numbered by the kindreds and houses of their fathers,

39 From thirty years old and upward, unto fifty years old, all that go in to minister in the tabernacle of the covenant:

40 And they were found two thousand six hundred and thirty.

41 This is the people of the Gersonites, whom Moses and Aaron numbered according to the word of the Lord.

42 The sons of Merari also were numbered by the kindreds and houses of their fathers,

43 From thirty years old and upward, unto fifty years old, all that go in to fulfil the rites of the tabernacle of the covenant:

44 And they were found three thousand two hundred.

45 This is the number of the sons of Merari, whom Moses and Aaron reckoned up, according to the commandment of the Lord by the hand of Moses.

46 All that were reckoned up of the Levites, and whom Moses and Aaron and the princes of Israel took by name, by the kindreds and houses of their fathers,

47 From thirty years old and upward, unto fifty years old, that go in to the ministry of the tabernacle, and to carry the burdens,

48 Were in all eight thousand five hundred and eighty.

49 Moses reckoned them up according to the word of the Lord, every one according to their office and burdens, as the Lord had commanded him.

out of the camp every leper, and whosoever hath an issue of seed, or is defiled by the dead :

3 Whether it be man or woman, cast ye them out of the camp, lest they defile it when I shall dwell with you.

4 And the children of Israel did so, and they cast them forth without the camp, as the Lord had spoken to Moses.

5 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying :

6 Say to the children of Israel : When a man or woman shall have committed any of all the sins that men are wont to commit, and by negligence shall have transgressed the commandment of the Lord, and offended,

7 They shall confess their sin, and restore the principal itself, and the fifth part over and above, to him against whom they have sinned.

8 But if there be no one to receive it, they shall give it to the Lord, and it shall be the priest's, besides the ram that is offered for expiation, to be an atoning sacrifice.

9 All the first-fruits also, which the children of Israel offer, belong to the priest :

10 And whatsoever is offered into the sanctuary by every one, and is delivered into the hands of the priest, it shall be his.

11 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying :

12 Speak to the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them : The man whose wife shall have gone astray, and contemning her husband,

13 Shall have slept with another man, and her husband cannot discover it, but the adultery is secret, and cannot be proved by witnesses, because she was not found in the adultery :

14 If the spirit of jealousy stir up the husband against his wife, who either is defiled, or is charged with false suspicion,

15 He shall bring her to the priest, and shall offer an oblation for her, the tenth part of a measure of barley meal : he shall not pour oil thereon, nor put frankincense upon it : because it is a sacrifice of jealousy, and an oblation searching out adultery.

16 The priest therefore shall offer it, and set it before the Lord.

17 And he shall take holy water in an earthen vessel, and he shall cast a little earth of the pavement of the tabernacle into it.

18 And when the woman shall stand before the Lord, he shall uncover her head, and shall put on her hands the sacrifice of remembrance, and the oblation of jealousy : and he himself shall hold the most bitter waters, whereon he hath heaped curses with execration.

19 And he shall adjure her, and shall say : If another man hath not slept with thee, and if thou be not defiled by forsaking thy husband's bed, these most bitter waters, on which I have heaped curses, shall not hurt thee.

20 But if thou hast gone aside from thy husband, and art defiled, and hast lain with another man :

21 These curses shall light upon thee : The Lord make thee a curse, and an example for all among his people : may he make thy thigh to rot, and may thy belly swell and burst asunder.

22 Let the cursed waters enter into thy belly, and may thy womb swell and thy thigh rot. And the woman shall answer : Amen, amen.

23 And the priest shall write these curses in a book, and shall wash them out with the most bitter waters, upon which he hath heaped the curses,

24 And he shall give them her to drink. And when she hath drunk them up,

25 The priest shall take from her hand the sacrifice of jealousy, and shall elevate it before the Lord, and shall put it upon the altar : yet so as first,

26 To take a handful of the sacrifice of that which is offered, and burn it upon the altar : and so give the most bitter waters to the woman to drink.

27 And when she hath drunk them, if she be defiled, and having despised her husband be guilty of adultery,

CHAP. V. VER. 2. Camp ; in the midst of which God had fixed his tabernacle. See Lev. xvi. 16. Some pretend that these unclean persons were only excluded from the camp of the Lord, and from that of the Levites, which occupied 2000 cubits round the tabernacle. But God will not permit any of the camp to be defiled by such people. They were to absent themselves for seven days, and then wash themselves, &c. Chap. xix. 11. VER. 6. To commit, against one another, ver. 7. S. Aug. q. 9. When the thing is secret, so that the judges cannot take cognizance of it, the offender must nevertheless abide by the decision of the priest. Moses condemns him who had stolen an ox to restore it with another, or even to give five oxen, if he have not the one stolen in his possession. Exod. xxii. 1, 4. H.—Here to reward the sincerity of the man, who confesses his private fault, he only requires the thing itself to be restored, with a fifth part besides. C.—Negligence, not with contempt (M.) ; though he knows that he is transgressing the Divine and natural law. T.

VER. 7. Shall confess. This confession and satisfaction, ordained in the old law, was a figure of the sacrament of penance. Ch.—A special confession of their sin, with satisfaction, and a sacrifice, are required. So Christ orders us to lay open our consciences to his priests. S. John xx., &c. W.

VER. 8. But if. Moses does not mention this case. Lev. vi. 2, 5. Here he determines that the heirs, if known, must be entitled to the restitution. A Hebrew could not die without an heir ; but a proselyte might, and then restitution was to be made to God.

VER. 14. The spirit of jealousy, &c. This ordinance was designed to clear the innocent, and to prevent jealous husbands from doing mischief to their wives : as likewise to give all a horror of adultery, by punishing it in so remarkable a manner. Ch.—The spirit of jealousy, of fear, &c., denotes those passions of the soul. This very remarkable law of Moses suited the genius of his people. (C.)

and tended greatly to restrain the infidelity of the married couple, and the fury of suspicious husbands. Theod. q. 10. God was pleased, by a continual miracle, to manifest the truth, on this occasion, provided the husband were not also guilty : for in that case, the Rabbin assert, the waters had no effect. They relate many particularities, which seem contrary to Philo and Josephus, who inform us that the trial was still made in their time, though the former writers pretend that it was disused, on account of the many adulteries which were committed, in the age preceding the destruction of the temple by Titus.

VER. 22. Amen. Our Saviour often uses this form, to confirm what he says, verily, truly. The woman gives her assent to what had been proposed, "so be it." C.

VER. 23. Book. Heb. sopor, may also denote a board covered with wax, which was used as one of the most ancient modes of writing. C.—Josephus says, the priest wrote the name of God on parchment, and washed it out in the bitter waters.

the malediction shall go through her, and her belly swelling, her thigh shall rot: and the woman shall be a curse, and an example to all the people.

28 But if she be not defiled, she shall not be hurt, and shall bear children.

29 This is the law of jealousy. If a woman hath gone aside from her husband, and be defiled, 31 The husband shall be blameless, and she shall bear her iniquity.

CHAP. VI.

The law of the Nazarites: the form of blessing the people.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses,* saying:

2 Speak to the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them: When a man, or woman, shall make a vow to be sanctified, and will consecrate themselves to the Lord:

3 They shall abstain from wine, and from every thing that may make a man drunk. They shall not drink vinegar of wine, or of any other drink, nor any thing that is pressed out of the grape: nor shall they eat grapes either fresh or dried.

4 All the days that they are consecrated to the Lord by vow: they shall eat nothing that cometh of the vineyard, from the raisin even to the kernel.

5 All the time of his separation,^b no razor shall pass over his head until the day be fulfilled of his consecration to the Lord. He shall be holy, and shall let the hair of his head grow.

6 All the time of his consecration he shall not go in to any dead,

7 Neither shall he make himself unclean, even for his

VER. 28. Children, that her husband may love her the more, and she may receive some compensation for the stain thrown upon her character. M.

VER. 31. Blameless. To act in conformity with God's injunctions could not be reprehensible. But it would have been certainly criminal to tempt God in this manner, in order to discover a secret offence, if he had not authorized it expressly. If the husband wished to avoid the displeasure of God, he was bound to banish from his heart all malice, rash judgments, &c. The permission here granted, was owing to the hardness of heart of this stiff-necked people, as well as the laws regarding divorcees and retaliation. Women, being of a more fickle and suspicious temper, are not indulged with the privilege of divorcing their husbands, or of making them drink the waters of jealousy. But if a man were taken in the act of adultery, he was put to death, Lev. xx. 10. The crime is equal in both parties. The authority which was given to husbands over their wives, was deemed a sufficient restraint; and men being obliged to be often from home, and in company, would have been exposed to continual alarms, from the suspicious temper of their wives, if they had been subjected to the like trials. C.—In latter ages, however, the Jewish ladies began to assume the right of divorcing their husbands, in imitation of Salome, sister of Herod the Great, and of Herodias, his grand-daughter. Matt. xiv. 3. Josep. Ant. xv. 11; xviii. 7. Grotius supposes that the Samaritan woman had divorced her five husbands. John iv. 18. But this being contrary to the law, her first marriage alone subsisted. H.—Her iniquity, in giving her husband any grounds of suspicion. The Rabbin observe, that he was bound first to admonish her, before witnesses, not to keep company with people of bad character; and if he could bring witnesses that she had been found afterwards with them for ever so short a time, he might have the remedy of the law. C.—The various ordeal trials which were formerly in use, were probably established in imitation of this law of Moses; but not having the same authority or sanction, they were in danger of being looked upon as superstitious. H.

CHAP. VI. VER. 2. Sanctified, and separated from the common sort of people, and obliged to observe abstinence like the Nazarites, as the Heb. intimates in one word, nozir. All this was done to acquire greater sanctity and perfection. Sept. "whoever has made a great vow to be very pure to the Lord," and intends thus to signalize his zeal for God's glory. The original term means also to distinguish oneself by a wonderful thing. There were Nazarites for life, like Samson and S. John the Baptist; and others for a limited time, like S. Paul. Their father, or for his mother, or for his brother, or for his sister, when they die, because the consecration of his God is upon his head.

8 All the days of his separation he shall be holy to the Lord.

9 But if any man die suddenly before him, the head of his consecration shall be defiled: and he shall shave it forthwith on the same day of his purification, and again the seventh day.

10 And on the eighth day he shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons, to the priest in the entry of the covenant of the testimony,

11 And the priest shall offer one for sin, and the other for a holocaust, and shall pray for him, for that he hath sinned by the dead: and he shall sanctify his head that day:

12 And shall consecrate to the Lord the days of his separation, offering a lamb of one year for sin: yet so that the former days be made void, because his sanctification was profaned.

13 This is the law of consecration. When the days which he had determined by vow shall be expired, he shall bring him to the door of the tabernacle of the covenant,

14 And shall offer his oblation to the Lord: one he-lamb of a year old, without blemish, for a holocaust, and one ewe-lamb of a year old, without blemish, for a sin-offering, and one ram without blemish, for a victim of peace-offering,

15 A basket also of unleavened bread, tempered with oil, and wafers without leaven anointed with oil, and the libations of each:

16 And the priest shall present them before the Lord, and shall offer both the sin-offering and the holocaust abstinence from wine, &c. lasted generally for a month, and was to be performed at Jerusalem. Those of the female sex could not bind themselves by vow till they were ten years and a day old, nor boys before they were full thirteen. C.—The Hebrews made vows to abstain from wine for 30 days, and then to offer sacrifice, and to cut their hair, when they were attacked by any dangerous illness. Josep. Bel. ii. 15. S. Paul perhaps made a vow of this nature, in the perils of the sea Acts xviii. 18. Spencer, Rit. iii. 6.

VER. 3. Drunk. Heb. ssocor, may signify old or palm wine. Lev. x. 9.—Drink. Heb. "of ssocor," which was a clear wine, with perhaps a mixture of sugar.—Vinegar was a common beverage among the ancients. Plin. xiv. 16; Ruth ii. 14. The soldiers gave our Saviour some of theirs to drink. The Turks, who are not allowed to drink wine of the grape, make use of various other sorts of made wine.—Grape, or the liquor procured from grapes, with a mixture of water, after they have served already to make wine. This liquor is called secondary wine by the Greeks, (M.) being designed for labourers in winter. Varro 54, and Colum. xii. 40. H.—God deigns to give those a rule who voluntarily consecrate themselves to his service. "What do the Nazarites designate, but the life of those who abstain, and are continent." S. Greg. Mor. xxxii. 23. W.

VER. 4. Kernel, or stone. Neither the inside nor the outside must be eaten.

VER. 5. Grow. At the commencement, and at the end of the Nazariteship, the hair was cut; though perhaps a sort of crown was left at the top of the head, as the 7th verse may be rendered, "the crown of his God," &c. C.—The Nazirite is under the same regulations as the high priest with respect to any corpse, ver. 6. Maimon. More, p. 3. Lev. xxi. 11. Both were consecrated to God in the most perfect manner. M.—When the hair of Samson was cut off, he immediately lost his supernatural strength. Judges xvi.

VER. 6. Dead. To teach us that those who are consecrated to God ought to abstain from the works of death. H.

VER. 9. Day. That none might escape (Theod. q. 11); though the Heb. may imply that the hair was only shaved on the ninth day, when he was to be purified. Chap. xix. 12. Then the Nazirite had to begin again, as if he had done nothing, (C.) if his vow were only for a time. Those who had taken a vow for life never shaved.

VER. 13. He. The priest.

17 But the ram he shall immolate for a sacrifice of peace-offering to the Lord, offering at the same time the basket of unleavened bread, and the libations that are due by custom.

18 "Then shall the hair of the consecration of the Nazarite, be shaved off before the door of the tabernacle of the covenant: and he shall take his hair, and lay it upon the fire, which is under the sacrifice of the peace-offerings.

19 And shall take the boiled shoulder of the ram, and one unleavened cake out of the basket, and one unleavened wafer, and he shall deliver them into the hands of the Nazarite, after his head is shaven.

20 And receiving them again from him, he shall elevate them in the sight of the Lord: and they being sanctified shall belong to the priest, as the breast, which was commanded to be separated, and the shoulder. After this the Nazarite may drink wine.

21 This is the law of the Nazarite, when he hath vowed his oblation to the Lord in the time of his consecration, besides those things which his hands shall find, according to that which he had vowed in his mind, so shall he do for the fulfilling of his sanctification.

22 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

23 Say to Aaron and his sons: Thus shall you bless the children of Israel, and you shall say to them:

24 "The Lord bless thee, and keep thee.

25 The Lord show his face to thee, and have mercy on thee.

26 The Lord turn his countenance to thee, and give thee peace.

27 And they shall invoke my name upon the children of Israel, and I will bless them.

CHAP. VII.

The offerings of the princes at the dedication of the tabernacle: God speaketh to Moses from the propitiatory.

AND it came to pass in the day^c that Moses had finished the tabernacle, and set it up, and had anointed and sanctified it with all its vessels, the altar likewise and all the vessels thereof,

2 The princes of Israel and the heads of the families, in every tribe, who were the rulers of them who had been numbered, offered^d

3 Their gifts before the Lord, six waggons covered, and twelve oxen. Two princes offered one waggon, and each one an ox, and they offered them before the tabernacle.

4 And the Lord said to Moses:

^a Acts xxi. 24.—^b Eccli. xxxvi. 19.

VER. 18. Fire, on the altar, where the ram has been sacrificed. Abulensis. Lyranus thinks it was burnt on the fire with which the meat was boiled. M. Chaldee. T.—The Sept., Philo, &c. understand it in the former sense; and Theodoret says the consecrated hair was placed upon the victim on the fire. C.

VER. 25. Show. Heb. "make his face shine," joyful and serene, (C.) like a light to direct thy steps. Psal. lxxvi. 2.

VER. 27. Invoke. Heb. "they shall name my name (Jehv, in pronouncing blessings) upon the sons of Israel," which I will ratify. H.—"They shall place the blessing of my name," &c. Chal. They shall praise my name. C.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. The day. The second of the second month, the year after the Hebrews left Egypt. We might read this chapter immediately after the 10th of Leviticus.

VER. 3. Covered. Destined to carry some parts of the tabernacle. C.—The Sept. use a term which, according to Hesychius, denotes the chariots in which people of quality travelled, Lampenes. M.

5 Receive them from them to serve in the ministry of the tabernacle, and thou shalt deliver them to the Levites according to the order of their ministry.

6 Moses therefore receiving the waggons and the oxen, delivered them to the Levites.

7 Two waggons and four oxen he gave to the sons of Gerson, according to their necessity.

8 The other four waggons, and eight oxen, he gave to the sons of Merari, according to their offices and service, under the hand of Ithamar, the son of Aaron, the priest.

9 But to the sons of Caath he gave no waggons or oxen: because they serve in the sanctuary, and carry their burdens upon their own shoulders.

10 And the princes offered for the dedication of the altar, on the day when it was anointed, their oblation before the altar.

11 And the Lord said to Moses: Let each of the princes, one day after another, offer their gifts for the dedication of the altar.

12 The first day Nahasson, the son of Aminadab, of the tribe of Juda, offered his offering:

13 And his offering was a silver dish, weighing one hundred and thirty sicles, a silver bowl of seventy sicles, according to the weight of the sanctuary, both full of flour tempered with oil, for a sacrifice:

14 A little mortar, of ten sicles of gold, full of incense:

15 An ox of the herd, and a ram, and a lamb of a year old for a holocaust:

16 And a buck-goat for sin:

17 And for the sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of a year old. This was the offering of Nahasson, the son of Aminadab.

18 The second day Nathanael, the son of Suar, prince of the tribe of Issachar, made his offering:

19 A silver dish, weighing one hundred and thirty sicles, a silver bowl of seventy sicles, according to the weight of the sanctuary, both full of flour tempered with oil, for a sacrifice:

20 A little mortar of gold, weighing ten sicles, full of incense:

21 An ox of the herd, and a ram, and a lamb of a year old for a holocaust:

22 And a buck-goat for sin:

23 And for the sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five buck-goats, five lambs of a year old. This was the offering of Nathanael, the son of Suar.

^c Exod. xl. 16.—^d A. M. 2514.

VER. 8. Four. The sons of Merari were not very numerous, (chap. iv. 44,) and they had the heaviest parts of the tabernacle to carry. The metal alone would weigh 274,875 Roman pounds, of 12 ounces each; not to mention the pillars, &c. If 100 waggons carried each 3000 pounds, and every man 50, they would not carry one half; so that the people must have furnished them with many more waggons besides these four of the princes. Jansen. C.—Abulensis thinks the Merarites carried all that was not laid on the four waggons. M.

VER. 10. The day. About that time; the ceremony lasted at least twelve days, ver. 84. T.

VER. 11. Altar of holocausts, the dedication of which continued seven days. Exod. xxix. 36. M.

VER. 14. Mortar. Heb. cop, which the Vulgate commonly renders phiala, "a cup," (M.) may signify a spoon for incense, as it generally accompanies the censer. 3 Kings vii. 20. It means literally "the palm of the hand." The high priest took his hands full of incense on the day of expiation. Lev. xvi. 12. C.

24 The third day the prince of the sons of Zabulon, Eliab, the son of Helon, 25 Offered a silver dish, weighing one hundred and thirty sicles, a silver bowl of seventy sicles, by the weight of the sanctuary, both full of flour tempered with oil, for a sacrifice :

26 A little mortar of gold, weighing ten sicles, full of incense :

27 An ox of the herd, and a ram, and a lamb of a year old for a holocaust :

28 And a buck-goat for sin :

29 And for the sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five buck-goats, five lambs of a year old. This is the oblation of Eliab, the son of Helon.

30 The fourth day the prince of the sons of Ruben, Elisur, the son of Seducr,

31 Offered a silver dish, weighing one hundred and thirty sicles, a silver bowl of seventy sicles, according to the weight of the sanctuary, both full of flour tempered with oil, for a sacrifice :

32 A little mortar of gold, weighing ten sicles, full of incense :

33 An ox of the herd, and a ram, and a lamb of a year old for a holocaust :

34 And a buck-goat for sin :

36 The fifth day the prince of the sons of Simeon, Salamiel, the son of Surisaddai,

43 Offered a silver dish, weighing a hundred and thirty sicles, a silver bowl of seventy sicles, by the weight of the sanctuary, both full of flour tempered with oil, for a sacrifice :

44 A little mortar of gold, weighing ten sicles, full of incense :

45 An ox of the herd, and a ram, and a lamb of a year old for a holocaust :

46 And a buck-goat for sin :

47 And for sacrifices of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five buck-goats, five lambs of a year old. This was the offering of Eliasaph, the son of Duel.

63 An ox of the herd, and a ram, and a lamb of a year old for a holocaust :

64 And a buck-goat for sin :

65 And for sacrifices of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five buck-goats, five lambs of a year old. This was the offering of Abidan, the son of Gedeon.

89 And when Moses entered into the tabernacle of the covenant, to consult the oracle, he heard the voice of one speaking to him from the propitiatory, that was over the ark between the two cherubims, and from this place he spoke to him.

CHAP. VIII.

The seven lamps are placed on the golden candlestick, to shine towards the loaves of proposition : the ordination of the Levites : and at what age they shall serve in the tabernacle.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses,^a saying :

2 Speak to Aaron, and thou shalt say to him. When thou shalt place the seven lamps, let the candlestick be set up on the south side. Give orders, therefore, that the lamps look over against the north, towards the table of the loaves of proposition, over against that part shall they give light, towards which the candlestick looketh.

3 And Aaron did so, and he put the lamps upon the candlestick, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

4 Now this was the work of the candlestick, it was of beaten gold, both the shaft in the middle, and all that came out of both sides of the branches : according to the pattern which the Lord had shown to Moses, so he made the candlestick.

5 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying :

6 Take the Levites out of the midst of the children of Israel, and thou shalt purify them,

7 According to this rite : Let them be sprinkled with the water of purification, and let them shave all the hairs of their flesh. And when they shall have washed their garments, and are cleansed,

8 They shall take an ox of the herd, and for the offering thereof, fine flour tempered with oil : and thou shalt take another ox of the herd for a sin-offering :

9 And thou shalt bring the Levites before the tabernacle of the covenant, calling together all the multitude of the children of Israel :

10 And when the Levites are before the Lord, the children of Israel shall put their hands upon them :

11 And Aaron shall offer the Levites, as a gift in the sight of the Lord, from the children of Israel, that they may serve in his ministry.

12 The Levites also shall put their hands upon the heads of the oxen, of which thou shalt sacrifice one for sin, and the other for a holocaust of the Lord, to pray for them.

13 And thou shalt set the Levites in the sight of Aaron and of his sons, and shalt consecrate them, being offered to the Lord, 14 And shalt separate them from the midst of the children of Israel, to be mine.

15 And afterwards they shall enter into the tabernacle

^a A. M. 2514, A. C. 1490.

VER. 89. Oracle of God, whose majesty appeared, in the form of a bright cloud, upon the propitiatory, or mercy-seat. H.—Moses is allowed to enter in quality of God's messenger, to announce his will to the people ; or perhaps he heard the mandates of God, standing without the veil. D.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 2. Looketh. This candlestick stood on the south side, with one branch extending towards the altar of incense, on the east ; and the other to the west, so as to give light to the loaves of proposition, on the north. Exod. xxv. 31. C.

VER. 7. Let them be sprinkled with the water of purification. This was the holy water, mixed with the ashes of the red cow, (Num. xix.,) appointed for purifying all that were unclean. It was a figure of the blood of Christ, applied to our souls by his holy sacraments. Ch.—Purification, (lustrationis,) or "expiation." The water, mixed with ashes, was taken and sprinkled round about the houses, and upon those persons who wished either to be cleansed from some defilement, or to advance in virtue and purity. We use salt instead of ashes. —Flesh, to remind them that they must cut off all superfluous thoughts, the roots of which they will however never be able to destroy entirely, as S. Greg. (Mor. v. 23,) says, "the flesh always produces superfluities, which the spirit must always cut away with the sword of solicitude." See Lev. xiv. 8 ; xxi. 5, 10. H.—The priests serving in the temple were obliged to cut their hair every month ; and the Levites probably observed the same regulation, to acknowledge, that they who approach to God must be pure and detached from earthly cares.

VER. 10. Upon them. Some of the princes performed this ceremony to testify that they gave up the Levites to serve God, (ver. 15,) and would not be answerable, if they were guilty of any irreverence or neglect. C.

VER. 11. A gift. Heb. "he shall heave them as a heave-offering before the Lord."

VER. 12. Thou, Moses, though the Heb. here seems to refer it to Aaron, "he shall." But the Sept. and Arab. agree with the Vulg., and the context shows that Moses is the person (C.) who had chiefly to officiate. Aaron also performed his part, ver. 11. H.

VER. 14. Mine. Free from the burdens of the state, and employed in singing and keeping the doors of the sanctuary. M.

VER. 15. Into, or "towards, about ;" for the priests alone could enter in Heb. "the Levites shall go in (or be admitted) to do the service of the tabernacle" and to remove it, &c. H. ver. 19.

of the covenant, to serve me. And thus shalt thou purify and consecrate them for an oblation of the Lord : for as a gift they were given me by the children of Israel.

16 *I have taken them instead of the first-born that open every womb in Israel :

17 For all the first-born of the children of Israel, both of men and of beasts, are mine. From the day that I slew every first-born in the land of Egypt, have I sanctified them to myself :

18 And I have taken the Levites for all the first-born of the children of Israel :

19 And have delivered them for a gift to Aaron and his sons out of the midst of the people, to serve me for Israel in the tabernacle of the covenant, and to pray for them, lest there should be a plague among the people, if they should presume to approach unto my sanctuary.

20 And Moses and Aaron, and all the multitude of the children of Israel, did with the Levites all that the Lord had commanded Moses :

21 And they were purified, and washed their garments. And Aaron lifted them up in the sight of the Lord, and prayed for them, 22 That being purified, they might go into the tabernacle of the covenant, to do their services before Aaron and his sons. As the Lord had commanded Moses touching the Levites, so was it done.

23 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying :

24 This is the law of the Levites : From twenty-five years old and upwards, they shall go in to minister in the tabernacle of the covenant.

25 And when they shall have accomplished the fiftieth year of their age, they shall cease to serve :

26 And they shall be the ministers of their brethren in the tabernacle of the covenant, to keep the things that are committed to their care, but not to do the works. Thus shalt thou order the Levites touching their charge.

CHAP. IX.

The precept of the pasch is renewed: the unclean, and travellers, are to observe it the second month. the camp is guided by the pillar of the cloud.

THE Lord spoke to Moses^b in the desert of Sinai, the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, in the first month, saying :

2 *Let the children of Israel make the Phase in its due time,

3 The fourteenth day of this month in the evening, according to all the ceremonies and justifications thereof.

* Exod. xiii. 2: Supra, iii. 13; Luke ii. 23.—^b A. M. 2514, A. C. 1490.

VER. 21. Lifted. Heb. thonupe. Exod. xxix. 24. Perhaps only a few were received at once. M.—Prayed. Heb. means also “to expiate, or redeem,” as ver. 19.

VER. 25. Serve, in any laborious functions, as the original imports.

VER. 26. Ministers. Heb. “to watch over,” (C.) direct, and “train up their brethren.” Sam. Grot.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. The Lord. The first 15 verses might be placed at the head of this book. God gave orders to celebrate the first passover in the desert about the 14th of the first month, in the second year of liberty, soon after the consecration of the tabernacle. C.—This is the only passover which the Jews are recorded to have celebrated during the 40 years’ sojournment. H.—First month. Hence Moses does not always observe the order of time, as he spoke (chap. i.) of what happened in the second month. D.

VER. 3. In the. Heb. “between the two evenings.” Exod. xii. 6. Sept. “towards the evening, in its season, according to its law, and determination.” H.

VER. 6. Man. That is, by having touched, or come near, a dead body, out of which the soul was departed. Ch.—Such were forbidden to offer any sacrifice. Lev. xxii. 4. Yet they could not refrain from burying the dead. Philo, de vita

4 And Moses commanded the children of Israel that they should make the Phase.

5 And they made it in its proper time : the fourteenth day of the month at evening, in Mount Sinai. The children of Israel did according to all things that the Lord had commanded Moses.

6 But behold some who were unclean by occasion of the soul of a man, who could not make the Phase on that day, coming to Moses and Aaron,

7 Said to them : We are unclean by occasion of the soul of a man. Why are we kept back, that we may not offer in its season the offering to the Lord among the children of Israel ?

8 And Moses answered them : Stay, that I may consult the Lord what he will ordain concerning you.

9 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying :

10 Say to the children of Israel : The man that shall be unclean by occasion of one that is dead, or shall be in a journey afar off in your nation, let him make the Phase to the Lord,

11 In the second month, in the fourteenth day of the month, in the evening, they shall eat it with unleavened bread and wild lettuce :

12 They shall not leave any thing thereof until morning,^a nor break a bone thereof, they shall observe all the ceremonies of the Phase.

13 But if any man is clean, and was not on a journey, and did not make the Phase, that soul shall be cut off from among his people, because he offered not sacrifice to the Lord in due season : he shall bear his sin.

14 The sojourner also, and the stranger, if they be among you, shall make the Phase to the Lord, according to the ceremonies and justifications thereof. The same ordinance shall be with you, both for the stranger, and for him that was born in the land.

15 *Now, on the day that the tabernacle was reared up, a cloud covered it. But from the evening there was over the tabernacle, as it were, the appearance of fire, until the morning.

16 So it was always : by day the cloud covered it, and by night as it were the appearance of fire.

17 And when the cloud that covered the tabernacle was taken up, then the children of Israel marched forward : and in the place where the cloud stood still, there they camped.

18 At the commandment of the Lord they marched, and at his commandment they pitched the tabernacle.

Mos. 3. As, therefore, the action was far from being criminal, and they had partaken of the paschal lamb without restriction in Egypt, and heard that God required all to offer this sacrifice, under pain of excision, (ver. 13,) they reasonably wished to know how they were to act, particularly as the 14th of Nisan alone was appointed for this sacrifice, and they could not be purified in less than seven days.

VER. 10. Unclean, in what manner soever. Philo.—Nation; or at a great distance, whether in the country or out of it. H.—Sept. all such were bound to observe the passover in the second month, as the whole people did under Ezechias. 2 Par. xxx.

VER. 14. Stranger. Both the Jews who lived at a distance from the promised land, and those of other nations who had embraced their religion, were obliged to observe this law; while the uncircumcised were absolutely excluded. (C.)

VER. 15. A cloud, and fire, alternately covered the tabernacle of the covenant, which was 30 cubits long and 15 broad. C.

VER. 16. By day. These words are omitted in Heb.; but the context shows that they must necessarily be supplied; as they are in the Sept. The same cloud assumed different appearances. C.

*All the days that the cloud abode over the tabernacle, they remained in the same place:

19 And if it was so that it continued over it a long time, the children of Israel kept the watches of the Lord, and marched not,

20 For as many days soever as the cloud staid over the tabernacle. At the commandment of the Lord they pitched their tents, and at his commandment they took them down.

21 If the cloud tarried from evening until morning, and immediately at break of day left the tabernacle, they marched forward: and if it departed, after a day and a night, they took down their tents.

22 But if it remained over the tabernacle for two days, or a month, or a longer time, the children of Israel remained in the same place, and marched not: but immediately as soon as it departed, they removed the camp.

23 By the word of the Lord they pitched their tents, and by his word they marched: and kept the watches of the Lord, according to his commandment by the hand of Moses.

CHAP. X.

The silver trumpets and their use. They march from Sinai.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses,^b saying:

2 Make thee two trumpets of beaten silver, wherewith thou mayst call together the multitude, when the camp is to be removed.

3 And when thou shalt sound the trumpets, all the multitude shall gather unto thee, to the door of the tabernacle of the covenant.

4 If thou sound but once, the princes and the heads of the multitude of Israel shall come to thee.

5 But if the sound of the trumpets be longer, and with interruptions, they that are on the east side shall first go forward.

6 And at the second sounding and like noise of the trumpet, they who lie on the south side shall take up their tents. And after this manner shall the rest do, when the trumpets shall sound for a march.

7 But when the people is to be gathered together, the sound of the trumpets shall be plain, and they shall not make a broken sound.

8 And the sons of Aaron the priests shall sound the trumpets: and this shall be an ordinance for ever in your generations.

9 If you go forth to war out of your land, against the enemies that fight against you, you shall sound aloud with the trumpets, and there shall be a remembrance of you before the Lord your God, that you may be delivered out of the hands of your enemies.

10 If at any time you shall have a banquet, and on your festival days, and on the first days of your months, you shall sound the trumpets over the holocausts, and the sacrifices of peace-offerings, that they may be to you for a remembrance of your God. I am the Lord your God.

11 The second year, in the second month, the twentieth day of the month, the cloud was taken up from the tabernacle of the covenant.

12 And the children of Israel marched by their troops from the desert of Sinai, and the cloud rested in the wilderness of Pharan.

13 And the first went forward according to the commandment of the Lord by the hand of Moses.

14 The sons of Juda by their troops: whose prince was Nahasson, the son of Aminadab.

15 In the tribe of the sons of Issachar, the prince was Nathanael, the son of Suar.

16 In the tribe of Zabulon, the prince was Eliab, the son of Helon.

17 And the tabernacle was taken down, and the sons of Gerson and Merari set forward, bearing it.

18 And the sons of Ruben also marched, by their troops and ranks, whose prince was Helisur, the son of Sedeur.

19 And in the tribe of Simeon, the prince was Salamiel, the son of Surisaddai.

20 And in the tribe of Gad, the prince was Eliasaph, the son of Duel.

21 Then the Caathites also marched, carrying the sanctuary. So long was the tabernacle carried, till they came to the place of setting it up.

22 The sons of Ephraim also moved their camp by their troops, in whose army the prince was Elisama, the son of Ammiud.

23 And in the tribe of the sons of Manasses, the prince was Gamaliel, the son of Phadassur.

^c Supra, i. 7.

VER. 20. For, &c. Heb. "and so it was when the cloud was days of number upon the tabernacle; by the mouth of the Lord they staid in their tents," &c. Days of number, imim mospor, most probably means a few days; (see Deut. iv. 27;) though Louis de Dieu would translate "a full year;" as imim, according to him, signifies, ver. 22. It is understood, however, by others, to denote a week, a month, a year, or an indeterminate number of days. Gen. xxiv. 55.

CHAP. X. VER. 2. Two trumpets. These were probably deemed sufficient at first, though in the days of Josue there were seven, (C.) and in those of Solomon 20,000. Josep. viii. 2. T.—They were used for all public assemblies. C.

VER. 4. Once. Heb. "with one trumpet." If both sounded together uniformly, the people assembled, ver. 7.

VER. 5. Longer, and with interruptions. Heb. thoruā, "a signal," an alarm. Sept. "a loud cry of victory." H.

VER. 10. And on. This serves to explain what kind of banquet is meant. On the festivals of religion peace-offerings were made, of which those who were pure might partake. H.—On solemn and extraordinary occasions holocausts were also presented to God by the whole nation; and the trumpets announced these public rejoicings. 2 Par. v. 12; xxix. 26. C.—Months. The day when the moon first appeared, was a festival day among the Jews, (M.) or the first day of the month, while they observed the solar year.

VER. 11. The second. The Samar. copy here places what we read, Deut. i. 7, 8; and it is certain that those words were addressed to Moses on this occasion, though it be not so certain that they were written by him in this place. C.—Of the month Jiar. The Hebrews had continued near Sinai a year and 20 days. Thence they went to the desert of Pharan, encamping first at the sepulchres of concupiscence, and at Haseroth, which were probably in that desert. Moses only specifies those encampments where something memorable took place. He mentions none between Asiongaber and Cades, though the length of the journey required many. Num. xi. 34; xiii. 1. C.

VER. 17. It. Hence it would appear that part of the Levites followed Juda's division, which was preceded by the priests bearing the ark, (ver. 33,) while the Caathites bore the sacred vessels after Ruben, (ver. 21,) and were followed by Ephraim and Gad. But Calmet observes, that the Levites, and the whole camp of the Lord, came in the middle of the four great divisions, immediately after Ruben. Chap. ii. 9, 17. Salien thinks that the ark and cloud led the way, and returned to the middle at the end of the journey, ver. 36. H. T.

VER. 21. Sanctuary, or holy vessels. They never set them down till they arrived at the place where the tabernacle was to be fixed. Heb. may be, "the sons of Caath set forward, bearing the vessels of the sanctuary, (C.) and they (the other Levites, ver. 17) set up the boards and curtains of the tabernacle, till they arrived;" that so both the vessels and the ark might be placed in proper order. H.

24 And in the tribe of Benjamin, the prince was Abidan, the son of Gedeon.

25 The last of all the camp marched the sons of Dan, by their troops, in whose army the prince was Ahiezer, the son of Ammisaddai.

26 And in the tribe of the sons of Aser, the prince was Phegiel, the son of Ochran, 27 And in the tribe of the sons of Nephtali, the prince was Ahira, the son of Enan.

28 This was the order of the camps, and marches of the children of Israel, by their troops, when they set forward.

29 And Moses said to Hobab, the son of Raguel the Midianite, his kinsman: We are going towards the place which the Lord will give us: come with us, that we may do thee good: for the Lord hath promised good things to Israel.

30 But he answered him: I will not go with thee, but I will return to my^a country, wherein I was born.

31 And he said: Do not leave us: for thou knowest in what places we should encamp in the wilderness, and thou shalt be our guide.

32 And if thou comest with us, we will give thee what is the best of the riches, which the Lord shall deliver to us.

33 So they marched from the mount of the Lord three days' journey, and the ark of the covenant of the Lord went before them, for three days, providing a place for the camp.

34 The cloud also of the Lord was over them by day when they marched.

35 And when the ark was lifted up, Moses said:^b Arise, O Lord, and let thy enemies be scattered, and let them that hate thee, flee from before thy face.

36 And when it was set down, he said: Return, O Lord, to the multitude of the host of Israel.

CHAP. XI.

The people murmur, and are punished with fire. God appointeth seventy ancients for assistants to Moses. They prophesy. The people have their fill of flesh, but forthwith many die of the plague.

IN the mean time^c there arose a^d murmuring of the people against the Lord, as it were repining at their fatigue. And when the Lord heard it he was angry. ^eAnd the fire of the Lord being kindled against them, devoured them that were at the uttermost part of the camp.

2 And when the people cried to Moses, Moses prayed to the Lord, and the fire was swallowed up.

3 And he called the name of that place, The burning: for that the fire of the Lord had been kindled against them.

4 For a mixt multitude of people, that came up with them, burned with desire, sitting and weeping, the children of Israel also being joined with them, and said: Who shall give us flesh to eat?

5 We remember the fish that we ate in Egypt free-cost: the cucumbers come into our mind, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlic.

6 Our soul is dry, our eyes behold nothing else but manna.

7 ^fNow the manna was like coriander seed, of the colour of bdellium.

8 And the people went about, and gathering it, ground it in a mill, or beat it in a mortar, and boiled it in a pot, and made cakes thereof, of the taste of bread tempered with oil.

9 And when the dew fell in the night upon the camp, the manna also fell with it.

10 Now Moses heard the people weeping by their families, every one at the door of his tent. And the wrath of the Lord was exceedingly enkindled: to Moses also the thing seemed insupportable.

11 And he said to the Lord: Why hast thou afflicted thy servant? wherefore do I not find favour before thee? and why hast thou laid the weight of all this people upon me?

12 Have I conceived all this multitude, or begotten them, that thou shouldst say to me: Carry them in thy bosom, as the nurse is wont to carry the little infant, and bear them into the land, for which thou hast sworn to their fathers?

VER. 29. Hobab; probably the brother of Sephora, and son of Raguel or Jethro, who had departed, leaving this son for a guide to Moses.—Kinsman. The Heb. ethon, and Greek gambros, are not more determinate, as they signify either father, son, or brother-in-law (see Exod. ii. 18. C.); or in general a relation. S. Jerom. D.

VER. 31. Guide, being well acquainted with the country, and consequently able to point out the best places for pasturage and for water, and to inform us what sort of people we are near. Heb. "thou shalt serve us for eyes." Sept. "as a senator." Hobab probably accepted of the proposal, as we find the Cineans, descendants of Jethro, holding a portion of the land. C. Judg. i. 16. His posterity, the Rechabites, were noted for more than usual piety; and were the same with the Essenes, according to Serarius, and the first authors of a monastic life. Jer. xxxv. T.

VER. 33. Journey. During this time we know not where they encamped. The first place that is specified is Tabera, or "the burning," (chap. xi. 3. C.,) which S. Jerom believes is the same place which was also called the sepulchres of concupiscence, (ver. 34.) the 13th station, (H.) which is described above as the desert of Pharan. M.—Before them. See ver. 17. H.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Fatigue. Heb. simply, "and the people were like those who complain of evil, or who seek pretences, inwardly, in the ears of the Lord." S. Jerom explains this evil to mean the fatigue of the journey, which lasted for three days together. C.—Hence some, who were ready to lay hold of every pretext, took occasion to murmur, and to contrast their present wearisome life with the false pleasures of Egypt. The people of that country were now desirous of returning, and prevailed upon many of the Hebrews to join with them, ver. 4. H.—They were chiefly those who were farthest from the ark, the dregs of the people; though some pretend that the uttermost part means the principal men of the camp. See Gen. xlviii. 2. "The fire devoured one part of the camp" Sept.

VER. 2. Up, as rain is by the earth. Amos ix. 5.

VER. 4. A mixt multitude. These were people that came with them out of Egypt, who were not of the race of Israel; who, by their murmuring, drew also the children of Israel to murmur: this should teach us the danger of associating ourselves with the children of Egypt; that is, with the lovers and admirers of this wicked world. Ch.

VER. 5. Fish. The Nile abounds in fish, which they might catch freely. The fish of the lake Mœris, brought a considerable revenue to the king of Egypt. Herod. ii. 149. The Hebrews had dwelt also near the Mediterranean Sea. Fish was formerly in greater esteem than it is at present. The priests of Egypt abstained from it, (Herod. ii. 37,) and the people from such as had scales, and from eels, because they believed they were sacred (ib. c. 72).—Garlic. These things are much more delicious and wholesome in hot countries. The Greeks fed much on cucumbers and garlic. Aristophanes. H.

VER. 6. Dry, like people quite worn out for want of food. Psal. ci. 5, 12; Lament. iv. 8.—Nothing. An exaggeration. We are disgusted with this light food. C.—They wished not only for the taste, but also for the colour, of other meats. M.—How often do we imitate their folly, when we are disgusted with the bread of life! H.

VER. 7. Bdellium. Bdellium, according to Pliny, (lib. xxi. c. 9,) was of the colour of a man's nail, white and bright (Ch.); or like wax, (lib. xii. 9,) between white and yellow. It might resemble a tarnished pearl or ivory in colour, and coriander seed in shape.

VER. 8. Oil; or, when unprepared, like flour and honey. Exod. xvi. 31. C.

VER. 10. By. Heb. "for." Jonathan and others endeavour to excuse their ancestors, by saying that they wept because they were forbidden to marry their near relations.—His tent. Some explain the Heb. of the tent of Moses. But the Israelites more probably staid at home.

13 Whence should I have flesh to give to so great a multitude? they weep against me, saying: Give us flesh that we may eat.

14 I am not able alone to bear all this people, because it is too heavy for me.

15 But if it seem unto thee otherwise, I beseech thee to kill me, and let me find grace in thy eyes, that I be not afflicted with so great evils.

16 And the Lord said to Moses: Gather unto me seventy men of the ancients of Israel, whom thou knowest to be ancients and masters of the people: and thou shalt bring them to the door of the tabernacle of the covenant, and shalt make them stand there with thee,

17 That I may come down and speak with thee: and I will take of thy spirit, and will give to them, that they may bear with thee the burden of the people, and thou mayst not be burthened alone.

18 And thou shalt say to the people: Be ye sanctified: to-morrow you shall eat flesh: for I have heard you say, Who will give us flesh to eat? it was well with us in Egypt. That the Lord may give you flesh, and you may eat:

19 Not for one day, nor two, nor five, nor ten, nor for twenty.

20 But even for a month of days, till it come out at your nostrils, and become loathsome to you, because you have cast off the Lord, who is in the midst of you, and have wept before him, saying: Why came we out of Egypt?

21 And Moses said: There are six hundred thousand footmen of this people, and sayest thou: I will give them flesh to eat a whole month?

22 "Shall then a multitude of sheep and oxen be killed, that it may suffice for their food? or shall the fishes of the sea be gathered together to fill them?"

23 And the Lord answered him: "Is the hand of the Lord unable? Thou shalt presently see whether my word shall come to pass or no.

24 Moses therefore came, and told the people the words of the Lord, and assembled seventy men of the ancients of Israel, and made them to stand about the tabernacle.

25 And the Lord came down in a cloud, and spoke to him, taking away of the spirit that was in Moses, and giving to the seventy men. And when the spirit had rested on them, they prophesied, nor did they cease afterwards.

26 Now there remained in the camp two of the men, of whom one was called Eldad, and the other Medad, upon whom the spirit rested; for they also had been enrolled, but were not gone forth to the tabernacle.

27 And when they prophesied in the camp, there ran a young man, and told Moses, saying: Eldad and Medad prophesy in the camp.

28 Forthwith Josue the son of Nun, the minister of Moses, and chosen out of many, said: My lord Moses, forbid them.

29 But he said: Why hast thou emulation for me? O that all the people might prophesy, and that the Lord would give them his spirit?

30 And Moses returned, with the ancients of Israel, into the camp.

31 "And a wind going out from the Lord, taking quails up beyond the sea brought them, and cast them into the camp for the space of one day's journey, on every side of the camp round about, and they flew in the air two cubits high above the ground.

32 The people therefore rising up all that day, and night, and the next day, gathered together of quails, he that did least, ten cores: and they dried them round about the camp.

33 "As yet the flesh was between their teeth, neither had that kind of meat failed: when behold, the wrath of

VER. 12. Nurse. We often read of men nursing and watching over others. 4 Kings x. 5; Est. ii. 11. Thus kings shall nurse the Church. Isa. xlix. 23. C.—All who have authority should treat their subjects with love. M.

VER. 15. Evils. Heb. "my misfortune." C.—Moses fears the anger of God falling upon the people. H.

VER. 16. Seventy men. This was the first institution of the council or senate, called the Sanhedrim, consisting of seventy, or seventy-two senators or counselors. Ch.—Calmet calls this in question. Dissert. on the Police, &c. Moses chose these senators from among the officers whom he had before set over the people, (Exod. xviii.) or from those who had superintended their affairs in Egypt, according to the Rabbin, (Exod. iii. 14.) who say that the traditions explaining the law were intrusted to them. Jarchi, &c.—Ancients: a title of authority in the East. See Gen. i. 7. It was not so necessary that they should be far advanced in years, as that they should be men of prudence and of consummate virtue. These qualifications received a great increase, when they were filled with the spirit of God. C.—They were thus authorized to decide controversies pre-emptorily, and to consult God, like Moses, being endued also with a prophetic spirit. M.

VER. 17. Thy spirit. S. Augustine (q. 18) reads "of the spirit which is on thee" (Sept.); referring it to the indivisible spirit of God, so that these ancients received what was sufficient for them, while Moses suffered no diminution. Thus one lamp communicates light to another, without being impaired. Orig. Hom. 6.

VER. 18. Sanctified. Prepare yourselves to receive flesh. The word is often used in this sense. Jer. vi. 4, &c. Onkelos.—Cease to murmur, and bewail your sin. C.

VER. 20. Of days complete. So two years of days, means two full years. 1 Mac. i. 30.—Loathsome to you. "Indigestible." Sym. "Bilious." Sept. Till it become loathsome to you, and a source of scandal, (Chal.) or of dispersion, as some translate the Heb.

VER. 21. People, able to bear arms. H.—In all there were above two millions. C.

VER. 25. Afterwards. Some give a contrary meaning to the Heb., with the Sept., Syr., &c.: "They prophesied, (on that occasion,) but they did not continue" to do so; except when they were favoured with the influence of the spirit. When it was requisite, they were enabled to declare God's will and his praise to the people. C.—Saul is said to have prophesied when he praised God, 1 Kings x. 5, 10. M.

VER. 26. Forth, being lawfully hindered, (C.) or out of humility. S. Jer. ep. 127.

VER. 27. Man. The Rabbin say, without proof, that he was Gersom, the son of Moses, and that the two prophets were half-brothers of the lawgiver, and foretold his death and the persecutions of Gog, &c. C.—Hermas (xi. 2) refers to some of their predictions: "The Lord is nigh to those who are converts." See Psal. xxxiii. 19. H.—But they prophesied, probably, by announcing only, as men inspired, the praises of God and sentiments of piety, without diving into futurity. C.—Theodoret (q. 21) thinks they were not of the seventy judges, but equal in dignity to them. Cotelier.

VER. 31. Sea; the Mediterranean and the Red Sea. The wind blew from the south-west to the west with respect to Moses, or from the south with respect to Jerusalem. Psal. lxxvii. 26. God had sent the Hebrews a similar provision, for one day, about the same season of the year. Exod. xvi. 13.—Flew. The Heb. says simply, "as it were two cubits upon the earth;" whether they were heaped one upon another to that height, or, as it is more probable, (C.) they flew only so much above the ground, and might easily be killed. H.—The Sept. call them ortygometra, the leader, or the largest sort of quails.

VER. 32. Cores. Heb. "Chomers," each of which contained 100 gomers. One gomer was the daily allowance of manna for each person, and of course there must have been sufficient quails for one hundred days. But Moses tells us that each one collected at least ten times that quantity, or as much as he could eat for 1,000 days. Bochart, therefore, supposes that only each family, of ten people, gathered so much: or the Heb. should be rendered heaps, as the core, or chomer, is not a proper measure for birds, but for corn and liquors. The Sept., Syr., &c. have "heaps." The Psalmist compares the numbers brought on this occasion to the dust, or to the sand of the sea-shore. Psal. lxxvii. 27.—Dried them in the sun, having first salted them, as the Egyptians did. C. Athenus.—Many quails are found in Egypt, and around the Arabian Gulf. Josep. iii. D.

VER. 33. Plague of fire, ver. 3; Psal. lxxvii. 21. C. a Lapide.—Failed, after the month was expired. M.—They had been accustomed to live upon manna, which was a light food, during the space of a year; and now eating greedily of the Lord being provoked against the people, struck them with an exceeding great plague.

34 And that place was called The graves of lust: for there they buried the people that had lusted. And departing from the graves of lust, they came unto Haseroth, and abode there.

CHAP. XII.

Mary and Aaron murmur against Moses, whom God praiseth above other prophets. Mary being struck with leprosy, Aaron confesseth his fault. Moses prayeth for her, and after seven days' separation from the camp, she is restored.

AND Mary and Aaron spoke against Moses,* because of his wife the Ethiopian,

2 And they said: Hath the Lord spoken by Moses only? hath he not also spoken to us in like manner? And when the Lord heard this,

3 (For Moses was a man exceeding meek above all men that dwelt upon earth,)

4 Immediately he spoke to him, and to Aaron and Mary: Come out you three only to the tabernacle of the covenant. And when they were come out,

5 The Lord came down in the pillar of the cloud, and stood in the entry of the tabernacle, calling to Aaron and Mary. And when they were come,

6 He said to them: Hear my words: If there be among you a prophet of the Lord, I will appear to him in a vision, or I will speak to him in a dream.

7 But it is not so with my servant Moses, †who is most faithful in all my house:

8 For I speak to him mouth to mouth: and plainly, and not by riddles and figures, doth he see the Lord. Why then were you not afraid to speak ill of my servant Moses?

9 And being angry with them, he went away:

10 The cloud also that was over the tabernacle departed: †and behold Mary appeared white as snow with a this flesh, their stomachs were overcharged, and they died of an indigestion. C.—The Rabbin say, God punished their gluttony by death, and obliged the rest of the Hebrews to abstain from all flesh, except from that of the peace-offerings, till they entered the promised land. Seld. Syn. 2, 4.

VER. 34. The graves of lust; or the sepulchres of concupiscence: so called from their irregular desire of flesh. In Heb. Kibroth Hattavah. Ch.—Hence S. Augustine observes that, “it is not a matter of so much moment to be heard by God. For some he hears in his wrath, granting their requests, while he refuses to comply with some petitions of his friends.” D.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Ethiopian. Sephora, the wife of Moses, was of Madian, which bordered upon the land of Chus, or Ethiopia; and therefore she is called an Ethiopian: where note, that the Ethiopian here spoken of, is not that of Africa, but that of Arabia, (Ch.) on the east side of the Red Sea. Exod. ii. 15. Jealousy instigated Aaron and his sister on this occasion. C.

VER. 3. Exceeding meek. Moses being the meekest of men, would not contend for himself; therefore God inspired him to write here his own defence: and the Holy Spirit, whose dictate he wrote, obliged him to declare the truth, though it was so much to his own praise. Ch.—So he mentions his defects without reserve. C.—There are occasions when a person may be not only authorized, but in a manner forced to declare what may be to his own praise. Moses was in such a situation. The peace of the whole nation was in danger, when false insinuations were thrown out against the lawgiver and king, by his own nearest relations, and by them who were next in authority to himself. Aaron, the high priest, countenanced at least the remarks of his sister, who seems to have been the most to blame, as she alone is punished with the leprosy. H.—Some have suspected that this verse has been inserted by a later inspired writer. A Lapide. H.

VER. 5 Come to the door of the tabernacle, where Moses also was standing.

VER. 6. Vision. Other prophets were inspired in a more mysterious manner: Moses, though he saw not the majesty of God in any corporeal figure, was instructed by him in the most secret things with the utmost perspicuity, (C.) as if a man were explaining his sentiments to his most intimate friend. Exod. xxxiii. 19. H.

VER. 7. Faithful: Heb. Namon, steward or master of the palace. Such leprosy. And when Aaron had looked on her, and saw her all covered with leprosy, 11 He said to Moses: I beseech thee my lord, lay not upon us this sin, which we have foolishly committed:

12 Let her not be as one dead, and as an abortive that is cast forth from the mother's womb. Lo, now one half of her flesh is consumed with the leprosy.

13 And Moses cried to the Lord, saying: O God, I beseech thee heal her.

14 And the Lord answered him: If her father had spitten upon her face, ought she not to have been ashamed for seven days at least? Let her be separated seven days without the camp, and afterwards she shall be called again.

15 Mary, therefore, was put out of the camp seven days: and the people moved not from that place, until Mary was called again.

CHAP. XIII.

The twelve spies are sent to view the land: The relation they make of it.

AND the people marched from Haseroth, and pitched their tents in the desert of Pharan.

2 And there the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

3 Send men to view the land of Chanaan: which I will give to the children of Israel, one of every tribe, of the rulers.

4 Moses did what the Lord had commanded, sending from the desert of Pharan, principal men, whose names are these:

5 Of the tribe of Ruben, Sammua, the son of Zechur.

6 Of the tribe of Simeon, Saphat, the son of Huri.

7 Of the tribe of Juda, Caleb, the son of Jephone.

8 Of the tribe of Issachar, Igai, the son of Joseph.

9 Of the tribe of Ephraim, Osee, the son of Nun.

10 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Phalti, the son of Raphu.

11 Of the tribe of Zabulon, Geddiel, the son of Sodi.

12 Of the tribe of Joseph, of the sceptre of Manasses, Gaddi, the son of Susi.

were Samuel, 1 Kings iii. 20; David, (C.) 1 Kings xxii. 14; Naaman, the general of Syria, 2 Kings v.; and Bacchides, 1 Mac. vii. H.—Ambassadors had this title, (Prov. xiii. 17,) and fidelity often denotes an office. 1 Par. ix. 22. Job (xii. 20) speaks of the Namonim. C.—But none among the Israelites was more justly entitled to this honour than Moses. He announced the word of God without any mixture of falsehood, and did not arrogate to himself more than his due, as Aaron seems to have done, ver. 2. H.

VER. 10. Departed from the door to its former place, (C.) as if in abhorrence of Mary's leprosy, (Hiscuni,) and still more of the sin which had brought upon her that punishment. C.—Leprosy, of an incurable kind, like that of Giezi, 4 Kings v. 27. It covers the whole skin with a white scurf. Lev. xiii. 10.

VER. 14. Answered him. The force of this reply must be very obvious. If a father had been so irritated by his daughter, as to show his indignation in the strongest manner, (see Job xxx. 10; Mark xiv. 65,) she would surely keep out of sight for a time: and can she complain, if I, who have been more injured in the person of my minister, exclude her from society seven days, after having covered her with the leprosy as with spittle. C.—The excommunication, in the Christian Church, bears some resemblance with this exclusion. Mary did not undergo all the legal purifications, (Lev. xxxiv.,) as the miraculous cure dispensed her from them. M.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Pharan, at Rethma, chap. xxxiii. 48; though Barradius confounds that station with that at Cades-barne. The Samaritan copy inserts here a long passage, taken probably from Deut. i. 20, 21, and 23, which shows that the Hebrews first proposed the sending spies, out of timidity; which God severely punished in the sequel, though in his anger he here consents to their proposal, which seemed to originate in motives of prudence, ver. 3.

VER. 3 Rulers of a hundred men, according to Hiscuni, inferior to those mentioned chap. x. 14. C.

VER. 6. Huri: Sept. “Souri.” None of the tribe of Levi, the third son of Jacob, are sent; but two represent the different branches of the tribe of Joseph, ver. 9, 12. The tribe of Ephraim comes out of its natural order, and has been overlooked by Calmet. H.

VER. 12. Sceptre. Heb. note, means also “a tribe.”

13 Of the tribe of Dan, Ammiel, the son of Gemalli.
 14 Of the tribe of Aser, Sthur, the son of Michael.
 15 Of the tribe of Nephtali, Nahabi, the son of Yapsi.

16 Of the tribe of Gad, Guel, the son of Machi.

17 These are the names of the men, whom Moses sent to view the land: and he called Osee, the son of Nun, Josue.^a

18 And Moses sent them to view the land of Chanaan, and said to them: Go you up by the south side. And when you shall come to the mountains,

19 View the land, of what sort it is: and the people that are the inhabitants thereof, whether they be strong or weak: few in number or many:

20 The land itself, whether it be good or bad: what manner of cities, walled or without walls:

21 The ground, fat or barren, woody or without trees. Be of good courage, and bring us of the fruits of the land. Now it was the time when the first ripe grapes are fit to be eaten.

22 And when they were gone up, they viewed the land from the desert of Sin, unto Rohob as you enter into Emath.

23 And they went up at the south side, and came to Hebron, where were ^bAchinian and Sisai, and Tholmai, the sons of Enac. For Hebron was built seven years before Tanis the city of Egypt.

24 And going forward as far as the torrent of the cluster of grapes, they cut off a branch with its cluster of grapes, which two men carried upon a lever. They took also of the pomegranates and of the figs of that place:

25 Which was called Nehelescol, that is to say, the torrent of the cluster of grapes, because from thence the children of Israel had carried a cluster of grapes.

26 And they that went to spy out the land returned after forty days, having gone round all the country,

^a Acts vii. 45, and Heb. iv. 8.

VER. 17. Josue. His former name Osee, or Hoseah, means "one saved, or salvation:" but the addition of the i, taken from the name of the Lord, intimates, "he shall save, or the saviour of God." C.—The Sept. have, "Ausc, the son of Nave, Jesus," as he was a striking figure of our blessed Saviour, and their names are written with the same letters, Josua. This Moses foresaw, and also that he would be the happy instrument, in the hand of God, of saving the Israelites, by introducing them into the land of promise, and establishing them in peace therein. M.—The changing of his name imported, likewise, that he should be the chief leader. Theod. q. 25. W.

VER. 18. South side, which is to the north of where you now dwell. Moses enters into several details for the satisfaction of the people, though they had probably a general idea of the country and of its fruitfulness already, having lived not far off. They might not know, however, but that some part of the inhabitants might dwell in tents, instead of towns, as many of the Arabians did.

VER. 21. First ripe (præcoquæ): Heb. lit. "the first-born." Sept. "the days of spring, forerunners of the grape." In Madeira, grapes ripen in March. Some suppose the messengers departed in June, others in July. In Palestine, they have fresh grapes from the end of June till Martinmas, and three vintages, in August, and in each of the two following months.

VER. 22. Sin. The desert of Pharan was contiguous to that of Sin.

VER. 23. And came. The printed Heb. has, "and he came:" but the Sam. and all the versions, as well as some MSS., properly retain the plural, which the Massorets allow is right. Kenn. Diss. i.—Enac, the founder of Hebron, and father of the giants of Chanaan. Jos. xv. 13.

VER. 24. Torrent. Sept. "vale."—Its. Heb. "one cluster."—Two men, Josue and Caleb (S. Maximus); though the Rabbin say they carried nothing.—Lever, or staff, suspending it thus, in order that it might not be crushed. In that valley, Doubdan (i. 21,) was assured by the religious, that clusters, weighing twelve pounds, might still be found. H.—The Fathers here contemplate Jesus Christ, suspended between the two testaments, the synagogue and the Church: the juice, or blood of the grape, (Gen. xlix. 2; Deut. xxxii. 14,) denotes his passion. VER. 27. Cades. The desert of Pharan, or of Cades, is the same. H.—The 27 And came to Moses and Aaron, and to all the assembly of the children of Israel, to the desert of Pharan, which is in Cades. And speaking to them and to all the multitude, they showed them the fruits of the land:

28 And they related, and said: We came into the land to which thou sentest us, which in very deed floweth with milk and honey, as may be known by these fruits:

29 But it hath very strong inhabitants, and the cities are great and walled. We saw there the race of Enac.

30 Amalec dwelleth in the south; the Hethite, and the Jebusite, and the Amorrhite in the mountains: but the Chanaanite abideth by the sea and near the streams of the Jordan.

31 In the mean time Caleb, to still the murmuring of the people that rose against Moses, said: Let us go up and possess the land, for we shall be able to conquer it.

32 But the others, that had been with him, said: No, we are not able to go up to this people, because they are stronger than we.

33 And they spoke ill of the land, which they had viewed, before the children of Israel, saying: The land, which we have viewed, devoureth its inhabitants: the people, that we beheld, are of a tall stature.

34 There we saw certain monsters of the sons of Enac, of the giant-kind: in comparison of whom, we seemed like locusts.

CHAP. XIV.

The people murmur. God threateneth to destroy them. He is appeased by Moses, yet so as to exclude the murmurers from entering the promised land. The authors of the sedition are struck dead. The rest going to fight against the will of God are beaten.

THEREFORE the whole multitude crying, wept that night,

2 And all the children of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron, saying:

town is sometimes called Cades-barne, or Recem, (Chald.) which is Petra, the capital of the stony Arabia, and lies rather nearer to the Dead Sea than to the Mediterranean. It was on the high road from the Red Sea to Hebron. In one part of the desert of Cades, the people murmured for want of water. Chap. xx. 1. But there was plenty near the city. Moses continued here a long time after the return of the spies. Deut. i. 19, 46. C.

VER. 30. South. They had already routed the Amalecites; but the spies insidiously recall to their remembrance that they would be again in arms to obstruct their passage.—Hethites, dwelt nearest the Philistines, in the country which fell to the shares of Simeon and of Dan. The Jebusites occupied Jerusalem; and the Amorrhites, the most powerful of all those nations, held possession of most of the territory which was allotted to Juda. Nearer the Dead Sea, on the same mountains, dwelt the Cinezeans and the Cineans. Bonfrere places the Chanannites on the banks of the Jordan, from the lake of Sodom as far as the sea of Tiberias. But they dwelt also near the Mediterranean; and the Phœnicians maintained themselves at Tyre and Sidon, against the most powerful kings of the Jews, and extended their commerce over the old world, to many parts of which they sent out colonies. C.

VER. 33. Spoke ill, &c. These men, who, by their misrepresentations of the land of promise, discouraged the Israelites from attempting the conquest of it, were a figure of worldlings, who, by decrying or misrepresenting true devotion, discourage Christians from seeking in earnest and acquiring so great a good, and thereby securing to themselves a happy eternity. Ch.—Devoureth, by being exposed to continual wars from the Arabs, Idumæans, and from its own inhabitants, the monsters of the race of Enac. With this God had threatened the Hebrews, if they proved rebellious. Lev. xxvi. 38. See Ezec. xxxvi. 13. C.

VER. 34. Monsters. Heb. "giants."—Locusts, or grasshoppers. So much inferior in size were we to them. H.—Their suggestions tended to make them distrust the goodness or the power of God; and therefore he would not suffer them to enjoy the sweets of the land. Chap. xiv. 23, 29. W. See Deut. i. 28; Isa. xl. 21.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 3. We may. The Latin MSS. and Bibles before Sixtus V. read "in Egypt, and not in this," &c. But the present translation agrees Lord may not bring us into this land, lest we fall by the sword, and our wives and children be led away captives. Is it not better to return into Egypt?

4 And they said one to another: Let us appoint a captain, and let us return into Egypt.

5 And when Moses and Aaron heard this, they fell down flat upon the ground before the multitude of the children of Israel.

6 But Josue the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephone, who themselves also had viewed the land, rent their garments,

7 And said to all the multitude of the children of Israel: The land, which we have gone round, is very good:

8 If the Lord be favourable, he will bring us into it, and give us a land flowing with milk and honey.

9 Be not rebellious against the Lord: and fear ye not the people of this land, for we are able to eat them up as bread. All aid is gone from them: the Lord is with us, fear ye not.

10 And when all the multitude cried out, and would have stoned them, the glory of the Lord appeared over the tabernacle of the covenant to all the children of Israel.

11 And the Lord said to Moses: How long will this people detract me? how long will they not believe me for all the signs that I have wrought before them?

12 I will strike them therefore with pestilence, and will consume them: but thee I will make a ruler over a great nation, and a mightier than this is.

13 And Moses said to the Lord: That the Egyptians, from the midst of whom thou hast brought forth this people.

14 And the inhabitants of this land, (who have heard that thou, O Lord, art among this people, and art seen face to face, and thy cloud protecteth them, and thou goest before them in a pillar of a cloud by day, and in a pillar of fire by night,)

15 May hear that thou hast killed so great a multitude, as it were one man, and may say:

16 He could not bring the people into the land for which he had sworn, therefore did he kill them in the wilderness.

17 Let then the strength of the Lord be magnified, as thou hast sworn, saying:

18 "The Lord is patient and full of mercy, taking away iniquity and wickedness, and leaving no man clear, who visiteth the sins of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation.

19 Forgive, I beseech thee, the sins of this people, according to the greatness of thy mercy, as thou hast been merciful to them from their going out of Egypt unto this place.

20 And the Lord said: I have forgiven according to thy word, 21 As I live: and the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord.

22 But yet all the men that have seen my majesty, and the signs that I have done in Egypt, and in the wilderness, and have tempted me now ten times, and have not obeyed my voice, 23 Shall not see the land for which I swore to their fathers, neither shall any one of them that hath detracted me, behold it.

24 My servant Caleb, who being full of another spirit hath followed me, I will bring into this land, which he hath gone round: and his seed shall possess it.

25 For the Amalecite and the Chanaanite dwell in the valleys. To-morrow remove the camp, and return into the wilderness by the way of the Red Sea.

26 And the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying:

27 How long doth this wicked multitude murmur against me? I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel.

28 Say therefore to them: As I live, saith the Lord: According as you have spoken in my hearing, so will I do to you.

29 In the wilderness shall your carcasses lie. All you that were numbered from twenty years old and upward, and have murmured against me,

30 Shall not enter into the land, over which I lifted

VER. 9. To eat, or consume them, as easily as we devour a piece of bread. The expression is proverbial. Psal. xli. 4.—All aid. Heb. "their shadow," which is taken in the same sense. Sept. "their time or opportunity is gone."

VER. 13. That the. The sentence is left imperfect, to signify the agitation and distress with which Moses was oppressed, as if he had said, Thou wilt thus afford a pretext, that the Egyptians and Chanaanites may say to one another, that thou couldst not perform what thou hadst promised; and therefore, that in vexation thou hadst destroyed thy people. II.—Heb. "Then the Egyptians shall hear it . . . and will tell it to the inhabitants of this land . . . because the Lord could not," &c. ver. 16. C.—Thus they will blaspheme thy holy name. M.

VER. 16. Swore. God swore to give this land to the Hebrews, but not to this particular generation. His oath would be equally fulfilled by raising posterity to Moses, ver. 13. But, at his entreaty, he spared the descendants of this people, and gave the land to their children under Josue. II.

VER. 17. Lord, in overcoming all difficulties, raised either by the enemy, or by thy rebellious people.

VER. 18. Mercy. Sept. "merciful and true," as Exod. xxxiv. 6, 7. On that occasion, it is not written that God swore. II.—But equal credit is to be given to his word, as to an oath. M.—Clear, or, as S. Jerom expresses it in Exodus, and no man of himself is innocent before thee. C.—By these titles God will be addressed; and therefore Moses mentions them all, though some of them might seem to obstruct his petition of pardon. M.

VER. 21. Lord. I will surely punish the guilty; and all the earth shall know that their own crimes, and not my inbecility, prevented their taking possession of Chanaan. My glory shall shine both in my long-suffering, and in the effects of my justice.

VER. 22. The men, above twenty years of age, ver. 29.—Majesty, manifested by the signs, &c. II.—Ten times; very often. It is not necessary to specify the number of the rebellions, as some have done, placing the first on the other side of the Red Sea, (Exod. xiv. 11,) and the tenth here. The expression is often used to express a great but indefinite number. Eccles. vii. 20. C.

VER. 23. It. None of those who murmured ever entered the land of promise. Origen (hom. 27) believes that the Levites behaved with fidelity, and were not comprised in the punishment. In effect, Eleazar certainly entered Chanaan. Jos. xiv. 1. Salmon also, who espoused Rahab, had seen the wonders of God, but had not joined with the rest; so that, when it is said (ver. 2) that all murmured, we must explain it by S. Jerom's rule, of the greatest part; as, no doubt, many would abhor the conduct of the seditious. C.

VER. 25. For. Heb. "Now," &c. The enemy is ready to attack you in the defiles, and I will not expose you at present to their fury, as you shall not enter the land for many years. 31 But your children, of whom you said, that they should be a prey to the enemies, will I bring in: that they may see the land, which you have despised.

32 Your carcasses shall lie in the wilderness.

33 Your children shall wander in the desert forty years, and shall bear your fornication, until the carcasses of their fathers be consumed in the desert,

34 According to the number of the forty days, wherein you viewed the land: ^aa year shall be counted for a day.

^bAnd forty years you shall receive your iniquities, and shall know my revenge:

35 For as I have spoken, so will I do to all this wicked multitude, that hath risen up together against me: in this wilderness shall it faint away and die.

36 ^cTherefore all the men, whom Moses had sent to view the land, and who at their return had made the whole multitude to murmur against him, speaking ill of the land that it was naught, 37 Died and were struck in the sight of the Lord.

38 But Josue the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephone lived, of all them that had gone to view the land.

39 And Moses spoke all these words to all the children of Israel, and the people mourned exceedingly.

40 And behold, rising up very early in the morning, they went up to the top of the mountain, and said: We are ready to go up to the place, of which the Lord hath spoken: for we have sinned.

41 And Moses said to them. Why transgress you the word of the Lord, which shall not succeed prosperously with you?

42 ^dGo not up, for the Lord is not with you: lest you fall before your enemies.

43 The Amalecite and the Chanaanite are before you, and by their sword you shall fall, because you would not consent to the Lord, neither will the Lord be with you.

44 But they being blinded went up to the top of the mountain. But the ark of the testament of the Lord, and Moses, departed not from the camp.

45 And the Amalecite came down, and the Chanaanite, that dwelt in the mountain: and smiting and slaying them, pursued them as far as Horma.

Certain laws concerning sacrifices. Sabbath-breaking is punished with death. The law of fringes on their garments.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

2 Speak to the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them: When you shall be come into the land of your habitation, which I will give you,

3 And shall make an offering to the Lord for a holocaust, or a victim, paying your vows, or voluntarily offering gifts, or in your solemnities burning a sweet savour unto the Lord, of oxen or of sheep:

4 Whosoever immolateth the victim, shall offer a sacrifice of fine flour, the tenth part of an ephi, tempered with the fourth part of a hin of oil:

5 And he shall give the same measure of wine to pour out in libations for the holocaust, or for the victim. For every lamb,

6 And for every ram there shall be a sacrifice of flour of two tenths, which shall be tempered with the third part of a hin of oil:

7 And he shall offer the third part of the same measure of wine for the libation, for a sweet savour to the Lord.

8 But when thou offerest a holocaust or sacrifice of oxen, to fulfil thy vow, or for victims of peace-offerings,

9 Thou shalt give for every ox three tenths of flour tempered with half a hin of oil,

10 And wine for libations of the same measure, for an offering of most sweet savour to the Lord.

11 Thus shalt thou do,

12 For every ox, and ram, and lamb, and kid,

13 Both they that are born in the land, and the strangers

14 Shall offer sacrifices after the same rite.

15 There shall be all one law and judgment, both for you, and for them who are strangers in the land.

16 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

17 Speak to the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them:

18 When you are come into the land, which I will give you,

19 And shall eat of the bread of that country, you shall separate first-fruits to the Lord,

20 Of the things you eat. As you separate first-fruits of your barn-floors:

21 So also shall you give first-fruits of your dough to the Lord.

VER. 3. Victim "of peace," as some Latin copies read, including all the different sorts, ver. 28. C.

VER. 4. Ephi. Heb. "a tenth of flour," or one gomer. D.

VER. 11—15. Christ, represented by the oil, offers himself the victim, under the form of bread and wine. D.

VER. 20. Eat. Heb. and Sept. "of your dough." They elevated a part towards heaven, and gave it to the priest or Levite, who lived nearest them; and, in case none could be found, as at the present day, they were to burn it in honour of God.

22 And if through ignorance you omit any of these things, which the Lord hath spoken to Moses,

23 And by him hath commanded you, from the day that he began to command and thence forward,

24 And the multitude have forgotten to do it: they shall offer a calf out of the herd, a holocaust for a most sweet savour to the Lord, and the sacrifice and libations thereof, as the ceremonies require, and a buck-goat for sin:

25 And the priest shall pray for all the multitude of the children of Israel: and it shall be forgiven them, because they sinned ignorantly; offering, notwithstanding, a burnt-offering to the Lord, for themselves and for their sin and their ignorance:

26 And it shall be forgiven all the people of the children of Israel, and the strangers that sojourn among them: because it is the fault of all the people through ignorance.

27 But if one soul shall sin ignorantly, he shall offer a she-goat of a year old for his sin:

28 And the priest shall pray for him, because he sinned ignorantly before the Lord: and he shall obtain his pardon, and it shall be forgiven him.

29 The same law shall be for all that sin by ignorance, whether they be natives or strangers.

30 But the soul that committeth any thing through pride, whether he be born in the land, or a stranger, (because he hath been rebellious against the Lord,) shall be cut off from among his people:

31 For he hath contemned the word of the Lord, and made void his precept: therefore shall he be destroyed, and shall bear his iniquity.

32 And it came to pass, when the children of Israel were in the wilderness, and had found a man gathering sticks on the sabbath day,

* Deut. xxii. 12; Matt. xxiii. 5.

VER. 22. Ignorance. Other victims are prescribed (Lev. iv. 13); so that the ignorance here mentioned must be of a different nature. The former was perhaps a sin of commission, and this a sin of omission; such as if the whole people should neglect to eat the paschal lamb. Outram believes, that the Book of Leviticus speaks of those who transgress the negative precepts, without abandoning the true religion; but the present law alludes to those who forget the laws of their fathers, and embrace a false worship. Thus Ezechias offered the victims here prescribed, though more in number, to expiate the idolatry of the people under Achaz, 1 Par. xxix. 21. See also 1 Esdr. viii. 35. Some think Moses has supplied in this place what was left deficient before. But it is more probable, that he supposes here only some of the tribes have sinned ignorantly, while in Leviticus he speaks of the whole nation. C.—No one sins for the sake of the offence, but for some advantage which we falsely persuade ourselves we shall derive from doing so. S. Aug. q. 24.

VER. 25. And for. Heb. "and their sin (offering) in the presence of the Lord, for their ignorance." C.

VER. 30. Pride. Heb. and Sept. "with hand, or with head (Chald.) uplifted," without shame or control.—Rebellious. Heb. "he hath blasphemed, or irritated the Lord." Such crimes imply a contempt of the law.—Cut off by God, if the judges neglect to do it. The Hebrews maintain that each individual has a right to kill such scandalous offenders, as Phineas did Zambri. Chap. xxv. 7; 1 Mac. ii. 23. It is not clear whether all strangers, living in the country, were subjected to this law. Seld. Jur. ii. 11. Though such crimes were not pardoned by the law, true repentance will free us from them. S. Aug. q. 25. W.

VER. 32. Wilderness of Pharan, if this crime were committed soon after the murmuring of the people, or in some other part of the desert. This example tends to show the severity and extent of the former precept. The law had condemned the breaker of the sabbath to be put to death. But Moses consulted the Lord, to know in what manner; or perhaps there were some circumstances attending the offender, which extenuated or enhanced his crime. Some of the Rabbins have unjustly aspersed the character of Salphaad, as if he were the person, because it is said that he died in the desert in his own sin. Chap. xxvii. 3. C.

VER. 33. Fringes. The Pharisees enlarged these fringes through hypocrisy, (Matt. xxiii. 5,) to appear more zealous than other men for the law of God. Ch.—Our Saviour conformed to this law, Luke viii. 44. Moses shows that these fringes were to be made for the cloak, which was square, and not for the tunic. Deut. xxii. 12. The colour, in S. Justin's time, was purple. Dial. C.

35 And the Lord said to Moses: Let that man die, let all the multitude stone him without the camp.

36 And when they had brought him out, they stoned him, and he died as the Lord had commanded.

37 The Lord also said to Moses:

38 Speak to the children of Israel, and thou shalt tell them, "to make to themselves fringes in the corners of their garments, putting in them ribands of blue:

39 That when they shall see them, they may remember all the commandments of the Lord, and not follow their own thoughts and eyes going astray after divers things,

AND behold Core, the son of Isaar, the son of Caath, the son of Levi, and Dathan and Abiron, the sons of Eliab, and Hon, the son of Pheleth, of the children of Ruben, son was the cousin of Moses.—Core engaged the rest in his revolt. Heb. "took or replied," interrupting Moses at the very time when he was speaking, in the name of God, and requiring that he should show by what right he arrogated to himself alone that authority. "Core separated himself." Chal. "He retired," Syr. "Core spoke . . . and Dathan . . . and they rose up." Sept. It is not known when this revolt happened. Some place it at the camp of Sinai; others at that of Jethabata. Deut. x. 8.

2 Rose up against Moses, and with them two hundred and fifty others of the children of Israel, leading men of the synagogue, and who in the time of assembly were called by name.

VER. 2. Rose up. The crime of these men, which was punished in so remarkable a manner, was that of schism, and of rebellion against the authority established by God in the Church; and their pretending to the priesthood without being lawfully called and sent: the same is the case of all modern sectaries. Ch.—Let them dread a similar punishment; not only the authors of such wicked pretensions, but those also who consent to them. Rom. i. 32. For we find that Core and all his adherents were buried in hell (ver. 33); and those likewise who complained that their punishment was too severe, fell victims to the raging fire, ver. 49. With what earnestness ought we not, therefore, to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints! Jude 3. For if those be so severely punished who rise up in opposition to lawful superiors, either in church or state, what swift destruction do they not bring upon their own heads who deny God, who bought them, and make him a liar, by calling in question his most sacred truths? 2 Pet. ii. 1. H.—Core and his companions impugned not the law directly, but resisted Moses and Aaron. S. Ignat. ep. ad Magnes. They believed in the same God; yet, because they took upon themselves to sacrifice, they were forthwith punished by God, and their unlawful sacrifices could do them no service. S. Cyp. ep. i. 6. Thus we are warned to keep in the true Church, and to obey those who are set over us; and never, for any temporal consideration whatever, to encourage, by our presence, the sermons or meetings of heretics, or of schismatics, lest we perish with them, ver. 26. W.

VER. 3. Let it be enough. Heb. rob, "too much you take upon you;" or "suffice it for you." Sept.—Holy ones, as deserving of the priesthood as yourselves, ver. 10. Why then would you treat them as your inferiors? We will throw off the yoke, and assert our just rights. C.—On the same plea, Luther (de Abrog. Missa) rejects all ecclesiastical hierarchy, and will have no distinct priesthood, because all Christians are called priests (Apoc. i.) and a holy priesthood, 1 Pet. ii. 5. W.—But they do not take notice that the apostle immediately explains himself, by saying, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, and to declare the virtues of Christ; in which sense they are also styled a kingly priesthood. Ib. ver. 9. H.

4 When Moses heard this, he fell flat on his face :

5 And speaking to Core, and all the multitude, he said : In the morning the Lord will make known who belong to him, and the holy he will join to himself : and whom he shall choose, they shall approach to him.

6 Do this therefore : Take every man of you your censers, thou Core, and all thy company,

7 And putting fire in them to-morrow, put incense upon it before the Lord : and whomsoever he shall choose, the same shall be holy : you take too much upon you, ye sons of Levi.

8 And he said again to Core : Hear, ye sons of Levi :

9 Is it a small thing unto you, that the God of Israel hath separated you from all the people, and joined you to himself, that you should serve him in the service of the tabernacle, and should stand before the congregation of the people, and should minister to him ?

10 Did he therefore make thee, and all thy brethren, the sons of Levi, to approach unto him, that you should challenge to yourselves the priesthood also,

11 And that all thy company should stand against the Lord ? for what is Aaron that you murmur against him ?

12 Then Moses sent to call Dathan and Abiron the sons of Eliab. But they answered : We will not come.

13 Is it a small matter to thee, that thou hast brought us out of a land that flowed with milk and honey, to kill us in the desert, except thou rule also like a lord over us ?

14 Thou hast brought us indeed into a land, that floweth with rivers of milk and honey, and hast given us possessions of fields and vineyards ; wilt thou also pull out our eyes ? We will not come.

15 Moses therefore being very angry, said to the Lord : Respect not their sacrifices : thou knowest that I have not taken of them so much as a young ass at any time, nor have injured any of them.

16 And he said to Core : Do thou and thy congregation stand apart before the Lord to-morrow, and Aaron apart.

17 Take every one of you censers, and put incense upon them, offering to the Lord two hundred and fifty censers : let Aaron also hold his censer.

* Deut. xi. 6 :

VER. 5. The holy ones, whom he has chosen for the high priesthood. The psalmist, speaking of this sedition, says, they provoked . . . Aaron, the holy one of the Lord. Psal. cv. 16. C. See 1 Tim. ii. 19.—Only those who are chosen by God, can lawfully perform this sacred office, as the Almighty declares by a miracle. 11.

VER. 6. Censers. It was not lawful for the Levites to offer incense : but they had prepared for themselves the ensigns of the priestly power, and Moses permits them to try their success. H.

VER. 7. Lord, in his sanctuary, where the priests alone offered incense twice a day upon the altar. C.—Too much. Moses retorts upon them their own words, ver. 3.

VER. 9. To him : Heb. and Sept. “to them,” or instead of the people. God had chosen them for that post of honour, to the exclusion of all the rest, so that they ought, the least of all, to have complained. But it often happens, that those who are the most exalted, take occasion to esteem themselves deserving of still higher honours ; and thus, like Lucifer, fall into the bottomless pit ! H.

VER. 14. Eyes. These princes of Ruben were not desirous of the priesthood, as Core was ; they repined, that Moses had got possession of the sovereign authority, and therefore they endeavoured to represent him as an impostor, who had promised great things, but in reality had deprived the people of all the happiness which they formerly enjoyed in Egypt, and was now disposed to exercise his tyranny upon their very persons. H.—“Do you wish that we should not see through your impostures ?” Heb. “wilt thou put out the eyes of these men,” who have informed us what sort of a country Chanaan is ? Sept. “thou hast blinded these men,” who are so stupid as to obey thee. C.—Chaldee, “though thou pull out our eyes, we will not come.”

18 When they had done this, Moses and Aaron standing,

19 And had drawn up all the multitude against them to the door of the tabernacle, the glory of the Lord appeared to them all.

20 And the Lord speaking to Moses and Aaron, said :

21 Separate yourselves from among this congregation, that I may presently destroy them.

22 They fell flat on their face, and said : O most mighty, the God of the spirits of all flesh, for one man's sin, shall thy wrath rage against all ?

23 And the Lord said to Moses :

24 Command the whole people to separate themselves from the tents of Core and Dathan and Abiron.

25 And Moses arose, and went to Dathan and Abiron : and the ancients of Israel following him, 26 He said to the multitude : Depart from the tents of these wicked men, and touch nothing of theirs, lest you be involved in their sins.

27 And when they were departed from their tents round about, Dathan and Abiron coming out, stood in the entry of their pavilions, with their wives and children, and all the people.

28 And Moses said : By this you shall know that the Lord hath sent me to do all things that you see, and that I have not forged them of my own head :

29 If these men die the common death of men, and if they be visited with a plague, wherewith others also are wont to be visited, the Lord did not send me :

30 But if the Lord do a new thing, and the earth opening her mouth swallow them down, and all things that belong to them, and they go down alive into hell, you shall know that they have blasphemed the Lord.

31 “And immediately as he had made an end of speaking, the earth broke asunder under their feet :

32 And opening her mouth, devoured them with their tents, and all their substance.

33 And they went down alive into hell, the ground closing upon them, and they perished from among the people.

Psal. cv. 17, and 18.

VER. 15. Very angry. This anger was a zeal against sin ; and an indignation at the affront offered to God ; like that which the same holy prophet conceived upon the sight of the golden calf, Exod. xxxii. 19. Ch.—Respect not. Heb. “thou wilt not have regard for their sacrifices,” as long as they continue in these sentiments of pride and of rebellion. 11.—Thou knowest. Heb. “I have not,” &c.—Ass. This expression is proverbial, 1 Kings xii. 3. The Samar. and Sept. read, emud, “any thing desirable,” instead of emur, “an ass.” C.

VER. 26. Depart. If we give any encouragement to schismatics, or go to their meetings, we must expect to be involved in their sins. S. Cyp. de Lapsis 5. W.

VER. 27. People (frequentia). The Sept. generally translate topom by aposhene, “family and effects,” of every denomination. C.—Here was a full assembly waiting for the event, between fear and hope. As these rebels would not come, when Moses sent for them, he condescended to go to them, and denounced the impending ruin, ver. 14, 25. W.

VER. 30. Hell. See Psal. liv. 16 ; Prov. i. 12. “They were consigned to the tomb before they were dead,” (S. Optatus, B. i.,) while their impenitent souls were buried in hell. The souls of their infant children, which had no share in their rebellion, might be exempted from the latter part of their punishment. C.—“They descend into hell alive ; that is, feeling their own perdition, who, imitating Core, separate from the Church, and presently fall into heresy.” S. Aug. ep. 93.

VER. 32. Tents. Heb. adds, “all those who belonged to (or sided with) Core, and all their riches.” Moses informs us, (chap. xxvi. 10,) how some of Core's children were miraculously preserved. Their descendants were appointed by David to sing and to guard the doors of the temple, 1 Par. ix. 19. C.—Samuel was of the same family. 1 Par. vi. 33. T.

34 But all Israel, that was standing round about, fled at the cry of them that were perishing, saying: Lest perhaps the earth swallow us up also.

35 And a fire coming out from the Lord, destroyed the two hundred and fifty men that offered the incense.

36 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

37 Command Eleazar, the son of Aaron, the priest, to take up the censers that lie in the burning, and to scatter the fire of one side and the other: because they are sanctified

38 In the deaths of the sinners: and let him beat them into plates, and fasten them to the altar, because incense hath been offered in them to the Lord, and they are sanctified, that the children of Israel may see them for a sign and a memorial.

39 Then Eleazar the priest took the brazen censers, wherein they had offered, whom the burning fire had devoured, and beat them into plates, fastening them to the altar:

40 That the children of Israel might have for the time to come wherewith they should be admonished, that no stranger, or any one that is not of the seed of Aaron, should come near to offer incense to the Lord, lest he should suffer as Core suffered, and all his congregation, according as the Lord spoke to Moses.

41 The following day all the multitude of the children of Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron, saying: You have killed the people of the Lord.

42 And when there arose a sedition, and the tumult increased, 43 Moses and Aaron fled to the tabernacle of the covenant. And when they were gone into it, the cloud covered it, and the glory of the Lord appeared.

44 And the Lord said to Moses:

45 Get you out from the midst of this multitude, this moment will I destroy them. And as they were lying on the ground, 46 Moses said to Aaron: Take the censer, and putting fire in it from the altar, put incense upon it, and go quickly to the people to pray for them: for already wrath is gone out from the Lord, and the plague rageth.

VER. 35. Incense. Core had left them, and was busy in stirring up the people to rebellion, when a fire proceeding from the cloud, or from the altar, or perhaps a thunderbolt, (C.) came to arraign them before God's tribunal, there to meet their chief, and to hear the eternal sentence of separation from all good, which was instantly pronounced upon all who died impenitent. H.

VER. 38. Sinners. These censers were sanctified or set apart for God's altar: 1. By the intention of those who used them, though contrary to his will; 2. by the exemplary vengeance which he exercised upon the rash pretenders to the priesthood; 3. by being a monument of their folly, and therefore placed, by God's order, upon the altar, to deter all others from imitating their conduct. Eleazar was commanded to take them up, and scatter the strange fire; that Aaron might not be defiled with touching the carcases or ashes of the deceased, nor seem to exult in their death. C.—God was thus also pleased to manifest that the children of Aaron, and not of the other Levites, should succeed him. S. Aug. q. 30. W.

VER. 39. Altar of holocausts, which was already covered with plates of brass. C.

VER. 40. Stranger, though he be even of royal dignity. Thus Osias was afflicted with a perpetual leprosy, which rendered him incapable of exercising even the office of king, because he had attempted to offer incense, 2 Kings xv. 5; 2 Par. xxvi. 17. H.

VER. 40. Core. We cannot reckon less than 15,000, who perished in consequence of their adherence to this innovator. Behold the first-fruits of ambition and of rebellion. II.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 2. Speak. The cause of the different families of the Levites being now fully decided, that none of the other tribes might pretend to the honour of the priesthood, God orders Moses to propose another miracle to 47 When Aaron had done this, and had run to the midst of the multitude, which the burning fire was now destroying, he offered the incense:

48 And standing between the dead and the living, he prayed for the people, and the plague ceased.

49 And the number of them that were slain, was fourteen thousand and seven hundred men, besides them that had perished in the sedition of Core.

50 And Aaron returned to Moses to the door of the tabernacle of the covenant, after the destruction was over.

CHAP. XVII.

The priesthood is confirmed to Aaron by the miracle of the blooming of his rod, which is kept for a monument in the tabernacle.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

2 Speak to the children of Israel, and take of every one of them a rod by their kindreds, of all the princes of the tribes, twelve rods, and write the name of every man upon his rod.

3 And the name of Aaron shall be for the tribe of Levi, and one rod shall contain all their families:

4 And thou shalt lay them up in the tabernacle of the covenant before the testimony, where I will speak to thee.

5 Whomsoever of these I shall choose, his rod shall blossom: and I will make to cease from me the murmurings of the children of Israel, wherewith they murmur against you.

6 And Moses spoke to the children of Israel: and all the princes gave him rods one for every tribe: and there were twelve rods besides the rod of Aaron.

7 And when Moses had laid them up before the Lord in the tabernacle of the testimony:

8 He returned on the following day, and found that the rod of Aaron for the house of Levi, was budded: and that the buds swelling, it had bloomed blossoms, which spreading the leaves, were formed into almonds.

9 Moses therefore brought out all the rods from before the Lord to all the children of Israel: and they saw, and every one received their rods.

10 And the Lord said to Moses: Carry back the rod them, of a less terrible nature than the preceding one.—Man, or prince of the tribe. H.—The name of Aaron was written upon his staff, which was taken from an almond tree; those of the princes of the other tribes appeared upon their respective rods, and represented their different families, ver. 3. C.

VER. 6. Besides, &c. Heb. and the other versions, "the rod of Aaron was in the midst of their rods." Whence some infer, that there were only twelve rods. But Origen, (hom. 9,) and most others, allow thirteen, as the tribe of Joseph was divided into those of Ephraim and Manasses; (C.) each of whom had a proper representative or prince. See chap. ii. 18, 20; x. 22; xiii. 9, 12. The tribe of Levi is generally placed by itself. If there were only twelve rods, whether would the name of Elisama, or that of Gamaliel, designate the tribe of Joseph? Who was properly the prince of that undivided tribe? H.

VER. 8. The rod of Aaron for the house of Levi, was budded, &c. This rod of Aaron, which thus miraculously brought forth fruit, was a figure of the blessed Virgin conceiving and bringing forth her Son, without any prejudice to her virginity. Ch.—Almonds. Buds, blossoms, leaves, and fruit just formed, (Isa. xviii. 5,) appeared upon the rod, which before was dry. Tostat believes that it continued in the same state during the whole time that it was preserved in the ark. "The grace of the priesthood never fades." S. Amb. ep. 63, or 58. The almond tree is the first which blossoms, and therefore it is styled a watching rod. Jer. i. 11. The Fathers observe in this of Aaron a figure of Christ's passion and glorious resurrection; and Origen (hom. 9) remarks, that from his cross proceed the sweet odours of virtue, and the fruits of converted nations. C.—For Christ made peace through the blood of his cross. Colos. i. 20. The blessed Virgin, whom the blooming rod also represents, might as easily become a mother without losing her virginal integrity, as this dry rod might produce fruit, without receiving any moisture from the earth. S. Aug., S. Greg. Nys., S. Bern., &c. W.

of Aaron into the tabernacle of the testimony, "that it may be kept there for a token of the rebellious children of Israel, and that their complaints may cease from me, lest they die.

11 And Moses did as the Lord had commanded.

12 And the children of Israel said to Moses: Behold we are consumed, we all perish.

13 Whosoever approacheth to the tabernacle of the Lord, he dieth. Are we all to a man to be utterly destroyed?

CHAP. XVIII.

The charge of the priests, and of the Levites, and their portion.

AND the Lord said to Aaron: Thou, and thy sons, and thy father's house with thee, shall bear the iniquity of the sanctuary: and thou and thy sons with thee shall bear the sins of your priesthood.

2 And take with thee thy brethren also of the tribe of Levi, and the sceptre of thy father, and let them be ready at hand, and minister to thee: but thou and thy sons shall minister in the tabernacle of the testimony.

3 And the Levites shall watch to do thy commands, and about all the works of the tabernacle: only they shall not come nigh the vessels of the sanctuary nor the altar, lest both they die, and you also perish with them.

4 But let them be with thee, and watch in the charge of the tabernacle, and in all the ceremonies thereof. A stranger shall not join himself with you.

5 Watch ye in the charge of the sanctuary, and in the ministry of the altar: lest indignation rise upon the children of Israel.

6 I have given you your brethren the Levites from among the children of Israel, and have delivered them for a gift to the Lord, to serve in the ministries of the tabernacle.

7 But thou and thy sons look ye to the priesthood: and all things that pertain to the service of the altar, and that are within the veil, shall be executed by the priests. If any stranger shall approach, he shall be slain.

8 And the Lord said to Aaron: Behold I have given thee the charge of my first-fruits. All things that are sanctified by the children of Israel, I have delivered to thee, and to thy sons for the priestly office, by everlasting ordinances.

• Heb. ix. 4.—Exod. xxx. 13;

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 1. Priesthood. If you transgress, or if you neglect to instruct and watch over those who are employed about the sanctuary, you shall be responsible for it. C.

VER. 2. Sceptre. Heb. ssobot, denotes also "tribe, family," &c. C.—All the other children of Aaron's father were to be in the order of the Levites, among whom even Moses left his own family, though he was himself an extraordinary priest. H.

VER. 7. Priests. Heb. "you shall serve in the ministry of priests which I have given you." The office was not due to them on account of any superior merit. H.

VER. 8. Charge, as stewards or dispensers (C.) of what is offered to me; part of which I abandon to your use, as long as your republic shall subsist. M.

VER. 9. And are. Heb. "This shall be thine, of the most holy things, from the fire." Some parts of the victims for sin and of the libations were to be consumed, while the rest was given to the priests. These libations were not properly styled holy of holies, (which were to be eaten only in the holy place, by those who were in actual service,) no more than the peace-offerings were, of which even women might partake, ver. 11, 12; Lev. x. 14.

VER. 11. House, perpetually. Hired servants were not admitted to eat of them. Lev. xxii. 10. C.

VER. 13. First-ripe (intia). "The beginnings" (H.) of the fruit of trees, in the fourth year. Lev. xix. 24. It may also comprise all the fruits of the earth.

9 These therefore shalt thou take of the things that are sanctified, and are offered to the Lord. Every offering, and sacrifice, and whatsoever is rendered to me for sin and for trespass, and cometh holy of holies, shall be for thee, and thy sons.

10 Thou shalt eat it in the sanctuary: the males only shall eat thereof, because it is a consecrated thing.

11 But the first-fruits, which the children of Israel shall vow and offer, I have given to thee, and to thy sons, and to thy daughters, by a perpetual law. He that is clean in thy house, shall eat them.

12 All the best of the oil, and of the wine, and of the corn, whatsoever first-fruits they offer to the Lord, I have given them to thee.

13 All the first-ripe of the fruits, that the ground bringeth forth, and which are brought to the Lord, shall be for thy use: he that is clean in thy house, shall eat them.

14 Every thing that the children of Israel shall give by vow, shall be thine.

15 Whatsoever is first-born of all flesh, which they offer to the Lord, whether it be of men, or of beasts, shall belong to thee: only for the first-born of man thou shalt take a price, and every beast that is unclean, thou shalt cause to be redeemed;

16 And the redemption of it shall be after one month, for five sicles of silver, by the weight of the sanctuary. ^bA sicle hath twenty obols.

17 But the firstling of a cow, and of a sheep, and of a goat, thou shalt not cause to be redeemed, because they are sanctified to the Lord. Their blood only thou shalt pour upon the altar, and their fat thou shalt burn for a most sweet odour to the Lord.

18 But the flesh shall fall to thy use, as the consecrated breast, and the right shoulder, shall be thine.

19 All the first-fruits of the sanctuary, which the children of Israel offer to the Lord, I have given to thee, and to thy sons and daughters, by a perpetual ordinance. It is a covenant of salt for ever before the Lord, to thee and to thy sons.

20 And the Lord said to Aaron: You shall possess nothing in their land, neither shall you have a portion among them: I am thy portion and inheritance in the midst of the children of Israel.

Lev. xxvii. 25; Supra, iii. 47; Eze. xiv. 12.

C.—First-fruits must be distinguished from tithes, which were only the tenth part. The former were offered immediately to the Lord, but the latter to the priests, &c., for their support. Besides the first-fruits of ears of corn at the Passover, and of bread at Pentecost, and at every weekly baking, first-fruits were to be given in the 7th month of the harvest and of the vintage, according to each person's generosity, provided he gave between the 40th and the 60th part of his revenue; and these last are commonly the first-fruits meant in Scripture.—Lord, in sacrifice. If they were given to the priest, the unclean might partake of them. M.

VER. 16. Of it; the first-born of man. The child might be redeemed sooner, and sometimes they waited till after the purification of the mother, or 40 days, as our blessed Lady did. Luke ii. 22. C.—Five sicles of silver, or about 11.6 Eng. were then to be paid, unless poverty obliged them to give only two turtles or pigeons. H.—Beasts might be redeemed after they were eight days old. Exod. xiii. 12.

VER. 19. A covenant of salt. It is a proverbial expression, signifying a covenant not to be altered or corrupted; as salt is used to keep things from corruption; a covenant perpetual, like that by which it was appointed that salt should be used in every sacrifice. Lev. ii. 3. Ch.—Thus God gave the kingdom to David for ever, by a covenant of salt, 2 Par. xiii. 5. Salt is an emblem of eternity. Oleaster believes that salt was used in the ratification of all solemn covenants, to denote their stability. C.

VER. 20. Nothing. No portion of land, like the other tribes; but only some 21 And I have given to the sons of Levi all the tithes of Israel for a possession, for the ministry wherewith they serve me in the tabernacle of the covenant :

22 That the children of Israel may not approach any more to the tabernacle, nor commit deadly sin,

23 But only the sons of Levi may serve me in the tabernacle, and bear the sins of the people. It shall be an everlasting ordinance in your generations. *They shall not possess any other thing, 24 But be content with the oblation, or tithes, which I have separated for their uses and necessities.

25 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying :

26 Command the Levites, and declare unto them : When you shall receive of the children of Israel the tithes, which I have given you, offer the first-fruits of them to the Lord, that is to say, the tenth part of the tenth :

27 That it may be reckoned to you as an oblation of first-fruits, as well of the barn-floors as the wine-presses :

28 And of all the things of which you receive tithes, offer the first-fruits to the Lord, and give them to Aaron the priest.

29 All the things that you shall offer of the tithes, and shall separate for the gifts of the Lord, shall be the best and choicest things.

30 And thou shalt say to them : If you offer all the goodly and the better things of the tithes, it shall be reckoned to you as if you had given the first-fruits of the barn-floor and the wine-press :

31 And you shall eat them in all your places, both you and your families : because it is your reward for the ministry, wherewith you serve in the tabernacle of the testimony.

32 And you shall not sin in this point, by reserving towns and suburbs, allotted to thy children in the midst of the Israelites. They might purchase land as well as others, and might obtain a property by the vows of their brethren. Lev. xxvii. 14. Jeremias (xxxii. 7) and S. Barnaby had land. Acts iv. 37. God had provided for his ministers abundantly, without exposing them to much trouble. The Levites enjoyed the tithes of all the produce of the country, besides the first-fruits of corn, dough, &c., and some parts of each beast that was killed in the town. Deut. xviii. 3. The priests, who were still fewer in number, enjoyed the hundredth part of the revenue of all Israel, receiving tithes from the Levites, and innumerable accidental offerings of wine, &c.—I am, &c. God promises to reward those who serve him with fidelity. Deut. xviii. 1; Jos. xiii. 14. The priests of the new law ought more particularly to serve him with disinterestedness, for his own sake. C.—Of this they are reminded, when they take the first step towards holy orders. The bishop cuts off some of their hair in the form of a cross, while they recite, The Lord is the portion of my inheritance, and of my cup : it is Thou that wilt restore my inheritance to me. Psal. xv. 5. Pontif. Rcm. H.

VER. 23. People; or the Heb. may be also “they shall bear their own iniquity.” If they prove negligent in performing their duty they shall be punished; and if they do not restrain the people from approaching the tabernacle, they shall be answerable for their offence, and both shall incur death. C.

VER. 32. By, &c. Heb. “when you have made a heave-offering of the best of it; nor shall you profane the holy things of,” &c. H.—This they would do, if they gave the worst only to the priests. D.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 2. Observance. Heb. “ceremony.” Sept. “distinction, (diastole, S. Aug. q. 33,) or ordinance.” C.—Victim. Heb. “the ordinance of the law.” D.—A red cow, &c. This red cow, offered in sacrifice for sin, and consumed with fire without the camp, with the ashes of which, mingled with water, the unclean were to be expiated and purified; was a figure of the passion of Christ, by whose precious blood, applied to our souls in the holy sacraments, we are cleansed from our sins. Ch.—Age, three years old. Some translate, “entirely red.” They suppose that these regulations are in opposition to the customs of the Egyptians, who never sacrificed the cow, esteeming it sacred to Isis, or to the moon. Spencer (Rit. ii. 15) adds, that the red colour was formerly in the highest estimation; and this victim represented the death of Christ who expiated our defilements.

VER. 3. Of all. Heb. “before his face.” Sept. “they shall bring her out, slay and burn her before him,” which must be referred to some other priests, who accompanied Eleazar on this occasion, ver. 8. C.—Aaron did not perform this the choicest and fat things to yourselves, lest you profane the oblations of the children of Israel, and die.

CHAP. XIX.

The law of the sacrifice of the red cow, and the water of expiation.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses and Aaron, saying.

2 This is the observance of the victim, which the Lord hath ordained. Command the children of Israel, that they bring unto thee a red cow of full age, in which there is no blemish, and which hath not carried the yoke :

3 And you shall deliver her to Eleazar the priest, ^bwho shall bring her forth without the camp, and shall immolate her in the sight of all :

4 And dipping his finger in her blood, shall sprinkle it over against the door of the tabernacle seven times,

5 And shall burn her in the sight of all, delivering up to the fire her skin, and her flesh, and her blood, and her dung.

6 The priest shall also take cedar-wood, and lyssop, and scarlet twice dyed, and cast it into the flame, with which the cow is consumed.

7 And then, after washing his garments and body, he shall enter into the camp, and shall be unclean until the evening.

8 He also that hath burned her shall wash his garments and his body, and shall be unclean until the evening.

9 And a man that is clean shall gather up the ashes of the cow, and shall pour them forth without the camp in a most clean place, that they may be reserved for the multitude of the children of Israel, and for a water of aspersion, because the cow was burnt for sin.

office, as the sacrifice was not solemn, but sorrowful, and designed for purification. M.—The Rabbin say, however, that the high priest performed this ceremony ever after; and, since the building of the temple, they did it upon Mount Olivet. This is also remarked by S. Jerom, ep. 27. It was thus a more lively figure of Jesus Christ sweating blood on that same ground; as the smoke might represent his ascension. Acts i. 10; Luke xxii. 44. C.—He died out of Jerusalem, in full age, (ver. 2,) or thirty-three years old, being wounded in every part for our transgressions, (ver. 5,) setting us an example how to suffer, (ver. 6,) and by his blood communicating virtue to the sacraments, ver. 5. His body, derived from Adam, (or red earth, ver. 2,) was buried in a most clean place, (ver. 9,) and those who crucified him became more unclean (ver. 8); while even those who were employed in burying him (ver. 9) required to be cleansed by the grace of his passion, which must be communicated to them by baptism, in the name of the blessed Trinity, without which they cannot partake of any of the sacraments. Chap. xii. The old law could bring nothing to perfection. Those who lived under that dispensation, were forced to wait till the evening, (ver. 7,) when in the last ages the new law commenced, that by faith in Christ they might obtain the remission of their sins. Thus we perceive the meaning of many things which to the Jews were veiled in shadows. Heb. x. S. Aug. q. 33. Theod. q. 36. W.—The Fathers observe also, that the iniquity of our Saviour's flesh, and his liberty in giving and resuming his life, (John x. 18,) were denoted by the cow, which had never been yoked. C.

VER. 4. And. Heb. “And Eleazar, the priest, shall take part of her blood with his finger.” He looked from the pile of wood, where he was standing, towards the west, and sprinkled the blood, and wiping his fingers upon the skin of the cow, waiting till the fire was kindled, before he opened her belly; he then threw into the fire the cedar-wood, &c. Drusius.—Others believe that this last ceremony was performed by some one else, (ver. 7,) as it is not clear that Eleazar became unclean.

VER. 6. Dyed, with which the cedar and hyssop were tied together, as being deemed most proper instruments of purifications. Lev. xiv. 4, 49. S. Paul informs us (Heb. ix. 19) that Moses thus sprinkled the people and the book: and branches of this description were probably used when the people took this holy water, ver. 18. The ashes intimate that those who have sinned may be purified by the sacrament of penance, ver. 9. C.

VER. 10. Strangers. Even those who had not embraced the Jewish religion. Grotius.—Thus, the baptism of Christ brings salvation both to the Jews and to the Gentiles. S. Aug.

among them, shall observe this for a holy thing, by a perpetual ordinance.

11 He that toucheth the corpse of a man, and is therefore unclean seven days, 12 Shall be sprinkled with this water on the third day, and on the seventh, and so shall be cleansed. If he were not sprinkled on the third day, he cannot be cleansed on the seventh.

13 Every one that toucheth the corpse of a man, and is not sprinkled with this mixture, shall profane the tabernacle of the Lord, and shall perish out of Israel: because he was not sprinkled with the water of expiation, he shall be unclean, and his uncleanness shall remain upon him.

14 This is the law of a man that dieth in a tent: All that go into his tent, and all the vessels that are there, shall be unclean seven days.

15 The vessel that hath no cover nor binding over it, shall be unclean.

16 If any man in the field, touch the corpse of a man that was slain, or that died of himself, or his bone, or his grave, he shall be unclean seven days.

17 And they shall take of the ashes of the burning and of the sin-offering, and shall pour living waters upon them into a vessel.

18 And a man that is clean shall dip hyssop in them, and shall sprinkle therewith all the tent, and all the furniture, and the men that are defiled with touching any such thing.

19 And in this manner he that is clean shall purify the unclean on the third and on the seventh day. And being expiated the seventh day, he shall wash both himself and his garments, and be unclean until the evening.

20 If any man be not expiated after this rite, his soul shall perish out of the midst of the church: because he hath profaned the sanctuary of the Lord, and was not sprinkled with the water of purification.

21 This precept shall be an ordinance for ever. He also that sprinkled the water, shall wash his garments. Every one that shall touch the waters of expiation, shall be unclean until the evening.

VER. 12. Seventh. If he neglect to be sprinkled on the third day, his purification will be protracted till the tenth. C.

VER. 13. Upon him, unless he be excused by ignorance, (Lev. v. 3, 6,) he shall be slain.

VER. 15. Cover. Sam. "neither chains nor bands." Formerly boxes were tied down. Hom. Odys. 8. If the covering of any hollow vessel was off, when a corpse was present, it became unclean. C.

VER. 16. Grave. The Hebrews buried at a distance from towns, and set up some mark to apprise all people, that they might not be defiled for seven days. C.

CHAP. XX. VER. 1. Sin, Zin, or Tsin, nearer to Judea than the desert, where the Hebrews encamped before. Exod. xvi. 1. H.—Moses informs us of very little from the time when the people murmured at Cades-barne, in the second year, till the beginning of the fortieth year of their sojournment.—In Cades. The Rabbin assert, they remained there the first time twenty-nine years, (chap. xiv. 45,) and the second, ten. Genebrard, A. M. 2670. But we do not believe they continued there above a year the first time.—Mary. S. Gregory of Nyssa. and S. Ambrose, suppose she was always a virgin, in which respect she was a figure of our blessed Lady, as well as in her name. She was probably 130 years old, as she was very discreet at the time of the birth of Moses, and employed by Providence in preserving his life, as the blessed Virgin screened our Saviour from the fury of Herod. She had the superintendence over the Hebrew women (Exod. xv. 20. Theod. in Mic. vi. 4); and hence many apply to her and her brothers those words of Zacharias, (xi. 8,) I cut off three shepherds in one month. Mary died 22 Whatsoever a person toucheth who is unclean, he shall make it unclean: and the person that toucheth any of these things, shall be unclean until the evening.

CHAP. XX.

The death of Mary, the sister of Moses. The people murmur for want of water: God giveth it them from the rock. The death of Aaron.

AND the children of Israel, and all the multitude came^a into the desert of Sin, in the first month: and the people abode in Cades. And Mary died there, and was buried in the same place.

2 And the people wanting water, came together against Moses and Aaron:

3 And making a sedition, they said: Would God we had perished among our brethren before the Lord.

4 ^bWhy have you brought out the church of the Lord into the wilderness, that both we and our cattle should die?

5 Why have you made us come up out of Egypt, and have brought us into this wretched place, which cannot be sowed, nor bringeth forth figs, nor vines, nor pomegranates, neither is there any water to drink?

6 And Moses and Aaron, leaving the multitude, went into the tabernacle of the covenant, and fell flat upon the ground, and cried to the Lord, and said: O Lord God, hear the cry of this people, and open to them thy treasure a fountain of living water, that being satisfied, they may cease to murmur. And the glory of the Lord appeared over them.

7 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

8 Take the rod, and assemble the people together, thou and Aaron thy brother, and speak to the rock before them, and it shall yield waters. And when thou hast brought forth water out of the rock, all the multitude and their cattle shall drink.

9 ^cMoses therefore took the rod, which was before the Lord, as he had commanded him,

10 And having gathered together the multitude before the rock, he said to them: Hear, ye rebellious and incredulous: ^dCan we bring you forth water out of this rock?

11 And when Moses had lifted up his hand, and struck the rock twice with the rod, there came forth water in without being permitted to enter the promised land, on account of her murmuring, chap. xii. Thus the synagogue, though proud of her prerogatives, cannot enter the land of rest. C.—There. Some place this Cades not far from the Red Sea, (ver. 20,) south of Idumea, while the other was to the north, and nearer Chanaan, being generally called Cades-barne. Bonfrere and C. VER. 6. And cried . . . to murmur. These words are not found in the Heb., Sept., &c. nor in the new edition of S. Jerom, though they occur in most of the Latin MSS. C.—If it be an addition, it must be very ancient. Mariana.

VER. 8. The rod, with which Moses had wrought so many miracles, and which was placed in the tabernacle, ver. 9. It is called his rod, in the Heb., ver. 11. We do not find that the rod of Aaron, which budded, was used to work miracles.—Thou. Sept. "you." Both Moses and Aaron concurred in the action, (ver. 12,) but Moses was the chief agent. C.

VER. 10. Rock. Your frequent murmurs will stop the course of God's bounty. If God had not condemned the conduct of his ministers on this occasion, we could hardly find any reason to blame them. But the Fathers observe, that they betrayed a want of resolution, and intended to throw the blame upon the incredulity of the people, in case they failed of success. Because they exasperated his spirit, and he distinguished with his lips. Psal. cv. 33. See S. Chrys. and S. Aug. on this Psalm.

VER. 11. The rock. This rock was a figure of Christ, and the water that issued out from the rock, of his precious blood, the source of all our good (Ch.). while the striking twice with the rod denoted the cross, composed of two pieces of wood. S. Aug. q. 35. W.

great abundance, so that the people and their cattle drank.

12 And the Lord said to Moses and Aaron: "Because you have not believed me, to sanctify me before the children of Israel, you shall not bring these people into the land which I will give them.

13 This is the water of contradiction, where the children of Israel strove with words against the Lord, and he was sanctified in them.

14 In the mean time Moses sent messengers from Cades to the king of Edom, to say: Thus sayeth thy brother Israel: Thou knowest all the labour that hath come upon us:

15 In what manner our fathers went down into Egypt, and there we dwelt a long time, and the Egyptians afflicted us, and our fathers:

16 And how we cried to the Lord, and he heard us, and sent an angel, who hath brought us out of Egypt. Lo we are now in the city of Cades, which is in the uttermost of thy borders,

17 And we beseech thee, that we may have leave to pass through thy country. We will not go through the fields, nor through the vineyards, we will not drink the waters of thy wells, but we will go by the common highway, neither turning aside to the right hand nor to the left, till we are past thy borders.

18 And Edom answered them: Thou shalt not pass by me, if thou dost, I will come out armed against thee.

19 And the children of Israel said: We will go by the beaten way: and if we and our cattle drink of thy waters, we will give thee what is just: there shall be no difficulty in the price, only let us pass speedily.

20 But he answered: Thou shalt not pass. And immediately he came forth to meet them, with an infinite multitude, and a strong hand:

21 Neither would he condescend to their desire, to grant them passage through his borders. Wherefore Israel turned another way from him.

VER. 12. You have not believed, &c. The fault of Moses and Aaron, on this occasion, was a certain diffidence and weakness of faith: not doubting of God's power or veracity; but apprehending the unworthiness of that rebellious and incredulous people, and therefore speaking with some ambiguity. Ch.—Land, beyond the Jordan, which is described (chap. xxxiv. 2) as the land of promise, though the east side of the Jordan was so too. H.

VER. 18. Edom, the people who dwelt near Mount Hor. Those of Seir, lying more to the west, (D.) granted them leave to pass, and to buy food. Deut. ii. 28, 29. Grotius maintains that the Hebrews might justly have forced a passage upon this refusal; as S. Augustine (q. 44) says, that they might lawfully have waged war upon the Amorrites on the like occasion. But Selden (Mare, claus. 20) asserts, that princes have a right to hinder others from passing through their territories; and S. Augustine only excepts one case, when they are sure the strangers can or will do no harm. But how can they obtain this assurance? Calmet answers, the long continuance of the Hebrews near the confines of Seir, without offering any molestation, and their being conducted by so holy a general, might give the people of Hor sufficient security. But at any rate the Israelites could not wage war upon them for refusing a passage, since they were expressly forbid den by God: Stir not against them, (Deut. ii. 5,) the people of Seir, nor against any of the Idumeans, the children of Esau, who had taken possession of the country of the Horrites. Gen. xiv. 6. The angel in the cloud directed them to proceed, without molesting their territory. They went, therefore, towards the south, round the land of the Idumeans, who dwelt near the Dead Sea. 23 Where the Lord spoke to Moses:

24 Let Aaron, saith he, go to his people: for he shall not go into the land, which I have given the children of Israel, because he was incredulous to my words, at the waters of contradiction.

25 Take Aaron and his son with him, and bring them up into Mount Hor:

26 And when thou hast stripped the father of his vesture, thou shalt vest therewith Eleazar, his son: Aaron shall be gathered to his people, and die there.

27 Moses did as the Lord had commanded: and they went up into Mount Hor before all the multitude.

28 And when he had stript Aaron of his vestments, he vested Eleazar, his son, with them.

29 And Aaron being dead in the top of the mountain, he came down with Eleazar.

30 And all the multitude seeing that Aaron was dead, mourned for him thirty days throughout all their families.

King Arad is overcome. The people murmur, and are punished with fiery serpents: they are healed by the brazen serpent. They conquer the kings of Sehon and Og.

AND^c when king Arad, the Chanaanite, who dwelt toward the south, had heard this, to wit, that Israel was come by the way of the spies, he fought against them, and overcoming them, carried off their spoils.

2 But Israel binding himself by vow to the Lord, ^dsaid: If thou wilt deliver this people into my hand, I will utterly destroy their cities.

3 And the Lord heard the prayers of Israel, and delivered up the Chanaanite; and they cut them off, and destroyed their cities: and they called the name of that place Horma, that is to say, Anathema.

tains, like Libanus. The Hebrews encamped at a place called Mosera. Deut. x. G. C.

VER. 26. Vesture, or pontifical attire. Eleazar had been anointed already, so that perhaps he stood in need of no other ceremony to be acknowledged high priest. He was dispensed with on this occasion to attend his dying father. The Spirit of God gives great encomiums to Aaron. Mal. ii. 4—7; Eccli. xlv. 7, 27. He, at the same time, prefigured Christ, the gospel, and the old law. He spoke plainly, and was allowed to enter the holy of holies; while Moses was excluded, spoke with difficulty, and had a veil on his face. See S. Jer. cp. ad Fab. man. 33. But on the other hand, he represented the law with all its defects. He falls into several great faults, and dies despoiled of his glorious vestments, to show the abrogation of his priesthood. C.

VER. 29. Dead, in the 123rd year of his age. M.—Neither Moses, Aaron, nor Mary, representing the law, the priests, and the prophets of the Old Testament, could introduce the people into the promised land. This honour was reserved for Josue, the illustrious figure of Jesus Christ, and of his Church. C.

CHAP. XXI. VER. 1. Arad. This was either the name of the king, or of his city, which was situated in the southern parts of Chanaan, and which fell to the share of Hobab, in the tribe of Juda. H.

VER. 2. Cities. Heb. "I will subject their cities to anathema, or utter destruction." This vow they probably made at the place called Horma, or "Anathema," which was anciently called Saphaad. Judges i. 17. They fully executed their threat under Josue, who defeated the king of Hared, (Jos. xii. 14,) though they destroyed, at present, whatever they could. Arad was afterwards rebuilt by Hobab.

VER. 3. Anathema. That is, a thing devoted to utter destruction. Ch.—The explanation of Horma is inserted by S. Jerom. H.

VER. 4. Edom, one of the princes, had refused them a passage; upon which they went by Salmona to Phunon, (chap. xxxiii. 37, 42,) where they probably

And the people began to be weary of their journey and labour

5 And speaking against God and Moses, they said: Why didst thou bring us out of Egypt, to die in the wilderness? There is no bread, nor have we any waters: our soul now loatheth this very light food.

6 "Wherefore the Lord sent among the people fiery serpents, which bit them, and killed many of them.

7 Upon which they came to Moses, and said: We have sinned, because we have spoken against the Lord and thee: pray that he may take away these serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people:

8 And the Lord said to him: Make a brazen serpent, and set it up for a sign: whosoever being struck shall look on it, shall live.

9 "Moses therefore made a brazen serpent, and set it up for a sign: which when they that were bitten looked upon, they were healed.

10 And the children of Israel setting forwards camped in Oboth.

11 And departing thence, they pitched their tents in Jeabarim, in the wilderness, that faceth Moab toward the east.

12 And removing from thence, they came to the torrent Zared:

13 "Which they left, and encamped over against Arnon," which is in the desert, and standeth out in the borders of the Amorrite. "For Arnon is the border of Moab, dividing the Moabites and the Amorrites.

14 Wherefore it is said in the book of the wars of the Lord: As he did in the Red Sea, so will he do in the streams of Arnon.

15 The rocks of the torrents were bowed down, that they might rest in Ar, and lie down in the borders of the Moabites.

16 When they went from that place, the well appeared, whereof the Lord said to Moses: Gather the people together, and I will give them water.

17 Then Israel sung this song: Let the well spring up. They sung thereto:

18 The well which the princes dug, and the chiefs of the people prepared by the direction of the lawgiver, and with their staves. And they marched from the wilderness to Mathana.

19 From Mathana unto Nahaliel: from Nahaliel unto Bamoth.

20 From Bamoth, is a valley in the country of Moab, to the top of Phasga, which looketh towards the desert.

21 "And Israel sent messengers to Selon, king of the Amorrites, saying:

murmured, (chap. v.) and were bitten by the serpents, as we read in this chapter. C.

VER. 5. God. They had before often directed their complaints against the two brothers. Now, Aaron being no more, they attack God himself, who had always resented the injury done to his ministers.—Food. So they call the heavenly manna: thus worldlings loathe the things of heaven, for which they have no relish. Ch.—Sept. "our soul is indignant at this most empty bread," which has no solidity in it, nor support. Many translate the Heb. "most vile bread." Thus, in the blessed eucharist, the substance of bread is removed, and the accidents only appear; so that to the worldly receiver it seems very empty and light, though in reality it be substantial; containing Christ himself, who fills the worthy communicant with grace and comfort, and enables him to go forward on the road to heaven, without fainting. H.

VER. 6. Fiery serpents. They are so called because they that were bitten by them were burnt with a violent heat. Ch.—Hence they are called scorpim, or seraphim, by which name an order of angels is known.

VER. 8. Brazen. Heb. "fiery." But, in the following verse, it is said to have been "of brass." We might translate, "make a seraph, and fix it upon a standard," (C.) in which form it would resemble one suspended on a cross. It was placed at the entrance of the tabernacle. S. Just. Apol. Ezechias afterwards destroyed it, because it was treated with superstitious honours. 4 Kings xviii. 4. Thus the best things are often abused. H.—God commands this image to be erected, while he forbids all images of idols. W.—By comparing the different passages of Scripture we may discern the true import of them. Pictures may often prove very useful and instructive. They serve the ignorant instead of books. But then the ignorant must be carefully instructed not to treat them with improper respect, as S. Gregory admonishes. And is not the same caution requisite for those who read even the word of God, lest they wrest it to their own destruction, as both the unlearned and the unstable frequently do, 2 Pet. iii. 16. If every thing must be rejected which is liable to abuse, what part of the creation will be spared? The Bible, the sacraments, all creatures must be laid aside. For we read, (Rom. viii. 20, 22,) the creature was made subject to vanity—every creature groaneth. H.—It is probable that Moses represented on the standard such a serpent as had been the instrument of death. This image was set up by God's express command; and the Book of Wisdom (xvi. 5, 7) assures us, that the effect was entirely to be attributed to him, the figure of a brazen serpent being rather calculated to increase than to remove the danger. Kimchi. Muls. Hence Jonathan well observes, that only those were healed who raised their hearts to God. C.

VER. 9. A brazen serpent. This was a figure of Christ crucified, and of the efficacy of a lively faith in him, against the bites of the hellish serpent. John vi. 14 (Ch.) S. Amb. Apol. i. 3. As the old serpent infected the whole human race, Jesus Christ gives life to those who look at him with entire confidence. Theod. q. 38. The brazen serpent was destitute of poison, though it resembled a most noxious animal; so Jesus Christ assumed our nature, yet without sin. C.

VER. 10. Oboth, where Obodas, an ancient king of the Nabatheans, was adored. Hither they came from Phunon, celebrated for its copper-mines, where Bochart believes the Hebrews were bitten by the serpents, though others say that judgment was inflicted upon them at Salmona; which may be derived from tsolom na, "our image"

VER. 11. Jeabarim means "the ford, (of Zared, ver. 12,) or the straits of passages, passagers, or Hebrews; or the hills Abarim," which extended over the eastern parts of Moab. It was the 38th station, (C.) at the southern extremity of Mount Abarim. H.

VER. 12. Zared. The Israelites passed over this torrent, 38 years after the murmur at Cades-barne, (Deut. ii. 14,) when God ordered Moses not to attack the Moabites.

VER. 13. Against. Heb. "on the other, or on this side of (the river, ver. 14) Arnon," which runs from the east, almost in the same direction as the torrent of Zared, but empties itself into the Dead Sea higher up, near the mouth of the Jordan. C.—It divides the Moabites from their brethren, the children of Ammon, who lay to the north-east. The Hebrews encamped on the south side of this river, in the desert of Cademoth, (Deut. ii. 26,) whence they sent to ask leave of Selon to pass through his dominions; but, on his refusal, God ordered them to cross the Arnon by force. C.

VER. 14. The book of the wars, &c. An ancient book, which, like several others quoted in Scripture, has been lost. Ch.—S. Augustine (q. 42) thinks this book was written by one of that country. Others believe that Moses wrote a more detailed account of the wars which he had to wage with the Amalecites, (Exod. xvii. 14,) and these other nations, out of which he has only inserted some of the heads in the Pentateuch. H.—Of Arnon, the waters of which are supposed to have given the Hebrews a passage, as the Chaldee asserts on the authority of Psal. lxxiii. 15. Habacuc (iii. 13) also mentions that several rivers were dried up by God. H.

VER. 15. The rocks. Some assert that the rocks fell upon the enemy: others, that they gave way and opened a passage for the Hebrews, while the rivers were also dried up. Heb. "They encamped on the stream of the torrents, which bends towards the dwelling (or city) of Ar, and rests upon the frontiers of Moab." Thus the book to which Moses alludes confirms his account of these different encampments. C.

VER. 16. Well. Heb. Bar. H.—This station is not mentioned under the same name at least, chap. xxxiii. Probably the inhabitants had covered up this well with sand, and God having discovered it to Moses, he informed the princes, who pushed their staves down. Upon which the waters appearing, the people sung a hymn of thanksgiving and joy. Water is very scarce, and, of course, of great value in those deserts, where even still the Arabs conceal their wells, and often fight to hinder passengers from taking any of the water. C.

VER. 17. They sang. Heb. "sing ye unto it," in chorus, men and women. Sept. "commence a canticle unto it. This well the princes dug, the kings of nations hewed in the rock, in their kingdom, while they held dominion."

VER. 18. Mathana. Perhaps they did not stop here, though all the encampments are not specified, chap. xxxiii. Nahaliel, "God my torrent," and Bamoth, "the heights," are also situated upon the Arnon.

VER. 20. Desert. Heb. and Chal. "Bet-jesimon," (Jos. xiii. 28; Ezech. xxv. 9,) a city of the Moabites.

VER. 21. Messengers, not from the city of Cademoth, which was in the midst of Phasga, but from a desert of the same name, situated out of the dominions of Selon. Deut. ii. 24. Euseb.—God had already promised this country to Abraham, and though Moses did not intend to attack the king at present, being eager to fall upon the Chanaanites on the other side of the Jordan, 22 I beseech thee that I may have leave to pass through thy land; we will not go aside into the fields or the vineyards, we will not drink water of the wells, we will go the king's highway, till we be past thy borders.

23 And he would not grant that Israel should pass by his borders: but rather gathering an army, went forth to meet them in the desert, and came to Jasa, and fought against them.

24 And he was slain by them with the edge of the sword, and they possessed his land from the Arnon unto the Jeboc, and to the confines of the children of Ammon: for the borders of the Ammonites were kept with a strong garrison.

25 So Israel took all his cities, and dwelt in the cities of the Amorrite, to wit, in Hesebon, and in the villages thereof.

26 Hesebon was the city of Sehon, the king of the Amorrites, who fought against the king of Moab: and took all the land, that had been of his dominions, as far as the Arnon.

27 Therefore it is said in the proverb: Come into Hesebon, let the city of Sehon be built, and set up:

28 A fire is gone out of Hesebon, a flame from the city of Sehon, and hath consumed Ar, of the Moabites, and the inhabitants of the high places of the Arnon.

29 Woe to thee, Moab: thou art undone, O people of Chamos. He hath given his sons to flight, and his daughters into captivity to Sehon, the king of the Amorrites.

30 Their yoke is perished from Hesebon unto Dibon, they came weary to Nophe, and unto Medaba.

31 So Israel dwelt in the land of the Amorrite.

32 And Moses sent some to take a view of Jazer: and they took the villages of it, and conquered the inhabitants.

a Psal. cxxxiv. 11; Amos ii. 9.—b Judg. xi. 24; 3 Kings xi. 7.

God punishes the refusal of Sehon to let his people pass, by a swifter destruction. C.—The measure of his crimes was full, though the mere denial of a passage to such a vast multitude might even be justified by sound policy. H.

VER. 22. Wells. We shall content ourselves with the torrents. They had only to travel about thirty miles. C.

VER. 23. Jasa was not far from the Arnon, between Medaba and Dibon. Isa. xv. 4. Euseb.

VER. 24. Garrison, either against Sehon, or against the Hebrews, whom God did not, as yet, authorize to attack the Ammonites, (C.) though the latter knew it not. H.

VER. 26. Arnon. Hence this territory, which formerly belonged to Moab, being taken in a just war, the Moabites could not lawfully retain it, as they attempted to do under Jephthe. Judges xi. 13. Grot. Jur. iii. 6.—Hesebon, or Esbus, was the capital, and lay over against Jericho, twenty miles from the Jordan.

VER. 27. Proverb. Heb. Moslim: "Those who speak proverbs, or enigmas, say." Those were the ancient poets of the Amorrites, who composed this canticle on the victory of Sehon. C.

VER. 28. A fire and flame, denote the horrors of war. Judges ix. 20.—Ar. Sam. and Sept. read ad, "hath consumed even the country of the Moabites and the lords (or pillars, Sept.) of Banoth, (the heights mentioned, ver. 18, 19,) on the Arnon." These lords may be the principal men, priests, or gods of the city. Jeremias (xlviii. 45) reads this passage in a different manner, "it (the flame) shall devour part of Moab, and the crown of the head of the children of tumult."

VER. 29. He. Chamos, the idol of Moab, is upbraided as too weak to defend his people. The pagans generally formed their judgments of the power of their gods by the event; and, if that proved unfortunate, they were ever ready to consign the idols to the flames. Chamos was probably the sun. C.—Some say he was Bacchus, whom the Greeks call Komos. M.

VER. 30. Hesebon in the north, to Dibon in the southern extremity of the conquered country, near the Arnon, where Moses places the station of Dibon-gad. The yoke, or dominion of the Moabites, was ruined in all those parts. C.—Heb. "We have shot at them; or their lamp, (children or power,) from Hesebon as far as Dibon, is extinguished; and their wives (or we have destroyed them) even unto Nophe and Medaba." Sept. "Their women have still kindled a fire against Moab." Nophe is probably the Nabo of Isaias, (xv. 2,) in the environs of Medaba, where the fainting Moabites had time to breathe. H.

33 And they turned themselves, and went up by the way of Basan; and Og, the king of Basan, came against them with all his people, to fight in Edrai.

34 And the Lord said to Moses: Fear him not, for I have delivered him, and all his people, and his country into thy hand: and thou shalt do to him as thou didst to Sehon, the king of the Amorrites, the inhabitants of Hesebon.

35 So they slew him also with his sons, and all his people, not letting any one escape, and they possessed his land.

CHAP. XXII.

Balac, king of Moab, sendeth twice for Balaam to curse Israel. In his way Balaam is rebuked by an angel.

AND they went forward and encamped in the plains of Moab, over against where Jericho is situate beyond the Jordan.

2 And Balac, the son of Sephor, seeing all that Israel had done to the Amorrite,

3 And that the Moabites were in great fear of him, and were not able to sustain his assault,

4 He said to the elders of Madian: So will this people destroy all that dwell in our borders, as the ox is wont to eat the grass to the very roots. Now he was at that time king in Moab.

5 He sent therefore messengers to Balaam, the son of Beor, a soothsayer, who dwelt by the river of the land of the children of Ammon, to call him, and to say: Behold a people is come out of Egypt, that hath covered the face of the earth, sitting over against me.

6 Come therefore, and curse this people, because it is mightier than I: if by any means I may beat them and drive them out of my land: for I know that he whom

VER. 32. Jazer, a famous city, 15 miles from Hesebon, given afterwards to the Levites. Moses "took the Amorrites who were there" prisoners, according to the Heb.; or, "drove them away," (Sept.) putting to death those who continued to make resistance. C.

VER. 33. Og, the king of the most fertile country of Basan, was of gigantic stature. Deut. iii. 11. The Rabbin relate many fables concerning him.—Edrai was 15 miles to the north of the torrent Jeboc, (C.) which was the southern extremity of this territory. H.

CHAP. XXII. VER. 1. Plains. Sept. "to the west of Moab." These plains had formerly belonged to that people, but the Hebrews had lately taken them from Sehon, and intended now to pass over the Jordan. The Moabites, however, being jealous of their growing power, called in the aid of the Madianites, and of the magician Balaam, and, by their wanton provocation, brought destruction upon themselves. We know not exactly the extent of the dominions of the Moabites. They seem to have lost the greatest part of the country north of the Arnon. Their last town and capital was Ar. Chap. xxi. 13. Yet they still kept possession of Mount Phasga. C.

VER. 4. Elders of Madian, who dwelt also upon the Arnon, towards the lake of Sodom. These Madianites were a different people from those who inhabited the country to the east of the Red Sea. S. Jerom.—They were not governed by kings, but by an aristocracy, or senate of princes. H.

VER. 5. Beor. S. Peter (ii. 11, 15) reads Bosor.—A soothsayer, or magician, (ariolum.) as this word always indicates. Jos. xiii. 22. The Hebrews believe he was once a true prophet, a descendant of Buz, the son of Melcha, and the same as Elin, the friend of Job. S. Jer. q. 3. Heb. in Gen. He certainly foretold the Messiah, or star of Jacob, by divine inspiration. Chap. xxiv. 17. 11.—He consults and acknowledges the true God, ver. 8, 18, 20. Origen (hom. 13) believes that he left a book of his prophecies, which was known to the wise men, and discovered to them the birth of the Messiah; and some Rabbin think that Moses has here inserted from that work what relates to Balaam. S. Augustine (q. 48) shows that he was a wicked man, of whom nevertheless God made use to convey important instructions; and that he is one of those reprobates who will say, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? He is placed with Cain and Core. S. Jude 11. S. Ambrose (ep. 50) observes, that he might prophesy, like Caiaphas, without knowing what he said, and that the gift of prophecy on this occasion was no proof of his virtue.

VER. 6. Curse The ancients placed great confidence in those whom they thou shalt bless's blessed, and he whom thou shalt curse is cursed.

7 And the ancients of Moab, and the elders of Madian, went with the price of divination in their hands. And when they were come to Balaam, and had told him all the words of Balac,

8 He answered: tarry here this night, and I will answer whatsoever the Lord shall say to me. And while they stayed with Balaam, God came and said to him:

9 What mean these men that are with thee?

10 He answered: Balac, the son of Sephor, king of the Moabites, hath sent to me, 11 Saying: Behold a people that is come out of Egypt, hath covered the face of the land: come and curse them, if by any means I may fight with them and drive them away.

12 And God said to Balaam: Thou shalt not go with them, nor shalt thou curse the people: because it is blessed.

13 And he rose in the morning and said to the princes: Go into your country, because the Lord hath forbid me to come with you.

14 The princes returning, said to Balac: Balaam would not come with us.

15 Then he sent many more, and more noble, than he had sent before:

16 Who, when they were come to Balaam, said: Thus saith Balac, the son of Sephor: Delay not to come to me:

17 For I am ready to honour thee, and will give thee whatsoever thou wilt: come and curse this people.

18 Balaam answered:^a If Balac would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot alter the word of the Lord my God, to speak either more or less.

19 I pray you to stay here this night also, that I may know what the Lord will answer me once more.

20 God therefore came to Balaam in the night, and said to him: If these men be come to call thee, arise and go with them: yet so that thou do what I shall command thee.

21 Balaam arose in the morning, and saddling his ass went with them.

22 ^bAnd God was angry. And an angel of the Lord stood in the way against Balaam, who sat on the ass, and had two servants with him.

believed to be under the guidance of a superior spirit, whether good or bad. They thought their blessing or cursing would surely have its effect. C.

VER. 7. The price. Heb. lit. "the enchantments." But they took money, to engage the soothsayer to comply more readily with their iniquitous request. 2 Pet. ii. 15. Sept. &c. It was customary to offer presents to the prophets. 1 Kings ix. 7.

VER. 8. Night. He was accustomed to exercise his art by night; loving darkness, for his works were evil. John iii. 19. H.

VER. 19. To stay. His desiring them to stay, after he had been fully informed already that it was not God's will he should go, came from the inclination he had to gratify Balac for the sake of worldly gain. And this perverse disposition God punished by permitting him to go, (though not to curse the people, as he would willingly have done,) and suffering him to fall still deeper and deeper into sin, till he came at last to give that abominable counsel against the people of God, which ended in his own destruction. So sad a thing it is to indulge a passion for money. Ch. S. Aug. q. 48.—Philo (de Vita Mos. 1) thinks that Balaam feigned this leave of God, ver. 22. C.

VER. 22. Angry. Either because he had not granted him permission to go, or he saw that Balaam was disposed to curse the Israelites, ver. 32. Sept. "the angel (Michael) rose up on the road to oppose him" diaballein. Lit. "to cal-

23 The ass seeing the angel standing in the way, with a drawn sword, turned herself out of the way, and went into the field. And when Balaam beat her, and had a mind to bring her again to the way, 24 The angel stood in a narrow place between two walls, wherewith the vineyards were inclosed.

25 And the ass seeing him, thrust herself close to the wall, and bruised the foot of the rider. But he beat her again:

26 And nevertheless the angel going on to a narrow place, where there was no way to turn aside, either to the right hand or to the left, stood to meet him.

27 And when the ass saw the angel standing, she fell under the feet of the rider: who, being angry, beat her sides more vehemently with a staff.

28 And the Lord opened the mouth of the ass, and she said: What have I done to thee? why strikest thou me, lo, now this third time?

29 Balaam answered: Because thou hast deserved it, and hast served me ill: I would I had a sword that I might kill thee.

30 The ass said: Am not I thy beast, on which thou hast been always accustomed to ride until this present day? tell me if I ever did the like thing to thee. But he said: Never.

31 Forthwith the Lord opened the eyes of Balaam, and he saw the angel standing in the way, with a drawn sword, and he worshipped him, falling flat on the ground.

32 And the angel said to him: Why beatest thou thy ass these three times? I am come to withstand thee, because thy way is perverse, and contrary to me:

33 And unless the ass had turned out of the way, giving place to me who stood against thee, I had slain thee, and she should have lived.

34 Balaam said: I have sinned, not knowing that thou didst stand against me: and now if it displease thee that I go, I will return.

35 The angel said: Go with these men, and see thou speak no other thing than what I shall command thee. He went therefore with the princes.

36 And when Balac heard it, he came forth to meet him in a town of the Moabites, that is situate in the uttermost borders of Arnon.

37 And he said to Balaam: I sent messengers to call lumniate, accuse, resist, or to be a Satan." Hence diabolus means an accuser, opponent, calumniator, &c. S. Aug. II.

VER. 23. Ass. The angel appeared thrice to the ass before he was perceived by Balaam. Chap. xxiv. 3, 4. The second time S. Augustine (q. 50) thinks he was standing in the vineyard. C.

VER. 28. Opened the mouth, &c. The angel moved the tongue of the ass to utter these speeches, to rebuke, by the mouth of a brute beast, the brutal fury and folly of Balaam. Ch.—S. Thomas (ii. 2, q. 105) says, an angel spoke by the mouth of the ass, in like manner as the devil did by that of the serpent. Gen. iii. Infidels deride this miracle, and some have thought that it was only in the imagination of Balaam that this dialogue was formed. Maimon.—S. Gregory of Nyssa seems to think that the ass only brayed as usual, and that the soothsayer, being accustomed to augur from the voice of animals, understood its meaning. But S. Peter says, the dumb beast . . . speaking with man's voice, forbade the folly of the prophet, 2 Pet. ii. 16. God did not endue it with understanding on this occasion, but only formed, by its mouth, such sounds as might serve to repress the cruel folly of Balaam. But he was more stupid than the ass. "Being accustomed, it seems, to such prodigies," (monstris), and intent upon lucre, he paid no further regard to such a wonderful transaction, at held conversation with his ass, without any emotion. S. Aug. q. 48. 50 C thee, why didst thou not come immediately to me? was it because I am not able to reward thy coming?

38 He answered him: Lo, here I am: shall I have power to speak any other thing but that which God shall put in my mouth?

39 So they went on together, and came into a city, that was in the uttermost borders of his kingdom.

40 And when Balac had killed oxen and sheep, he sent presents to Balaam, and to the princes that were with him.

41 And when morning was come, he brought him to the high places of Baal, and he beheld the uttermost part of the people.

CHAP. XXIII.

Balaam, instead of cursing Israel, is obliged to bless them, and prophesy good things of them.

AND Balaam said to Balac: Build me here seven altars, and prepare as many calves, and the same number of rams.

2 And when he had done according to the word of Balaam, they laid together a calf and a ram upon every altar.

3 And Balaam said to Balac: Stand a while by thy burnt-offering, until I go to see if perhaps the Lord will meet me, and whatsoever he shall command, I will speak to thee.

4 And when he was gone with speed, God met him. And Balaam speaking to him, said: I have erected seven altars, and have laid on every one a calf and a ram.

5 And the Lord put the word in his mouth, and said: Return to Balac, and thus shalt thou speak.

6 Returning he found Balac standing by his burnt-offering, with all the princes of the Moabites:

7 And taking up his parable, he said: Balac, king of the Moabites, hath brought me from Aram, from the mountains of the east: Come, said he, and curse Jacob: make haste and detest Israel.

VER. 36. A town. Eusebius thinks it was Ar, the capital.

VER. 39. City, &c. Heb. "Kariath, huzoth." Calmet would read Hares, a city mentioned, Isa. xvi. 7, 11, and styled the scalls of brick, (4 Kings iii. 25,) being the same with Ar. But then the former town must be situated some where upon the frontiers of Moab, as they came from it to the capital. H.

VER. 41. People. From the heights or temple of Baal, or the god of Chamos, where a statue or pillar (Sept.) was erected in his honour, (C.) on Mount Abarim, (M.) the soothsayer was enabled to take a distinct view of all the camp of Israel, (chap. xxiii. 13,) and not of a part only, as the Sept. and Arab. versions would insinuate. C.

CHAP. XXIII. VER. 2. Altar. They both join in sacrificing to Chamos or the devil, whom Balaam styles his lord, Jeve: but the true God was pleased to hinder the idol from interfering at present, and answered Balaam, in order that he might see the folly of his conduct and repent; and that others, who were more willing to listen to him than to the servants of God, might be instructed by his declaration. II.—"God's voice is heard sounding from a profane mouth." S. Jer. de 42. Mans. W.

VER. 4. Speed. Heb. ssopin, may signify also "on the straight road," (Sept.) "into the plain," (Louis de Dieu,) "all alone," (Onkelos,) or most probably "upon an eminence." Kimchi. C.—God, in the visible form of an angel. M.—To him. Balaam might suppose that he was addressing his idol. But Moses informs us that the true God, or his angel, was present, and forced Balaam to deliver an unwelcome message to the king. II.

VER. 7. Parable. Beginning to speak in a beautiful and poetic style, like a man inspired. C.—Mossol, denotes a striking and elegant prophecy. M.—Aram, when placed alone, properly means Syria; but when Padan or Naharaim are added, Mesopotamia is meant, whence Balaam came. Deut. xxii. 5.—East of Moab, though lying to the north, or higher part of Mesopotamia. C.

VER. 9. Hills. But all in vain. C.—I am prevented from cursing him; and if I should do it, my imprecations would be turned into blessings by a superior Being. II.—Alone, without standing in need of any auxiliaries, and devoid of fear. Deut. xlii. 28; Jer. xlix. 31. The Jews had but few connexions with foreign nations, keeping at a distance from them, as being of a different religion. C.

8 How shall I curse him whom God hath not cursed! By what means should I detest him, whom the Lord detesteth not?

9 I shall see him from the tops of the rocks, and shall consider him from the hills. This people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations.

10 Who can count the dust of Jacob, and know the number of the stock of Israel? Let my soul die the death of the just, and my last end be like to them.

11 And Balac said to Balaam: What is this that thou dost? I sent for thee to curse my enemies: and thou, contrariwise, blessest them.

12 He answered him: Can I speak any thing else but what the Lord commandeth?

13 Balac therefore said: Come with me to another place, from whence thou mayst see part of Israel, and canst not see them all: curse them from thence.

14 And when he had brought him to a high place, upon the top of Mount Phasga, Balaam built seven altars and laying on every one a calf and a ram, 15 He said to Balac: Stand here by thy burnt-offering while I go to meet him.

16 And when the Lord had met him, and had put the word in his mouth, he said: Return to Balac, and thus shalt thou say to him.

17 Returning he found him standing by his burnt-sacrifice, and the princes of the Moabites with him. And Balac said to him: What hath the Lord spoken?

18 But he taking up his parable, said: Stand, O Balac, and give ear: hear, thou son of Sephor:

19 God is not as a man, that he should lie, nor as the son of man, that he should be changed. Hath he said then, and will he not do? hath he spoken, and will he not fulfil?

20 I was brought to bless, the blessing I am not able to hinder.

21 There is no idol in Jacob, neither is there an image-

VER. 10. Dust. God had promised to multiply the seed of Abraham as the dust of the earth. Gen. xiii. 16. Balaam had just beheld several thousands of them, and in rapture exclaims, according to the Heb., "Who can count the dust of Jacob, and the number of the fourth part of Israel?"—Let, &c. Heb. may also admit of the version of the Sept., "May my soul die among the souls of the just, and may my offspring be like this." H.—"All," says S. Bernard, (in Cant. serm. 21,) "wish to enjoy the felicity which Jesus Christ has promised. But how few are willing to imitate Him who invites us to do it." C.—Even those who are in the Church, frequently give into this delusion, making fine prayers, and, in the time of temptation, forgetting all their sighs and tears, to whom God will say, as S. Gregory justly observes on those words of Job, xli. 3. I will not spare him nor his mighty words, and framed to make supplication. "That prayer is vain which is not followed by continual perseverance in charity." S. Greg. Mor. xxxiii. 27.—Soul die, or be separated from its body. Even Balaam establishes the immortality of the soul. II.

VER. 13. Thence. He has a mind to try a new experiment. Balac, supposing, perhaps, that the multitude made too deep an impression upon the soothsayer, judged it expedient to place him in another situation, where he might see only a part of Israel. Some, however, imagine that he had only seen a fourth part, or the uttermost part of the people, who lay nearest to him before (ver. 10, and chap. xxii. 41); and hence would have him to take now a distinct view of the whole; and, in this sense, the Samaritan and Glassius translate from whence, &c., thus, "for thou hast seen only part of Israel, and couldst not see them all." C.

VER. 14. Place. Heb. ssode tsopin, or "the field of the sentinels." Chald. Such were commonly stationed on the top of high hills, to give notice, by kindling a fire, &c., of the approach of an enemy. Isa. xxi. 11; Jer. vi. 1. C.

VER. 18. Hear. Heb. "to me." Sept. read ad, instead of adi, and translate, "Give ear, thou witness, (martus,) son," &c. H.

VER. 19. Changed. Heb. "repent." Sept. "to be overawed by threats"

Origen, "to be terrified." In the book of Judith. (viii. 15,) it is said, For God will not threaten like man, nor be inflamed to anger, like the son of man. C.

VER. 21. Image-god, (simulachrum,) "a statue." Chald. "falschood." Heb. may also signify "perversity, or punishment." As long as Israel refrains god to be seen in Israel. The Lord his God is with him, and the sound of the victory of the king in him.

22 *God hath brought him out of Egypt, whose strength is like to the rhinoceros.

23 There is no soothsaying in Jacob, nor divination in Israel. In their times it shall be told to Jacob and to Israel, what God hath wrought.

24 Behold the people shall rise up as a lioness, and shall lift itself up as a lion: it shall not lie down till it devour the prey, and drink the blood of the slain.

25 And Balac said to Balaam: Neither curse, nor bless him.

26 And he said: Did I not tell thee, that whatsoever God should command me, that I would do?

27 And Balac said to him: Come, and I will bring thee to another place, if, peradventure, it please God that thou mayst curse them from thence.

28 And when he had brought him upon the top of Mount Phogor, which looketh towards the wilderness, 29 Balaam said to him: Build me here seven altars, and prepare as many calves, and the same number of rams.

30 Balac did as Balaam had said: and he laid on every altar, a calf and a ram.

CHAP. XXIV.

Balaam still continues to prophesy good things in favour of Israel.

AND when Balaam saw that it pleased the Lord that he should bless Israel, he went not as he had gone before, to seek divination: but setting his face towards the desert,

2 And lifting up his eyes, he saw Israel abiding in their tents, by their tribes: and the spirit of God rushing upon him, from idol-worship, and from other transgressions, as they do at present, God will be so far from punishing them, that he will fight their battles, as their king (H.); and at the sound of the silver trumpets will grant them victory. Chap. x. 9. M.—The sound. Heb. “the shout of a king among them,” encouraging his people by his presence and by his words. H.—“I beheld those who do not serve idols in the house of Jacob... the word of the Lord their God is helping them, and the majesty of their king is among them.” Chaldee. M.

VER. 22. Rhinoceros. Heb. ram, which is sometimes rendered unicorn. Bochart thinks it means the oryx, or the strong Arabian goat. The animal, of which the Scripture so often speaks, was remarkable for its strength, (C.) and could not easily be tamed. Job xxxix. 9. H.—The Sept. generally translate monoceros, which is a fish, with a horn proceeding from its upper jaw. This is often shown in cabinets for the horn of the unicorn. There are various animals which have only one horn. Pliny and Aristotle instance the oryx, &c. Various authors of credit specify likewise the rhinoceros, which has “a horn upon its nose,” and is found in Ethiopia. The emperor of that country sent one to the court of Persia, which Chardin saw and describes. It is as large as an elephant, and the people have learnt the method of taming both these huge beasts. C.—It seems the art was unknown in the days of Job, if this be the animal of which he speaks. H.—Moses (Deut. xxxiii. 17) seems to attribute two horns to the ram, or reem; and Pausanias allows a greater and a less one to the rhinoceros; the latter is very strong and erect. It is of a brownish colour. C.

VER. 23. Soothsaying. This may be joined to what goes before, as an explanation why Israel is so much to be feared; because the people have no dealings with the devil, in which case neither he nor all his agents can hurt them, since God is their protector, and will direct them when and how to act.—Hath wrought. Sept. “will bring to perfection.” Orig. c. Cels. The Heb. may also signify, “undoubtedly there is no charm powerful enough against... Israel,” or “Jacob has no regard for the vain art of divination. Israel does not apply to augury. This very time will be memorable among their posterity for the wonders which God has wrought.” Indeed, never was there a greater display of the Divine power in favour of the Hebrews than in this fortieth year after their exit from Egypt; and in the following, which was noted for the victories and miracles of Josue. H.

VER. 24. Lioness. Sept. “lion’s whelp.” Some explain the Heb. “a lion” of full growth and strength. But the antithesis of the Vulgate is more natural and beautiful. C.—The lioness, being solicitous for its young ones, becomes more furious.—A lion, ready to fall upon its prey. So Israel will not lay down the 3 He took up his parable, and said: Balaam, the son of Beor, hath said: The man hath said, whose eye is stopped up:

4 The hearer of the words of God hath said, he that hath beheld the vision of the Almighty, he that falleth, and so his eyes are opened:

5 How beautiful are thy tabernacles, O Jacob, and thy tents, O Israel!

6 As woody valleys, as watered gardens near the rivers, as tabernacles which the Lord hath pitched, as cedars by the water side.

7 Water shall flow out of his bucket, and his seed shall be into many waters. For Agag shall his king be removed, and his kingdom shall be taken away.

8 God hath brought him out of Egypt, whose strength is like to the rhinoceros. They shall devour the nations that are his enemies, and break their bones, and pierce them with arrows.

9 Lying down he hath slept as a lion, and as a lioness, whom none shall dare to rouse. He that blesseth thee, shall also himself be blessed: he that curseth thee, shall be reckoned accursed.

10 And Balac being angry against Balaam, clapped his hands together, and said: I called thee to curse my enemies, and thou, on the contrary, hast blessed them three times.

11 Return to thy place. I had determined indeed greatly to honour thee, but the Lord hath deprived thee of the honour designed for thee.

12 Balaam made answer to Balac: Did I not say to thy messengers, whom thou sentest to me:

13 “If Balac would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord, my God, sword till he has conquered the nations of Chanaan, (M.) and those who dare to molest him. The allusion to the prediction of Jacob in favour of Juda, seems very plain. Gen. xlix. 9. H.

VER. 28. Phogor. Heb. “Peor, which looketh towards Jeshimon, or the desert.” This was a part of the same chain of the mountains Abarim, with Phasga, ver. 14. Balac foolishly supposed that, in a different aspect, he might still obtain what he wanted; and the soothsayer was no less infatuated in following him. H.

CHAP. XXIV. VER. 1. Divination. Sept. “to meet the birds.” The augurs judged of future events by the flying, eating, and other appearances of birds. Heb. “enchantments.” M.—Desert. The plains of Moab, where the Israelites were encamped. He found himself, as it were, involuntarily transported by the spirit of God, ver. 2. C.—Yet, for all that, he did not become more holy. Some work miracles, and are damned. S. Matt. vii. 22. W.

VER. 3. Up. The same term only occurs again, (Lament. iii. 8,) where it may have the same sense, though the Sept. &c. give it here a quite opposite meaning, “the man whose eyes are open,” the prophet. But Balaam alludes to his not being able to see the angel as soon as his ass, as he does, ver. 4. Chap. xxii. 31. C.

VER. 4. Falleth. Out of respect to God, or in a trance. Sept. “in sleep, his eyes are uncovered.” He was accustomed to commune with the spirits in the night. Chap. xxii. 8. H.

VER. 6. Woody. Heb. also “extensive torrents.”—Tabernacles. Heb. aelim, which some render lign-aloes, or stacte, as S. Jerom does, Psal. xlv. 9; Prov. vii. 17; Cant. iv. 14. The aloë-tree, however, was brought from India, and was not common in Arabia. The Syrian aloë was only a shrub; and this tree, of which Balaam speaks, must have been tall and beautiful.—Pitched. Heb. “planted.” C.—The Sept. agree however with the Vulg. H.

VER. 7. Waters. Sept., Chal., and Syr. “From his seed a man shall spring, who shall have dominion over many nations.” This must be understood of the Messias; or, his posterity shall be very numerous (see Prov. v. 15, 16); or his country shall be well watered, and his crops luxuriant.—Agag. Saul lost his crown for sparing the king of the Amalecites, who always took this title, 1 Kings xv. 9. Heb. may be translated, “Above Agag shall his (Israel’s) king be exalted, yet,” &c., or “and his kingdom shall increase.” Philo and S. Ambrose read, “his kingdom shall be raised on high.” H.

VER. 8, 9. Lioness. See ver. 22, 24, of the preceding chapter. H.—This prediction was accomplished under the reigns of David and of Solomon. M.

to utter any thing of my own head, either good, or evil: but whatsoever the Lord shall say, that I will speak:

14 But yet going to my people, I will give thee counsel, what thy people shall do to this people in the latter days.

15 Therefore taking up his parable, again he said: Balaam, the son of Beor, hath said: The man whose eye is stopped up, hath said:

16 The hearer of the words of God hath said, who knoweth the doctrine of the Highest, and seeth the visions of the Almighty, who falling hath his eyes opened:

17 I shall see him, but not now: I shall behold him, but not near. A STAR SHALL RISE out of Jacob, and a sceptre shall spring up from Israel: and shall strike the chiefs of Moab, and shall waste all the children of Seth.

18 And he shall possess Idumea: the inheritance of Seir shall come to their enemies: but Israel shall do manfully.

19 Out of Jacob shall he come that shall rule, and shall destroy the remains of the city.

20 And when he saw Amalec, he took up his parable, and said: Amalec the beginning of nations, whose latter ends shall be destroyed.

21 He saw also the Cinite. and took up his parable,

• Matt. ii. 2.—b Dan. xi. 30.—c A. M. 2553, A. C. 1151.

VER. 14. Counsel, out of my own head. This he was going to do, (C.) that he might not lose his reward, when again he found himself impelled by the Lord to speak what was contrary to his temporal interest. After complying reluctantly, God ceased to strive, as it were, with his rebellious will any longer, and left him to follow the bent of his corrupt heart. Upon which he proceeded to give that infernal counsel, which involved both many of the Israelites and himself in utter destruction. H. chap. xxxi. 16; Apoc. ii. 4.—Days. Heb. "Come, I will admonish thee what this people shall do to thy people," &c. Onkelos and Origen (hom. 18 and 20) give both senses. C.—Indeed, the transactions of both people were so blended, when they were fighting together, that to give the history of one would be explaining the fortune of the other. 11.

VER. 16. Who knoweth. This is a new title, which he had not before assumed, ver. 4.

VER. 17. Him. The great personage whom I have in view, whose coming is deferred yet for many ages. H.—The whole prediction refers to the Messiah, whom Balaam beheld by the eyes of his posterity, the wise men, (C.) or in the prophetic vision. M.—Some modern Rabbin pretend that he speaks of David, who was indeed a figure of Christ, (C.) and defeated the Moabites, 2 Kings v. 8. But the prophecy was perfectly fulfilled only in our Saviour's person, who is called the bright and morning star, (Apoc. xxii. 28,) to whom all nations were given for an inheritance. Psal. ii.; Acts i. 8. W.—Heb. also, "I see this thy ruin, but," &c. Sept. "I will show to him, yet not now; I will make him happy (C.); but (makarizo, I bless) it, or he does not approach." God executed what he ever promised in favour of all Israel when he sent them his beloved Son.—A star. Christ, the light of the world, the splendour of his Father's glory, whose birth was made known, in the East, by a star, or meteor of unusual brightness. H.—This material star is not the primary object of the prediction, since it did not rise out of Jacob, but it pointed out the orient from on high, and then disappeared. The ancient Jews understood this passage of the Messiah. Onkelos, &c.—Of Seth. Though David, as the figure of the Messiah, conquered the Moabites, he cannot be said to have subdued all nations, the descendants of Seth, by Noe, nor all the just of whom Seth was the father, in opposition to the children of Cain. But Christ will subject all the just to his empire, and will judge all mankind.

VER. 18. Idumea and Seir. The children of Esau shall acknowledge the dominion of Israel, from David to Josaphat, and again under Hircan. 3 Kings xi. 15; 4 Kings viii. 20. Joseph. xiii. 17. C.

VER. 19. City of this world. Jesus will destroy their evil habits, (Orig. hom. 18,) and will select some whose lives had been hitherto scandalous, to be his intimate friends. H.—He will save those who abandon paganism, which had fixed its seat at the great city of Rome, (C.) and he will raise up Constantine (M. 1.) to rule over Jacob, his people. At his second coming he will exterminate all who shall have refused to acknowledge his sovereignty, and who have remained out of the city of his Church. H.—Those who have fled out of the cities for safety, shall be sought out by David, and destroyed. He slew all the male children of Edom, 3 Kings xv. 15. C.—In this prophecy some particulars relate to him, as that he shall subject Moab and Idumea by the valour of his troops, while other things can belong only to Christ, the Star, who shall destroy the remains of the city. M.—By changing one letter, Calmet would translate, "Princes shall spring from Jacob: but Seir shall perish from his cities." A long train of princes in Jacob prefigured the Messiah, while the Idumeans have been unknown for many ages. C.

VER. 21. Cite. From the top of the hill he cast his eyes across the Dead and said: Thy habitation indeed is strong: but though thou build thy nest in a rock, 22 And thou be chosen of the stock of Cin, how long shalt thou be able to continue? For Assur shall take thee captive.

23 And taking up his parable, again he said: Alas, who shall live when God shall do these things?

24 They shall come in galleys from Italy, they shall overcome the Assyrians, and shall waste the Hebrews, and at the last they themselves also shall perish.

25 And Balaam rose, and returned to his place: Balaam also returned the way that he came.

The people fall into fornication and idolatry: for which twenty-four thousand are slain. The zeal of Phinees.

Sea, and beholding the strong-holds of the Cinite, whose country had been promised to the Hebrews, he is inspired to foretell what would happen to this people. He alludes to their name, which signifies a nest (C.); and to the manner in which those nations of Arabia lived, in caverns cut out of a rock. Bellon. ii. 61.

VER. 22. Captive. The Sam. insinuates that they should return, 1 Par. i. 55. "Though thy nest should be entirely consumed, thy inhabitants shall return out of Assyria." C.—Sept. "If to Beor (the capital) there should be nests of iniquity, the Assyrians will reduce thee to captivity." Heb. "Yet the Cinite shall be wasted, till," &c. 11.—The family of Jethro was now among the Hebrews, and their posterity were suffered to dwell with the tribe of Juda. Abor afterwards removed into the tribe of Nephtali, and was led away by Salmanassar, 4 Kings xvii. M.—Some of the Cinites were mixed with the Amalecites, 1 Kings xv. 6. The Assyrians infested the neighbouring nations, as well as the Hebrews, under Sennacherib and Nabuchodonosor, as the prophets inform us. C.

VER. 24. Italy. Heb. "Chittim," which Bochart endeavours to prove with great erudition to mean Italy; while Grotius contends it means Macedon, and Calmet doubts not but this is the import of the present text. The Macedonians under Alexander and his successors conquered the countries of Assyria, Palestine, &c. C.—Heb. "ships . . shall afflict Heber, and he also shall perish for ever," which seems to refer to Heber alone, and not to those who shall oppress them, as the Vulg., Sept., &c. express it. H.—Indeed, we do not find that the Scripture mentions the end of the Roman empire, of which many explain this passage. C.—Grotius (Jur. ii. 9) maintained that it still subsisted in the German empire. Others think it will be destroyed only in the days of Antichrist. T. Dan. ii. 40.—But many have asserted that it was overturned by the Goths, and that the Romans are the people who would reduce the Hebrews to the greatest misery, under Titus. M.—The kings of Macedon are, however, styled kings of Cethim (1 Mac. i. 1; viii. 5); and they were the immediate subverters of the Persian empire, as theirs fell a prey to the Romans. Theod. q. 44. C.

CHAP. XXV. VER. 1. Settim, which had Abel, "mourning," prefixed to it, (chap. xxxiii. 49,) on account of the slaughter of 24,000 of the Israelites, ver. 6, 9. It was situated in the plains of Moab, near the Jordan, and was the last station of the Hebrews. C.—In this neighbourhood all the following transactions occurred, which are recorded, till the end of the Pentateuch. M.—Balaam, being convinced that the Hebrews would be invincible, as long as they continued faithful to God, advised the nations, who had sent to consult him, to let their daughters converse freely with the Israelites, but not to yield to their impure desires, unless they consented to offer sacrifice to their idols. C.—Thus they first captivated their hearts, and then subverted their understanding: For some rejecting a good conscience, have made shipwreck concerning the faith, 1 Tim. i. 19. 11.—By the same method many have been drawn into heresy. W.—That these women were sent by the Moabites, and also by the Midianites, (ver. 6, 17,) instigated by the perverse counsels of Balaam, (C.) appears not only from the event being recorded in this place, but also by the express declaration of Moses, chap. xxxi. 7, 8, and of the Apocalypse, chap. ii. 14. Salien, Mic. vi. 5. H.

VER. 3. Initiated to Beelphegor. That is, they took to the worship of Beelphegor, an obscene idol of the Moabites, and were consecrated, as it were, to him. Ch.—Heb. "Israel was attached, or married to Beelphegor," the sun, Adonis or Osiris, whom the psalmist (cv. 28) styles the dead, because the people were accustomed to bewail the death of Adonis every year, with great solemnity. C.

VER. 4. People. Assemble the judges, and by their sentence, hang them who have been most guilty. Onkelos.—It is not clear whether these criminals were hung by the neck, or crucified, after they had been first stoned, as guilty or and hang them up on gibbets against the sun: that my fury may be turned away from Israel.

5 And Moses said to the judges of Israel: "Let every man kill his neighbours, that have been initiated to Beelphegor."

6 And behold one of the children of Israel went in, before his brethren, to a harlot of Madian, in the sight of Moses, and of all the children of Israel, who were weeping before the door of the tabernacle.

7 ^bAnd when Phinees, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, saw it, he rose up from the midst of the multitude, and taking a dagger,

8 Went in after the Israelite, into the brothel-house, and thrust both of them through together, to wit, the man and the woman in the genital parts. And the scourge ceased from the children of Israel:

9 And there were slain four and twenty thousand men.

10 And the Lord said to Moses:

11 Phinees, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, hath turned away my wrath from the children of Israel: because he was moved with my zeal against them, that I myself might not destroy the children of Israel in my zeal.

12 Therefore say to him: "Behold I give him the peace of my covenant,"

13 And the covenant of the priesthood for ever shall be both to him and his seed, because he hath been zealous for his God, and hath made atonement for the wickedness of the children of Israel.

14. And the name of the Israelite, that was slain with idolatry, or whether they were fastened to the gibbet alive, for greater torment and disgrace. C.—Sun; publicly. See 2 Kings xii. 11. M.

VER. 5. Judges, who had not been guilty. Sept. "to the tribes." The judges, and even private individuals, were thus authorized to exterminate the guilty, as the Levites had been before, Exod. xxxii. 27.

VER. 7. Dagger. Josephus translates rome, by romphaia, "a sword." Sept. by sciromasten, a long and sharp iron rod, like a spit, such as people use to try if any smuggled goods be concealed. H.—It denotes any sort of offensive weapon. C.—The Vulg. sometimes translates, a lance or spear. M.

VER. 9. Slain. Heb. adds, "in the plague," or pestilence sent by God, (Psal. cv. 29,) and in the punishments inflicted by the judges, "twenty and four thousand." H.—The tribe of Simeon, lying to the south, had given way to greater disorders with the Madianites; (C.) so that they were found to have 37,100 fewer than when they were numbered before. Chap. ii. 13. See chap. xxvi. 14. H.

VER. 12. Peace. He has the honour of restoring the people to peace and to my favour, so that my covenant shall still subsist with them. He shall surely be his father's successor in the high priesthood, and shall not be prevented by death.

VER. 13. Seed. A short interruption of 150 years (from Heli to Abiathar, of the race of Ithamar) may be accounted trifling in a duration of so many ages, during which the posterity of Phinees enjoyed this dignity. Phinees succeeded Eleazar, and had for his successors, Abiezer, Bocci, and Elsi. C.—Some add Zararias, Meraioth, and Amarias, upon whose death, 1157 years before Christ, Heli got possession, by some means, and was followed by Achitob, Achielech, and Abiathar, of the same family, till David joined Sadoc with the latter, and he was acknowledged sole pontiff on the rebellion of Abiathar. B. C. 1014. See Lenglet's Tables. H.—We have no proof that the succeeding high priests were of a different family, (C.) till our Saviour's time, who re-united in his person the right both to the priesthood and to the kingdom of Israel for ever. See S. Aug. C. D. xvii. G. H.—God did not promise that no interruption should take place. He only granted a perpetual right to the family of Phinees, (Cajetan,) which they might forfeit by their misconduct. T.—He was certainly always disposed to comply with his promise, and really granted the effects of it to the posterity of Phinees, at least for almost 1000 years, even if we grant that the Machabees were not his lineal descendants, of which there is no positive proof either way. Thus, for ever, often denotes a long duration. Though Phinees was entitled already to the high priesthood, in quality of the eldest son of Eleazar, he had before no assurance of surviving him, nor of having a succession of children who might be capable of the high office, and free from every blemish (C.); so that the promise made to him was not only a ratification of his title, but a new and real benefit. H.—Phinees was, however, either one of the judges, and thus gave an example of just severity to his fellow magistrates, or he was inspired by God to resent the public the woman of Madian, was Zambri, the son of Salu, a prince of the kindred and tribe of Simeon.

15 And the Madianite woman, that was slain with him, was called Cozbi, the daughter of Sur, a most noble prince among the Madianites.

16 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

17 "Let the Madianites find you their enemies, and slay you them:

18 Because they also have acted like enemies against you, and have guilefully deceived you by the idol Phogor, and Cozbi, their sister, a daughter of a prince of Madian, who was slain in the day of the plague, for the sacrilege of Phogor.

CHAP. XXVI.

The people are again numbered by their tribes and families.

AFTER "the blood of the guilty was shed, the Lord said to Moses, and to Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest:

2 "Number the whole sum of the children of Israel, from twenty years old and upward, by their houses and kindreds, all that are able to go forth to war.

3 Moses therefore and Eleazar the priest, being in the plains of Moab, upon the Jordan, over against Jericho, spoke to them that were injury done to his name. It is never lawful to kill by private authority. Catech. Rom. p. 3. Chap. vi. 5. S. Thomas ii. 2, q. lx. G. W.

VER. 14. Kindred. Heb. "of a chief house among the Simeonites," as Sur was of equal nobility, "head over a people, and of a chief house in Madian," ver. 15. H.—He is styled king, and one of the five princes of the nation. Chap. xxxi. 8.

VER. 17. Madianites. God spared the Moabites for the sake of Lot (Deut. ii. 19) and of Ruth, of whom David and Christ should be born. They were perhaps less guilty, but they did not escape due chastisement under David, 2 Kings viii. 3 M.—The war against Madian was the last which the Hebrews waged in the lifetime of Moses. Chap. xxxi. H.

CHAP. XXVI. VER. 1. Shed. Heb. and Sept. "after the plague," which destroyed so many. Chal. After all who had murmured were cut off, the new progeny is numbered. S. Jerom. W.

VER. 2. Number. This was done that the general might know what forces he could muster to attack the nations of Chanaan on the west side of the Jordan, and also in order that the lands might be properly distributed. The war lasted seven years, and the distribution of lands was not completed till some time afterwards. It is not clear that those who were not enrolled at this time, as being 20 years of age, would have any portion, except that of their fathers, allotted to them; but it seems, however, rational that those who were arrived at that age when the distribution was made, would have their share like the rest. There were 1820 people fewer than in the register which was taken before, (chap. i.) thirteen months after the departure from Egypt. The Levites seem not to have been numbered with the utmost exactitude, as only five families are mentioned, (ver. 58, Jans.,) though there were many more, 1 Par. xxiii. 6, &c. Their numbers amount to only 23,000. C.—They had rather increased in the desert during 38 years; (see chap. iii. 39;) as had also the tribes of Juda, Issachar, and Zabulon, which lay to the east; of Manasses (who perhaps on that account precedes Ephraim) and Benjamin to the west; Dan and Aser to the north. Nephtali proved deficient; so did likewise the tribes of Ruben, Simeon, and Gad, who were stationed to the south of the tabernacle. When they were numbered the first and the second time (Exod. xxxviii. 25, and chap. i. 46) they amounted to 603,550, exclusively of the Levites. Now they could only count 601,730 men fit for war. Considering their frequent disasters, it is even a matter of surprise that their ranks were not thinned still more, particularly as we are assured that all who had been numbered before, except Josue and Caleb, the Levites, and such as had kept themselves free from murmuring, had perished, ver. 64. H.—In the particular accounts of the tribes, and in the names of persons, the Sept. frequently differ from the Hebrew. But the total amount agrees.

VER. 4. Them. Heb. "commanded Moses and the children of Israel, who came forth out of the land of Egypt." The same plan was now to be pursued as formerly ronites: and Charmi, of whom is the family of the Charmites.

7 These are the families of the stock of Ruben: whose number was found to be forty-three thousand seven hundred and thirty.

8 The son of Phallu was Eliab

9 His sons were Namuel, and Dathan, and Abiron. These are Dathan and Abiron the princes of the people, that rose against Moses and Aaron in the sedition of Core, when they rebelled against the Lord:

10 And the earth opening her mouth swallowed up Core, many others dying, when the fire burned two hundred and fifty men. And there was a great miracle wrought, 11 That when Core perished, his sons did not perish.

12 The sons of Simeon by their kindreds: Namuel, of him is the family of the Namuelites: Jamin, of him is the family of the Jaminites: Jachin, of him is the family of the Jachinites:

14 These are the families of the stock of Simeon, of which the whole number was twenty-two thousand two hundred.

17 Arod, of him is the family of the Arodites. Ariel, of him is the family of the Arielites.

18 These are the families of Gad, of which the whole number was forty thousand five hundred.

19 The sons of Juda, Her and Onan, who both died in the land of Chanaan.

20 And the sons of Juda, by their kindreds, were: Sela, of whom is the family of the Selaïtes: Phares, of whom is the family of the Pharesites: Zare, of whom is the family of the Zareites.

21 Moreover the sons of Phares, were: Hesron, of whom is the family of the Hesronites: and Hamul, of whom is the family of the Hamulites.

22 These are the families of Juda, of which the whole number was seventy-six thousand five hundred.

23 The sons of Issachar, by their kindreds: Thola, of whom is the family of the Tholaïtes: Phua, of whom is the family of the Phuaïtes:

VER. 7. Thirty. They had lost therefore 2870 men. Chap. i. 21.

VER. 9. Princes. Heb. "men of name in the congregation," senators. Vatab. Chap. xvi. 2.

VER. 10. Miracle. Heb. "they became a sign" of reproach, and a memorial of God's just judgments, who caused the earth to swallow up Core and his companions alive, by a most disgraceful kind of death, to which the faithless vestal virgins were condemned at Rome, being buried alive; while those who had offered incense were consumed by fire. Many of the ancients assert that Core was also burnt, meaning perhaps by the fire of hell; to which he descended. Josep. iv. 3.

VER. 12. Namuel. N has been substituted for I, in the name of Iamuel, as it is read elsewhere, and in the Syriac, both here and 1 Par. iv. 24, where Ahod is by mistake written with r, instead of d. See also the Arab. Ken. H.

VER. 14. Families. Ahod is not mentioned, as he, probably, died without children. See Gen. xlvii. 10. M.—Hundred. Their numbers were the most reduced. See chap. xxv. 9. H.

24 Jasub, of whom is the family of the Jasubites: Semran, of whom is the family of the Semranites.

25 These are the kindreds of Issachar, whose number was sixty-four thousand three hundred.

26 The sons of Zabulon, by their kindreds: Sared, of whom is the family of the Saredites: Elon, of whom is the family of the Elonites: Jalel, of whom is the family of the Jalelites.

27 These are the kindreds of Zabulon, whose number was sixty thousand five hundred.

28 The sons of Joseph, by their kindreds, Manasses and Ephraim.

29 Of Manasses was born Machir, of whom is the family of the Machirites. Machir begot Galaad, of whom is the family of the Galaadites.

30 Galaad had sons: Jezer, of whom is the family of the Jezerites: and Helec, of whom is the family of the Helecites:

31 And Asriel, of whom is the family of the Asrielites: and Sechem, of whom is the family of the Sechemites:

32 And Semida, of whom is the family of the Semidaïtes: and Hepher, of whom is the family of the Hepherites:

33 And Hepher was the father of Salphaad, who had no sons, but only daughters, whose names are these: Maala, and Noa, and Hegla, and Melcha, and Thersa.

34 These are the families of Manasses, and the number of them fifty-two thousand seven hundred.

35 And the sons of Ephraim, by their kindreds, were these: Suthala, of whom is the family of the Suthalaïtes: Becher, of whom is the family of the Becherites: Thehen, of whom is the family of the Thehenites.

36 Now the son of Suthala was Heran, of whom is the family of the Heranites.

37 These are the kindreds of the sons of Ephraim: whose number was thirty-two thousand five hundred.

38 These are the sons of Joseph, by their families. The sons of Benjamin in their kindreds: Bela, of whom is the family of the Belaïtes: Asbel, of whom is the family of the Asbelites: Ahiram, of whom is the family of the Ahiramites:

39 Supham, of whom is the family of the Suphamites: Hupham, of whom is the family of the Huphamites.

40 The sons of Bela: Hered, and Noeman. Of Hered, is the family of the Heredites: of Noeman, the family of the Noemanites.

41 These are the sons of Benjamin, by their kindreds, whose number was forty-five thousand six hundred.

VER. 25. Issachar had also 9900 more.

VER. 27. Zabulon was more numerous by 3100; so that this division had an additional strength of 13,100, while the former was diminished by 45,070 men. H.

VER. 29. Machir: 1 Par. vii. 20, we find Ezriel also mentioned. See chap. xxxi. 39.

VER. 41. Benjamin had 10,200 added to his former number. Hence this division of the army, though hurt by Ephraim, (ver. 37,) had an increase of 22,700.

42 The sons of Dan, by their kindreds: Suham, of whom is the family of the Suhamites: these are the kindreds of Dan, by their families.

43 All were Suhamites, whose number was sixty-four thousand four hundred.

44 The sons of Aser, by their kindreds: Jemna, of whom is the family of the Jemnaites: Jessui, of whom is the family of the Jessuites: Brie, of whom is the family of the Brieites.

45 The sons of Brie: Heber, of whom is the family of the Heberites: and Melchiel, of whom is the family of the Melchielites.

48 The sons of Nephtali, by their kindreds: Jesiel, of whom is the family of the Jesielites: Guni, of whom is the family of the Gunites:

49 Jeser, of whom is the family of the Jeserites: Sellem, of whom is the family of the Sellemites.

50 These are the kindreds of the sons of Nephtali, by their families: whose number was forty-five thousand four hundred.

51 This is the sum of the children of Israel, that were reckoned up, six hundred and one thousand seven hundred and thirty.

52 And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying:

53 To these shall the land be divided for their possessions according to the number of names.

54 To the greater number thou shalt give a greater portion, and to the fewer a less: to every one, as they have now been reckoned up, shall a possession be delivered:

55 Yet so that by lot the land be divided to the tribes and families.

56 Whatsoever shall fall by lot, that shall be taken by the more, or the fewer.

57 ^aThis also is the number of the sons of Levi, by their families: Gerson, of whom is the family of the Gersonites: Caath, of whom is the family of the Caathites: Merari, of whom is the family of the Merarites.

58 These are the families of Levi: The family of Lobni, the family of Hebroni, the family of Moholi, the family of Musi, the family of Core. Now Caath begot Amram,

59 Who had to wife Jochabed the daughter of Levi, who was born to him in Egypt. She bore to her husband Amram, sons, Aaron and Moses, and Mary their sister.

60 Of Aaron were born Nadab and Abiu, and Eleazar, and Ithamar:

61 ^bOf whom Nadab and Abiu died, when they had offered the strange fire before the Lord.

62 And all that were numbered, were twenty-three thousand males, from one month old and upward: for they were not reckoned up among the children of Israel, neither was a possession given to them with the rest.

63 This is the number of the children of Israel, that were enrolled by Moses and Eleazar the priest, in the plains of Moab, upon the Jordan over against Jericho.

64 ^cAmong whom there was not one of them that were numbered before by Moses and Aaron in the desert of Sinai.

65 ^dFor the Lord had foretold, that they should all die in the wilderness. And none remained of them, but Caleb the son of Jephone, and Josue the son of Nun.

CHAP. XXVII.

The law of inheritance. Josue is appointed to succeed Moses.

THEN came the daughters of Salphaad, the son of Hephher,^e the son of Galaad, the son of Machir, the son of Manasses, who was the son of Joseph: and their names are Maala, and Noa, and Hegla, and Melcha, and Thersa.

2 And they stood before Moses and Eleazar the priest, and all the princes of the people, at the door of the tabernacle of the covenant, and said:

3 Our father died in the desert, and was not in the sedition^f that was raised against the Lord, under Core, but he died in his own sin: and he had no male children. Why is his name taken away out of his family, because he had no son? Give us a possession among the kinsmen of our father.

4 And Moses referred their cause to the judgment of the Lord.

5 And the Lord said to him:

6 The daughters of Salphaad demand a just thing: give them a possession among their father's kindred, and let them succeed him in his inheritance.

7 And to the children of Israel thou shalt speak these things:

8 When a man dieth without a son, his inheritance shall pass to his daughter.

VER. 50. Nephtali, who had lost 8000; so that this division had only 5600 more. H.

VER. 55. Lot. Josue appointed commissioners, who measured the land, and divided it according to its fertility; and the portions assigned to each of the tribes by lot corresponded with the predictions of Jacob and of Moses; God so regulating the lots by his all-wise providence, in order that the people might be more convinced of the truth of the prophecies, and that no undue favour was shown to any one by Josue, Eleazar, or by the other men in authority. He took the whole upon himself, that none might complain of their rulers. C.

VER. 59. Levi. Sept. "who bore these (Lobni, &c.) to Levi, in Egypt; and she bore to Amram, Aaron," &c., as if Jochabed had been wife both of Levi and of Amram, which is very improbable. It is more likely that the wives of these two bore the same name. The Heb. may agree very well with the Vulg. See Exod. ii. 1. C.—It was afterwards forbidden for a person to marry his aunt. Lev. xviii. W.

VER. 64. Sinai, if we except the Levites. M. See chap. xiv. 23.—Origen (hom. 21) makes a very good remark on this subject. This circumcised, but rebellious people, conducted by Moses into the desert, clearly points out the Hebrews, who come to the frontiers of the promised land, but are not suffered to cross the Jordan. The uncircumcised are introduced into the land flowing with milk and honey, not by Moses, but by Josue, the figure of our Saviour, who opens heaven to true believers. "The first people is rejected, which had received circumcision, and the second is introduced, which is gathered from the Gentiles; and it is this people which obtains its father's inheritance. . . . If Moses give any inheritance, it is not within the Jordan . . . it is a land fit for cattle . . . he does not distribute it by lot . . . nor can he know the merits of each. This is done by Jesus only, to whom his Father has given all judgment." H.

CHAP. XXVII. VER. 1. Salphaad, a descendant of Joseph, had departed this life in the desert, being one of those who sinned, by murmuring, at Cadesbarn. See chap. xiv., and xv. 32. C.

VER. 3. Father, the portion which would have been assigned him; that is those whom we may marry may take the inheritance, under the name of Salphaad, which some of the children may also bear. M.

9 If he have no daughter, his brethren shall succeed him.

10 And if he have no brethren, you shall give the inheritance to his father's brethren.

11 But if he have no uncles by the father, the inheritance shall be given to them that are the next a-kin. And this shall be to the children of Israel sacred by a perpetual law, as the Lord hath commanded Moses.

12 *The Lord also said to Moses: "Go up into this mountain, Abarim, and view from thence the land, which I will give to the children of Israel.

13 And when thou shalt have seen it, thou also shalt go to thy people, as thy brother Aaron is gone:

14 "Because you offended me in the desert of Sin in the contradiction of the multitude, neither would you sanctify me before them at the waters. These are the waters of contradiction, in Cadès, of the desert of Sin.

15 And Moses answered him:

16 May the Lord the God of the spirits of all flesh provide a man that may be over this multitude:

17 And may go out and in before them, and may lead them out, or bring them in: lest the people of the Lord be as sheep without a shepherd.

18 And the Lord said to him: "Take Josue, the son of Nun, a man in whom is the Spirit, and put thy hand upon him.

19 And he shall stand before Eleazar the priest, and all the multitude.

20 And thou shalt give him precepts in the sight of all, and part of thy glory, that all the congregation of the children of Israel may hear him.

21 If any thing be to be done, Eleazar the priest shall consult the Lord for him. He, and all the children of Israel with him, and the rest of the multitude, shall go out and go in at his word.

But being forbidden to speak of the matter any more, he understood that it was as irrevocable as an oath. Deut. iii. 26; iv. 21. D.

VER. 17. Shepherd. Christ makes use of the same comparison, John x. 1. Kings are often styled shepherds in Homer. Moses begs that his successor may be enabled to conduct the multitude both in peace and war.—To go in and out, means to govern, (3 Kings iii. 7,) and includes all the occurrences of life. Acts i. 21; Psal. cxx. 8. C.—Thus, temporal princes are the shepherds of the people. But they are not, on that account, supreme in spiritual causes. For here Josue only receives part of the glory of Moses, while Eleazar is appointed to consult the Lord for him, and to direct him in all matters of importance, ver. 20, 21. W.

VER. 18. Spirit of God, which was given to him when he was appointed a judge (chap. xi. 17); the spirit of prophesy, (Onkelos,) and of wisdom, (Deut. xxxiv. 9,) of which he received a fresh increase, by the imposition of the hands of Moses. By the like ceremony people are confirmed, and ministers of religion are ordained. Acts vi. 6; 1 Tim. iv. 14. C.

VER. 20. Precepts, to accept of this office, (C.) and to discharge it with integrity. H.—Glory, not that which shone on the face of Moses, as Onkelos would have it, but all the marks of distinction due to a chief magistrate, (C.) the insignia of his office. See Exod. xviii. 21. Salic.—Treat him with respect, as your successor. M.—Let him henceforward commence to exercise his authority before you, that all the people may hear and obey him. Sararius. T.

VER. 21. For him. Heb. adds, "according to the judgment of Urim." See Exod. xxviii. 30. Nothing better shows the theocracy of the Hebrews, as Josephus styles it, (c. Apion, 2,) than this order for the chief magistrate in civil affairs to consult and be guided by God's minister, and by the sentence which he should pronounce in his name. Till the reign of David, at least, we find few wars undertaken without consulting God (C.); and the Rabbin assert that the kings when he had taken Josue, he set him before Eleazar the priest, and all the assembly of the people, 23 And laying his hands on his head, he repeated all things that the Lord had commanded.

CHAP. XXVIII

Sacrifices are appointed as well for every day as for sabbaths, and other festivals.

THE Lord also said to Moses:

2 Command the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them: Offer ye my oblation and my bread, and burnt-sacrifice of most sweet odour, in their due seasons.

3 These are the sacrifices which you shall offer: "Two lambs of a year old, without blemish, every day for the perpetual holocaust:

4 One you shall offer in the morning, and the other in the evening:

5 And the tenth part of an epha of flour, which shall be tempered with the purest oil, of the measure of the fourth part of a hin.

6 It is the continual holocaust which you offered in Mount Sinai for a most sweet odour of a sacrifice by fire to the Lord.

7 And for a libation you shall offer of wine the fourth part of a hin for every lamb in the sanctuary of the Lord,

8 And you shall offer the other lamb in like manner in the evening, according to all the rites of the morning sacrifice, and of the libations thereof, an oblation of most sweet odour to the Lord.

9 "And on the sabbath day, you shall offer two lambs of a year old, without blemish, and two tenths of flour tempered with oil in sacrifice, and the libations,

10 Which regularly are poured out every sabbath for the perpetual holocaust.

11 And on the first day of the month you shall offer a holocaust to the Lord, two calves of the herd, one ram, and seven lambs, of a year old, without blemish, could not declare any war of their own accord, without the consent of the high priest and Sanhedrim. Seld. Syned. iii. 12. Saul lost his crown and life for not complying with the injunctions of God, which were communicated to him by the prophet Samuel. H.

VER. 23. Commanded. This Moses executed on his birth-day, when he was 120 years old, (Deut. xxxi. 2, 7,) having frequently before given proper instructions to Josue. Deut. i. 38, and xxxii. 44. 11.

CHAP. XXVIII. VER. 2. Seasons. These precepts had often been repeated already: but perhaps they had not been exactly observed in the desert, so that Moses inculcates them once more, as if to remind the people that they will now have no excuse, if they neglect these sacrifices in the promised land. C.

VER. 3. Lambs. Kids would not suffice. See Exod. xxix. 38. The lambs must not be above a year old. But it is not clear whether they could be offered eight days after their birth, as on other occasions. Exod. xxiii. 19. C.

VER. 11. Month. This is not reckoned among the festivals. Lev. xxiii. The Rabbin look upon it as a day of devotion, particularly for women. Buxtorf. Syn. 17. C.—The devil is commonly the ape of God, and teaches his votaries to adopt the ceremonies of the true religion, either to delude them more easily, or to bring those practices into discredit. Thus Middleton has endeavoured to show the conformity of Pagan and Papal Rome, as if the ceremonies of the Catholic religion were to be rejected because some of them have been in use among the heathens. By the same argument he may ridicule the revelation of God himself, on this subject, and represent vestments, holy water, &c. as superstitious. He may pull down altars, condemn all forms of prayer, abolish all worship, both of soul and body. For such things have all been prostituted to idols! But those who are not totally infatuated by prejudice, will deplore the abuse of these things, and will not refrain from adoring the true God according to his will, with all the faculties both of their soul and body, on account of the devil and his false prophets having extorted similar acts of worship from their followers. H.—The sacrifices which were ordered to be offered up on the first day of the month, were probably designed to renew the memory of the world's creation, or rather of the Divine providence,

12 And three tenths of flour tempered with oil in sacrifice for every calf: and two tenths of flour tempered with oil for every ram:

13 And the tenth of a tenth of flour tempered with oil in sacrifice for every lamb. It is a holocaust of most sweet odour and an offering by fire to the Lord.

14 And these shall be the libations of wine, that are to be poured out for every victim: Half a hin for every calf, a third for a ram, and a fourth for a lamb. This shall be the holocaust for every month, as they succeed one another in the course of the year.

15 A buck-goat also shall be offered to the Lord for a sin-offering over and above the perpetual holocaust with its libations.

16 ^aAnd in the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month, shall be the Phase of the Lord, 17 And on the fifteenth day the solemn feast: seven days shall they eat unleavened bread.

18 And the first day of them shall be venerable and holy: you shall not do any servile work therein.

19 And you shall offer a burnt-sacrifice a holocaust to the Lord, two calves of the herd, one ram, seven lambs of a year old, without blemish:

20 And for the sacrifices of every one three tenths of flour which shall be tempered with oil, to every calf, and two tenths to every ram,

21 And the tenth of a tenth to every lamb, that is to say, to all the seven lambs:

22 And one buck-goat for sin, to make atonement for you,

23 Besides the morning holocaust which you shall always offer.

24 So shall you do every day of the seven days for the food of the fire, and for a most sweet odour to the Lord, which shall rise from the holocaust, and from the libations of each.

25 The seventh day also shall be most solemn and holy unto you: you shall do no servile work therein.

26 The day also of first-fruits, when after the weeks are accomplished, you shall offer new fruits to the Lord, shall be venerable and holy: you shall do no servile work therein.

27 And you shall offer a holocaust for a most sweet odour to the Lord, two calves of the herd, one ram, and seven lambs of a year old, without blemish:

28 And in the sacrifices of them, three tenths of flour tempered with oil to every calf, two to every ram,

29 The tenth of a tenth to every lamb, which in all are seven lambs: a goat also,

30 Which is slain for expiation: beside the perpetual holocaust and the libations thereof.

31 You shall offer them all without blemish with their libations.

CHAP. XXIX.

Sacrifices for the festivals of the seventh month.

THE first day also of the seventh month shall be venerable and holy unto you; you shall do no servile work therein, because it is the day of the sounding and of trumpets.

2 And you shall offer a holocaust for a most sweet odour to the Lord, one calf of the herd, one ram, and seven lambs of a year old, without blemish:

3 And for their sacrifices, three tenths of flour tempered with oil to every calf, two tenths to a ram,

4 One tenth to a lamb, which in all are seven lambs:

5 And a buck-goat for sin, which is offered for the expiation of the people,

6 Besides the holocaust of the first day of the month, with the sacrifices thereof, and the perpetual holocaust with the accustomed libations. With the same ceremonies you shall offer a burnt-sacrifice for a most sweet odour to the Lord.

7 ^bThe tenth day also of this seventh month shall be holy and venerable unto you, and you shall afflict your souls: you shall do no servile work therein.

8 And you shall offer a holocaust to the Lord for a most sweet odour, one calf of the herd, one ram, and seven lambs of a year old, without blemish:

9 And for their sacrifices, three tenths of flour tempered with oil to every calf, two tenths to a ram,

10 The tenth of a tenth to every lamb, which are in all seven lambs:

11 And a buck-goat for sin, besides the things that are wont to be offered for sin, for expiation, and for the perpetual holocaust, with their sacrifice and libations.

12 And on the fifteenth day of the seventh month, which shall be unto you holy and venerable, you shall do no servile work, but shall celebrate a solemnity to the Lord seven days.

13 And you shall offer a holocaust for a most sweet odour to the Lord, thirteen calves of the herd, two rams, and fourteen lambs of a year old, without blemish:

14 And for their libations, three tenths of flour tem-which regulates the seasons. Nothing was sold on this day. Amos viii. 5. But people went to hear the prophets, (4 Kings iv. 23,) and feasted among themselves, 1 Kings xx. 18. It is thought that many rested also from servile work, though this is nowhere commanded. C.—Tirin agrees with Tostat and Sanctius, in supposing that servile work was prohibited, for which he refers to 1 Kings xx. 19. He also asserts that the Jews observed the lunar system, and that their months consisted of twenty-nine and thirty days alternately, as twenty-nine days and a half elapse from one moon to another. The sound of trumpets probably announced this solemnity. Chap. x. 10; Lev. xxiii. 8.

VER. 13. Tenth. An assaron, gomer, or chomer, which is the tenth part of an epha, as that is the tenth of a core or chomer, which is the largest Hebrew dry measure, containing thirty-two pecks and one pint English; so that the gomer would be equivalent to five pints. H.—This quantity of flour accompanied each holocaust at the beginning of every month. C.

VER. 15. Above. This is the import of the Heb., &c.: for no libations accompanied the sin-offerings, nor incense. See chap. xv. 3; Lev. v. 12. M.

VER. 16. Phase, or Passover, the most solemn of all the festivals, when the lamb was to be eaten on the 15th of Nisan, and during the eight days unleavened bread was allowed. H.

VER. 26. The day of Pentecost, seven weeks after the Passover, was the next in solemnity, to thank God for the wheat harvest, of which the first-fruits were now presented. H.—Two loaves, made with leaven, were given to the priests. Lamy. See Lev. xxiii. 17.

VER. 27. Two calves. Only one is specified in Leviticus, being that designed for the morning; another was immolated at night. C.—The same victims are prescribed as ver. 19. M.

CHAP. XXIX. VER. 1. The first. This day was doubly solemn, as being the first day of the month, consequently entitled to all the sacrifices enjoined for it; and also a holiday, for which other victims are requisite, besides the perpetual holocausts, ver. 2, 6; chap. xxviii. 11. H.

pered with oil to every calf, being in all thirteen calves : and two tenths to each ram, being two rams,

15 And the tenth of a tenth to every lamb, being in all fourteen lambs :

16 And a buck-goat for sin, besides the perpetual holocaust, and the sacrifice, and the libation thereof.

17 On the second day you shall offer twelve calves of the herd, two rams, and fourteen lambs of a year old, without blemish :

18 And the sacrifices and the libations for every one, for the calves and for the rams, and for the lambs, you shall duly celebrate :

19 And a buck-goat for a sin-offering, besides the perpetual holocaust, and the sacrifice and the libation thereof.

20 The third day you shall offer eleven calves, two rams, and fourteen lambs of a year old, without blemish :

21 And the sacrifices and the libations of every one for the calves and for the rams, and for the lambs, you shall offer according to the rite :

22 And a buck-goat for sin, besides the perpetual holocaust, and the sacrifice, and the libation thereof.

23 The fourth day you shall offer ten calves, two rams, and fourteen lambs of a year old, without blemish :

24 And the sacrifices and the libations of every one for the calves and for the rams, and for the lambs, you shall celebrate in right manner :

25 And a buck-goat for sin, besides the perpetual holocaust, and the sacrifice and the libation thereof.

26 The fifth day you shall offer nine calves, two rams, and fourteen lambs of a year old, without blemish :

27 And the sacrifices and the libations of every one for the calves and for the rams, and for the lambs, you shall celebrate according to the rite :

28 And a buck-goat for sin, besides the perpetual holocaust, and the sacrifice and the libation thereof.

29 The sixth day you shall offer eight calves, two rams, and fourteen lambs of a year old, without blemish :

30 And the sacrifices and the libations of every one for the calves and for the rams, and for the lambs, you shall celebrate according to the rite :

31 And a buck-goat for sin, besides the perpetual holocaust, and the sacrifice and the libation thereof.

32 The seventh day you shall offer seven calves, and two rams, and fourteen lambs of a year old, without blemish :

33 And the sacrifices and the libations of every one for the calves and for the rams, and for the lambs, you shall celebrate according to the rite :

34 And a buck-goat for sin, besides the perpetual holocaust, and the sacrifice and the libation thereof.

35 On the eighth day, which is most solemn, you shall do no servile work :

36 But you shall offer a holocaust for a most sweet odour to the Lord, one calf, one ram, and seven lambs of a year old, without blemish :

37 And the sacrifices and the libations of every one for the calves and for the rams, and for the lambs, you shall celebrate according to the rite :

38 And a buck-goat for sin, besides the perpetual holocaust, and the sacrifice and the libation thereof.

39 These things shall you offer to the Lord in your solemnities : besides your vows and voluntary oblations for holocaust, for sacrifice, for libation, and for victims of peace-offerings.

CHAP. XXX.

Of vows and oaths : and their obligation.

AND Moses told the children of Israel all that the Lord had commanded him :

2 And he said to the princes of the tribes of the children of Israel : This is the word that the Lord hath commanded :

3 If any man make a vow to the Lord, or bind himself by an oath : he shall not make his word void, but shall fulfil all that he promised.

4 If a woman vow any thing, and bind herself with an oath, being in her father's house, and but yet a girl in age : if her father knew the vow that she hath promised, and the oath wherewith she hath bound her soul, and held his peace, she shall be bound by the vow :

5 Whatsoever she promised, and swore, she shall fulfil in deed.

6 But if her father, immediately as soon as he heard it, gainsaid it, both her vows and her oaths shall be void, neither shall she be bound to what she promised, because her father hath gainsaid it.

7 If she have a husband, and shall vow any thing, and the word once going out of her mouth, shall bind her soul by an oath :

8 The day that her husband shall hear it, and not gainsay it, she shall be bound to the vow, and shall give whatsoever she promised.

9 But if as soon as he heareth, he gainsay it, and make her promises, and the words wherewith she hath bound her soul of no effect ; the Lord will forgive her.

10 The widow, and she that is divorced, shall fulfil whatsoever they vow.

11 If the wife, in the house of her husband, hath bound herself by vow and by oath :

12 If her husband hear, and hold his peace, and doth not disallow the promise, she shall accomplish whatsoever she had promised.

VER. 35. Eighth day, which was more solemn than the preceding ones, but less so than the first. The victims are every day diminished. C.

VER. 30. Sacrifice. Mineha, or offering of flour, &c. H.

CHAP. XXX. VER. 3. Oath, to do something commendable, shall observe his promise, whether any body has heard him or not. H.—The obligation of a vow or oath is founded upon common honesty, which requires that we should comply with our lawful promises ; and, though all properly belong to God, yet, as he does not strictly require us to do every good work which may be in our power, we may, by vow, testify our desire to please and honour him the more. C.—The Scripture repeatedly commends prudent vows ; and those who can persuade themselves that they can infringe such solemn promises without offence, will be little solicitous about keeping their word to a fellow creature, unless when interest, or fear of shame, force them to do it. H.—He who makes a vow to abstain from any thing lawful, would be guilty of sin if he should observe it afterwards. S. Aug. q. 56. W.

VER. 4. Girl in age, not twelve ; or, if more, at least not married, nor out of her father's house, ver. 17. For either of these conditions rendered a girl incapable of binding herself irrevocably. The father, or all who had the care of her, might rescind her vow, provided they did it as soon as it came to their knowledge, or on the same day, ver. 15. Boys under thirteen were under similar restrictions. Grotius.—Wives, and, in general, all who were under subjection, could not dispose of themselves without the consent of their superiors, as their want of prudence, &c. might have otherwise injured what belonged, in some measure, to another. H.—The law, therefore, submits their case to the decision of their immediate 13 But if forthwith he gainsay it, she shall not be bound by the promise: because her husband gainsaid it, and the Lord will be merciful to her.

14 If she vow, and bind herself by oath, to afflict her soul by fasting, or abstinence, from other things, it shall depend on the will of her husband, whether she shall do it, or not do it.

15 But if the husband hearing it, hold his peace, and defer the declaring of his mind till another day: whatsoever she had vowed and promised, she shall fulfil: because immediately as he heard it, he held his peace.

16 But if he gainsay it after that he knew it, he shall bear her iniquity.

17 These are the laws which the Lord appointed to Moses, between the husband and the wife, between the father and the daughter, that is as yet but a girl in age, or that abideth in her father's house.

CHAP. XXXI.

The Madianites are slain, for having drawn the people of Israel into sin. The dividing of the booty.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses,^a saying:

2 Revenge first the children of Israel on the Madianites, and so thou shalt be gathered to thy people.

3 And Moses forthwith said:^b Arm of you men to fight, who may take the revenge of the Lord on the Madianites.

4 Let a thousand men be chosen out of every tribe of Israel, to be sent to the war.

5 And they gave a thousand of every tribe, that is to say, twelve thousand men, well appointed for battle:

6 And Moses sent them with Phinees, the son of Eleazar the priest, and he delivered to him the holy vessels, and the trumpets to sound.

judges. C.—But if the thing, which a person vowed, was already of strict obligation, as to fast on the day of expiation, (Lev. xxiii. 29,) no one could presume to hinder his wife from complying with this double duty. W.

VER. 14. It. The Rabbin restrain this law to fasting and abstinence. But the Heb. seems more general, (ver. 13,) "every vow, and every binding oath to afflict the soul, her husband may ratify or annul." The vows of abstinence are most common, and generally more disagreeable to husbands. C.—In things which could nowise hurt the parent or husband, many believe that the person who had made a vow was bound to perform it secretly, even though the superior had declared his dissent. But with respect to fasting, pilgrimages, &c., which could not be performed without his knowledge, it does not seem that they were under any further obligation, even though the superior should retract what he had con-nived at for a whole day. In doubtful cases inferiors must not refuse to obey. The sin lies at the door of him who exercises his authority in an improper manner. Lyran. T. ver. 16.

VER. 15. Day. Heb. "from day to day." If he has not given his decision on the first day when the vow came to his knowledge, unless he asked for a delay, as some allow, the person was bound to perform what she had promised. C.—Immediately. Heb. "in the day," which seems to restrict the power of annulling the vow to a single day, ver. 4. It would be unreasonable for the person to be kept long in suspense; and the law of God requires that we should not defer to perform our vows. Eccles. v. 3, 4. H.

VER. 16. That. Sept. "the day." If he retract his consent, he shall incur all the guilt. S. Aug. q. 59. The woman need not be under any disquietude, as the fault is not in her. C.—If a person had made a rash vow, he might obtain a dispensation from the tribunal of three judges, or from a doctor of the law, who would enjoin him to offer the sacrifice for ignorance, to punish his levity. See Seld. Jur. vii. 2. H.

CHAP. XXXI. VER. 2. Madianites. The five princes (ver. 8) had joined Sehon, in his attack upon the Hebrews. Jos. xiii. 21. They had united with the Moabites against them, and had been most active in perverting the people of God. H.—This war of religion was terminated about a month before the death of Moses.

VER. 6. Trumpets. These are the holy vessels just specified, though some believe that he carried the ark, which was done in some wars. Jos. vi. 1; 1 Kings iv. 5. Priests always sounded the trumpet. Deut. xx. 2. C.

7 And when they had fought against the Madianites and had overcome them, they slew all the men,

8 And their kings Evi, and Recem, and Sur, and Hur, and Rebe, five princes of the nation: Baluam also, the son of Beor, they killed with the sword.

9 And they took their women and their children captives, and all their cattle, and all their goods: and all their possessions they plundered:

10 And all their cities, and their villages, and their castles, they burned.

11 And they carried away the booty, and all that they had taken, both of men and of beasts:

12 And they brought them to Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and to all the multitude of the children of Israel. But the rest of the things for use they carried to the camp, on the plains of Moab, beside the Jordan, over against Jericho.

13 And Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and all the princes of the synagogue, went forth to meet them without the camp.

14 And Moses being angry with the chief officers of the army, the tribunes, and the centurions, that were come from the battle, 15 Said: Why have you saved the women?

16 Are not these they that deceived the children of Israel by the counsel of Balaam, and made you transgress against the Lord by the sin of Phogor, for which also the people was punished.

17 Therefore kill all that are of the male sex, even of the children: and put to death the women that have carnally known men.

18 But the girls, and all the women that are virgins, save for yourselves:

19 And stay without the camp seven days. He that

VER. 8. Recem; by which name Petra, the capital of Arabia Petraea, is known. This petty king probably took his title from this city, over which he presided. C.—All the five had been, perhaps, tributary to Sehon. Jos. xiii. 21. H.—Sur, the wretched parent of Cozbi. Chap. xxv. 15. C.—Balaam. Some think he was a native of Madian, though he had resided in Mesopotamia.

VER. 9. Possessions. Lit. "all that they could, they plundered." It seems they did not advance very far into the country; or many saved themselves by flight; for we find the Madianites soon powerful enough to enslave the Hebrews. Judg. vi. 1.

VER. 10. Castles. Heb. tiruth, means also, "palaces, or shepherds' huts." C.

VER. 13. Camp. They had sent news of their victory, and of the plunder which they were bringing to the camp, (H.) to be divided equally among their fellow soldiers, when they were met by Moses, &c., who came to congratulate with them, and to examine how they had executed their commission, as well as to admonish them to be purified before they entered the camp, ver. 19. C.

VER. 15. Women. They had received no positive orders respecting them, and it was customary to spare their lives. But these dissolute women had rendered themselves unworthy of such indulgence, (C.) and the sight of them raised the just indignation of Moses, who was afraid lest their manners should corrupt the victors. H.

VER. 16. The sin of Phogor. The sin committed in the worship of Beelphegor. Ch.

VER. 17. Of children. Women and children, ordinarily speaking, were not to be killed in war. Deut. xx. 14. But the great lord of life and death was pleased to order it otherwise in the present case, in detestation of the wickedness of this people, who, by the counsel of Balaam, had sent their women amongst the Israelites on purpose to draw them from God. Ch.—Only those who were under twelve would be thus reserved; and as their tender minds might yet receive the impressions of virtue, by a proper education, they might, one day, be married by some of the Hebrews. The boys were all slain, either because they might be inclined to resent the injury done to their relations, or because they were all consecrated to Beelphegor; the first-born to be his priests, the rest to be victims, if necessary, to avert any evil. But he preserved the lives of those girls who might be presumed innocent, and who might live to do good, while he took the revenge of the Lord (ver. 3) upon the rest. H.

VER. 19. Shall be. Heb. "purify yourselves and your captives on the," &c.

hath killed a man, or touched one that is killed, shall be purified the third day and the seventh day.

20 And of all the spoil, every garment, or vessel, or any thing made for use, of the skins, or hair of goats, or of wood, shall be purified.

21 Eleazar also, the priest, spoke to the men of the army that had fought, in this manner: 'This is the ordinance of the law,' which the Lord hath commanded Moses:

22 Gold, and silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin,

23 And all that may pass through the fire, shall be purified by fire; but whatsoever cannot abide the fire, shall be sanctified with the water of expiation:

24 And you shall wash your garments the seventh day, and being purified, you shall afterwards enter into the camp.

25 And the Lord said to Moses:

26 Take the sum of the things that were taken, both of man and beast, thou, and Eleazar the priest, and the princes of the multitude:

27 And thou shalt divide the spoil equally, between them that fought and went out to the war, and between the rest of the multitude.

28 And thou shalt separate a portion to the Lord from them that fought and were in the battle, one soul of five hundred, as well of persons as of oxen and asses and sheep,

29 And thou shalt give it to Eleazar the priest, because they are the first-fruits of the Lord.

30 Out of the moiety also of the children of Israel, thou shalt take the fiftieth head of persons, and of oxen, and asses, and sheep, and of all beasts, and thou shalt give them to the Levites, that watch in the charge of the tabernacle of the Lord.

31 And Moses and Eleazar did as the Lord had commanded.

32 And the spoil which the army had taken, was six hundred seventy-five thousand sheep,

33 Seventy-two thousand oxen,

34 Sixty-one thousand asses:

35 And thirty-two thousand persons of the female sex, that had not known men.

36 And one half was given to them that had been in the battle, to wit, three hundred thirty-seven thousand five hundred sheep:

37 Out of which, for the portion of the Lord, were reckoned six hundred seventy-five sheep.

^a Lev. vi. 28, and xi. 33, and xv. 11.

The girls, and all the booty, might probably be rendered unclean by the presence of a corpse, &c. Chap. xix. 14.

VER. 23. Expiation, with which even the vessels which had been through the fire were to be purified, or washed, as the Heb., Sept., &c. observe. C.—Moses perhaps gave this ordinance by word of mouth, on this occasion, (M.) though something similar be prescribed before. Lev. vi. 28; xi. 33; xv. 12.

VER. 27. Equally. Those who had been in battle had about a fiftieth part more than the rest. They gave the first-fruits to the priests, while those in the camp presented theirs to the Levites. Other rules were afterwards observed. See 1 Kings xxx. 24; 2 Mac. viii. 28. C.

VER. 32. Spoil. Heb. "the remains of the spoil," which had not been consumed by the 12,000. C.

38 And out of the thirty-six thousand oxen, seventy-two oxen:

39 Out of the thirty thousand asses, sixty-one asses:

40 Out of the sixteen thousand persons, there fell to the portion of the Lord thirty-two souls.

41 And Moses delivered the number of the first-fruits of the Lord to Eleazar the priest, as had been commanded him, 42 Out of the half of the children of Israel, which he had separated for them that had been in the battle.

43 But out of the half that fell to the rest of the multitude, that is to say, out of the three hundred thirty seven thousand five hundred sheep,

44 And out of the thirty-six thousand oxen,

45 And out of the thirty thousand five hundred asses,

46 And out of the sixteen thousand persons,

47 Moses took the fiftieth head, and gave it to the Levites that watched in the tabernacle of the Lord, as the Lord had commanded.

48 And when the commanders of the army, and the tribunes, and centurions were come to Moses, they said:

49 We, thy servants, have reckoned up the number of the fighting men, whom we had under our hand, and not so much as one was wanting.

50 Therefore we offer as gifts to the Lord, what gold every one of us could find in the booty, in garters and tablets, rings and bracelets, and chains, that thou mayst pray to the Lord for us.

51 And Moses, and Eleazar the priest, received all the gold in divers kinds, 52 In weight sixteen thousand seven hundred and fifty sicles, from the tribunes and from the centurions.

53 For that which every one had taken in the booty was his own.

54 And that which was received, they brought into the tabernacle of the testimony, for a memorial of the children of Israel before the Lord.

CHAP. XXXII.

The tribes of Ruben and Gad, and half of the tribe of Manasses, receive their inheritance on the east side of the Jordan, upon conditions approved of by Moses.

AND the sons of Ruben and Gad^b had many flocks of cattle, and their substance in beasts was infinite. And when they saw the lands of Jazer and Galaad fit for feeding cattle,

2 They came to Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and the princes of the multitude, and said:

answered to their names." Thus God was pleased to show that his providence had directed the battle. H.

VER. 50. Garters. Sept. "bracelets," put on the arm, 2 Kings i. 10. Sometimes the Eastern nations wore large precious rings on their legs.—Tablets. Heb. tsomid, an ornament of the hand. Gen. xxiv. 22. The armilla, or virilia, were worn by men near the shoulder.—Bracelets, (dextralia), for the right hand. Eccli. xxi. 12. Reu. agil, means an ear-ring, Ezec. xvi. 12.—Chains of gold and silver interlaced, worn round the neck. S. Jerom, ep. ad Marcell. The Madianites went to battle in their richest attire, (Judges vi. 21,) as did also the Persians; (Bellon. 2;) and the Turks do so still, (C.) being descended from Ismael, the half brother of Madian, who both settled in Arabia. H.

CHAP. XXXII. VER. 3. Saban, and Nebo. These towns were afterwards retaken by the Moabites. Isa. xv. 2, 8.—Beon. Perhaps the same with Mehon, or Beth Baal Mehon. Jos. xiii. 17. C.

4 The land which the Lord hath conquered in the sight of the children of Israel, is a very fertile soil for the feeding of beasts: and we, thy servants, have very much cattle:

5 And we pray thee, if we have found favour in thy sight, that thou give it to us, thy servants, in possession, and make us not pass over the Jordan.

6 And Moses answered them: What, shall your brethren go to fight, and will you sit here?

7 Why do ye overturn the minds of the children of Israel, that they may not dare to pass into the place which the Lord hath given them?

8 Was it not thus your fathers did, when I sent from Cades-barne to view the land?

9 *And when they were come as far as the valley of the cluster, having viewed all the country, they overturned the hearts of the children of Israel, that they should not enter into the coasts, which the Lord gave them.

10 ^bAnd he swore in his anger, saying:

11 If these men, that came up out of Egypt, from twenty years old and upward, shall see the land which I promised with an oath to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: because they would not follow me, 12 Except Caleb, the son of Jephone, the Cenezite, and Josue, the son of Nun: these have fulfilled my will.

13 And the Lord being angry against Israel, led them about through the desert forty years, until the whole generation, that had done evil in his sight, was consumed.

14 And behold, said he, you are risen up instead of your fathers, the increase and offspring of sinful men, to augment the fury of the Lord against Israel.

15 For if you will not follow him, he will leave the people in the wilderness, and you shall be the cause of the destruction of all.

16 But they coming near, said: We will make sheepfolds, and stalls for our cattle, and strong cities for our children.

17 And we ourselves will go armed and ready for battle before the children of Israel, until we bring them in unto their places. Our little ones, and all we have, shall be in walled cities, for fear of the ambushes of the inhabitants.

18 We will not return into our houses, until the children of Israel possess their inheritance:

19 Neither will we seek any thing beyond the Jordan, because we have already our possession on the east side thereof.

20 And Moses said to them: *If you do what you promise, go on well appointed for war before the Lord:

21 And let every fighting man pass over the Jordan until the Lord overthrow his enemies,

22 And all the land be brought under him: then shall you be blameless before the Lord and before Israel, and you shall obtain the countries that you desire, before the Lord.

23 But if you do not what you say, no man can doubt but you sin against God: and know ye that your sin shall overtake you.

24 Build therefore cities for your children, and folds and stalls for your sheep and beasts: and accomplish what you have promised.

25 *And the children of Gad and Ruben said to Moses: We are thy servants, we will do what my lord commandeth.

26 We will leave our children, and our wives, and sheep, and cattle, in the cities of Galaad:

27 And we, thy servants, all well appointed, will march on to the war, as thou my lord speakest.

28 Moses therefore commanded Eleazar the priest, and Josue, the son of Nun, and the princes of the families of all the tribes of Israel, and said to them:

29 *If the children of Gad, and the children of Ruben, pass with you over the Jordan, all armed for war before the Lord, and the land be made subject to you: give them Galaad in possession.

30 But if they will not pass armed with you into the land of Chanaan, let them receive places to dwell in among you.

31 And the children of Gad, and the children of Ruben, answered: As the Lord hath spoken to his servants, so will we do:

32 We will go armed before the Lord into the land of Chanaan, and we confess that we have already received our possession beyond the Jordan.

33 Moses therefore gave to the children of Gad and of Ruben, and to the half tribe of Manasses, the son of Joseph, the kingdom of Sehon, king of the Amorrites, and the kingdom of Og, king of Basan, and their land and the cities thereof round about.

34 And the sons of Gad built Dibon, and Ataroth, and Aroer, country: 70,580 remained in the cities; while 40,000 went before their brethren. See chap. xxvi. 7, 18; and Jos. iv. 13.

VER. 19. Jordan. Heb. adds, "or forward," any where, in case fresh conquests be made. C.

VER. 34. Built, or repaired; for they had been cities of the Amorrites before.—Aroer was occupied by the Moabites after the Israelites were led into captivity. Jer. xlviii. 1, 19.

VER. 35. Sophan. Some believe that this is the same city with Etroth, and that it took its name from Saphon, the son of Gad. Chap. xxvi. 15.—Jegbaa perhaps the Beon, ver. 3. See Judg. viii. 11.

36 And Bethnemra, and Betharan, fenced cities, and folds for their cattle.

37 But the children of Ruben built Hesebon, and Eleale, and Cariathaim, 38 And Nabo, and Baalmeon, (their names being changed,) and Sabama: giving names to the cities which they had built.

39 *Moreover the children of Machir, the son of Manasses, went into Galaad, and wasted it, cutting off the Amorrites, the inhabitants thereof.

40 And Moses gave the land of Galaad to Machir, the son of Manasses, and he dwelt in it.

41 And Jair, the son of Manasses, went and took the villages thereof, and he called them Havoth Jair, that is to say, the villages of Jair.

42 Nobe also went, and took Canath, with the villages thereof: and he called it by his own name, Nobe.

CHAP. XXXIII.

The mansions or journeys of the children of Israel towards the land of promise.

THESE are the mansions of the children of Israel, who went out of Egypt by their troops, under the conduct of Moses and Aaron,

2 Which Moses wrote down according to the places of their encamping, which they changed by the commandment of the Lord.

3 Now the children of Israel departed from Ramesses the first month, on the fifteenth day of the first month, the day after the Phase, with a mighty hand, in the sight of all the Egyptians,

4 Who were burying their first-born, whom the Lord had slain^b (upon their gods also he had executed vengeance),

5 And they camped in Soccoth.

6 And from Soccoth they came into Etham, which is in the uttermost borders of the wilderness.

7 *Departing from thence, they came over against Phihahiroth, which looketh towards Beelsephon, and they camped before Magdalum.

8 And departing from Phihahiroth, they passed through the midst of the sea, into the wilderness:^d and having

VER. 38. Nabo. Probably the same as Nebo and Nobe.—Baalmeon. This city had a variety of names, ver. 3, 35. Those who rebuilt these cities gave them their own names, ver. 42. Heb. Targum of Jerus. Yet they were often known by their former appellations. C.

VER. 40. In it, by means of his descendants. For Machir must have been above 250 years old, if he were still alive. Many children are attributed to Machir and his father, Manasses, who were not their immediate offspring. The latter had only Machir, who survived him; Ezriel was probably a grandson of Machir, as he is styled the son of Galaad. Chap. xxvi. 31; Jos. xvii. 2. See 1 Par. vii. Adoptive and legal children are often confounded with those who are really born of a person, as also those places which are inhabited by his posterity. C.

VER. 41. Jair was born of Segub, the son of Esron, by a daughter of Machir, 1 Par. i. 21. He did not remain in the tribe of Juda, but dwelt in that of his mother (C.); or perhaps he married a descendant of Machir, and obtained these villages. Scl. Suc. c. 18.—Havoth, means "a circle of cabins or shepherds' huts," in Arabic. Bochart.

CHAP. XXXIII. VER. 1. The mansions. These mansions, or journeys of the children of Israel from Egypt to the land of promise, were figures, according to the Fathers, of the steps and degrees by which Christians, leaving sin, are to advance from virtue to virtue, till they come to the heavenly mansions, after this life, to see and enjoy God. Ch.

13 And departing from Daphca, they camped in Alus.

14 And departing from Alus, they pitched their tents in Raphidim, where the people wanted water to drink.

15 And departing from Raphidim, they camped in the desert of Sinai.

16 But departing also from the desert^a of Sinai, they came to the graves of lust.

17 And departing from the graves of lust, they camped in Haseroth.

18 ^bAnd from Haseroth they came to Rethma

19 And departing from Rethma, they camped in Remmonphares.

20 And they departed from thence, and came to Lebna.

VER. 37. Hor, at a place called Mosera. Deut. x. 6. This was the road from Arabia to Chanaan, and the Hebrews attempted to enter by it, but were repulsed by the king of Arad, though they afterwards defeated him at Horma. Chap. xxi. 3.

VER. 41. Salmona, where it is thought by some that God sent the fiery serpents. Chap. xxi. 6. C.

VER. 45. Dibongad, is often called Dibon. It is sometimes attributed to Ruben, and at other times to Gad, being on the confines of both tribes. C.

VER. 52. Pillars. Heb. stones placed on high "to be seen." Sept. "towers of the sentinels." Chal. "temples, where they adore their idols."

VER. 53. Land of its old inhabitants, and of the places dedicated to superstitious purposes. H.—Heb. "occupy the land." Sept. "drive out the inhabitants, and dwell there."

When you shall have passed over the Jordan, entering into the land of Chanaan,

52 Destroy all the inhabitants of that land: beat down their pillars, and break in pieces their statues, and waste all their high places,

53 Cleansing the land, and dwelling in it. For I have given it you for a possession.

54 And you shall divide it among you by lot. To the more you shall give a larger part, and to the fewer a lesser. To every one as the lot shall fall, so shall the inheritance be given. The possession shall be divided by the tribes and the families:

55 But if you will not kill the inhabitants of the land: they that remain, shall be unto you as nails in your eyes, and spears in your sides, and they shall be your adversaries in the land of your habitation.

56 And whatsoever I had thought to do to them I will do to you.

CHAP. XXXIV.

The limits of Chanaan; with the names of the men that shall make the division of it.

AND the Lord spoke to Moses, *saying:

2 Command the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them: When you are entered into the land of Chanaan, and it shall be fallen unto your possession by lot, it shall be bounded by these limits:

3 ^bThe south side shall begin from the wilderness of Sin, which is by Edom: and shall have the most salt sea for its furthest limits eastward:

4 Which limits shall go round on the south side by the ascent of the Scorpion, and so into Senna, and reach toward the south as far as Cades-barne, from whence the frontiers shall go out to the town called Adar, and shall reach as far as Asemona.

5 And the limits shall fetch a compass from Asemona to the torrent of Egypt, and shall end in the shore of the great sea.

6 And the west side shall begin from the great sea, and the same shall be the end thereof.

7 But toward the north side, the borders shall begin from the great sea, reaching to the most high mountain,

VER. 55. Nails. Sept. "goads," &c., by which they will force you in a manner to gratify your curiosity, by an imitation of their idol worship; and thus will prove to you more dangerous than if you had nails piercing your eyes. See Jos. xxiii. 13; Eze. xxviii. 24. C.—The Israelites, however, proved negligent, and God made use of the remains of these nations to scourge his people, and to train them for war. D.

CHAP. XXXIV. VER. 3. The most salt sea. The lake of Sodom, otherwise called the Dead Sea. Ch.

VER. 4. The Scorpion. A mountain so called, from having a great number of scorpions. Ch.—Heb. Akrabbim. There was a city of the same name, the capital of Aerabathene, (1 Mac. iii. 3,) not far from Petra.—Senna, a town of the desert of Zin, (C.) or a mountain specified Judg. i. 36. S. Jerom.—Adar. Heb. "Hasor Adar." But they seem to be two distinct towns. Jos. xv. 3.—Asemona. See chap. xxxiii. 30.

VER. 5. Egypt. Many suppose the rivulet of Rinocorura is meant. M.—But it seems more probable that the Nile, the only river of Egypt, or the eastern branch of it, where Pelusium stands, is designated. C.

VER. 6. Great sea, compared with those of Palestine, which were only like pools or lakes. The Hebrews call every great collection of water a sea. The Mediterranean bounded the promised land entirely, on the west.

VER. 7. The most high mountain. Libanus. Ch.—Heb. "the mountain of the mountain, or of Hor." Some understand Mount Casius, Hermon, Taurus, or Amanus; which last lies on the confines of Cilicia, and hence the Rabbin draw a line by the straits of Gibraltar to Pelusium, so as to comprise all the islands and the waters of the Mediterranean. Selden. Marc. claus. l. 6. But Grotius denies that the sea can be claimed by any one, nor was it, even for fishing, says he, be-

8 From which they shall come to Emath, as far as the borders of Sedada :

9 And the limits shall go as far as Zephrona, and the village of Enan. These shall be the borders on the north side.

10 From thence they shall mark out the bounds towards the east side, from the village of Enan unto Sephama,

11 And from Sephama the bounds shall go down to Rebla, over against the fountain of Daphnis : from thence they shall come eastward to the sea of Cenereth, 12 And shall reach as far as the Jordan, and at the last shall be closed in by the most salt sea. This shall be your land with its borders round about.

13 And Moses commanded the children of Israel, saying : This shall be the land which you shall possess by lot, and which the Lord hath commanded to be given to the nine tribes, and to the half tribe.

14 For the tribe of the children of Ruben by their families, and the tribe of the children of Gad according to the number of their kindreds, and half of the tribe of Manasses, 15 That is, two tribes and a half, have received their portion beyond the Jordan, over against Jericho, at the east side.

16 And the Lord said to Moses :

17 ^aThese are the names of the men, that shall divide the land unto you : Eleazar the priest, and Josue, the son of Nun,

18 And one prince of every tribe,

19 Whose names are these : Of the tribe of Juda, Caleb, the son of Jephone.

20 Of the tribe of Simeon, Samuel, the son of Ammiud.

21 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Elidad, the son of Chaselon.

22 Of the tribe of the children of Dan, Bocci, the son of Jogli.

fore the days of Justinian. Jur. ii. 2, 3. C.—At any rate Moses here seems to mean the northern limits from the point of the Mediterranean where Libanus is situated, across the country eastward to Emath, and as far as the village of Enan, ver. 9. H.

VER. 8. Emath. It is of great importance to fix the situation of this city. Some take it to be Antioch, the capital of Syria, on the Orontes. But that was a modern city, founded by Nicanor, and called after his father, Antiochus, and embellished by Callinicus and Epiphanes. Strabo 16.—Others believe it is Epiphania, at the foot of Libanus, on the same river, and a distinct city from Emath Rabba, or “the great,” of Amos vi. 2. Josephus i. 7, (C.) and S. Jerom (in Isa. x.) seem to be of this opinion. M.—But the city in question was most probably Eimesa, of which Amos speaks above. It was also upon the river Orontes, at a small distance to the east of Libanus, on the road to Damascus. This road was the northern boundary. Eimesa was perhaps formerly the capital of the country of Soba, (2 Par. viii. 3,) and was taken by Solomon. Reblatha, or Rebla, (ver. 11,) was a part of its territory. Theod. in Jer. xxxix. 5. C.

VER. 11. Sephama, or Apamea. Targum.—Rebla. Sept. “Bela, or Asbela.” H.—S. Jerom understands Antioch, near which was the fountain of Daphnis, or Daphne, a word which is inserted in the Targum, though it be not found in Hebrew. But Antioch did not lie on the eastern borders, and this fountain may be the same place as Enan, ver. 9.—Against. Heb. “on the east side of Ain, or the fountain.” C.—Cenereth. This is the sea of Galilee, illustrated by the miracles of our Lord. Ch.—The line was not drawn to this lake of Genesareth, or of Tiberias, as it was likewise called, but comprised a large territory lying to the east of it, (C.) and given to the tribes of Manasses, Gad, and Ruben, which inhabited the country east of the Jordan and of the salt sea. H.—Eastward: the Sept. insinuate, “to the south, leaving the sea of Cenereth on the east.” M.—It appears that Moses has only in view the nine tribes for which a provision was not yet made; and their eastern limits extend from Emath, down the Jordan to the Dead Sea, so as to comprise no part to the east of that river, which was already given to their brethren; (see ver. 13, 15, 29;) and thus the observation of Calmet, respecting the countries east of Cenereth, will be rather inaccurate, as the line must run through that sea, following the course of the Jordan. These were pro-

23 Of the children of Joseph of the tribe of Manasses, Hanniel, the son of Ephod.

24 Of the tribe of Ephraim, Camuel, the son of Sephtan.

25 Of the tribe of Zabulon, Elisaphan, the son of Phamach.

26 Of the tribe of Issachar, Phaltiel, the prince, the son of Ozan.

27 Of the tribe of Aser, Ahiud, the son of Salomi.

28 Of the tribe of Nephtali, Phedael, the son of Ammiud.

29 These are they whom the Lord hath commanded to divide the land of Chanaan to the children of Israel.

CHAP. XXXV.

Cities are appointed for the Levites. Of which six are to be the cities of refuge.

AND the Lord spoke^b these things also to Moses, in the plains of Moab, by the Jordan, over against Jericho :

2 ^cCommand the children of Israel, that they give to the Levites out of their possessions,

3 Cities to dwell in, and their suburbs round about : that they may abide in the towns, and the suburbs may be for their cattle and beasts :

4 Which suburbs shall reach from the walls of the cities outward, a thousand paces on every side :

5 Toward the east shall be two thousand cubits : and toward the south in like manner shall be two thousand cubits : toward the sea also, which looketh to the west, shall be the same extent : and the north side shall be bounded with the like limits. And the cities shall be in the midst, and the suburbs without.

6 ^dAnd among the cities, which you shall give to the Levites, six shall be separated for refuge to fugitives, that he who hath shed blood may flee to them : and besides these there shall be other forty-two cities, perly the eastern limits of Chanaan, which country comprised all between Egypt and Idumea, as far as Sidon and Mount Libanus, being bounded by the Jordan on the east. The other three tribes were hemmed in on the north and east by the mountains of Hermon, Basan, Galaad, and Arnou; beyond which the nations about Damascus, and the descendants of Ammon, Ismael, and Moab dwelt, in Syria and the desert of Arabia, so that the latter country was the eastern boundary of the promised land, taken in its utmost extent. H.

CHAP. XXXV. VER. 3. Cities, in all forty-eight, with a thousand paces round them. This land belonged to the community : but some built upon it, Jos. xxi. 18; 1 Par. vi. 60. The burial-place for the Levites lay behind it. Drusius.—The Levites were dispersed throughout the land, that they might instruct the people both by word and by example. Deut. xxxiii. 10. They had a clear revenue without labour of husbandry, equivalent to any two of the other tribes. Abulensis.

VER. 4. Paces. This is equivalent to 2000 cubits, (ver. 5,) or a sabbath day's journey, Selden, Jur. iii. 9. S. Jerom q. 9, ad algas. Heb. retains the same word, amma, “cubit,” in both verses : but some copies of the Sept., Philo, and Josephus, have “2000 cubits,” (C.) which Dr. Wall and Kennicott deem to be the original reading. H.—Bonfrere would also correct the Hebrew by the Vulgate as a pace among the Greeks consisted of three feet, and a cubit of half the quantity. The geometric pace of the Romans contained five feet, and the sacred cubit of Villalpand half as much; so that 2000 sacred cubits make 1000 geometric paces. Thus the Vulgate is perfectly consistent with itself. M.

VER. 6. Cities. Moses had promised a place of refuge, which he now grants. Exod. xxi. 13. The altar and temple enjoyed the like privilege : the latter even till its destruction. Philo.—Josephus mentions only six cities of refuge. Those who could not be supposed to have killed a person designedly were not obliged to flee to them; as, on the other hand, the murderer was not permitted to enter if his malice were notorious, or his negligence extreme. Rabbin ep. Seld. Jur. iv. 2. To be secured at the altar of holocausts it was necessary to touch the grate. If the judges declared that the person's case was such as the law admitted, he was conducted away, under a strong guard, to one of the cities; or, if he were deemed unworthy, he was put to death, out of the holy place. The altar was commonly 7 That is, in all forty-eight, with their suburbs.

8 And of these cities which shall be given out of the possessions of the children of Israel, from them that have more, more shall be taken: and from them that have less, fewer. Each shall give towns to the Levites according to the extent of their inheritance.

9 The Lord said to Moses:

10 Speak to the children of Israel, and thou shalt say to them: When you shall have passed over the Jordan into the land of Chanaan, 11 Determine what cities shall be for the refuge of fugitives, who have shed blood against their will.

12 And when the fugitive shall be in them, the kinsman of him that is slain may not have power to kill him, until he stand before the multitude, and his cause be judged.

13 *And of those cities, that are separated for the refuge of fugitives,

14 Three shall be beyond the Jordan, and three in the land of Chanaan, 15 As well for the children of Israel as for strangers and sojourners, that he may flee to them, who hath shed blood against his will.

16 If any man strike with iron, and he die that was struck: he shall be guilty of murder, and he himself shall die.

17 If he throw a stone, and he that is struck die: he shall be punished in the same manner.

18 If he that is struck with wood, die: he shall be revenged by the blood of him that struck him.

19 The kinsman of him that was slain, shall kill the murderer: as soon as he apprehendeth him, he shall kill him.

20 ^bIf through hatred any one push a man, or fling any thing at him with ill design:

21 Or being his enemy, strike him with his hand, and the refuge only of priests. The roads to the cities of refuge were to be kept in good repair, and in case more than six should be found necessary, three others might be appointed. Deut. xix. 3, 8. This privilege is founded on the law of nature, which decrees that the life of the innocent man, who has had the misfortune to kill another, should not be taken away. Other nations extended this right to almost every crime, that the weak might have an opportunity of defending themselves. Rome itself was an asylum for all strangers, as S. Aug. remarks, de C. D. 1. The Christian emperors afforded the like privileges to our churches. But some who were guilty of the crimes of adultery, murder, heresy, &c., were deprived of the benefit. C.

VER. 12. Kinsman, the nearest relation, who was called the revenger of blood, (ver. 25, 27, H.) or the redeemer, because it was his duty to see that justice was done to the deceased. When the person, who had involuntarily committed murder, arrived at the city, he was to make his appearance before the judges of it, and, if they thought his account satisfactory, they admitted him, but upon condition that he should take his trial before the judges and the people of that country where the murder had taken place, (ver. 25; Jos. xx. 4, 9, T.) though some think that the judges of the city of refuge passed sentence. Masius, &c.—If it proved favourable, he was bound to remain in the city till the death of the high priest, otherwise the relations might kill him as an outlaw; as they might also if he was declared guilty.

VER. 18. If, &c. Heb. "or he smite him with a wooden weapon, (where-with he may die,) and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death." The two former verses are expressed in the same awful manner, intimating that the weapon must be of such a nature that it might easily give a mortal wound, and also that the effect really followed. In these cases, if the person could not clear himself, no refuge or reprieve was allowed. H.—But the deceased must have been killed upon the spot, otherwise the person who struck him could only be required to pay a fine. Exod. xxi. 19. M.

VER. 19. Him, with impunity. If the judges have passed sentence, he shall be obliged to put it in execution, ver. 21, 31. S. Aug. q. 65. E.

VER. 21. Kill him. It seems, when the case was evident, he was not only permitted, but commanded to punish the criminal. Bonfrere. Deut. xix. 12. M he die: the striker shall be guilty of murder: the kinsman of him that was slain, as soon as he findeth him, shall kill him.

22 But if by chance-médley, and without hatred,

23 And enmity, he do any of these things,

24 And this be proved in the hearing of the people, and the cause be debated between him that struck, and the next of kin:

25 The innocent shall be delivered from the hand of the revenger, and shall be brought back by sentence into the city, to which he had fled, and he shall abide there until the death of the high priest, that is anointed with the holy oil.

26 If the murderer be found without the limits of the cities that are appointed for the banished, 27 And be struck by him that is the avenger of blood: he shall not be guilty that killed him.

28 For the fugitive ought to have stayed in the city until the death of the high priest: and after he is dead, then shall the manslayer return to his own country.

29 These things shall be perpetual, and for an ordinance in all your dwellings.

30 The murderer shall be punished by witnesses: none shall be condemned upon the evidence of one man.

31 You shall not take money of him that is guilty of blood, but he shall die forthwith.

32 The banished and fugitives before the death of the high priest may by no means return into their own cities.

33 Defile not the land of your habitation, which is stained with the blood of the innocent: neither can it otherwise be expiated, but by his blood that hath shed the blood of another.

34 And thus shall your possession be cleansed, myself abiding with you. For I am the Lord that dwell among the children of Israel.

VER. 25. Delivered. Heb. "the multitude shall deliver the slayer." It seems the judges pronounced sentence according to the votes of the people assembled (C.); or the plurality of voices among the twenty-one judges decided the matter. Grot. H.—High priest. This mystically signified that our deliverance was to be effected by the death of Christ, the high priest and the anointed of God. Ch.—By this law Moses showed a horror for murder, and the respect due to the person of the high priest, during whose life even the involuntary murderer was obliged to keep himself retired in a city of refuge. Masius.—At the death of the pontiff all Israel put on mourning, so that private injuries were to be forgotten, when the public had such cause for sorrow; and in the mean time the vengeance of kinsmen would relent. Maimon. More. iii. 40. C.

VER. 27. Him. Custom explained this law, as giving leave to any person to inflict the punishment upon the wandering murderer, though the relation seem only to be specified. Grot.—Some think that to kill such a person was still criminal in the sight of God. But others believe that, as he had forfeited the privilege of an asylum, by absenting himself from it, (C.) the law subjected him to the same rigour with which he might have been treated before he came thither (ver. 19, H.); and provided proper moderation were observed, and malicious revenge avoided, no guilt would attach to him who executed the implied sentence of death. The Jews observe, that God allows us to revenge another sooner than ourselves, as there is less danger of excess or of delusion. C.

VER. 30. Man. A person might be tried on such evidence. Deut. xix. 15.

VER. 32. Cities. Heb. "you shall take no money to retire to a city of refuge, to return into his own country, till the death of the priest." The Sept. supply, "you shall take no redemption money, to permit (a voluntary murderer) to flee into a city of refuge, (nor of an involuntary one,) to return," &c. Grotius.

VER. 33. Defile not. To inspire a greater horror for murder the earth was represented as defiled by blood, and only to be purified by the death of the criminal. Without shedding of blood, there is no remission. Heb. ix. 22. H.—On the same principle, our churches, &c. are deemed profane when murder, or some great indecencies, have been committed in them, so that they require a fresh consecration. C.

CHAP. XXXVI.

That the inheritances may not be alienated from one tribe to another, all are to marry within their own tribes.

AND the princes of the families of Galaad,^a the son of Machir, the son of Manasses, of the stock of the children of Joseph, came: and spoke to Moses before the princes of Israel, and said:

2 The Lord hath commanded thee, my lord, that thou shouldst divide the land by lot to the children of Israel, and that thou shouldst give to the daughters of Salphaad, our brother, the possession due to their father:

3 Now if men of another tribe take them to wives, their possession will follow them, and being transferred to another tribe, will be a diminishing of our inheritance.

4 And so it shall come to pass, that when the jubilee, that is the fiftieth year of remission, is come, the distribution made by the lots shall be confounded, and the possession of the one shall pass to the others.

5 Moses answered the children of Israel, and said by the command of the Lord: The tribe of the children of Joseph hath spoken rightly.

6 And this is the law, promulgated by the Lord, touch-

^a Supra, xxvii. 1.

CHAP. XXXVI. VER. 4. That is, an explanation of the jubilee, added by S. Jerom, who gives the sense of the Heb., though not the very words.—Lots. Heb. "when the jubilee of the children of Israel is come, then shall their inheritance be added to that of the tribe in which they are received; so shall their inheritance be taken away from the inheritance of the tribe of our fathers." H.

VER. 6. Tribe. Heb. adds family also: for heiresses were obliged to marry in their own family, to prevent the confusion of the inheritances. If they had a mind to renounce their right, they were at liberty to marry where they pleased. C.—The nearest relations, who chose to receive their land, were under an obligation of marrying them. Ruth iv. 6. H.

VER. 7. Wives. Heb. "shall keep to the inheritance of the tribe of his fathers." Those who marry heiresses must be of the same family: but others may take wives from any of the tribes of Israel, as the most holy did without scruple. S. Jerom in Jer. xxxii. T. E.

ing the daughters of Salphaad: "Let them marry to whom they will, only so that it be to men of their own tribe:

7 Lest the possession of the children of Israel be mingled from tribe to tribe. For all men shall marry wives of their own tribe and kindred:

8 And all women shall take husbands of the same tribe: that the inheritance may remain in the families.

9 And that the tribes be not mingled one with another, but remain so

10 As they were separated by the Lord. And the daughters of Salphaad did as was commanded:

11 And Maala, and Thersa, and Hegla, and Melcha, and Noa, were married to the sons of their uncle, by their father

12 Of the family of Manasses, who was the son of Joseph: and the possession that had been allotted to them, remained in the tribe and family of their father.

13 These are the commandments and judgments, which the Lord commanded by the hand of Moses to the children of Israel, in the plains of Moab, upon the Jordan, over against Jericho.

^b Tobias vii. 14.

VER. 8. Women. Heb. "every daughter that possesseth an inheritance . . shall be wife to one of the family of the tribe of her father." Commonly the females were debarred from inheriting land, when they had any brothers. The Levites were not concerned in these regulations, as they had no inheritance; and hence, we need not be surprised to find that S. Elizabeth, of the daughters of Aaron, (Luc. i. 36,) was related to the blessed Virgin, who was of the family of David. C.—Tradition determined the lawfulness of such marriages, and in this case S. Augustine (Cousens. Ev. ii. 2) admires the providence of God, in causing his beloved Son, the great Anointed, to be born both of the regal and priestly tribes, in which an unction was required before the priests and kings were put in possession of their respective offices. Thus Christ was both priest and king, and such were anointed in the law of Moses. W.

VER. 11. Father. They married their cousin-germans. The original is rather undecisive, as Dud may signify, "an uncle, great uncle, or cousin;" and a son, in Scripture, is often put for any descendant. D.

THE BOOK OF DEUTERONOMY.

This Book is called DEUTERONOMY, which signifies a SECOND LAW, because it repeats and inculcates the ordinances formerly given on Mount Sinai, with other precepts not expressed before. The Hebrews, from the first words in the Book, call it, ELLE HADDEBARIM. Ch.—It may be divided into many discourses, which Moses made to the people during the two last months of his life. H.—The first was delivered by him on the first day of the eleventh month of the fortieth year, since the deliverance of the Hebrews out of Egypt, and relates various particulars which had occurred to them. In chap. iv. 41, and seq., a supplement from the Book of Numbers is given to this discourse. Chap. v., a fresh exhortation to the people commences, which continues till chap. xxvii., where the famous blessings and maledictions, from the mountains of Garizim and Hebal, are related. In the following chapters, Moses exhorts the people, in the most pathetic manner, to be faithful to the Lord, adding the strongest threats and promises to enforce their compliance; and having appointed Josue to succeed him, and repeated that beautiful canticle which God ordered them to write, (chap. xxxi. 19,) he gives the Book of Deuteronomy, to be kept with care, (ver. 9,) blesses the tribes like a good and tender father, and gives up his soul to God on Mount Nebo, in the 120th year of his age. C.—There can be no doubt but that Moses was the author of this book, as well as of the four preceding ones; though the last chapter may, perhaps, form a part of the Book of Josue, which formerly was written immediately after the works of Moses, without any such marks of distinction as we find at present. The whole Bible seemed to make but one verse. How easily, therefore, might the account of the death of Moses be taken in, as forming a part of the Pentateuch, when the different books came to be distinguished by separate titles! Such an insertion cannot hurt the general claim of Moses to be the author of the Pentateuch; or, if it should be thought to do so, no absolute proof can be brought to show that he did not write this chapter also, by the spirit of prophecy. All the people spoke to Esdras, the scribe, to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the Lord had commanded, to Israel. The whole nation of the Jews has all along maintained that Moses wrote these books: and he himself repeatedly asserts that he was ordered to leave on record many things of importance. Hence both internal and external evidence concur to establish his title to them; and if we be not disposed to cavil with all other authors, and to deny that Demosthenes, for example, Caesar, and others, have written the works which bear their names, we must confess that the Pentateuch is to be attributed to the Jewish legislator. Yet if this were a matter of doubt, the things contained in these books could not, on that account, be controverted. How many anonymous works have been published which are of unquestionable authority! Many of the books of Scripture are of this nature. But as we have every reason to believe that they have come down to us without any material corruption, and were written by people of veracity, by Divine inspiration, they deserve to be regarded as authentic records. This is true, whether we speak of the originals or of the versions authorized by the Church; though it should suffice to stop the mouths of infidels, if we can procure an authentic history of the Bible by the collation of the different copies which are extant. Thus where the Hebrew editions appear to be incorrect, they may receive great light from the Samaritan copy of the Pentateuch, and from the versions of the Sept., and of other respectable authors on the whole Bible. The variations, which we may discover, are not of such moment, but that, if the very worst copy were selected, we should find the same great outlines of Scripture history, the same precepts of faith and morality. The laws of Moses, which are scattered through his five books, may be seen all together in their natural order, collected by Cornelius a Lapide and Calmet. But the Spirit of God was pleased to intersperse historical facts among them, which both show the occasion on which they were given, and enable us to read them with greater pleasure and satisfaction. The four preceding books might be compared to the four Gospels; Deuteronomy represents the whole, (V. Bede,) and may be styled a Diatesseron, as it recalls to our mind the great Creator of all things, who was about to fulfil the promises which he had made to the Patriarchs. Almost all those to whom Moses addresses himself, had been unborn or very young, when their parents received God's commands at Sinai, and wandered in the desert. He therefore gives them an account of what had happened during the last eventful period of forty years. He shows what had brought on so many disasters, and cautions his hearers, that if they imitate the perfidy of their fathers, as he foresees, with sorrow, that they will, (chap. xxxi.,) they must expect to be treated with no less severity. This prediction we behold verified, at the present day, in the persons of the scattered remnants of Israel. How sublime! how terrifying are the truths which Moses enforces with so much earnestness! The same threats which he denounces against the perfidious Jews regard us in some measure. If we feel not their effects at present, in being driven out from our country, we have more reason to fear lest we should be excluded from our heavenly inheritance, if we do not repent. H.

CHAPTER I.

A repetition of what passed at Sinai and Cades-barne: and of the people's murmuring, and their punishment.

THESE are the words, which Moses spoke to all Israel beyond the Jordan, in the plain wilderness, over against the Red Sea, between Pharan and Thophel, and Laban and Haseroth, where there is very much gold:

2 Eleven days' journey from Horeb, by the way of Mount Seir, to Cades-barne.

3 ^aIn the fortieth year, the eleventh month, the first day of the month, Moses spoke to the children of Israel, all that the Lord had commanded him to say to them:

4 ^bAfter that he had slain Sehon, king of the Amorrites, who dwelt in Hesebon: and Og, king of Basan, who abode in Astaroth, and in Edrai,

5 Beyond the Jordan in the land of Moab. And Moses began to expound the law, and to say:

6 The Lord our God spoke to us in Horeb, saying: You have stayed long enough in this mountain:

7 Turn you, and come to the mountain of the Amorrites, and to the other places that are next to it, the plains, and the hills, and the vales, towards the south, and by the sea shore, the land of the Chanaanites, and of Libanus, as far as the great river Euphrates.

8 Behold, said he, I have delivered it to you: go in and possess it, concerning which the Lord swore to your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, that he would give it to them, and to their seed after them.

9 And I said to you at that time:

10 ^cI alone am not able to bear you: for the Lord your God hath multiplied you, and you are this day as the stars of heaven, for multitude.

11 (The Lord God of your fathers add to this number many thousands, and bless you as he hath spoken.)

12 I alone am not able to bear your business, and the charge of you and your differences.

13 Let me have from among you wise and understanding men, and such whose conversation is approved among your tribes, that I may appoint them your rulers.

14 Then you answered me: The thing is good which thou meanest to do.

15 And I took out of your tribes men wise and honourable, and appointed them rulers, tribunes, and centurions, and officers over fifties, and over tens, who might teach you all things.

16 And I commanded them, saying: Hear them, and judge that which is just: ^dwhether he be one of your country, or a stranger.

17 ^eThere shall be no difference of persons, you shall hear the little as well as the great: neither shall you respect any man's person, because it is the judgment of God. And if any thing seem hard to you, refer it to me and I will hear it.

18 And I commanded you all things that you were to do.

19 And departing from Horeb, we passed through the terrible and vast wilderness, which you saw, by the way of the mountain of the Amorrhite, as the Lord our God had commanded us. And when we were come into Cades-barne, CHAP. I. VER. 1. Beyond. The eastern side of the Jordan is so called in Scripture, with reference to the promised land. M.—Heb. may mean also, "on this side, or at the passage" about Bethabara, "the house of passage," near which the Hebrews were encamped, and where Josue probably crossed over the Jordan, as it was the usual ford. Calmet seems to think that these two first verses have been inserted by Esdras, &c., or interpolated, as he says Moses never crossed the Jordan, and certainly addressed the Hebrews near that river, at a great distance from the Red Sea: but the text does not assert the contrary. It only determines that the place where he harangued them was a part of the wilderness, or the plains of Moab, over against the Red Sea, which they had left when they came from Asiongaber, unless the term Suph, which signifies red, may be a proper name of the station Supha, near the torrent Zared, (Num. xxi. 14,) as Calmet maintains. If this be admitted, this difficulty vanishes, for the camp of Israel was certainly over against, and not even remote from this place.

VER. 2. Cades-barne. All the distance between Horeb and the Jordan, by Mount Seir, on the road to Cades-barne, might have been travelled in eleven days' time, being about 300 miles; or the Hebrews were so long in going thither. Num. xxxiii. 17. C.—It was to punish the Israelites for their frequent rebellions that they were condemned to wander in that wilderness forty years. D.—They might have entered the promised land when they first came to Cades-barne, from Mount Horeb, (Num. xiii. 1, 27,) which, even by the circuitous road of Mount Seir, would not have taken them above eleven days. He mentions this to remind them of their folly. His discourse turns upon the chief occurrences of the forty years' journey; and hence, these are the words, (ver. 1,) may refer not only to what he was going to say, but also to the commands which he had already notified to the Israelites, from the passage of the Red Sea till the station Abelsetim, upon the banks of the Jordan. Num. xxxvi. 13. H.—Deuteronomy contains a recapitulation of the law, and therefore it was to be read aloud to all the people on the feast of tabernacles, every seventh year; and the new kings, or rulers of the Hebrews, were commanded to transcribe it, and every day read some part for the rule of their conduct. Chap. xvii. 18; and xxxi. 10. T.

VER. 3. Month, corresponding with our January, if the ecclesiastical calculation be followed; but if we date from Tisri, this eleventh month will be our July or August. Moses died on the 7th of the following month. D.

VER. 4. Astaroth signifies "sheep," particularly ewes, with their dugs distended with milk. Hence the Sidonians formed the idea of their Astarte, 1 Kings xi. 5. H.—The Rabbin say that Astaroth denotes large mountains, generally covered with sheep. Astaroth-Carnaim was the city. Euseb.—Here the famous Og resided, though he was defeated at Edrai, as the Heb. intimates. C.

VER. 5. Expound. He begins, as usual, with commemorating the wonders of God, in favour of an ungrateful people. This book may be considered as a supplement to the other four books. C.—We need not wonder, therefore, if we find some new observations.

VER. 7. Turn you. The Hebrews, after the passage of the Red Sea, seemed to turn their backs upon the promised land, to go southward. Now, therefore, they are ordered to bend their course to the north, and to enter Chanaan, (H.) on the western side of the lake of Sodom, where the Amorrhites dwelt. C.—Their mountain, and the other hills, and plains, and vales, (Heb. sephela, mentioned 1 Mac. xii. 38,) as far as the Nile and the Mediterranean, were the southern limits of the Chanaanites, whose country extended to Libanus. See Num. xxxiv. 11.—God promises also to deliver the country as far as the Euphrates to the Hebrews, provided they continue faithful to him. Chap. xix. 8. As they neglected this condition, they never possessed the whole country, not even that of Chanaan, unmolested. Yet the whole was tributary to them in the days of David and Solomon. S. Aug. q. 21. in Jos. Masius. T.

VER. 9. I said, following the advice of Jethro. Exod. xviii. 18.

VER. 15. Who, &c. Heb. and sotrim (officers like our sergeants, designed to publish and execute the sentence of the judges) over or among your tribes."

20 I said to you: You are come to the mountain of the Amorrite, which the Lord our God will give to us.

21 See the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee: go up and possess it, as the Lord our God hath spoken to thy fathers: fear not, nor be any way discouraged.

22 *And you came all to me, and said: Let us send men who may view the land, and bring us word what way we shall go up, and to what cities we shall go.

23 And because the saying pleased me, I sent of you twelve men, one of every tribe:

24 Who, when they had set forward, and had gone up to the mountains, came as far as the valley of the cluster: and having viewed the land,

25 Taking of the fruits thereof, to show its fertility, they brought them to us, and said: The land is good, which the Lord our God will give us.

26 And you would not go up, but being incredulous to the word of the Lord our God, 27 You murmured in your tents, and said: The Lord hateth us, and therefore he hath brought us out of the land of Egypt, that he might deliver us into the hand of the Amorrite, and destroy us.

28 Whither shall we go up? the messengers have terrified our hearts, saying: The multitude is very great, and taller than we: the cities are great, and walled up to the sky, we have seen the sons of the Enacims there.

29 And I said to you: Fear not, neither be ye afraid of them:

30 The Lord God, who is your leader, himself will fight for you, as he did in Egypt in the sight of all.

31 And in the wilderness (as thou hast seen) the Lord thy God hath carried thee, as a man is wont to carry his little son, all the way that you have come, until you came to this place.

32 And yet for all this you did not believe the Lord your God,

33 ^bWho went before you in the way, and marked out the place wherein you should pitch your tents; in the night showing you the way by fire, and in the day by the pillar of a cloud.

34 And when the Lord had heard the voice of your words, he was angry and swore, and said:

35 *Not one of the men of this wicked generation shall see the good land, which I promised with an oath to your fathers:

36 Except Caleb, the son of Jephone: for he shall see it, and to him I will give the land, that he hath trodden upon, and to his children, because he hath followed the Lord.

37 Neither is his indignation against the people to be wondered at, since the Lord was angry with me also on your account, and said: Neither shalt thou go in thither.

38 But Josue, the son of Nun, thy minister, he shall go in for thee: exhort and encourage him, and he shall divide the land by lot to Israel.

39 Your children, of whom you said that they should be led away captives, and your sons, who know not this day the difference of good and evil, they shall go in: and to them I will give the land, and they shall possess it.

40 But return you and go into the wilderness by the way of the Red Sea.

41 ^dAnd you answered me: We have sinned against the Lord: we will go up and fight, as the Lord our God hath commanded. And when you went ready armed unto the mountain, 42 The Lord said to me: Say to them: *Go not up, and fight not, for I am not with you: lest you fall before your enemies.

43 I spoke, and you hearkened not: but resisting the commandment of the Lord, and swelling with pride, you went up into the mountain.

44 And the Amorrite that dwelt in the mountains, coming out, and meeting you, chased you, as bees do and made slaughter of you from Seir as far as Horma.

45 And when you returned and wept before the Lord, he heard you not, neither would he yield to your voice.

46 So you abode in Cades-barne a long time.

CHAP. II.

They are forbid to fight against the Edomites, Moabites, and Ammonites. Their victory over Sehon, king of Hesebon.

AND departing from thence, we came into the wilderness, that leadeth to the Red Sea, as the Lord had spoken to me: and we compassed Mount Seir a long time.

2 And the Lord said to me:

3 You have compassed this mountain long enough go towards the north:

4 And command thou the people, saying: You shall pass by the borders of your brethren the children of Esau, who dwell in Seir, and they will be afraid of you.

5 Take ye then good heed that you stir not against them: For I will not give you of their land so much as the step of one foot can tread upon, because I have given Mount Seir to Esau, for a possession.

VER. 23. Pleased me. Even Moses was deceived by the appearance of providence: and God permitted the people to follow the directions of their cowardice, ver. 26, 32; chap. ix. 29; Num. xlii. 1. C.

VER. 26. Being. Heb. "but rebelled against, irritated, or rendered useless," &c. C.

VER. 30. For you. Sept. "he will defeat them along with you." For man must do something. S. Aug. q. 1.

VER. 37. Neither, &c. Heb. simply, "The Lord was also angry with me on your account," &c. Moses had been so long witness of the rebellions of the Hebrews, that at last he gave way to a certain diffidence, when he was ordered by God to give them water out of the rock. He was afraid that the Lord would not bear any longer with their repeated acts of ingratitude, nor work a miracle on this occasion. Chap. iii. 26; Num. xx. 12. H.—He had also consented to the sending of the twelve spies imprudently. D. Ver. 23.

VER. 39. Enil. These words were spoken by God to the Hebrews, after they had refused to go from Cades-barne, to take immediate possession of the land of Chanaan, and not after Moses had offended at the waters of contradiction, which happened only a short time before his death. H.

VER. 40. Sea. This they deferred complying with for a long time, (ver. 46,) and then they directed their course along Mount Seir, towards the west, and encamped at Hesmona. C.—Many years after, they arrived at a different branch of the Red Sea from that which they had crossed. Num. xxxiii. 30, 35. H.

VER. 46. Time. Heb. adds, "according to the days that you abode." All the time that the Hebrews spent in that neighbourhood they remained at Cades-barne. C.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Sea, encamping again at Mosera. When they were at Asiongaber they were ordered to go to the north, by the mountains of Idumea or of Seir. Being arrived at Cades, they attempted to penetrate into Chanaan, by the road of the spies, but were repulsed. Upon which they asked leave of the Idumeans to pass through their country, lying south of the Dead Sea, but could not obtain permission, and God would not suffer them to force a passage, but ordered them to go round their territories. Num. xx. and xxi. C.

6 You shall buy meats of them for money, and shall eat: you shall draw waters for money, and shall drink.

7 The Lord thy God hath blessed thee in every work of thy hands: the Lord thy God dwelling with thee, knoweth thy journey, how thou hast passed through this great wilderness for forty years, and thou hast wanted nothing.

8 And when we had passed by our brethren, the children of Esau, that dwelt in Seir, by the way of the plain from Elath, and from Asiongaber, we came to the way that leadeth to the desert of Moab.

9 And the Lord said to me: "Fight not against the Moabites, neither go to battle against them: for I will not give thee any of their land, because I have given Ar to the children of Lot in possession.

10 The Emims first were the inhabitants thereof, a people great, and strong, and so tall, that like the race of the Enacims, 11 They were esteemed as giants, and were like the sons of the Enacims. But the Moabites call them Emims.

12 The Horrites also formerly dwelt in Seir: who being driven out and destroyed, the children of Esau dwelt there, as Israel did in the land of his possession, which the Lord gave him.

13 Then rising up to pass the torrent Zared, we came to it.

14 And the time that we journeyed from Cades-barne till we passed over the torrent Zared, was thirty-eight years: until all the generation of the men that were fit for war was consumed out of the camp, as the Lord had sworn:

15 For his hand was against them, that they should perish from the midst of the camp.

16 And after all the fighting men were dead,

17 The Lord spoke to me, saying:

18 Thou shalt pass this day the borders of Moab,^b the city named Ar:

19 And when thou comest nigh the frontiers of the children of Ammon, take heed thou fight not against them, nor once move to battle: for I will not give thee of the land of the children of Ammon, because I have given it to the children of Lot for a possession.

20 It was accounted a land of giants: and giants

VER. 9. Moabites. They allowed the Hebrews to pass, as the Idumeans had done (ver. 29); but they treated them with no peculiar marks of affection, (chap. xxiii. 3,) nor would they suffer them to go across their country. Judg. xi. 17.—Ar is sometimes called Rabbath Moab, "the great city of the Moabites," (Jes. dii. 25,) and Areopolis. Euseb.

VER. 10. Emin signifies "the terrible," or "men of cubits or length." See Num. xiii. 33. They had been probably ruined in the war of Chodorlahomor, (Gen. xiv. 5,) a little before the birth of Moab. C.

VER. 11. Giants. Heb. Raphaim, which Grotius thinks is a word retained from the primitive language. It sometimes denotes giants, and those who groan in hell, on account of the great antiquity of the Raphaim. Job xxvi. 5. Og was one of their descendants, and inhabited the same country which they had occupied in the days of Abraham. Chap. iii. 2. C.—They lost much of their power in the war of Sodom. Some of them fled into the land of the Philistines, and established themselves there, 1 Kings xxi. 16.

VER. 12. Gave him, on the east side of the Jordan. They had not yet taken possession of Chanaan. But Moses foresees that they shortly will; and in this sense we may translate, "Esau dwelt there, as Israel will in the land," &c., ver. 20. The neighbouring nations could not rationally object to their coming, as they themselves had dispossessed the former owners of the land, ver. 20, 23. C.

formerly dwelt in it, whom the Ammonites call Zomzommims,

21 A people great, and many, and of tall stature, like the Enacims, whom the Lord destroyed before their face and he made them to dwell in their stead,

22 As he had done in favour of the children of Esau, that dwell in Seir, destroying the Horrites, and delivering their land to them, which they possess unto this day.

23 The Hevites also, that dwelt in Haserim as far as Gaza, were expelled by the Cappadocians: who came out of Cappadocia, and destroyed them, and dwelt in their stead.

24 Arise ye, and pass the torrent Arnon: behold I have delivered into thy hand Sehon, king of Hesebon, the Amorrhite, and begin thou to possess his land, and make war against him.

25 This day will I begin to send the dread and fear of thee upon the nations, that dwell under the whole heaven: that when they hear thy name they may fear and tremble, and be in pain like women in travail.

26 "So I sent messengers from the wilderness of Cademoth to Sehon, the king of Hesebon, with peaceable words, saying:

27 We will pass through thy land, we will go along by the high way: we will not turn aside neither to the right hand nor to the left.

28 Sell us meat for money, that we may eat: give us water for money, and so we will drink. We only ask that thou wilt let us pass through,

29 As the children of Esau have done, that dwell in Seir, and the Moabites, that abide in Ar: until we come to the Jordan, and pass to the land, which the Lord our God will give us.

30 And Sehon, the king of Hesebon, would not let us pass: because the Lord thy God had hardened his spirit and fixed his heart, that he might be delivered into thy hands, as now thou seest.

31 And the Lord said to me: "Behold I have begun to deliver unto thee Sehon, and his land; begin to possess it.

32 And Sehon came out to meet us with all his people to fight at Jasa.

The intermediate country, or the south part of Chanaan, occupied by the Hevites, was seized by invaders from the isle of Cyprus, (Heb. Caphatorum. C. Gen. x. 14,) or from Egypt, which the Nile intersects, forming many islands, in the Delta. Jer. xvii. 4. The Cappadocians, who dwelt in Asia Minor, on the Euxine Sea, were a different nation, and sprung from Japhet. T.

VER. 29. As, &c. These nations had only permitted them to pass along their borders, and furnished them, through fear, (ver. 4,) with the necessities of life. Sehon will not even grant so much.

VER. 30. Hardened, &c. That is, in punishment of his past sins, he left him to his own stubborn and perverse disposition, which now him to his ruin. See the note on Exod. vii. 3. Ch.—God did not soften his heart, (M.) nor make 34 And we took all his cities at that time, killing the inhabitants of them, men, and women, and children. We left nothing of them,

35 Except the cattle, which came to the share of them that took them: and the spoils of the cities, which we took:

36 From Aroer, which is upon the bank of the torrent Arnon, a town that is situate in a valley, as far as Galaad, there was not a village or city, that escaped our hands: the Lord our God delivered all unto us:

37 Except the land of the children of Ammon, to which we approached not: and all that border upon the torrent Jeboc, and the cities in the mountains, and all the places, which the Lord our God forbade us.

The victory over Og, king of Basan. Ruben, Gad, and half the tribe of Manasses, receive their possession on the other side of the Jordan.*

THEN we turned^a and went by the way of Basan: and Og, the king of Basan, came out to meet us with his people to fight in Edrai.

2 And the Lord said to me: Fear him not: because he is delivered into thy hand, with all his people and his land: and thou shalt do to him as thou hast done to Sehon, king of the Amorrites, that dwelt in Hesebon.

3 So the Lord our God delivered into our hands Og also, the king of Basan, and all his people: and we utterly destroyed them,

4 Wasting all his cities at one time; there was not a town that escaped us: sixty cities, all the country of Argob, the kingdom of Og, in Basan.

5 All the cities were fenced with very high walls, and with gates and bars, besides innumerable towns that had no walls.

6 And we utterly destroyed them, as we had done to

VER. 37. Jeboc, towards its source: for both sides of the torrent were taken by the Hebrews from the kings Sehon and Og, who had already driven the Ammonites farther into the mountains, on the east. H.—When these demanded the conquered country to be restored to them, Jephthah showed that their claim was inadmissible. Judg. xi. 13. C.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Turned. Instead of going straight forward across the Jordan we directed our arms against Basan, in the north. See Num. xxi. 33.

VER. 4. Country. Heb. "the line" with which lands were measured. Chap. xxxii. 9.—Argob may signify rich and fertile; "all that fertile region, the kingdom of Og." Vatable thinks that Basan, Argob, and Trachonitis, denote the same country. But Cellarius observes, that the last-mentioned country was ill cultivated and very poor, the inhabitants living mostly in the caverns of rocks, whereas Argob or Basan was adorned with sixty cities.

VER. 6. Utterly. Yet out of the ruins they soon raised other strong cities. Num. xxxii. 26. All the walls were not probably demolished, (ver. 19,) but only a part, so that they might be repaired with no great labour or expense. The inhabitants were all destroyed, that they might not pervert the Hebrews by their bad example; and because God had pronounced the sentence of death upon them, in punishment of their crimes. Heb. seems to insinuate that the cities were destroyed only by the death of the inhabitants. "We subjected them to anathema . . . utterly destroying the men." &c. H.—We devoted to utter ruin the men, women, and children of the cities which we took. C.

VER. 8. Beyond. East of the promised land of Chanaan, which the sacred writers have generally in view. H.—Heb. dābor, means, "alongside, opposite to, at the passage, on this side," &c. See chap. i. 1; 3 Kings iv. 24. C.—There is no need, therefore, to suppose that this and similar passages have been inserted by a later writer. H.—Herman, which profane authors commonly call Antilibanus, (C.) was a part of the range of the mountains of Galaad, by which name it goes frequently, though it be also denominated Seon, or Sion, (chap. iv. 48. M.) and the different nations had other names for it, ver. 9. H.

VER. 11. Giants. Heb. "Raphaim." Og was the only survivor of this family in Basan, though there were other giants dispersed throughout the land. 1 Sam. xv. 6. T.—Some of the stock of Rapha were also seen afterwards at Geth, but they did not reign in the country of their fathers, as Og alone did at this time.

Sehon, the king of Hesebon, destroying every city, men and women, and children:

7 But the cattle, and the spoils of the cities, we took for our prey.

8 And we took at that time the land out of the hand of the two kings of the Amorrites, that were beyond the Jordan: from the torrent Arnon unto the mountain Hermon,

9 Which the Sidonians call Sarion, and the Amorrite Sanir:^d

10 All the cities, that are situate in the plain, and all the land of Galaad and Basan, as far as Sechia, and Edrai, cities of the kingdom of Og, in Basan.

11 For only Og, king of Basan, remained of the race of the giants. His bed of iron is shown, which is in Rabbath of the children of Ammon, being nine cubits long, and four broad after the measure of the cubit of a man's hand.

12 And we possessed the land at that time from Aroer, which is upon the bank of the torrent Arnon, unto the half of Mount Galaad: and I gave the cities thereof to Ruben and Gad.

13 And I delivered the other part of Galaad, and all Basan, the kingdom of Og, to the half tribe of Manasses, all the country of Argob: and all Basan is called the land of giants.

14 Jair, the son of Manasses, possessed all the country of Argob unto the borders of Gessuri, and Machati. And he called Basan by his own name, Havoth Jair, that is to say, the towns of Jair, until this present day.

15 To Machir also I gave Galaad.

16 And to the tribes of Ruben and Gad, I gave of the land of Galaad, as far as the torrent Arnon, half the

Jos. xv. 14; xvii. 15. Heb. may be, "Now Og, king of Basan, was a remnant of the Raphaim." C.—Sept. "for, moreover, Og . . . was left of the Raphaim."—His bed was 13½ feet long, and 6½ broad, taking the cubit at 18 inches, with Arbutnot; though Calmet allows 20½ French inches, which are greater than ours. As beds are commonly made larger than the person who lies in them, he concludes that Og might be 14 or 15 feet high, unless he was possessed with the same vanity as Alexander the Great, who caused beds five cubits long to be left in his camp, when he returned from his Indian expedition, in order that the people might think that his soldiers were of a gigantic stature.—Iron. Bedsteads are frequently made of iron, brass, silver, or gold, in hot countries, for the sake of cleanliness and grandeur. Prov. xxv. 11; Est. i. 6. The Parthian kings reserved to themselves the privilege of lying on golden beds. Josep. xx. 20. The Thebans made beds of iron and brass out of the spoils of Platea, and consecrated them to Juno. Thueyd. iii.—Ammon. Heb. "Behold his bedstead was of iron; is it not in Rabbath?" &c. This town is called Rabbatamana, by Polybius; and Ammana, by Eusebius, who says it had afterwards the name of Astarte, till Ptolemy Philadelphus gave it the title of Philadelphia. It lay to the east of Jazer, not far from the Arnon. Cellar. iii. 14. It is probable that the bed of Og continued in this city till it was taken by David, 2 Kings xxii. 30. How the Ammonites got possession of it we do not know. Until this present day, (ver. 14,) is an expression often used in Scripture to denote an event which had taken place at no very great distance of time. Chap. xi. 4. Thus S. Matthew, (xxvii. 8,) writing about eight years after the ascension of our Saviour, says, the field was called Haceldama . . . even to this day. See Jos. viii. 29. H.—It is sufficient if the thing be still in the same state as it was before. M.—Hand. Heb. "according to the cubit of a man," from the elbow to the finger ends. C.—Syr. "of giants." Chal. "of the king;" whence some have imagined, that the bed was nine times as long as the cubit of Og, which is very improbable. H.

VER. 12. Galaad. Moses comprises under this name all the conquered country. C.

VER. 14. Jair. Some have supposed that this was one of the judges of Israel, but without foundation. He was a son or descendant of Manasses. Num. xxxii. 41; Judg. x. 4.—And Machati. These were the most southern towns of this half tribe. C.—Day. If Esdras added these words, he did it not against the law, but to explain it. W.

VER. 15. Machir's posterity was settled in the same part of Galaad. M.

VER. 16. Torrent. The other part belonged to the Moabites, (C.) on the torrent, and the confines even unto the torrent Jeboc, which is the border of the children of Ammon :

17 And the plain of the wilderness, and the Jordan, and the borders of Cenereth, unto the sea of the desert, which is the most salt sea, to the foot of Mount Phasga, eastward.

18 And I commanded you at that time, saying : The Lord your God giveth you this land for an inheritance ; go ye well appointed before your brethren, the children of Israel, all the strong men of you :

19 Leaving your wives, and children, and cattle. For I know you have much cattle, and they must remain in the cities, which I have delivered to you,

20 Until the Lord give rest to your brethren, as he hath given to you : and they also possess the land, which he will give them beyond the Jordan : then shall every man return to his possession, which I have given you.

21 *I commanded Josue also at that time, saying : Thy eyes have seen what the Lord your God hath done to these two kings : so will he do to all the kingdoms, to which thou shalt pass.

22 Fear them not : for the Lord your God will fight for you.

23 And I besought the Lord at that time, saying :

24 Lord God, thou hast begun to show unto thy servant thy greatness, and most mighty hand ; for there is no other God, either in heaven, or earth, that is able to do thy works, or to be compared to thy strength.

25 I will pass over, therefore, and will see this excellent land beyond the Jordan, and this goodly mountain, and Libanus.

south and east.—Ammon. See chap. ii. 37. The two tribes of Gad and Ruben occupied the territory lying between the Jeboc and the Arnon, hemmed in by the mountains of Galaad, on the east, and by the Jordan and the most salt sea, and that of Cenereth, on the west. Gad occupied the northern division of this country. H.

VER. 17. Foot. Heb. and Sept. Ashdodh-phasga. Eusebius seems to have taken these for two different towns. The former was situated near Phasga. Jos. xii. 3. This mount was the eastern boundary of Ruben. The plain here mentioned was that where Moses was speaking. C.

VER. 20. Rest. Abulensis says this took place only fourteen years after. M.

VER. 25. I will. Moses flattered himself that God's refusal to let him cross the Jordan was only conditional ; and therefore he begs, with all humility, for leave to enter Chanaan, at the head of the people. But, though God had pardoned his fault, he would not deprive Josue of the honour which, to fulfil the mystery, was reserved for him. Num. xx. 12 ; xxvi. 64. C.—And Libanus. Whether this and be an explanation of what mountain he meant, (T.) is a matter of doubt. He unquestionably desired to see, and to put his people in possession of, all the country designed for their inheritance, in which various fruitful mountains appeared. H.—Libanus signifies both "whiteness and incense," for which it is very renowned. C.—De la Roque thinks that it is higher than the Alps or Pyrenees.

VER. 26. Your account. Moses cannot help reminding the people that they were the occasion of his giving way to diffidence, and thus incurring a most sensible chastisement from the hands of God. Their conduct had provoked him so, that he gave some outward signs of the trouble with which his mind was so much disturbed. Chap. xx. 12.

VER. 27. East. It seems, if Phasga was the eastern boundary of Ruben, (ver. 17,) there was no occasion for Moses to cast his eyes that way. He is ordered to take a full view of the countries allotted by God to the Hebrews ; and if we consider that the territory, as far as the Euphrates, was promised to them, if they would continue faithful, and that it was made tributary, under Solomon, we need not wonder if Moses should be pleased to behold it. Chap. i. 7. H.

VER. 29. Phogor. Heb. Beth Phogor, "the house, temple, or city of Phogor," where that idol was the object of adoration. The city was probably at the foot of Mount Phasga, and fell to the share of Ruben. Jos. xiii. 20. C.—The Hebrews dwelt in the valley when Moses made the aforesaid supplication to God, and was ordered to desist ; and, after taking a view of the promised land, to give the necessary injunctions to his successor, ver. 23. H.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. And judgments, regarding religion and civil affairs. C.—Live a happy life. M.

VER. 2. Add any thing repugnant to the spirit of my law. No interpretation

26 And the Lord was angry with me on your account, and heard me not, but said to me : It is enough : speak no more to me of this matter.

27 Go up to the top of Phasga, and cast thy eyes round about to the west, and to the north, and to the south, and to the east, and behold it, ^bfor thou shalt not pass this Jordan.

28 Command Josue, and encourage and strengthen him : for he shall go before this people, and shall divide unto them the land which thou shalt see.

29 And we abode in the valley over against the temple of Phogor.

CHAP. IV.

Moses exhorteth the people to keep God's commandments : particularly to fly idolatry. Appointeth three cities of refuge on that side of the Jordan.

AND now, O Israel, hear the commandments and judgments, which I teach thee : that doing them, thou mayst live, and entering in mayst possess the land, which the Lord, the God of your fathers, will give you.

2 You shall not add to the word that I speak to you, neither shall you take away from it : keep the commandments of the Lord your God, which I command you.

3 Your eyes have seen all that the Lord hath done against Beelphegor, how he hath destroyed all his worshippers from among you.

4 But you that adhere to the Lord your God, are all alive until this present day.

5 You know that I have taught you statutes and justices, as the Lord my God hath commanded me : so shall you do them in the land, which you shall possess :

of this kind can be admitted. But this does not condemn well-authorized traditions, and laws enacted by lawful superiors. The Jews always boast of their close adherence to the letter of the law, but they often forget the spirit of it, and by their traditions render it deformed, like a carcass. C.—Moses cannot mean to forbid any more divine or civil commandments being written by Josue and the subsequent prophets. He only enjoins that nothing shall be altered by human authority. The other books of the Old Testament serve to explain the law ; and so do the apostolic traditions (W.) afford great assistance to understand the true meaning of all the Scriptures, and hence we learn whatever we have to perform, without danger of being led astray. H.—To these the Scriptures frequently refer. He that heareth you, heareth me, Luke x. Hold the traditions which you have learnt, 2 Thess. ii. The rest I will set in order, when I come, 1 Cor. xi. 34. Hence S. Augustine (c. Cresc. i. 33) observes, "Though no evident example can be produced from Scripture, yet we hold the truth of the same Scripture, when we do what meets with the approbation of that Church whose authority the Scripture establisheth." See ep. 80, S. Chrys. in 1 Thess. iv. S. Iren. iii. 4. W.—The Jews themselves never had the folly to imagine with the modern innovators, that all laws both of a religious or civil nature were here proscribed. Under David, Mardocheus, and the Machabees, various laws and feasts were commanded, and observed in the true spirit of the law. 1 Kings xxx. 25 ; Est. ix. ; 1 Mac. iv. God does not leave to the discretion of the Jews the appointing of different victims, &c. in his worship, (chap. xii. 30,) as they might very easily give way to the superstitious observances of their neighbours, and these things had been sufficiently determined. But he enjoins all to obey the declarations of the priests and judges. Chap. xvii. 10. Bellarm. T.—Thus when the Apocalypse records a prohibition similar to this, (chap. xxii. 18, 19,) it is not intended to seal up the divine volume, so that nothing more shall be admitted into it, for S. John wrote his Gospel afterwards. But it must be explained in the same sense as this passage, and condemns all those who, of their own authority, would set up a fresh doctrine in opposition to the word of God. Let Protestants consider if they be not concerned in this caution, when they not only cut off whole books of Scripture, but deny the authority of the Church itself, without which the Scriptures can be of little service. They are the book sealed with seven seals, impenetrable to man without the aid of the Divine author ; (Apoc. v. 5 ;) and this aid he will never grant to those who obstinately refuse to hear the Church. Matt. xviii. 17 ; 2 Pet. i. 20. H.

VER. 3. Among you, when the guilty Israelites and the Madianites were slain. Num. xxv., and xxxi.

6 And you shall observe, and fulfil them in work. For this is your wisdom, and understanding in the sight of nations, that hearing all these precepts, they may say: Behold a wise and understanding people, a great nation.

7 Neither is there any other nation so great, that hath gods so nigh them, as our God is present to all our petitions.

8 For what other nation is there so renowned, that hath ceremonies, and just judgments, and all the law, which I will set forth this day before your eyes?

9 Keep thyself therefore, and thy soul carefully. Forget not the words, that thy eyes have seen, and let them not go out of thy heart all the days of thy life. Thou shalt teach them to thy sons and to thy grandsons,

10 From the day in which thou didst stand before the Lord thy God in Horeb, when the Lord spoke to me, saying: Call together the people unto me, that they may hear my words, and may learn to fear me all the time that they live on the earth, and may teach their children.

11 And you came to the foot of the mount, which burned even unto heaven: and there was darkness, and a cloud, and obscurity in it.

12 And the Lord spoke to you from the midst of the fire. You heard the voice of his words, but you saw not any form at all.

13 And he showed you his covenant, which he commanded you to do, and the ten words, that he wrote in two tables of stone.

14 And he commanded me at that time that I should teach you the ceremonies and judgments, which you shall do in the land that you shall possess.

15 Keep therefore your souls carefully. You saw not any similitude, in the day that the Lord God spoke to you in Horeb, from the midst of the fire:

power to show their votaries such favours as the true God hath shown to us? The idols are nothing but devils, which seek to destroy. C.—But God had manifested his power and love to the Hebrews in the most astonishing manner. He seemed to choose his residence among them, in the tabernacle. H.—This Jesus does in a still more wonderful manner, with respect to Christians, remaining with them in the sacrament of love. The other sacraments which he has instituted are more noble and efficacious than those of the old law. He was pleased to take our nature, (C.) and to dwell among us. John i. H.

VER. 9. Words. Heb. also, "things." H.—Both sacred and profane authors use the term of seeing, to denote any of the senses, ver. 12. Eschylus (in Prometheus,) says, "you shall neither see the form nor the voice of mortals."

VER. 12. At all. Heb. "but saw no similitude, only a voice." See Exod. xx. 18.

VER. 13. Stone. Josephus (Ant. iii. 4, 6) says, that each table contained five precepts, two and a half being inscribed on one side. The Jews now suppose that four appeared on one table, and six on the other. But each table probably contained an entire copy of the law. C.—It hence appears that there are just ten precepts. W.—But the manner of dividing them is rather uncertain. S. Aug. and Catholics in general place the three commandments, which regard God, by themselves. See Exod. xx. 1. Their greater importance and length would require as much space as the other seven, which ascertain the mutual duties of people to each other. H.

VER. 15. Carefully. Heb. "Be therefore particularly attentive, as much as you love your own soul." Vatab. By keeping my commandments you can alone obtain salvation, ver. 9. M.—Similitude of any living creature, such as were the objects of adoration among the pagans. Some represented their gods under the forms of men, women, beasts, birds, or reptiles; while others adored the sun, moon, and stars. H.—This last was indeed the most ancient species of idolatry. Job xxi. 26. Moses takes care to inform the Hebrews that the true God is like none of these things; and that they cannot pretend to represent him under any such forms, without doing him an injury. C.—If Catholics endeavour to put the people in mind of the blessed Trinity, by representing a venerable old man, Jesus Christ in his human nature, and a dove, under which forms the Scripture has introduced the three Divine persons, they do not pretend that their divine and most spiritual nature can be thus expressed. "If," says the Council of 16 Lest perhaps being deceived you might make you a graven similitude, or image of male or female,

17 The similitude of any beasts, that are upon the earth, or of birds, that fly under heaven,

18 Or of creeping things, that move on the earth, or of fishes, that abide in the waters under the earth:

19 Lest perhaps lifting up thy eyes to heaven, thou see the sun and the moon, and all the stars of heaven, and being deceived by error, thou adore and serve them which the Lord thy God created for the service of all the nations, that are under heaven.

20 But the Lord hath taken you, and brought you out of the iron furnace of Egypt, to make you his people of inheritance, as it is this present day.

21 And the Lord was angry with me for your words, and he swore that I should not pass over the Jordan, nor enter into the excellent land, which he will give you.

22 Behold I die in this land, I shall not pass over the Jordan: you shall pass, and possess the goodly land.

23 Beware lest thou ever forget the covenant of the Lord thy God, which he hath made with thee: and make to thyself a graven likeness of those things, which the Lord hath forbid to be made:

24 Because the Lord thy God is a consuming fire, a jealous God.

25 If you shall beget sons and grandsons, and abide in the land, and being deceived make to yourselves any similitude, committing evil before the Lord your God, to provoke him to wrath:

26 I call this day heaven and earth to witness, that you shall quickly perish out of the land, which, when you have passed over the Jordan, you shall possess. You shall not dwell therein long, but the Lord will destroy you,

27 And scatter you among all nations, and you shall

Trent, Sess. 25, "the historical accounts of Scripture be sometimes set forth in paintings for the benefit of the illiterate, let the people be informed that the Divinity is not thus represented with a design to insinuate that it may be seen with the eyes of the body." So neither can the figure of a triangle, with the ineffable name of God in Heb., &c., explain this adorable mystery. But such things may recall to our remembrance the innumerable benefits which we have received from the three Divine persons, after we have been once informed what we have to believe respecting them. This is the laudable motive which has induced the Church to encourage the keeping of such pictures, as well as those of the saints, with due respect. "Not as if we believed that any divinity or virtue resided in them for which they were to be worshipped, or that we should ask any thing of them, or place our confidence in images, as the Gentiles formerly did, who hoped in their idols, (Psal. cxxxiv.,) but because the honour given to them is referred to the originals, which they represent." &c. VER. 24. Fire. God often appeared in the midst of fire. All the land shall be devoured by the fire of his jealousy. Sophon. i. 18, and iii. 8. C.—By these expressions we are exhorted not to do any thing which would excite the indignation of our true lover, nor ever be unfaithful to him. H.—The pagans thought that fire was the fittest symbol of the Divinity. Porphyr. de Abstin.

VER. 26. And earth, or all their rational inhabitants. S. Jer. and S. Bas. in Isa. i. 2. Moses conjures the Israelites, by all that is most sacred, to continue faithful. He speaks with the greatest earnestness, as he does again, chap. xxxii. 1. C.—He makes use of a sort of oath, by the creatures, in which God shines forth. M.—Destroy you. He will take from you that delightful country, though he will save a remnant of you out of the captivity at Babylon, and in the latter days, ver. 31. The Jews, in the promised land, were almost always prone to idolatry, till God severely chastised them by the hands of the Babylonians. Since that time few of them have willingly yielded to the worship of idols, though some have fallen by compulsion, as we read, Dan. iii.; 1 Mac. i. 53, and ii. 16. Jeremias (v. 19) foretold that this would be the case. As you have forsaken me and served a strange god in your own land, so shall you serve strangers in a land that is not your own. H.

VER. 27. Nations. This prediction we see verified at the present day. They are despised by all. No one of their numerous masters embraces their religion. They are so few as hardly to possess a single town. C.

remain a few among the nations, to which the Lord shall lead you.

28 And there you shall serve gods, that were framed with men's hands; wood and stone, that neither see, nor hear, nor eat, nor smell.

29 And when thou shalt seek there the Lord thy God, thou shalt find him: yet so, if thou seek him with all thy heart, and all the affliction of thy soul.

30 After all the things aforesaid shall find thee, in the latter time thou shalt return to the Lord thy God, and shalt hear his voice:

31 Because the Lord thy God is a merciful God: he will not leave thee, nor altogether destroy thee, nor forget the covenant; by which he swore to thy fathers.

32 Ask of the days of old, that have been before thy time, from the day that God created man upon the earth, from one end of heaven to the other end thereof, if ever there was done the like thing, or it hath been known at any time,

33 That a people should hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of fire, as thou hast heard, and lived:

34 If God ever did so as to go, and take to himself a nation out of the midst of nations, by temptations, signs, and wonders, by fight, and a strong hand, and stretched-out arm, and horrible visions, according to all the things that the Lord your God did for you in Egypt, before thy eyes:

35 That thou mightest know that the Lord he is God, and there is no other besides him.

36 From heaven he made thee to hear his voice, that he might teach thee. And upon earth he showed thee his exceeding great fire, and thou didst hear his words out of the midst of the fire,

37 Because he loved thy fathers, and chose their seed after them. *And he brought thee out of Egypt, going before thee with his great power,

38 To destroy at thy coming very great nations, and VER. 29. There. Heb. "thence" from the place of captivity, or returning from the love of idols to the service of the true God.—Soul. Heb. "with all thy soul." (30) In thy tribulation after," &c. C.—God often sends chastisements as the most effectual means of salvation, to make his children enter into themselves. H.

VER. 30. Voice, after the captivity of Babylon, or rather at the end of the world. The nation at large has not embraced the worship of idols since the former period. But it will not be perfectly converted until the fullness of the Gentiles . . . come in.—And so all Israel . . . be saved. Rom. xi. 25. C.—S. Paul terms their present state a blindness in part, because, though a few have embraced the revelation of God, made to all by his only Son, the far greater part have obstinately shut their eyes, so that, even while they read the clearest prophecies, they seem to have a veil on them. But, after they shall have been the sport of their passions and errors till the latter time, when the man of sin shall be fully revealed, they will see how wretchedly they have been deluded, and, the grace of God touching their hearts, they will remember the covenant, and embrace Christ, the end of all the law. Happy those who do not defer their conversion till that awful period! H.

VER. 32. Heaven. To our senses the sky seems to rest upon the horizon. So Jesus says, Then he . . . shall gather . . . his elect . . . from the uttermost part of the earth, to the uttermost part of heaven, Matt. xxiv. 31. Vatable translates, "from the east to the west." C.

VER. 33. And lived. It was generally supposed that those who had seen a vision of God, or of his angel, would instantly die. See Gen. xvi. 13. H. Chap. v. 24.

VER. 34. Temptations. The Chal. and Arab. understand this of the prodigies which God wrought in favour of his people; though they may also denote the trials to which the patriarchs and the Hebrews had been exposed, that their virtue might shine more brightly. Many indeed lost courage under these trials, but they were of great service to form a perfect people; and those who continued to lead a virtuous life received the reward of their labours. C.—Visions, during stronger than thou art, and to bring thee in, and give thee their land in possession, as thou seest at this present day.

39 Know therefore this day, and think in thy heart, that the Lord he is God in heaven above, and in the earth beneath, and there is no other.

40 Keep his precepts and commandments, which I command thee: that it may be well with thee, and thy children after thee, and thou mayst remain a long time upon the land, which the Lord thy God will give thee.

41 ^bThen Moses set aside three cities beyond the Jordan, at the east side,

42 That any one might flee to them who should kill his neighbour unwillingly, and was not his enemy a day or two before, and that he might escape to some one of these cities:

43 ^cBosor in the wilderness, which is situate in the plains of the tribe of Ruben: and Ramoth, in Galaad, which is in the tribe of Gad: and Golan, in Basan, which is in the tribe of Manasses.

44 This is the law, that Moses set before the children of Israel.

45 And these are the testimonies, and ceremonies, and judgments, which he spoke to the children of Israel, when they came out of Egypt,

46 Beyond the Jordan, in the valley over against the temple of Phogor, in the land of Sehon, king of the Amorrites, that dwelt in Hesebon, whom Moses slew. And the children of Israel coming out of Egypt,

47 Possessed his land, and the land of Og, king of Basan, of the two kings of the Amorrites, who were beyond the Jordan, towards the rising of the sun:

48 From Aroer, which is situate upon the bank of the torrent Arnon, unto Mount Sion, which is also called Hermoia,

VER. 38. Day. They had already conquered the mighty kingdoms of Sehon and of Og. M.

VER. 41. Then, &c. This piece of history seems to be placed out of its natural order, by another hand. C.—Yet if we attend to the method of Moses, in his other works, we shall not hastily conclude that it is an interpolation. He frequently repeats what has been already specified. He had received an order from God to appoint these three cities of refuge, (Num. xxxv. 14,) after he had given the land to the tribes of Ruben, &c. Num. xxxii. This he executes at the conclusion of this discourse; and hence takes occasion to mention how they had taken possession of this country. H.

VER. 43. Wilderness, or plains of Moab, at the mouth of the Jordan. It is sometimes called Bosor, and is very different from Bozra of Idumea, (Isa. lxiii. 1,) a very famous city, known to profane authors by the name of Bostra.—Ramoth, one of the strongest towns of Galaad, fifteen miles west of Philadelphia, (Euseb.,) where Achab, king of Israel, received a mortal wound, 3 Kings xxii. 3.—Golan, or Gaulan, gave its name to Gaulanitis, a part of Batanea, lying on the southern parts of the division of Gad, though the city belonged to Manasses. The lower Gaulanitis lay towards the lake of Genezareth, and had Gamala for its capital. Cellarius. C.

VER. 48. Sion begins here with ss, being the northern boundary of the tribe of Manasses, east of the Jordan; whereas the famous Sion, on which the temple was built, is written with ts, and lay on the west side of the Jordan, (H.) in the tribe of Juda. Chap. iii. 8. C.

VER. 49. Wilderness, which Moses commonly calls the salt sea, (on account of the asphalt with which it abounds,) or the sea of Araba, as it lies at the extremity of the plains of Moab, which are sometimes called Araboith, "deserts," because they were more fit for pasturage than for ploughing. CHAP. V.

The ten commandments are repeated and explained.

AND Moses called all Israel, and said to them: Hear, O Israel, the ceremonies and judgments, which I speak in your ears this day: learn them, and fulfil them in work.

2 The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb.

3 He made not the covenant with our fathers, but with us, who are now present and living.

4 He spoke to us face to face in the mount out of the midst of fire.

5 I was the mediator, and stood between the Lord and you at that time, to show you his words; for you feared the fire, and went not up into the mountain, and he said:

6 ^bI am the Lord thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

7 ^cThou shalt not have strange gods in my sight.

8 ^dThou shalt not make to thyself a graven thing, nor the likeness of any things that are in heaven above, or that are in the earth beneath, or that abide in the waters under the earth.

9 ^eThou shalt not adore them, and thou shalt not serve them. For I am the Lord thy God, a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon their children unto the third and fourth generation to them that hate me,

10 And showing mercy unto many thousands to them that love me, and keep my commandments.

11 ^fThou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain: for he shall not be unpunished that taketh his name upon a vain thing.

12 Observe the day of the sabbath, to sanctify it, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee.

13 Six days shalt thou labour, and shalt do all thy works.

14 ^gThe seventh is the day of the sabbath, that is, the rest of the Lord thy God. Thou shalt not do any work therein, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy ox, nor thy ass, nor any of thy beasts, nor the stranger that is within thy gates: that thy man-servant and thy maid-servant may rest even as thyself.

15 Remember that thou also didst serve in Egypt, and the Lord thy God brought thee out from thence with a strong hand, and a stretched-out arm. Therefore hath he commanded thee that thou shouldst observe the sabbath day.

16 ^hHonour thy father and mother, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee, that thou mayst live a long time, and it may be well with thee in the land, which the Lord thy God will give thee.

17 Thou shalt not kill.

18 Neither shalt thou commit adultery.

19 And thou shalt not steal.

20 Neither shalt thou bear false witness against thy neighbour.

21 ⁱThou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife: nor his house, nor his field, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is his.

22 These words the Lord spoke to all the multitude of you in the mountain, out of the midst of the fire and the cloud, and the darkness, with a loud voice, adding nothing more: and he wrote them in two tables of stone, which he delivered unto me.

23 But you, after you heard the voice out of the midst of the darkness, and saw the mountain burn, came to me, all the princes of the tribes and the elders, and you said:

24 Behold the Lord our God hath shown us his majesty and his greatness; we have heard his voice out of the midst of the fire, and have proved this day, that God speaking with man, man hath lived.

25 Why shall we die therefore, and why shall this exceeding great fire consume us? For if we hear the voice of the Lord our God any more, we shall die.

26 What is all flesh, that it should hear the voice of the living God, who speaketh out of the midst of the fire, as we have heard, and be able to live.

27 Approach thou rather: and hear all things that the Lord our God shall say to thee, and thou shalt speak to us, and we will hear and will do them.

28 And when the Lord had heard this, he said to me: I have heard the voice of the words of this people, which they spoke to thee: they have spoken all things well.

29 Who shall give them to have such a mind, to fear me, and to keep all my commandments at all times, that it may be well with them and with their children for ever?

30 Go and say to them: Return into your tents.

31 But stand thou here with me, and I will speak to

VER. 3. Fathers, the ancient patriarchs, who were not favoured in such a signal manner. M.

VER. 4. To us. Heb. and Sept. "to you."—Face to face, in such a manner that no doubt could be entertained of his presence. S. Aug. C.

VER. 5. Mediator. S. Paul acknowledges this title of Moses, (Gal. iii. 9,) who was a figure of Jesus Christ, the mediator of the New Testament. Heb. viii. 6; ix. 15; xii. 24. C.—Let not Protestants, therefore, reject this title with so much indignation, when it is applied in the like limited sense to the saints, to denote that they pray for us, as we pray for one another. Christ is the one mediator (1 Tim. ii.) of redemption. H.

VER. 7. Sight. Chaldees, "Thou shalt not have any other god but me." Alein often designates the true God. C.—See the decalogue explained, (Exod. xx.) where we have observed that pictures are only forbidden when they are the objects of sovereign worship, as the context here plainly shows, ver. 9. Other images God himself authorized, (W.) even in the old law, and in the most sacred place, where people were ordered to fall prostrate before the ark, to adore his footstool. Psal. xcvi. 5. H.

VER. 15. Therefore. This is another reason why the Jews were to observe the sabbath with particular rigour. The institution of a day of rest every week (H.) was intended to preserve the memory of the creation. C.

VER. 18. Adultery. Under this name God forbids every species of impurity. S. Aug. q. 71. M.

VER. 22. More to the people: the other precepts were communicated to Moses. The Chaldees and others give a contrary turn to the Heb., "and he ceased not" ever since to instruct us. VER. 29. A mind. God speaks like men, and insinuates how agreeable to him is a disposition influenced by a salutary fear. He does not mean that He cannot convert the heart of man. E.

thee all my commandments, and ceremonies and judgments: which thou shalt teach them, that they may do them in the land which I will give them for a possession.

32 Keep, therefore, and do the things which the Lord God hath commanded you: you shall not go aside neither to the right hand nor to the left:

33 But you shall walk in the way that the Lord your God hath commanded, that you may live, and it may be well with you, and your days may be long in the land of your possession.

CHAP. VI.

An exhortation to the love of God, and obedience to his law.

THESE are the precepts, and ceremonies, and judgments, which the Lord your God commanded that I should teach you, and that you should do them in the land, into which you pass over to possess it:

2 That thou mayst fear the Lord thy God, and keep his commandments and precepts which I command thee, and thy sons, and thy grandsons, all the days of thy life, that thy days may be prolonged.

3 Hear, O Israel, and observe to do the things which the Lord hath commanded thee, that it may be well with thee, and thou mayst be greatly multiplied, as the Lord the God of thy fathers hath promised thee a land flowing with milk and honey.

4 Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord.

5 Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with thy whole heart, and with thy whole soul, and with thy whole strength.

6 And these words which I command thee this day, shall be in thy heart.

7 And thou shalt tell them to thy children, and thou shalt meditate upon them, sitting in thy house, and walking on thy journey, sleeping and rising.

8 And thou shalt bind them as a sign on thy hand, and they shall be and shall move between thy eyes.

9 And thou shalt write them in the entry, and on the doors of thy house.

10 And when the Lord thy God shall have brought thee into the land, for which he swore to thy fathers,

Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: and shall have given thee great and goodly cities, which thou didst not build,

11 Houses full of riches, which thou didst not set up, cisterns which thou didst not dig, vineyards and oliveyards, which thou didst not plant,

12 And thou shalt have eaten, and be full:

13 Take heed diligently, lest thou forget the Lord, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God, and shalt serve him only, and thou shalt swear by his name.

14 You shall not go after the strange gods of all the nations, that are round about you:

15 Because the Lord thy God is a jealous God in the midst of thee: lest at any time the wrath of the Lord thy God be kindled against thee, and take thee away from the face of the earth.

16 Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God, as thou temptedst him in the place of temptation.

17 Keep the precepts of the Lord thy God, and the testimonies and ceremonies, which he hath commanded thee:

18 And do that which is pleasing and good in the sight of the Lord, that it may be well with thee: and going in thou mayst possess the goodly land, concerning which the Lord swore to thy fathers, 19 That he would destroy all thy enemies before thee, as he hath spoken.

20 And when thy son shall ask thee to-morrow, saying: What mean these testimonies, and ceremonies, and judgments, which the Lord our God hath commanded us?

21 Thou shalt say to him: We were bondmen of Pharaoh in Egypt, and the Lord brought us out of Egypt with a strong hand.

22 And he wrought signs and wonders, great and very grievous in Egypt, against Pharaoh, and all his house, in our sight, 23 And he brought us out from thence, that he might bring us in and give us the land, concerning which he swore to our fathers.

24 And the Lord commanded that we should do all

* Infra, x. 20; Matt. iv. 10; Luke iv. 8.—d Matt. iv. 7; Luke iv. 12.

VER. 32. Left: a proverbial expression, to signify that no sort of transgression is to be allowed. M.—It is of the same import as, You shall not add, &c., chap. iv. 2. C.

CHAP. VI. VER. 3. Hear. The Jews have a particular respect for the seven following verses, which they write on vellum, and recite every day, as a preservative against the power of the devil. Clarius.

VER. 5. Whole heart . . soul . . and strength. God admits of no partner, nor will he suffer any rivulet to be drawn from the fountain of love, which is not ultimately referred to himself. Our neighbour we must love only for his sake, and by the observance of this twofold precept, we shall fulfil the whole law and the prophets. Matt. xxii. 40. H. See S. Aug. de Doct. i. 22.—We must love God disinterestedly for his own sake; we must sacrifice our soul and life for his honour, with all our strength, beginning every good work with fervour, and persevering in our undertakings. All our faculties and senses must be consecrated to the Divine service, as well as all our goods; in which sense the Chaldee, &c. understand the word strength. Heb. lit. ex toto valde tuo. By this singular expression Moses seems to insinuate, that he cannot find words to specify how much we ought to love the Sovereign Good. C.—“The measure of loving God, is to love without measure.” S. Bernard. H.

VER. 7. Tell. Heb. “thou shalt chew them” as nurses do bread for their little ones; or thou shalt “sharpen,” like a razor, “explain clearly and often,” these precepts, which are of the utmost importance.—Meditate; speak of them to others, (C.) and entertain thyself with them in thy own heart. The mouth of the just man shall meditate wisdom, and (that is) his tongue shall speak judgment. Psal. xxxvi. 30; Exod. xiii. 9.—Sleeping. The spouse, in the Canticle, (v. 2,) says, I sleep, and my heart watcheth. If we carefully direct our intention, we may merit even when we are incapable of thinking. God will reward our good desires. Our last and first thoughts ought, in a particular manner, to be consecrated to God, (H.) when we go to rest and when we arise, (M.) as he is our first beginning, the source of all graces, and our last end, to whom we ought to refer every thing, even our ordinary actions of sleeping, labour, and diversion. If we make his Divine perfections and his law the subject of our daily meditations, our soul will naturally be affected with the same sentiments during the night. Hence we may perceive of what vast importance it is to have a pure intention. H.

VER. 8. Sign, or seal, (Cant. viii. 6. C.) attached to the ring which the Jews wore on their fingers, (H.) to seal their letters, after they were enveloped and tied with linen. The Jews have bandages of vellum on their hand, with sentences of the law inscribed upon them, (C.) as well as others upon their forehead; while many get the whole law, particularly the Book of Deuteronomy, by heart: for which purpose, the Rabbins inform us, there were above four hundred schools; and synagogues at Jerusalem, where the law of God was learnt and explained. The design of this injunction was not, however, to enforce the wearing of such bandages, as the Pharisees imagined, (Matt. xxiii. 5,) but to put all in mind that they ought to meditate frequently upon the commandments, (T.) and regulate their lives by their direction.—Shall move. Sept. adds a negation, but to the same import, “it (the sign) shall not be removed from before thy eyes.” H.

VER. 13. Only. This is omitted in Heb.; but the Sept. and Jesus Christ retain it, (Matt. iv. 10,) as the sense requires. You cannot serve God and mammon. Luke xvi. 13. C.—Name, and not by that of idols, whenever you may be authorized to take an oath. H.—To swear by any other is to acknowledge him in some sort for a god. When we take an oath on proper occasions, and with due respect and caution, we perform an act of religion. C.

these ordinances, and should fear the Lord our God, that it might be well with us all the days of our life, as it is at this day.

25 And he will be merciful to us, if we keep and do all his precepts before the Lord our God, as he hath commanded us.

CHAP. VII.

No league nor fellowship to be made with the Chanaanites: God promiseth his people his blessing and assistance, if they keep his commandments.

WHEN *the Lord thy God shall have brought thee into the land, which thou art going in to possess, and shall have destroyed many nations before thee, ^bthe Hethite, and the Gergezite, and the Amorrite, and the Chanaanite, and the Pherezite, and the Hevite, and the Jebusite, seven nations much more numerous than thou art, and stronger than thou:

2 And the Lord thy God shall have delivered them to thee, thou shalt utterly destroy them. *Thou shalt make no league with them, nor show mercy to them:

3 Neither shalt thou make marriages with them. Thou shalt not give thy daughter to his son, nor take his daughter for thy son:

4 For she will turn away thy son from following me, that he may rather serve strange gods, and the wrath of the Lord will be kindled, and will quickly destroy thee.

5 But thus rather shall you deal with them: *Destroy their altars, and break their statues, and cut down their groves, and burn their graven things:

6 *Because thou art a holy people to the Lord thy God. *The Lord thy God hath chosen thee, to be his peculiar people, of all peoples that are upon the earth.

7 Not because you surpass all nations in number, is the Lord joined unto you, and hath chosen you, for you are the fewest of any people:

8 But because the Lord hath loved you, and hath kept his oath, which he swore to your fathers: and hath brought you out with a strong hand, and redeemed you from the house of bondage, out of the hand of Pharaoh the king of Egypt.

9 And thou shalt know, that the Lord thy God, he is a strong and faithful God, keeping his covenant and mercy to them that love him, and to them that keep his commandments, unto a thousand generations:

10 And repaying forthwith them that hate him, so as to destroy them, without further delay, immediately rendering to them what they deserve.

11 Keep therefore the precepts and ceremonies, and judgments, which I command thee this day to do.

12 If after thou hast heard these judgments, thou keep and do them, the Lord thy God will also keep his covenant to thee, and the mercy which he swore to thy fathers:

13 And he will love thee and multiply thee, and will bless the fruit of thy womb, and the fruit of thy land, thy corn, and thy vintage, thy oil, and thy herds, and the flocks of thy sheep upon the land, for which he swore to thy fathers that he would give it thee.

14 Blessed shalt thou be among all people. *No one shall be barren among you of either sex, neither of men, nor cattle.

15 The Lord will take away from thee all sickness: and the grievous infirmities of Egypt, which thou knowest, he will not bring upon thee, but upon thy enemies.

16 Thou shalt consume all the people, which the Lord thy God will deliver to thee. Thy eye shall not spare them, neither shalt thou serve their gods, lest they be thy ruin.

17 If thou say in thy heart: These nations are more than I, how shall I be able to destroy them?

18 Fear not, but remember what the Lord thy God did to Pharaoh, and to all the Egyptians, 19 The exceeding great plagues, which thy eyes saw, and the signs and wonders, and the strong hand, and the stretched-out arm, with which the Lord thy God brought thee out: so will he do to all the people, whom thou fearest.

* A. M. 2553.—^b Exod. xxiii. 23, and xxxiii. 2.—^c Exod. xxiii. 32, and xxxiv. 15, 16.

VER. 25. Merciful. Heb. "he will justify us." Chal. "reward us." Justice often denotes the mercy which God shows to his people, and the punishment which he inflicts upon their enemies. C. Matt. vi. 1.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Destroyed. So the Vulgate often expresses the Hebrew term, which signifies, "to cast out."—Seven. Ten are mentioned, Gen. xv. 9; but some of the less powerful nations were either mixed with the others, or were exterminated. The Hevites are omitted in the passage of Genesis, and sometimes no notice is taken of the Gergezite or the Pherezite. The latter had been already conquered by Moses, as well as the Raphaim and the Amorrites, over whom Og and Sehon ruled. Chap. iii. 5. C.—It seems, however, that some of the same nations, on the other side of the Jordan, remained to be subdued, and that any one of them was naturally too strong for the Hebrews, ver. 7. Hence the latter might be convinced that their victories were to be attributed to God.

VER. 2. League. Yet Josue, (ix. 3,) by mistake, entered into one with the Gabaonites, and observed it (H.); whence we may conclude that only such leagues are forbidden as would leave these nations in possession of their lands and idols. Chap. xx. 10; xxiii. 6. With foreign nations it was lawful to make leagues defensive and offensive, as David, Asa, and the Machabees did with Hiram, Benadad, and the Romans. 3 Kings xv. 18, &c. M.

VER. 3. Marriages. Some believe that it was unlawful to marry the people of Chanaan, if they were even converted, and also those of other nations, as we find that Esdras (1 Esd. x. 2, 12) ordered such strange wives to be sent away. But the context shows, as well as the practice of the most pious Hebrews, that it was only forbidden to marry with those who adhered to their idolatry, ver. 4. Salmon took to wife Rahab, of Jericho; Mahalon and Booz successively married Ruth, the Moabitess; and Moses himself allows the Hebrews to espouse their captives, and to preserve the lives of women and children, chap. xx. 14; xxi. 11. C. See Exod. xxxiv. 15.

VER. 4. Gods. So great is the natural tendency to evil, that though a woman be generally inclined to follow the inclinations and religion of her husband, yet, when his method of living is more repugnant to flesh and blood, she is but too apt to influence him to glide smoothly with her down the hill of pleasure, into the very abyss of dissolution. The prediction, she will turn, &c., is so often verified, that those who marry with unbelievers ought to tremble. H.

^d Exod. xxiii. 24; Infra, xii. 3, and xvi. 21.—^e Infra, xiv. 2.—^f Infra, xxvi. 18.—^g Exod. xxiii. 26

VER. 6. Peculiar. Heb. sogle, laid up like something most precious and desirable. M.—God seemed to have abandoned other nations to the corruption of their own heart. "This was, by a particular mystery, a prophetic nation." S. Aug. ep. 102. Exod. xix. 5. C.

VER. 9. Strong. Heb. al, means also God. He requires us to imitate his perfections as much as we are able. Being faithful, he will comply with his covenant exactly, and will punish those who neglect it. C.

VER. 10. Deserve. Heb. "he will repay to his face," or, "he will punish immediately the person who hateth him to his face." God does not always defer the correction of the wicked till their death. C.—But this seems to be spoken principally of those who have engaged in the covenant, 2 Mac. vi. 12. D.—Thus he immediately chastised those who adored the calf, Core, Mary, &c., (M.) and he does not dissemble the faults even of his chosen servants. T.

VER. 13. Womb. He will grant thee many children. M.—This was esteemed a very great blessing, at a time when they might hope to give birth to the Mesias. C.

VER. 15. Sickness, sent in punishment of sin, (H.) like the plagues of Egypt. Exod. ix. M.—Egypt was afflicted with some peculiar disorders, such as the leprosy, called Elephantiasis. Plin. xxvi. 1. The people were also much troubled with sore eyes, or blindness, and with ulcers upon their legs. Juven. Sat. xiii. 91. One-fourth of the inhabitants of Grand Cairo have sore eyes, or are blind. Bagn.

VER. 16. Consume. Kill the inhabitants, plunder their effects, (M.) destroy their idols.

20 *Moreover the Lord thy God will send also hornets among them, until he destroy and consume all that have escaped thee, and could hide themselves.

21 Thou shalt not fear them, because the Lord thy God is in the midst of thee, a God mighty and terrible:

22 He will consume these nations in thy sight by little and little and by degrees. Thou wilt not be able to destroy them altogether, lest perhaps the beasts of the earth should increase upon thee.

23 But the Lord thy God shall deliver them in thy sight: and shall slay them until they be utterly destroyed.

24 And he shall deliver their kings into thy hands, and thou shalt destroy their names from under heaven: no man shall be able to resist thee, until thou destroy them.

25 ^bTheir graven things thou shalt burn with fire: thou shalt not covet the silver and gold, of which they are made, neither shalt thou take to thee any thing thereof, lest thou offend, because it is an abomination to the Lord thy God.

26 Neither shalt thou bring any thing of the idol into thy house, lest thou become an anathema, like it. Thou shalt detest it as dung, and shalt utterly abhor it as uncleanness and filth, because it is an anathema.

CHAP. VIII.

The people is put in mind of God's dealings with them, to the end that they may love him and serve him.

ALL the commandments, that I command thee this day, 'take great care to observe: that you may live, and be multiplied, and going in may possess the land, for which the Lord swore to your fathers.

2 And thou shalt remember all the way, through which the Lord thy God hath brought thee for forty years through the desert, to afflict thee, and to prove thee, and that the things that were in thy heart might be made known, whether thou wouldst keep his commandments or not.

3 He afflicted thee with want, and gave thee manna for

VER. 20. Hornets. Abenezra understands the leprosy, which the Hebrew may also signify. But hornets and such like insects are very destructive in hot countries; and Pausanias informs us that the Minsiens were driven out of their country by them. C.

VER. 21. Fear. Sept. "be wounded." In the war with the Madianites not one was killed, (Num. xxxi. 49,) as Josephus (iii. 2) informs us, was also the case when king Amalec and his people attacked the Hebrews. Exod. xvii. 13. H.

VER. 22. Thee. Three millions of people not being sufficient to cultivate the land. Exod. xxiii. 29. M.—God could easily have destroyed those mighty nations at once; but he would not give the Israelites any occasion of boasting. D.

VER. 25. Graven things. Idols, so called by contempt. Ch.—Made. Heb. "gold (plates) on them," to cover the wood, &c. See ver. 5.

VER. 26. An anathema. That is, a thing devoted to destruction; and which carries along with it a curse. Ch.—Like it. The curse rested upon those who kept any of the spoils. This brought death upon Achan, (Jos. vii. 1,) and upon some of the soldiers of Judas the Machabee, who had secreted some of the donaries of the idols of Jamnia, which the law forbiddeth to the Jews, 2 Mac. xii. 40. C.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Live a long and happy life; which was often promised to the carnal Jews, to encourage them to fulfil God's commands. Christians are willing to forego these temporal advantages, that they may obtain such as may last for ever. C.

VER. 2. Prove, which is done frequently by prosperity also, ver. 3, 12, 14. After trying the fidelity of his people by various means, to make them sensible of their own weakness and inability to do good, God takes pity on them, ver. 16. C.—Known. Heb. "to know (by experience) what was in thy heart, whether," &c. The original term signifies also to make known to others. Gen. xxii. 12. H.

VER. 3. Not in bread alone, &c. i. e. That God is able to make food of what he pleases for the support of man. Ch.—Obedience to his law will insure a happy life, ver. 1. God can support a person's life without any sustenance, as he did Moses, Elias, &c., for a long time. C.

VER. 4. Worn, for want of shoes. Chap. xxix. 5. Chaldeo. This miracle of thy food, which neither thou nor thy fathers knew: to show that^d not in bread alone doth man live, but in every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God.

4 Thy raiment, with which thou wast covered, hath not decayed for age, and thy foot is not worn, lo this is the fortieth year.

5 That thou mayst consider in thy heart, that as a man traineth up his son, so the Lord thy God hath trained thee up,

6 That thou shouldst keep the commandments of the Lord thy God, and walk in his ways, and fear him.

7 For the Lord thy God will bring thee into a good land, of brooks, and of waters, and of fountains: in the plains of which and the hills deep rivers break out:

8 A land of wheat, and barley, and vineyards, wherein fig-trees, and pomegranates, and oliveyards grow: a land of oil and honey.

9 Where without any want thou shalt eat thy bread, and enjoy abundance of all things: where the stones are iron, and out of its hills are dug mines of brass:

10 That when thou hast eaten, and art full, thou mayst bless the Lord thy God for the excellent land, which he hath given thee.

11 Take heed, and beware, lest at any time thou forget the Lord thy God, and neglect his commandments, and judgments, and ceremonies, which I command thee this day:

12 Lest after thou hast eaten and art filled, hast built goodly houses, and dwelt in them,

13 And shalt have herds of oxen, and flocks of sheep, and plenty of gold, and of silver, and of all things,

14 Thy heart be lifted up; and thou remember not the Lord thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage:

15 And was thy leader in the great and terrible wilderness, wherein there was the serpent burning with his breath, and the scorpion, and the dipsas, and no the Hebrews, being so well provided with raiment in a desert country, is mentioned, 2 Esd. ix. 21. Cosmas (B. 5) allows only that merchants constantly supplied them, and Abenezra thinks that they had brought plenty for change out of Egypt. C.—But the Scripture seems to acknowledge something more wonderful; namely, the good condition of the people's feet, and of their garments, after they had been worn for such a length of time. H.—The miracle was in favour both of good and bad, like manna, &c. T.

VER. 5. Up, by mildness and correction alternately. Heb. "chastiseth thee." Prov. iii. 12.

VER. 7. Out. The Jordan was the only river of consequence; but there were many torrents, &c., which rendered the country very different from that where they had been travelling for forty years. H.—Heb. "of fountains, of abysses, which spring in vales and on mountains," having their origin in the sea. Chal. Eccli. i. 7. "Judea is famous for its waters," says Solinus, (35,) "and the Jordan, a most enchanting river, runs through regions of equal beauty." C.

VER. 9. Iron, equal in hardness, and used to cut things, in the same manner as we use iron or steel. Isa. lx. 17.—Brass. There were mines of both in Mount Libanus; and David collected great quantities of such metals from Coelestria, 3 Kings xviii. 8; 1 Par. xxii. 3, 14. Sidon was noted for its brass. Homer, Odys. xv. 425. Sarepta probably took its name from the "foundry" established there. Dan and Aser had abundance of iron and of brass. Chap. xxxiii. 25; Eze. xxvii. 19. Cadmus brought from this country the art of melting gold, &c. into Greece. Plin. vii. 56. In latter ages many Christians were condemned to work in the mines of Palestine. Euseb.

VER. 10. Bless, not forgetting to give thanks after meat, as well as to beg God's blessing before: for it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer, 1 Tim. iv. 45. M.—In all things give thanks, 1 Thess. v. 18. Our Saviour did so at the last supper. Matt. xxvi. 26. C.

VER. 15. Breath. Heb. asorop, or the basilisk, as it is rendered, Isa. xxx. 6. It destroys both the grass and animals, by the burning infection of its breath. Galen. Plin. viii. 19. See Num. xxi. 6. T.—Scorpion stings with its tail.—Dipsas

18 But remember the Lord thy God, that he hath given thee strength, that he might fulfil his covenant, concerning which he swore to thy fathers, as this present day showeth.

19 But if thou forget the Lord thy God, and follow strange gods, and serve and adore them: behold now I foretell thee, that thou shalt utterly perish.

20 As the nations, which the Lord destroyed at thy entrance, so shall you also perish, if you be disobedient to the voice of the Lord your God.

CHAP. IX.

Lest they should impute their victories to their own merits, they are put in mind of their manifold rebellions and other sins, for which they should have been destroyed, but God spared them for his promise made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

HEAR, O Israel: Thou shalt go over the Jordan ^c this day: to possess nations very great, and stronger than thyself, cities great, and walled up to the sky,

2 A people great and tall, the sons of the Enacims, whom thou hast seen, and heard of, against whom no man is able to stand.

3 Thou shalt know therefore this day that the Lord thy God himself will pass over before thee, a devouring and consuming fire, to destroy and extirpate and bring them to nothing before thy face quickly, as he hath spoken to thee.

4 Say not in thy heart, when the Lord thy God shall have destroyed them in thy sight: For my justice hath the Lord brought me in to possess this land, whereas these nations are destroyed for their wickedness.

5 For it is not for thy justices, and the uprightness of thy heart that thou shalt go in to possess their lands: but because they have done wickedly, they are destroyed at thy coming in: and that the Lord might accomplish his word, which he promised by oath to thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

6 Know therefore that the Lord thy God giveth thee not this excellent land in possession for thy justices; for thou art a very stiff-necked people.

VER. 19. Thee. Heb. "I attest this day against you, (Sept. add heaven and earth,) that you shall," &c. God had already forbidden the worship of strange gods. Exod. xx. 3. He now threatens to punish the transgressors most severely. All nations have deemed it criminal to abandon the religion of their ancestors, unless when there were evident proofs of its absurdity, as was the case when so many embraced the doctrine of Jesus Christ, for which they were so cruelly persecuted. C.

VER. 20. Destroyed. Heb. "destroys." Some were already subdued, others on the brink of ruin.—Disobedient to. God punished this sin in the most exemplary manner. H.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. This day, very soon, (M.) within the space of a month. C.—Sky: an hyperbole to denote their surprising height. W.

VER. 2. Stand. Heb. "who can stand before the sons of Enak?" as if this were a sort of proverb. C.—The spier had formerly terrified the people with the report of the high walls and gigantic inhabitants of Chanaan. Num. xiii. 18.

7 Remember and forget not, how thou provokedst the Lord thy God to wrath in the wilderness. From the day that thou camest out of Egypt unto this place, thou hast always strove against the Lord.

8 ^a For in Horeb also thou didst provoke him, and he was angry and would have destroyed thee,

9 ^c When I went up into the mount, to receive the tables of stone, the tables of the covenant which the Lord made with you: and I continued in the mount forty days and nights, neither eating bread, nor drinking water.

10 ^d And the Lord gave me two tables of stone written with the finger of God, and containing all the words that he spoke to you in the mount from the midst of the fire, when the people were assembled together.

11 And when forty days were passed, and as many nights, the Lord gave me the two tables of stone, the tables of the covenant;

12 And said to me: ^e Arise, and go down from hence quickly: for thy people, which thou hast brought out of Egypt, have quickly forsaken the way, that thou hast showed them, and have made to themselves a molten idol.

13 And again the Lord said to me: I see that this people is stiff-necked:

14 Let me alone that I may destroy them, and abolish their name from under heaven, and set thee over a nation that is greater and stronger than this.

15 And when I came down from the burning mount, and held the two tables of the covenant with both hands,

16 And saw that you had sinned against the Lord your God, and had made to yourselves a molten calf, and had quickly forsaken his way, which he had showed you:

17 I cast the tables out of my hands, and broke them in your sight.

18 And I fell down before the Lord, as before, forty days and nights, neither eating bread nor drinking water, for all your sins, which you had committed against the Lord, and had provoked him to wrath:

19 For I feared his indignation and anger, wherewith being moved against you, he would have destroyed you. And the Lord heard me this time also.

20 And he was exceeding angry against Aaron also, and would have destroyed him, and I prayed in like manner for him.

21 And your sin that you had committed, that is, the calf, I took, and burned it with fire, and breaking it into

VER. 3. Fire. See chap. iv. 24. The conducting angel would fight for the Hebrews. H.

VER. 7. Strove. Heb. "irritated." C.—Sept. "continually disbelieved the Lord." Moses hence takes occasion to lay before the people their frequent and most heinous offences, on account of which they might justly have feared being destroyed, as much as the infamous nations whom they were about to supplant. They might thus be convinced that they had been chosen gratuitously. H.

VER. 12. Have quickly. Heb. "have become corrupt; they have quickly abandoned the way which I commanded them." H.—Sept. "the people hath sinned . . . they have quickly transgressed," &c. C.—Idol. Protestants have "image." The Hebrews had called the similitude of a calf their god. Exod. xxxii. H.

VER. 16. Sinned, by idolatry, which comprises every sort of sin. Hence the Scripture only specifies that Jeroboam caused Israel to sin, when it means to assert that he engaged the people in the worship of idols. C.

VER. 21. Sin. The Scripture designates by this name not only the evil action, but also the propensity to it, the object, matter, occasion, punishment &c.

pieces, until it was as small as dust, I threw it into the torrent which cometh down from the mountain.

22 "At the burning also, and at the place of temptation, and at the graves of lust you provoked the Lord:

23 And when he sent you from Cades-barne, saying: Go up, and possess the land that I have given you, and you slighted the commandment of the Lord your God, and did not believe him, neither would you hearken to his voice:

24- But were always rebellious from the day that I began to know you.

25 And I lay prostrate before the Lord forty days and nights, in which I humbly besought him, that he would not destroy you as he had threatened:

26 And praying, I said: O Lord God, destroy not thy people, and thy inheritance, which thou hast redeemed in thy greatness, whom thou hast brought out of Egypt with a strong hand.

27 Remember thy servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: look not on the stubbornness of this people, nor on their wickedness and sin:

28 Lest perhaps the inhabitants of the land, out of which thou hast brought us, say: The Lord could not bring them into the land, that he promised them, and he hated them: therefore he brought them out, that he might kill them in the wilderness,

29 Who are thy people and thy inheritance, whom thou hast brought out by thy great strength, and in thy stretched-out arm.

CHAP. X.

God giveth the second tables of the law; a further exhortation to fear and serve the Lord.

AT^b that time the Lord said to me: Hew thee two tables of stone, like the former, and come up to me into the mount: and thou shalt make an ark of wood,

2 And I will write on the tables the words that were in them which thou brokest before, and thou shalt put them in the ark.

victim of sin.—The calf. He broke the idol in pieces, and then ground it small. Exod. xxxii. 20. C.

VER. 22. Burning, &c. The places called in Heb. "Tabera, Massa, and Kibroth Hattaavah." H.—At the first, the murmurers were burnt (Num. xi. 1); at the second, or at Raphidim, (C.) the people demanded water, and were supplied from Horeb (Exod. xvii. 2, 7. M.); though some confound this with the former place. It seems rather to refer to the temptation, or murmur of the people, on account of quails. Num. xi. 34; Psal. lxxvii. 18. C.

VER. 24. To know you. When Moses slew the Egyptian, and would have pacified two of his contending brethren, they refused to receive his mediation; so also, when he returned from Midian, to rescue them from slavery, they presently began to murmur against him, and continued to do so frequently for forty years. H.

VER. 25. Nights. See ver. 18. C.—After specifying various seditions of the people, Moses returns to what he had been saying respecting the tables of the law, and shows with what difficulty he obtained pardon for the people, and the second tables. H.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. Wood. Moses had received this injunction before he ascended the mount the second time. Exod. xxv. 10. But he executed it only after he had received the second tables of the law. Exod. xxxvii. 1. M.

VER. 6. Mosera, by Mount Hor, for there Aaron died. Num. xx. This and the following verses seem to be inserted by way of parenthesis, (Ch.) as far as the 10th. The reason of their insertion here cannot easily be explained; but we must adore, in silence, the designs of the Holy Spirit. C.—Moses had just mentioned the ark, designed to contain the tables of the law; and as the priests and Levites were to be the guardians of those sacred things, he takes occasion to specify something with respect to their institution, &c. Mosera was perhaps twice visited by the Hebrews. The first time they came thither from Beroth-Benejaacan, or from "the well of the children of Jacan," and thence measured back their steps; though, the second time, Mosera, or Moseroth, is not noticed, because it had been specified already, and they did not stop long there, but

3 And I made an ark of setim-wood. And when I had hewn two tables of stone like the former, I went up into the mount, having them in my hands.

4 And he wrote in the tables, according as he had written before, the ten words, which the Lord spoke to you in the mount from the midst of the fire, when the people were assembled: and he gave them to me.

5 And returning from the mount, I came down, and put the tables into the ark, that I had made, and they are there till this present, as the Lord commanded me.

6 "And the children of Israel removed their camp from Beroth, of the children of Jacan, into Mosera, where Aaron died, and was buried, and Eleazar, his son, succeeded him in the priestly office.

7 From thence they came to Gadgad: from which place they departed, and camped in Jetebatha, in a land of waters and torrents.

8 At that time he separated the tribe of Levi, to carry the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and to stand before him in the ministry, and to bless in his name until this present day.

9 Wherefore Levi hath no part, nor possession with his brethren: because the Lord himself is his possession, as the Lord thy God promised him.

10 And I stood in the mount, as before, forty days and nights: and the Lord heard me this time also, and would not destroy thee.

11 And he said to me: Go, and walk before the people, that they may enter, and possess the land, which I swore to their fathers that I would give them.

12 And now, Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but that thou fear the Lord thy God, and walk in his ways, and love him, and serve the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul:

13 And keep the commandments of the Lord, and his ceremonies, which I command thee this day, that it may be well with thee?

14 Behold heaven is the Lord's thy God, and the proceeded to Gadgad. Num. xxxiii. 30. Bonfrere. M.—Others think that Mosera and Benejaacan are not the same places as Moseroth and Beroth Bensacan, though the names be similar. A. Lapide.—Perhaps it will be more satisfactory to acknowledge that Mosera has been transposed by the copyists, as it ought to come before Beroth, particularly as Moses places it in that order, where he gives an account of the forty-two stations; and the Samaritan copy agrees with him in this place. C.—It also retains many words which have been omitted in Hebrew, and in all the versions taken from it; whence the omission seems to have taken place before the appearance of the version of the Septuagint. The Samaritan version, which is acknowledged to have preceded the Septuagint, agrees with its text, and reads, "And the children of Israel journeyed from Moseroth, and pitched in Benejoakan: from thence they journeyed, and pitched in Hagidgad: from thence they journeyed, and pitched in Jotbathah, a land of rivers of waters: from thence they journeyed, and pitched in Ebronah: from thence they journeyed, and pitched in Eziongaber: from thence they journeyed, and pitched in the wilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh: from thence they journeyed, and pitched in Mount Hor. And there Aaron died," &c. Kennicott, 2. Dis.—Thus Mosera will be the 27th, and Mount Hor the 34th station (Pococke); whence the Israelites departed, after the death of Aaron, to Salmana, directing their course to the countries east of the Jordan, which had been promised to them. The appointment of Eleazar to succeed Aaron, and the separation of the Levites unto the Lord, should be placed together, after the different encampments. H.

VER. 8. Time, during the pontificate of Aaron. Num. iii. 6. M.—God had made this appointment at Sinai, (Exod. xxviii. 1.) where he ordered the tabernacle and the priests to be consecrated. Upon the sedition of Core, which probably took place at Jetebatha, he confirmed the rights of the Levitical tribe. Num. xvi. xvii., and xviii. C.—Ark. The priests carried it on more solemn occasions, (Jos. iii. 3.) as they also blessed the people. M.—Yet the Levites sung the praises of God, in which sense the word blessing is often used, 1 Par. xxiii. 13. Hence Castalio translates, "to celebrate his name."

heaven of heaven, the earth, and all things that are therein :

15 And yet the Lord hath been closely joined to thy fathers, and loved them, and chose their seed after them, that is to say, you, out of all nations, as this day it is proved.

16 Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart, and stiffen your neck no more :

17 Because the Lord your God he is the God of gods, and the Lord of lords, a great God, and mighty and terrible, who accepteth no person, nor taketh bribes.

18 He doth judgment to the fatherless and the widow, loveth the stranger, and giveth him food and raiment.

19 And do you therefore love strangers, because you also were strangers in the land of Egypt.

20 Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God, and serve him only : to him thou shalt adhere, and shalt swear by his name.

21 He is thy praise, and thy God, that hath done for thee these great and terrible things, which thy eyes have seen.

22 In seventy souls thy fathers went down into Egypt : and behold now the Lord thy God hath multiplied thee as the stars of heaven.

CHAP. XI.

The love and service of God are still inculcated, with a blessing to them that serve him, and threats of punishment if they forsake his law.

THEREFORE love the Lord thy God, and observe his precepts and ceremonies, his judgments and commandments, at all times.

2 Know this day the things that your children know not, who saw not the chastisements of the Lord your God, his great doings and strong hand, and stretched-out arm,

3 The signs and works which he did in the midst of Egypt to king Pharaoh, and to all his land,

4 And to all the host of the Egyptians, and to their horses and chariots : how the waters of the Red Sea covered them, when they pursued you, and how the Lord destroyed them until this present day :

5 And what he hath done to you in the wilderness, till you came to this place :

* 2 Par. xix. 7 ; Job xxxiv. 19 ; Wisd. vi. 8 ; Eccli. xxxv. 15 ; Acts x. 34 ; Rom. ii. 11 ; Gal. ii. 6.

VER. 16. Circumcise. The Hebrews esteem circumcision as a mark of their greatest glory. All who had it not were looked upon as profane. They call the ears, mind, and heart uncircumcised, when they would not hear, understand, or obey the law of God. S. Paul (Rom. ii. 28) frequently inculcates this interior circumcision, to which Moses alludes in these his last exhortations. Chap. xxx. 6. C.

VER. 20. Only, a word not found in the Hebrew, but deemed necessary by the Sept. to express the true meaning of this passage. See chap. vi. 13. C.—Name, when an oath is necessary. Thou shalt never swear by false gods. W.

VER. 21. Praise, the object whom thou must praise, and the source of all thy happiness and glory. Other nations will revere the Jews on this account. C.—An ancient oracle could not refuse giving them this singular commendation, though to the prejudice of idolatry. "Chaldees alone philosophy may claim—but Hebrews worship God, the self-born King—with pure religion." H.

VER. 22. Seventy. Some copies of the Sept. add "five," with S. Stephen. See Gen. xli. 26. C.

CHAP. XI. VER. 2. Know, &c. Reflect on the wonders of God, which you must explain to your children, who were not born, or able to discern them, when they were effected at the Red Sea, and in the punishment of the seditious, ver. 7. Heb. "know ye this day, for I do not address myself to your children, who know not, (or have not understanding,) and saw not," &c. C.

VER. 4. Day. So that none of the Egyptians have since been able to molest you.

VER. 10. Gardens. Heb. "where thou didst sow the seed, and water it with the foot, as a garden," by means of various machines or wheels, which were

6 And to Dathan and Abiron, the sons of Eliab, who was the son of Ruben : whom the earth, opening her mouth, swallowed up, with their households and tents, and all their substance, which they had in the midst of Israel.

7 Your eyes have seen all the great works of the Lord that he hath done,

8 That you may keep all his commandments, which I command you this day, and may go in, and possess the land, to which you are entering,

9 And may live in it a long time : which the Lord promised by oath to your fathers, and to their seed, a land which floweth with milk and honey.

10 For the land, which thou goest to possess, is not like the land of Egypt, from whence thou camest out, where when the seed is sown, waters are brought in to water it after the manner of gardens :

11 But it is a land of hills and plains, expecting rain from heaven.

12 And the Lord thy God doth always visit it, and his eyes are on it from the beginning of the year unto the end thereof.

13 If then you obey my commandments, which I command you this day, that you love the Lord your God, and serve him with all your heart, and with all your soul :

14 He will give to your land the early rain and the latter rain, that you may gather in your corn, and your wine, and your oil,

15 And your hay out of the fields to feed your cattle, and that you may eat and be filled.

16 Beware lest perhaps your heart be deceived, and you depart from the Lord, and serve strange gods, and adore them :

17 And the Lord being angry shut up heaven, that the rain come not down, nor the earth yield her fruit, and you perish quickly from the excellent land, which the Lord will give you.

18 Lay up these my words in your hearts and minds, and hang them for a sign on your hands, and place them between your eyes.

19 Teach your children that they meditate on them.

turned by the feet. Philo.—Solinus (ii. 22, 36) takes notice of this inconvenience in Egypt. The country is watered only by the Nile, which overflows for six weeks, about the beginning of June. Various canals or reservoirs are formed to preserve a sufficient supply of water during the remainder of the year. Pliny (18) observes, that "if the Nile rise less than 12, or more than 16 cubits high, famine is inevitable." C. See Gen. xli. 3.—Prince Radzivil saw the canals of Egypt, which the people said had been dug by the Hebrews. Augustus ordered his soldiers to clean them out. Sueton. c. 18.—After the seed was committed to the earth, it was necessary to water it frequently, as the sun would harden the soil too much. No rain falls in that part of Egypt where the Hebrews had dwelt, according to many respectable authors, (T.) or at least what little may fall is not sufficient to keep the earth moist. H.

VER. 14. Rain, which falls in Judea chiefly about the vernal and the autumnal equinoxes, in March and October.—The latter rain (Heb. molkuss) is that which falls when the seed is just sown, though the Rabbin pretend that jura has this signification, in opposition to the Sept. It fell at the beginning of the Jewish year, which commenced in September. Joel ii. 23 ; Zac. x. 1. C.

VER. 15. Hay. Seed-grass was sown, like corn, in Palestine, as it is still in the Levant, where meadows are unknown. The hay consisted chiefly of trefoil, and was carried on beasts in long journeys. Gen. xliii. 27 ; Judg. xix. 19. Cattle fed commonly on straw and barley. The hay grass which grew on mountains was of a different sort, and used for pasturage, (Job xl. 15,) though it might also be cut. Prov. xxvii. 25. C.

when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest on the way, and when thou liest down and risest up.

20 Thou shalt write them upon the posts and the doors of thy house :

21 That thy days may be multiplied, and the days of thy children in the land, which the Lord swore to thy fathers, that he would give them as long as the heaven hangeth over the earth.

22 For if you keep the commandments which I command you, and do them, to love the Lord your God, and walk in all his ways, cleaving unto him, 23 The Lord will destroy all these nations before your face, and you shall possess them, which are greater and stronger than you.

24 *Every place, that your foot shall tread upon, shall be yours. From the desert, and from Libanus, from the great river Euphrates unto the western sea shall be your borders.

25 None shall stand against you : the Lord your God shall lay the dread and fear of you upon all the land, that you shall tread upon, as he hath spoken to you.

26 Behold I set forth in your sight this day a blessing and a curse :

27 A blessing, if you obey the commandments of the Lord your God which I command you this day :

28 A curse, if you obey not the commandments of the Lord your God, but revolt from the way, which now I show you, and walk after strange gods, which you know not.

29 And when the Lord thy God shall have brought thee into the land, whither thou goest to dwell, thou shalt put the blessing upon Mount Garizim, the curse upon Mount Hebal :

30 Which are beyond the Jordan, behind the way that goeth to the setting of the sun, in the land of the Chanaanite, who dwelleth in the plain country over against Galgala, which is near the valley that reacheth and entereth far.

31 For you shall pass over the Jordan, to possess the land, which the Lord your God will give you, that you may have it, and possess it.

* Jos. i. 3.—b A. M. 2553.

32 See therefore that you fulfil the ceremonies and judgments, which I shall set this day before you.

CHAP. XII.

All idolatry must be extirpated: sacrifices, tithes, and first-fruits, must be offered in one only place: all eating of blood is prohibited.

THESE are the precepts and judgments, that you must do in the land, which the Lord the God of thy fathers will give thee, to possess it all the days that thou shalt walk upon the earth.

2 Destroy all the places, in which the nations that you shall possess, worshipped their gods, upon high mountains, and hills, and under every shady tree.

3 Overthrow their altars, and break down their statues, burn their groves with fire, and break their idols in pieces: destroy their names out of those places.

4 You shall not do so to the Lord your God :

5 But you shall come to the place, which the Lord your God shall choose out of all your tribes, to put his name there, and to dwell in it :

6 And you shall offer in that place your holocausts and victims, the tithes and first-fruits of your hands, and your vows and gifts, the first-born of your herds and your sheep.

7 And you shall eat there in the sight of the Lord your God : and you shall rejoice in all things, whereunto you shall put your hand, you and your houses, wherein the Lord your God hath blessed you.

8 You shall not do there the things we do here this day, every man that which seemeth good to himself.

9 For until this present time you are not come to rest, and to the possession, which the Lord your God will give you.

10 You shall pass over the Jordan, and shall dwell in the land, which the Lord your God will give you, that you may have rest from all enemies round about : and may dwell without any fear,

11 In the place, which the Lord your God shall choose, that his name may be therein. Thither shall you bring all the things that I command you, holocausts, and victims, and tithes, and the first-fruits of your hands : and what-

VER. 20. Posts. Upon one post the Jews hang boards, enclosing a piece of parchment, with the 13th to the 21st verse of this chapter; and from chap. v. 4 to the 9th of the 6th chapter, they hang with great solemnity upon the other post.

VER. 21. Earth, as long as the world shall endure. The psalmist (lxxxviii. 30) expresses the duration of the reign of the Messiah nearly in the same terms. See Bar. i. 2. C.

VER. 24. Yours. The nations of Chanaan, how strong soever, should fall, and their country be lawfully possessed by the Hebrews.—Western sea. Heb. "the sea of the back." The Jews speak of the different parts of the world, with respect to a man who has his face turned towards the east. Gen. xiii. 9. The countries, from the desert of Zin to the Euphrates, were never entirely occupied by the Israelites, except under the reigns of David and of Solomon. C.

VER. 26. Curse. Their respective effects you shall experience, according to your behaviour. C.—God helps our free-will to do good. S. Aug. q. 15. W.

VER. 29. Put the blessing, &c. See Deut. xxvii. 12, &c., and Josue viii. 33, &c. Ch.—Six tribes were to be stationed on each of these mountains. Chap. xxviii.—Garizim. Eusebius says that the Samaritans are grossly deceived in placing this mountain in the vicinity of Sichem, instead of Jericho. But this is a mistake; for Jotham addressed the inhabitants of Sichem from that mountain. Judg. ix. 7. C.

VER. 30. Far. Heb. "over against Galgal, beside the plains of More, or Aluni More." Samar. reads, "the plain of More, near Sichem," as Exod. xx. 17. H.—This is styled the noble vale. Gen. xii. 6. C.—The road from Jericho to the Mediterranean Sea left these mountains on the north. The Chanaanite inhabited all that region, from Galgal to Sichem.

VER. 32. Fulfil. How inconsistent must such exhortations be, if, as Protestants assert, the commandments be impossible, and "the law exacteth impossible things." Luther in Gal. iii. H.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. These. Having inculcated the general precepts, and the obligation of loving God above all things, Moses now descends to particular duties. C.

VER. 2. Tree. See Gen. xxi. 33. All the monuments of idolatry must be destroyed. The very names of the idols must be abhorred and obliterated, (Exod. xxiii. 13,) to show that they have lost possession of the country. So, (ver. 5,) to put his name there, means to take possession of a place.

VER. 5. It, where the ark was to be kept. H.—Before the building of the temple, it was removed from one tribe or place to another. Jerusalem was thenceforward styled the city of the great King. Psal. xlvii. 1, 9.

VER. 7. You. In gratitude, you shall therefore offer your victims. H.—The Jews were accustomed to make a feast thrice a year in the holy city. They might also eat some parts of the peace-offerings. M.

VER. 8. Himself. Some restrain this to the sacrifices, which each person might offer, where he thought proper, till the ark was fixed at Silo. But many other parts of the ceremonial law seem not to have been in force till the Hebrews crossed the Jordan. Amos v. 25. Circumcision was omitted, as well as most of the festivals. Several laws were, however, designed for the people during their sojournment, such as those which regard the order of judgment, the cleanness of the camp, the purification of women, and of those who had touched a dead body. &c. Exod. xviii. 25; Num. v. 2; Lev. xv. 31. It was not left to their option to observe or to neglect the sabbath, (Num. xv. 32,) the leaves of proposition, or the perpetual fire, &c. Num. iv. 7, 13. C.

VER. 11. Therein While you are performing your duty to God, you need 12 There shall you feast before the Lord your God, you, and your sons, and your daughters, your men-servants, and maid-servants, and the Levite that dwelleth in your cities. For he hath no other part and possession among you.

13 Beware lest thou offer thy holocausts in every place that thou shalt see :

14 But in the place, which the Lord shall choose, in one of thy tribes, shalt thou offer sacrifices, and shalt do all that I command thee.

15 But if thou desirest to eat, and the eating of flesh delight thee, kill, and eat according to the blessing of the Lord thy God, which he hath given thee, in thy cities : whether it be unclean, that is to say, having blemish or defect : or clean, that is to say, sound and without blemish, such as may be offered, as the roe, and the hart, shalt thou eat it ;

16 Only the blood thou shalt not eat, but thou shalt pour it out upon the earth as water.

17 Thou mayst not eat in thy towns the tithes of thy corn, and thy wine, and thy oil, the first-born of thy herds and thy cattle, nor any thing that thou vowest, and that thou wilt offer voluntarily, and the first-fruits of thy hands :

18 But thou shalt eat them before the Lord thy God in the place, which the Lord thy God shall choose, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy man-servant, and maid-servant, and the Levite that dwelleth in thy cities : and thou shalt rejoice and be refreshed before the Lord thy God in all things, whereunto thou shalt put thy hand.

19 Take heed thou forsake not the Levite all the time that thou livest in the land.

20 When the Lord thy God shall have enlarged thy borders, as he hath spoken to thee, and thou wilt eat the flesh that thy soul desireth :

VER. 15. But. Heb. "Yet thou mayst kill and eat the flesh which thy soul desireth in all thy gates, with which the Lord thy God hath blessed thee, the unclean and the clean may eat thereof, as of the roe buck," &c. H.—The Vulgate translates ver. 22 in this sense, intimating that these meats did not contract any such peculiar sanctity as to exclude those who were unclean, ver. 20. Lev. xvii. 3. C.

VER. 17. Tithes. These were of an extraordinary nature, destined for feasts. Chap. xiv. 22; Lev. xxvii. 30. The usual tithes belonged entirely to the Levitical tribe. C.—First-born, or the most excellent, ver. 11; Exod. xii. 11, 12. The first-born, if it proved to be without defect, and a male, was given to the priests. Num. xviii. 15.—Voluntarily. If the thing was vowed to the Lord without restriction, it fell to the share of the priests alone : but if the person specified that he intended it for a peace-offering, &c., the priest could only claim what was allotted to him by the law. C.

VER. 21. Far off. Hence many conclude that those who lived near the tabernacle were bound to bring the animals which they designed for their own use, to be slain there, as they did in the desert. Others suppose that all were under the same predicament, and are hereby authorized to follow the same regulations, as to eat the flesh, whether they be clean or otherwise, provided they abstain from the blood. See Lev. xvii. 3. C.—The custom of bringing the beasts to be slain before the door of the tabernacle was to be no longer obligatory. M.

VER. 22. Alike. This must be understood of those who had contracted only a smaller stain, which did not communicate the uncleanness to others, but deterred people from approaching to sacred things. C.—Those who had touched the 22 Even as the roe and the hart is eaten, so shalt thou eat them : both the clean and unclean shall eat of them alike.

23 Only beware of this, that thou eat not the blood, for the blood is for the soul : and therefore thou must not eat the soul with the flesh :

24 But thou shalt pour it upon the earth as water,

25 That it may be well with thee and thy children after thee, when thou shalt do that which is pleasing in the sight of the Lord.

26 But the things which thou hast sanctified, and vowed to the Lord, thou shalt take, and shalt come to the place which the Lord shall choose :

27 And shalt offer thy oblations, the flesh and the blood upon the altar of the Lord thy God : the blood of thy victims thou shalt pour on the altar : and the flesh thou thyself shalt eat.

28 Observe and hear all the things that I command thee, that it may be well with thee and thy children after thee for ever, when thou shalt do what is good and pleasing in the sight of the Lord thy God.

29 When the Lord thy God shall have destroyed before thy face the nations, which thou shalt go in to possess, and when thou shalt possess them, and dwell in their land, 30 Beware lest thou imitate them, after they are destroyed at thy coming in, and lest thou seek after their ceremonies, saying : As these nations have worshipped their gods, so will I also worship.

31 Thou shalt not do in like manner to the Lord thy God. For they have done to their gods, all the abominations which the Lord abhorreth, offering their sons and daughters, and burning them with fire.

32 What I command thee, that only do thou to the Lord : neither add any thing, nor diminish.

CHAP. XIII.

False prophets must be slain, and idolatrous cities destroyed.

dead, &c. were not allowed to eat with people who were not under any such legal uncleanness. M.

VER. 27. Oblations. Heb. "holocausts . . and the blood of the sacrifices" of peace. Parts of the latter were eaten by the offerer, but the former victims were entirely burnt. H.

VER. 31. Fire. See Lev. xviii. 21.

VER. 32. That only do thou, &c. They are forbid here to follow the ceremonies of the heathens, or to make any alterations in the Divine ordinances. Ch.—To adopt fresh regulations, in the same spirit, was not forbidden. Thus David ordered those who had kept the baggage to share equally with the soldiers who had gone to battle (1 Kings xxx.) ; and our Saviour approved, by his presence, the feast of the dedication of the temple, instituted long after Moses. 1 Mac. iv. John x. W.—He perfected the law by the precepts of the gospel. Matt. v. 17. Chap. iv. 2. Christ is full of grace and truth. John i. He has fulfilled the law and the prophets. H. S. Aug. c. Faust. xvii. 2, and xix. 9.—"Grace," says he, "pertains to the fulness of charity, truth to the completion of the prophecies." D.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. If . . . a prophet, or even an angel from heaven, as S. Paul (Gal. i. 8) says on a similar occasion, (C.) should work a miracle, and afterwards adduce it in proof of a false religion, believe him not. Whether God will ever suffer a real miracle which may seem to countenance error, or not, this appears to be unquestionable, that he will never deny himself, or, in a contest of miracles, permit falsehood to gain the victory. If the magicians performed wonderful works, they were forced at last to confess their inferiority, and yield to Moses. Exod. viii. 18, 19. Miracles are generally a proof of the truth of any doctrine ; but when the doctrine is already established, as in this case of the unity of God, (ver. 2,) it may be adduced with propriety as a criterion of miracles. 11.—The Jews, in vain, allege this passage against the religion of Jesus Christ. He

2 And that come to pass which he spoke, and he say to thee: Let us go, and follow strange gods, which thou knowest not, and let us serve them:

3 Thou shalt not hear the words of that prophet or dreamer: for the Lord your God trieth you, that it may appear whether you love him with all your heart, and with all your soul, or not.

4 Follow the Lord your God, and fear him, and keep his commandments, and hear his voice: him you shall serve, and to him you shall cleave.

5 And that prophet or forger of dreams shall be slain: because he spoke to draw you away from the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed you from the house of bondage: to make thee go out of the way, which the Lord thy God commanded thee: and thou shalt take away the evil out of the midst of thee.

6 If thy brother, the son of thy mother, or thy son, or daughter, or thy wife that is in thy bosom, or thy friend, whom thou lovest as thy own soul, would persuade thee secretly, saying: Let us go and serve strange gods, which thou knowest not, nor thy fathers,

7 Of all the nations round about, that are near or afar off, from one end of the earth to the other,

8 Consent not to him, hear him not, neither let thy eye spare him to pity and conceal him,

9 But thou shalt presently put him to death. *Let thy hand be first upon him, and afterwards the hands of all the people.

10 With stones shall he be stoned to death: because he would have withdrawn thee from the Lord thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage:

11 That all Israel hearing may fear, and may do no more any thing like this.

did not subvert, but fulfilled the law; so far was he from endeavouring to persuade them to abandon the true God. C.—If he had not come to act in this manner, the law would have contained in itself the seeds of dissolution, by falsely holding forth the expectation of a future Messiah, who would bring all things to perfection. Chap. xviii. 15; Gen. iii. 15, and xlix. 10, &c. Hence when he really appeared, the Jews desired him to prove his mission by a miracle, as he did repeatedly. Matt. xii. 38; John viii. 40, and x. 25.—A dream, of a mysterious kind, like those of Joseph and of the prophets. H.

VER. 2. To pass. The completion of a prophecy does not always prove that the person who uttered it was a true prophet. Chance, a knowledge of natural causes, &c., may enable an impostor sometimes to hit upon the truth. God may also, for reasons known to himself, declare what will come to pass by the mouth of a false prophet, or of a wicked man, as he did by Balaam and Caiaphas. Judas wrought miracles before his apostacy. C.—Yet if any who had been so highly favoured should attempt to enforce, by their preceding miracles, any false doctrine, let him be anathema. Gal. i. 8.—Not. The Hebrews had incontrovertible proofs of the existence of one God. They could not therefore acknowledge any other. H.—Novelty in religion is a mark of idolatry or of heresy. W.

VER. 5. Forger. Heb. "dreamer," to whom God reveals his secrets in the night, as he does to the prophet while he is awake.—Slain. Philo says, without any trial or delay: but the Rabbins allow that, although the impostor was not to receive an admonition, no ignorance being able to excuse him, as in other cases, he was to be brought before the Sanhedrin, at Jerusalem, and strangled. See Luke xiii. 33. The Jews, it is thought, condemned our Saviour on the plea that he was a false prophet. Matt. xxvi. 57. If a true prophet bore witness to another, the latter might also claim respect. C.—Yet though S. John the Baptist had repeatedly commended Jesus Christ, the Jews did not hesitate to call him a seducer, and to put him to death. H.—The evil "one". Syr. 1 Cor. v. 13.

VER. 6. If thy own brother, to distinguish him from the rest of the Jews, who were all styled brethren, as being descended from the same stock of the Patriarchs. M.

VER. 9. Presently put him to death. Not by killing him by private authority, but by informing the magistrate, and proceeding by order of justice. Ch. W.

VER. 12. Cities. If the inhabitants agreed, in general, to introduce the wor-

12 If in one of thy cities, which the Lord thy God shall give thee to dwell in, thou hear some say:

13 Children of Belial are gone out of the midst of thee, and have withdrawn the inhabitants of their city, and have said: Let us go, and serve strange gods which you know not:

14 Inquire carefully and diligently, the truth of the thing, by looking well into it, and if thou find that which is said to be certain, and that this abomination has been really committed,

15 Thou shalt forthwith kill the inhabitants of that city with the edge of thy sword, and shalt destroy it, and all things that are in it, even the cattle:

16 And all the household goods that are there, thou shalt gather together in the midst of the streets thereof, and shalt burn them with the city itself, so as to consume all for the Lord thy God, and that it be a heap for ever: it shall be built no more.

17 And there shall nothing of that anathema stick to thy hand: that the Lord may turn from the wrath of his fury, and may have mercy on thee, and multiply thee as he swore to thy fathers, 18 When thou shalt hear the voice of the Lord thy God, keeping all his precepts, which I command thee this day, that thou mayst do what is pleasing in the sight of the Lord thy God.

CHAP. XIV.

In mourning for the dead, they are not to follow the ways of the Gentiles: the distinction of clean and unclean meats: ordinances concerning tithes, and first-fruits.

BE ye children of the Lord your God: you shall not cut yourselves, nor make any baldness for the dead;

2 *Because thou art a holy people to the Lord thy God: and he chose thee to be his peculiar people of all nations that are upon the earth.

3 †Eat not the things that are unclean.

† Supra, vii. 6; Infra, xxvi. 18.—4 Lev. xi. 4.

ship of idols, they were to be first admonished, (C.) and if incorrigible, to be utterly destroyed. H.—The obligation of seeing that this was executed was left to the magistrates. D.

VER. 13. Belial: that is, without yoke. Hence the wicked, who refuse to be subject to the Divine law, are called in Scripture the sons of Belial. Ch.—The devil is called Belial, or "an apostate, rebel," &c. The word is also applied to Antichrist, to idols, and to those who are notoriously wicked. S. Jer. in Nahum i., and Isa. xxvii.; 3 Kings xxi. 13.

VER. 15. Even the cattle. Nothing at all must be spared. The goods of the innocent were involved in the common ruin, that they might learn to make all possible resistance to the introduction of so abominable a crime; and those of the guilty were destroyed wherever they were found. C.—But the persons of those who fled away, to show their disapprobation, and denounce the attempt of their brethren, (H.) would no doubt be saved. C.—If they continued among them, their indolence or connivance deserved punishment. H.—Grotius (Jur. ii. 15) maintains, that the magistrate is authorized by the law of nature to punish those who deny the existence of God or his providence, as these errors strike at the root of all society.

VER. 16. For the Lord, as a victim of expiation, and to manifest your zeal for the honour of the only true God.—No more. Sept. "it shall be uninhabited." C.

VER. 17. Hand. Thou shalt reserve nothing for thyself, (M.) as Achan did Jos. vii. H.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Be ye. Heb. "you are," &c. It may be connected with the preceding chapter.—Cut, as the barbarians and infidels do, who have no hope, 1 Thess. iv. 12; Lev. xix. 28.—Dead idols, Adonis, &c. The Arabs and Saracens cut the hair on the forehead of the head only, and so did the ancient Scotch monks, in imitation, as they pretended, of S. John. The Egyptians cut off the hair of their head and eye-brows when they were initiated in the mysteries of Isis, (S. Amb. ep. 58,) to testify that they partook in her sorrow for the death of her husband, Osiris. Hence it is probable that Moses forbids any conformity in such superstitious practices; particularly as the Israelites were consecrated to the service of the living God. C.

VER. 3. Unclean. See the annotations on Leviticus xi. Ch.—Some of the beasts here specified were not mentioned before, as the buffalo, &c.

4 These are the beasts that you shall eat, the ox, and the sheep, and the goat,
 5 The hart, and the roe, the buffle, the chamois, the pygarg, the wild goat, the camelopardalus.
 6 Every beast that divideth the hoof in two parts, and cheweth the cud, you shall eat.
 7 But of them that chew the cud, but divide not the hoof, you shall not eat, such as the camel, the hare, and the cherogril: because they chew the cud, but divide not the hoof, they shall be unclean to you.
 8 The swine also, because it divideth the hoof, but cheweth not the cud, shall be unclean; their flesh you shall not eat, and their carcasses you shall not touch.
 9 These shall you eat of all that abide in the waters: All that have fins and scales, you shall eat.
 10 Such as are without fins and scales, you shall not eat, because they are unclean.
 11 All birds that are clean you shall eat.
 12 The unclean eat not: to wit, the eagle, and the grype, and the osprey,
 13 The ringtail, and the vulture, and the kite according to their kind:
 14 And all of the raven's kind:
 15 And the ostrich, and the owl, and the larus, and the hawk according to its kind:
 16 The heron, and the swan, and the stork,
 17 And the cormorant, the porphyron, and the night-crow,
 18 The bittern, and the charadrion, every one in their kind: the houp also and the bat.
 19 Every thing that creepeth and hath little wings shall be unclean, and shall not be eaten.
 20 All that is clean, you shall eat.
 21 But whatsoever is dead of itself, eat not thereof. Give it to the stranger, that is within thy gates to eat, or sell it to him: because thou art the holy people of the Lord thy God. Thou shalt not boil a kid in the milk of its dam.

• Exod. xxiii. 19, and xxxiv. 26.

VER. 5. Buffle. Heb. jēmur, which some translate "the fallow-deer." The Arabs give this name to a beast resembling a hart, which has horns and red hair. C.—It was served up on the table of Solomon, 3 Kings iv. 23. Pliny (viii. 13) mentions the bubalus of Africa, which is like a calf. M.—Chamois, (tragelaphum), a beast which has the head of a he-goat, and the carcass of a hart. Scaliger. Plin. viii. 33.—Bochart translates plu, after the Arab., "the wild goat."—Pygarg, another species of the goat, (Plu. viii. 53.) of the colour of ashes. Bellon. q. 51. Dissum means "ashes" in Hebrew.—Goat, (orygen), "a wild goat, (Sept., Bochart, &c.) or ox." C.—Camelopardalus. This animal resembles a camel in its head and longish neck, and the panther in the spotted skin. Plin. viii. 18.—Bochart (iii. 21) thinks that the Heb. samer, means "a wild goat," noted for "leaping."

VER. 7. Cherogril, or porcupine. Lev. xi. 5. S. Barnabas and Clem. Alex. (Pæd. ii. 10) subjoin the hyena to the hare, though the name occur not in Moses. M.

VER. 10. Unclean. S. Barnabas adds, "Thou shalt not eat the murena, polypus, or cuttle fish;" and these are in effect of the description given by Moses. C.

VER. 13. Ringtail (ixion). Heb. rae. The same bird seems to be called dae in Leviticus, by the change of the first letter, though it is there translated the kite. The ixion is a sort of white, quick-sighted vulture.—Kite. Heb. diae, according to Bochart, means the vulture, as Isaias (xxxiv. 15) insinuates that this bird goes in flocks, while the kite is a solitary bird.

VER. 19. Wings. Heb. "every reptile that flieth," such as bees. C.

VER. 21. Of itself, or by suffocation.—Stranger, who has not embraced your religion. M.—Hence it is inferred that the Jews might keep unclean animals, and sell them; as they did not defile till they were dead. Jans.—Dam. All appearance of cruelty must be avoided. Christ, who is signified by the kid, on account of his assuming our sinful nature, shall not be slain in his infancy. S. Tho. 2, q. 102, a. 6. W.—Some take this prohibition literally, and extend it to calves

22 Every year thou shalt set aside the tithes of all thy fruits that the earth bringeth forth,

23 And thou shalt eat before the Lord thy God, in the place which he shall choose, that his name may be called upon therein, the tithe of thy corn, and thy wine, and thy oil, and the first-born of thy herds and thy sheep: that thou mayst learn to fear the Lord thy God at all times.

24 But when the way, and the place which the Lord thy God shall choose, are far off, and he hath blessed thee, and thou canst not carry all these things thither,

25 Thou shalt send them all, and turn them into money, and shalt carry it in thy hand, and shalt go to the place which the Lord shall choose:

26 And thou shalt buy with the same money, whatsoever pleaseth thee, either of the herds, or of sheep, wine also and strong drink, and all that thy soul desireth: and thou shalt eat before the Lord thy God, and shalt feast, thou and thy house:

27 And the Levite that is within thy gates: beware thou forsake him not, because he hath no other part in thy possession.

28 The third year thou shalt separate another tithe of all things that grow to thee at that time: and shalt lay it up within thy gates.

29 And the Levite that hath no other part nor possession with thee, and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are within thy gates, shall come and shall eat and be filled: that the Lord thy God may bless thee in all the works of thy hands that thou shalt do.

CHAP. XV.

The law of the seventh year of remission. The firstlings of cattle are to be sanctified to the Lord.

IN the seventh year thou shalt make a remission, 2 Which shall be celebrated in this order. He to whom any thing is owing from his friend, or neighbour, or brother, cannot demand it again, because it is the year of remission of the Lord.

3 Of the foreigner or stranger thou mayst exact it: of and lambs. The Arabs use milk in almost all their ragouts. Roger. ii. 2.—Others think that kids must not be eaten while they are as yet too tender, Qui plus lactis habet quam sanguinis. Juv. Sat. xi.—But we believe that God forbids the paschal lamb or kid to be offered while it sucks. It must be of a competent age, of one year. Exod. xii. 5, and xxiii. 19. Other victims would do if they were only eight days old. Lev. xxii. 27. C.

VER. 29. Filled. Of this feast the owner did not partake, (S. Aug. q. 20,) as he did of the former, ver. 26. M.—Josephus (iv. 8) acknowledges three sorts of tithes: but Calmet thinks that only two were paid every third year, and that the same tithe is mentioned, ver. 22, and 28. Tobias i. 7. The only difference is, that on the third and sixth years the products were consumed on the spot, and in other years they were spent at Jerusalem. See Lev. xxvii. Many, however, believe that three tithes were then exacted: 1. For the Levites. 2. For a feast at Jerusalem, and to defray the expenses on the road. 3. For the poor at home. D. &c. H.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. In the. Heb. "at the extremity of seven years," which some erroneously refer to the end, though the original signify also the beginning. C.

VER. 2. Again. Heb. does not mention friend. H.—"He shall not exact it, (or urge) his neighbour or his brother, because," &c. Whence Cajetan gathers, that debts might be demanded after the expiration of the seventh year, on which the products of the earth did not enable the Jews to pay any thing. Grotius also asserts, that perpetual debts might be required; and Menoch. includes things lent under the same regulation. But all debts became extinct as soon as the seventh year commenced, (ver. 9. C.) at least they could not be demanded till it was expired; though things merely lent might be taken back. D.

VER. 4. There shall be no poor, &c. It is not to be understood as a promise, that there should be no poor in Israel, as appears from ver. 11, where we learn that God's people would never be at a loss to find objects for their charity: but it is an ordinance that all should do their best endeavours to prevent any of their thy countryman and neighbour thou shalt not have power to demand it again.

4 And there shall be no poor nor beggar among you : that the Lord thy God may bless thee in the land which he will give thee in possession.

5 Yet so if thou hear the voice of the Lord thy God, and keep all things that he hath ordained, and which I command thee this day, he will bless thee, as he hath promised.

6 Thou shalt lend to many nations, and thou shalt borrow of no man. Thou shalt have dominion over very many nations, and no one shall have dominion over thee.

7 If one of thy brethren, that dwelleth within the gates of thy city, in the land which the Lord thy God will give thee, come to poverty : thou shalt not harden thy heart, nor close thy hand,

8 But shall open it to the poor man ;* thou shalt lend him that which thou perceivest he hath need of.

9 Beware lest perhaps a wicked thought steal in upon thee, and thou say in thy heart : "the seventh year of remission draweth nigh ; and thou turn away thy eyes from thy poor brother, denying to lend him that which he asketh : lest he cry against thee to the Lord, and it become a sin unto thee.

10 But thou shalt give to him : neither shalt thou do any thing craftily in relieving his necessities : that the Lord thy God may bless thee at all times, and in all things to which thou shalt put thy hand.

11 "There will not be wanting poor in the land of thy habitation : therefore I command thee to open thy hand to thy needy and poor brother, that liveth in the land.

12 "When thy brother, a Hebrew man, or Hebrew woman, is sold to thee, and hath served thee six years, in the seventh year thou shalt let him go free :

13 And when thou sendest him out free, thou shalt not let him go away empty :

14 But shalt give him for his way out of thy flocks, and out of thy barn-floor, and thy wine-press, wherewith the Lord thy God shall bless thee.

brethren from suffering the hardships of poverty and want. Ch.—Beggar, is not expressed, though it be implied in Heb. or the Sept., which connect this with the preceding verse, (H.) "because (or save when) there shall be no poor among you ;" as if the rich could not derive the benefit from the remission of debts. Vatable.—God had made abundant provision for the poor. He might have prevented any from falling into distress. C.—But he suffered this sometimes to take place, to try the dispositions both of the rich and of the poor. H.—If they had faithfully complied with his laws, he would not have permitted them to fall into the last degree of misery. C.—He allows no public begging, which all well regulated nations discountenance. M.

VER. 8. Need of. The Rabbi understand this of giving freely without any prospect of receiving again, much less of any advantage by usury. They esteem themselves bound also, by the laws of humanity, to assist even idolaters, though they will not beg of such, in public. C.—If people be in extreme want, the law requires that necessities should be given them ; but if they be not so far reduced but that they may be able to pay again in a little time, it may suffice to lend. H.

VER. 9. Eyes. Heb. "and thy eye be evil against," &c. This expression denotes one who is a prey to the base passions of avarice, jealousy, envy, &c. Chap. xxviii. 54 ; Matt. xx. 15. C.—A sin, or draw on punishment. M.—"If thou hast not fed, thou hast killed" thy neighbour in extreme want. S. Amb. Off. i. 7. W.

VER. 10. Neither. Heb. "thy heart shall not be evil in giving : for to this end the Lord . . hath blessed thee." Imitate his elemency.—Hand, in all thy undertakings and possessions.

VER. 11. Needy. Heb. expresses the order to be observed in giving alms, "one a thy hand wide (give with profusion) to thy brother, (or relations,) to thy needy, (in extreme want,) and to thy poor in the land," whoever they may be. C.

15 Remember that thou also wast a bond-servant in the land of Egypt, and the Lord thy God made thee free, and therefore I now command thee this.

16 But if he say : I will not depart : because he loveth thee, and thy house, and findeth that he is well with thee :

17 Thou shalt take an awl, and bore through his ear in the door of thy house, and he shall serve thee for ever : thou shalt do in like manner to thy woman-servant also.

18 Turn not away thy eyes from them, when thou makest them free : because he hath served thee six years according to the wages of a hireling : that the Lord thy God may bless thee in all the works that thou dost.

19 Of the firstlings, that come of thy herds, and thy sheep, thou shalt sanctify to the Lord thy God whatsoever is of the male sex. Thou shalt not work with the firstling of a bullock, and thou shalt not shear the firstlings of thy sheep.

20 In the sight of the Lord thy God shalt thou eat them every year, in the place that the Lord shall choose, thou and thy house.

21 "But if it have a blemish, or be lame, or blind, or in any part disfigured or feeble, it shall not be sacrificed to the Lord thy God.

22 But thou shalt eat it within the gates of thy city : the clean and the unclean shall eat them alike as the roe, and as the hart.

23 Only thou shalt take heed not to eat their blood, but pour it out on the earth as water.

The three principal solemnities to be observed : just judges to be appointed in every city : all occasions of idolatry to be avoided :

OBERVE "the month of new corn, which is the first of the spring, that thou mayst celebrate the Phase to the Lord thy God : because in this month the Lord thy God brought thee out of Egypt by night.

VER. 17. House, before a judge. It is supposed that this law regarded only those who had sold themselves, or had been condemned to be slaves. Fagius.—For ever ; that is, till the year of jubilee.—At o, not by piercing her ear, as some have thought, but by setting her at liberty, and giving her something, ver. 14.

VER. 18. Hireling. His freedom is due to him, as much as wages are due to the hireling. He is also entitled to a decent provision, for which he has laboured. Heb. "he hath been worth twice as much to thee as a hired servant," by his greater diligence, labour, and fidelity. Servitude has also rendered his work doubly severe. C.

VER. 19. Firstlings. Some belonged to the priests. Others, of which Moses speaks here, might be disposed of by the owners Chap. xii. 17. C.—Thus females, which came first, belonged to them, but they could not work with them (M.) ; with such at least as were the best, and fattened for a religious feast. Sheep designed for this purpose were not to be shorn ; or, as the original term means, their wool was not to be "torn away." H.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. Corn. Heb. abib, "green ears of corn," when barley begins to ripen, and wheat is yet green in Palestine ; at the time of the year which corresponds with half of our March and April. The first-fruits of the barley harvest were offered on the second day of the paschal solemnity. Lev. xxiii. 10 ; Exod. xiii. 4. C.—Night. We read (Exod. xii. 22, and Num. xxxiii. 3) that the Hebrews were ordered not to leave their houses till morning, and that they departed from Ramesses on the day after the passage of the destroying angel. They began, therefore, to prepare for their journey on the evening of the 14th, and began their march at day-break on the 15th of Nisan, ver. 6. H.

VER. 2. Phase. Heb. and Sept. "the Phase (or lamb) to the Lord thy God, sheep and oxen," or "of the flock and the herd," (Protest.) offered on the same festival, (H.) or victims proper for the solemnity, besides the paschal lamb. Num.

days shalt thou eat without leaven, the bread of affliction, because thou camest out of Egypt in fear: that thou mayst remember the day of thy coming out of Egypt, all the days of thy life.

4 No leaven shall be seen in all thy coasts for seven days, neither shall any of the flesh of that which was sacrificed the first day, in the evening, remain until morning.

5 Thou mayst not immolate the Phase in any one of thy cities, which the Lord thy God will give thee:

6 But in the place which the Lord thy God shall choose, that his name may dwell there; thou shalt immolate the Phase in the evening, at the going down of the sun, at which time thou camest out of Egypt.

7 And thou shalt dress and eat it in the place which the Lord thy God shall choose, and in the morning rising up thou shalt go into thy dwellings.

8 Six days shalt thou eat unleavened bread: and on the seventh day, because it is the assembly of the Lord thy God, thou shalt do no work.

9 Thou shalt number unto thee seven weeks from that day, wherein thou didst put the sickle to the corn:

10 And thou shalt celebrate the festival of weeks to the Lord thy God, a voluntary oblation of thy hand, which thou shalt offer according to the blessing of the Lord thy God:

11 And thou shalt feast before the Lord thy God, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy man-servant, and thy maid-servant, and the Levite that is within thy gates, and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, who abide with you: in the place which the Lord thy God shall choose, that his name may dwell there:

12 And thou shalt remember that thou wast a servant in Egypt: and thou shalt keep and do the things that are commanded.

13 Thou shalt celebrate the solemnity also of tabernacles, when thou hast gathered in thy fruit of the barn-floor and of the wine-press:

14 And thou shalt make merry in thy festival time, thou, thy son, and thy daughter, thy man-servant, and thy maid-servant, the Levite also, and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are within thy gates.

15 Seven days shalt thou celebrate feasts to the Lord thy God, in the place which the Lord shall choose: and the Lord thy God will bless thee in all thy fruits, and in every work of thy hands, and thou shalt be in joy.

16 Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the Lord thy God, in the place which he shall choose: in the feast of unleavened bread, in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles. "No one shall appear with his hands empty before the Lord:

17 But every one shall offer according to what he hath, according to the blessing of the Lord his God, which he shall give him.

18 Thou shalt appoint judges and magistrates in all thy gates, which the Lord thy God shall give thee, in all thy tribes: that they may judge the people with just judgment, 19 And not go aside to either part. "Thou shalt not accept person, nor gifts: for gifts blind the eyes of the wise, and change the words of the just.

20 Thou shalt follow justly after that which is just: that thou mayst live and possess the land which the Lord thy God shall give thee.

21 Thou shalt plant no grove, nor any tree, near the altar of the Lord thy God:

* Exod. xxiii. 15, and xxiv. 20; Eccli. xxxv. 6.

b Exod. xxiii. 8; Lev. xix. 15; Supra, i. 17; Eccli. xx. 31.

xxviii. 19; 2 Par. xxx. 15. Peace-offerings were also made; (Lev. vi. 12; 2 Par. xxxv. 7;) and of these free offerings some explain the words of the Jews, (John xviii. 28,) as they suppose that the lamb had been eaten the night before. M. Bochart. T.—They might, however, have refrained from eating of these on that day. C.

VER. 3. Affliction. Heb. also, "of poverty." Syr. "of humility." Sept. "of evil treatment;" or such bread as the poorest sort of people and slaves are forced to eat. The Jews serve the bread in small pieces, to denote their former poverty. This unleavened bread is also less palatable, and less wholesome.—Fear. Sept. "in haste." Exod. xii. 11. The psalmist (civ. 43) mentions the exultation and joy of the Hebrews, but it was mixed with fear, lest they should lose so great a benefit.

VER. 6. Phase, or paschal lamb, which was to be sacrificed between the two evenings, during the space of about four hours, in the court before the ark. Some think that this precept was binding only in times of peace; and that when the people could not assemble in the place appointed, they might sacrifice the lamb elsewhere, which seems very probable, though no positive proof can be adduced. C.—As the Jews have now no temple, they cannot sacrifice the paschal lamb. I.—The priests were very expert, and observed an admirable order in offering such a surprising multitude of victims, (C.) as would be offered by every family of ten people. H.

VER. 7. Dress (coques). Heb. Bossol means frequently, to boil, and sometimes to roast, as it must here, if it refer to the paschal lamb; the other victims might however be boiled, and the Sept. use both expressions, "Thou shalt boil and roast." See 2 Par. xxxv. 13. It seems that Moses speaks only of the lamb, the method of preparing which he had abundantly explained before. C.—Heb. has not it, and of course the passage may be understood of all the victims offered on this solemnity. On the morning after it was concluded people might all depart to their respective homes. Under Ezechias and Josias the people appear to have continued together during the whole octave. 2 Par. xxx., and xxxv. 17. H.—Others are of opinion that the people might retire home after the 15th, (Tostat,) or in the morning after they had eaten the paschal lamb. C.

VER. 8. Six days after the solemn day is ended, or in all seven (Exod. xiii. 7. C.); or the seventh day is here remarkable for some particular distinction. M.—Assembly. Heb. "the feast of prohibition, or of withholding," or rather the festival day, in which all must make their appearance, to do homage to their Lord. Lev. xxiii. 36. C.—Sept. "on the 7th is the dismissal, (or termination,) a feast to the Lord." H.

VER. 9. Corn: that is, from the 16th of Nisan, (M.) the second day of the paschal solemnity, on which new barley was presented before the Lord, as new wheat was on the second day of Pentecost. Lev. xxiii. 10.

VER. 10. Hand. Heb. and Sept. "as much as thy hand is able;" an offering, bearing a due proportion with what God has bestowed upon thee. H.—Each one was exhorted to make peace-offerings and feasts, at Jerusalem, in honour of God, ver. 11. On these festival days the first-born, fattened animals, were brought to be slain. Chap. xii. 17, and xiv. 23.

VER. 16. Empty. All were bound to make some offering, which was left to their option, and thus the festivity was much increased, by the abundance of all things; so that all might find a particular pleasure in being present at these feasts, even though they were not influenced by sentiments of piety and of religion. See Exod. xxiii. 15. C.—While the masters of families were from home, thrice in the year, God protected their houses and children from the incursions of enemies, so that they were never more secure. Sanctius. T.

VER. 18. Magistrates, (magistros), "masters;" people learned in the law, who may assist the judges with their counsel in any emergency. Heb. sotrim, "officers, heralds, lictors," &c. Chap. i. 15. II.—Bonfrere (in Exod. xviii. 25) thinks that these were the judges set over each tribe, or else the assessors of the judges. M.—The Rabbin mention three tribunals of the Jews: 1. The Sanhedrim, consisting of seventy judges, with a prince at the head of them; 2. the twenty-three judges, who resided in considerable cities; 3. the tribunal of three judges, who administered justice in the villages, which had not above 120 inhabitants. But Josephus (iv. cap. ult.) only mentions that Moses established in each city seven judges, who had each two officers of the tribe of Levi.—Gates, where the judges sat.

VER. 19. Just. Avarice is like a cloud, (C.) which darkens the understanding. Oppression troubleth the wise, and (Heb.) "a present destroyeth the heart." A timid or interested judge is unfit for his office. H.—If even the just are in danger of being perverted by presents, what must we think of others? D.

VER. 20. Just. Heb. "thou shalt follow justice." Thou shalt be guided solely by the dictates of justice, in passing sentence. Exod. xxiii. 1—9. C.—That judge who passes sentence according to truth, executes his office unjustly if he be actuated by the love of a temporal reward. S. Greg. Mor. 9.

VER. 21. Tree. The pagans had consecrated different sorts of trees to their idols. They always planted groves near their temples, to increase the reverential awe, and but too often to hide the abominations which were there committed.

22 Neither shalt thou make, nor set up to thyself a statue: which things the Lord thy God hateth.

CHAP. XVII.

Victims must be without blemish. Idolaters are to be slain. Controversies are to be decided by the high priest and council, whose sentence must be obeyed, under pain of death. The duty of a king, who is to receive the law of God at the priest's hands.

THOU shalt not sacrifice to the Lord thy God a sheep, or an ox, wherein these is blemish, or any fault: for that is an abomination to the Lord thy God.

2 When there shall be found among you, within any of thy gates, which the Lord thy God shall give thee, man or woman that do evil in the sight of the Lord thy God, and transgress his covenant,

• A. N. 2553.—b Infra, xix. 15; Matt. xviii. 6;

The Hebrews frequently imitated them in these particulars. Yet Hecateus observes, that no tree was to be seen near the temple of Jerusalem.

VER. 22. Statue. Heb. motsce, means also a pillar, monument, heap of stones, image, title, &c. Gen. xxviii.—Hateth, when they are designed for superstitious purposes. On other occasions statues and pictures may be very instructive and commendable. H.—The patriarchs set up pillars, altars, &c., as did also the Israelites, (Jos. xxii. 10,) Samuel, &c., even after this prohibition, and without any offence. The Rabbins allow that the proselytes of justice do well in erecting such monuments of religion, provided they be not intended for false worship. Seld. Jur. ii. 6. C.—How blind then must be our dissenting brethren, who cannot make this easy and obvious distinction, but indiscriminately condemn all Catholics as guilty of idolatry, because they make and keep in their chapels, and bow down before, images of the saints! This trifling objection is pressed with great vigour by J. Wesley, the founder of the Methodists. "The Papists," says he, "set up their idols in their churches—they worship the picture of the Queen of heaven—they idolize a dead man or woman." To whom Dr. Parker, a Protestant bishop, replies (Disc. for the Abrog. of the Test.): "Yet, after all, we have no other ground for the bold conceit, than the crude and rash assertions of some popular divines, who have no other measures of truth and zeal, but their hatred to Popery. . . . As to the use of images in the worship of God, I cannot but admire at the confidence of these men, to make so bold a charge against them in general, when the images of the cherubim were commanded by God himself. Exod. xxv. 22. They were the most solemn and sacred part of the Jewish religion, and therefore, though images, so far from idolatry, that God made them the seat of his presence, and from between them delivered his oracles. This instance is so plain and obvious to every reader, . . . that it is a much greater wonder to me that those men, who advance the objection of idolatry so groundlessly, (against the greater part of Christendom, as he observed before,) can so slightly rid themselves of so pregnant a proof against it." It may not be improper to observe, that in the last great deluge of error, the Methodist Society began, 1st May, 1738, at London, though it had a more obscure beginning at Oxford, 1729, and another at Havannah, 1736. What confidence now can the Methodists have in the interpretations which Wesley has given them of the Scriptures, since he stumbled in broad daylight; and even preached for above thirty years together, that the observance of God's law is not only unnecessary, but sinful, an error to which he was forced, at last, to open his eyes by the scandalous immoralities of several of his deluded admirers, whom he had been all along foolishly flattering with the assurance that faith alone would insure their salvation. Strange it may appear, that he should not be put on his guard by the fall of Luther, who split against the same rock, and scrupled not to condemn the Epistle of St. James as not worth a straw, stramineam epistolam, an expression for which he is said afterwards to have been sorry, as Wesley was for the doctrine which he had been delivering for so many years. But the evil was then done. Multitudes had been deceived by these arch impostors. Their surviving followers might, however, if they would, derive this lesson from their tardy repentance and recantation, to examine with more caution their other doctrines, which they have delivered with the like confidence; and as they have reason to fear the yielding an implicit belief to such innovators, so they may be induced to flee to the ark, the true Catholic Church, that they may be protected from the contradiction of tongues, Psal. xxx. 21. S. Aug. ib. "After Christ and the gospel, we have no further inquiry to make." Tert.—We know that novelty in religion is a sure mark of falsehood, as no one can place any other foundation besides that which has been fixed by the beginner and finisher of our faith. From the written and unwritten Word of God, we learn what He has taught, and among the rest, we are authorized to keep holy pictures with respect. This is not an attempt against the worship of God, but designed to promote it. We do not make them to ourselves without a Divine authority. The same things which we are not allowed to adore, we must not make. Yet Methodists have and make pictures. We have God's will clearly expressed to us by his Church, which he has commanded us to hear and to obey. This subject is of such vast importance, the accusation of idolatry is of so black a nature, that it deserves to be accurately and frequently refuted. It is not an accusation brought quired diligently, and found it to be true, and that the abomination is committed in Israel:

5 Thou shalt bring forth the man or the woman, who have committed that most wicked thing, to the gates of thy city, and they shall be stoned

6 By the mouth of two, or three witnesses, shall he die that is to be slain. Let no man be put to death when only one beareth witness against him.

7 The hands of the witnesses shall be first upon him to kill him, and afterwards the hands of the rest of the people; that thou mayst take away the evil out of the midst of thee.

8 If thou perceive that there be among you a hard and doubtful matter in judgment between blood and blood, cause and cause, leprosy and leprosy, and thou see that the words of the judges within thy gates do vary: arise and go up to the place, which the Lord thy God shall choose:

only by a few obscure individuals, who have not the power to do any great harm by it; the most exalted dignitaries of the Protestant church, such as Dr. Shute, of Durham, in two charges to his clergy, the most famous modern reformers, like Wesley, &c., have not scrupled to repeat the calumny. See Nightingale, &c., for further information on Methodism, which now makes such a noise, though its novelty, variations, acknowledged mistakes, calumnies, spirit of persecution, want of lawful pastors, &c., might suffice to put people upon their guard. H.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. Or. By this name all bulls, cows, &c. are designated. For it was never lawful to sacrifice any thing which had lost any member. Exod. xii. 5; Lev. i. 3.

VER. 2. Covenant, by incurring the evil of idolatry. C. Heb. x. 29.

VER. 3. The host of heaven. That is, the stars. Ch.—This species of idolatry was the most ancient and common in the East. Job (xxxi. 26, 28) takes notice of the adoration of the sun and of the moon, and calls it a very great iniquity, and a denial against the most high God. He lived in Arabia, and probably not far from the place where Moses was addressing the Israelites. H.—The pagans looked upon the sun and moon as the king and queen of heaven, and the stars as their guards. Plato says (in Phædro) that "the sun marches at the head of the gods, in a winged chariot, and the eleven other gods lead on their bands of demons," or the stars, &c.

VER. 5. Stoned, not far from the gates, where they received sentence. Thus the sabbath-breaker was stoned without the camp, (Num. xv. 35,) and St. Stephen out of the city of Jerusalem, Acts vii. 57. When only a few were concerned, the twenty-three judges passed sentence: but if a whole tribe had been guilty, the cognizance of the affair was left to the Sanhedrim. When a city was infected with this abomination, it was wholly destroyed. But no one was punished, except two witnesses (ver. 6) attested that formal idolatry, by sacrifice, &c., had been committed. Seld. Syned. iii. 4.

VER. 6. Slain. When the action was public, this formality was not requisite. Chap. xiii. 9.—Him. One witness was never admitted to prove any crime; neither would the Jews receive for witnesses, women, infants under thirteen, slaves, publicans, thieves, &c. Josep. iv. c. ult. The Rabbins also reject other notorious offenders, enemies, relations, and those who had not a competent knowledge of the law, &c. Ap. Seld. Syn. ii. 13. 11, and Grot.—But we could wish for some authors of more credit. C.

VER. 7. Kill him. Thus testifying that they approve the sentence, and are willing that his blood should be required at their hands, if they had accused him falsely. The criminal was hurled down a precipice by one of the witnesses, and, if he survived, he was stoned by the other, and by the whole people. Maimonides asserts that the execution took place on some great festival, for the terror and instruction of the multitude; but others call this in question. Fagius. C.

VER. 8. If thou perceive, &c. Here we see what authority God was pleased to give to the church-guides of the Old Testament, in deciding, without appeal, all controversies relating to the law; promising that they should not err therein; and punishing with death such as proudly refused to obey their decisions: and surely he has not done less for the church-guides of the New Testament. Ch.—Hard. Heb. also means, "doubtful, hidden, divided;" so that the opinions of the judges do not agree. In matters of fact, the thing is more easily investigated on the spot. But in these cases, where the law is ambiguous, as even the Divine ordinances frequently are, being delivered in human language, (Grot.,) a living judge is necessary. God remits the Jews to the council of the priests, at the head of whom was the sovereign pontiff, who was the natural and supreme judge of such difficulties, ver. 9, 12. H.—And blood, to decide when murder must be punished with death, and when the right of an asylum may be claimed. C.—The Vulg. renders the same words, 2 Par. xix. 10, between kindred and kindred, as the different degrees cause many embarrassments, with regard to marriages, &c. T.—The Rabbins understand that the judge had to declare when a woman was rendered unclean. Lev. xii. 4. Lyran.—And cause, or law-suit; some thinking that a greater sum for reparation of an injury should be required, others judging that one of the contending parties should be set at liberty, while the other judges are of a contrary sentiment. Heb. "between judgment and judgment," when 9 And thou shalt come to the priests of the Levitical race, and to the judge, that shall be at that time: and thou shalt ask of them, and they shall show thee the truth of the judgment.

10 And thou shalt do whatsoever they shall say, that preside in the place, which the Lord shall choose, and what they shall teach thee, 11 According to his law: and thou shalt follow their sentence; neither shalt thou decline to the right hand nor to the left hand.

12 But he that will be proud, and refuse to obey the commandment of the priest, who ministereth at that time to the Lord thy God, and the decree of the judge, that man shall die, and thou shalt take away the evil from Israel:

13 And all the people hearing it shall fear, that no one afterwards swell with pride.

14 When thou art come into the land, which the Lord thy God will give thee, and possessest it, and dwellest in doubt arises whether laymen or the Levites may be the proper judges.—And leprosy. Various difficulties might arise concerning this matter, of which the priests had to pass sentence. Lev. xiii. Some render the Heb. nagā, "wound." The law of retaliation required a scrupulous nicety. Blood, cause, and leprosy, may denote lawsuits of a criminal, less important, and ceremonial nature. Jans.—Vary. Heb. "which are matters of contention within thy gates."

VER. 9. Judge. Moses does not specify whether the contending parties, or the judges themselves, thought proper to have the matter debated before a higher court. The Rabbin observe, that appeals to the Sanhedrim were only the last resort, and that the sentence of that tribunal was to be complied with under pain of death, ver. 11. Seld. Syned. iii. 2. 2. The judge here mentioned, according to them and the generality of commentators, after Josephus, Philo, &c., is no other than the high priest, as the Scripture plainly indicates. Chap. xxi. 5; Eze. xlv. 24. He abode near the tabernacle, and God enabled him to explain the law, when he was arrayed with the ephod, and the Urim and Thummim. The government of the Jews was a theocracy, and the pontiff acted as the vicegerent of God. H.

VER. 11. According, &c. This law was to be the rule of the priests, in passing sentence. It was not left to the judgment of individuals to comply or not, according as they might explain the law for themselves. Such a proceeding would be nugatory, as they would thus be themselves the ultimate judges of their own cause. H.—They shall seek the law at his (the priest's) mouth. Mal. ii. 7.—If any had been proud enough among the Jews to persuade himself that he understood the law better than the high priest, he would not on that account have escaped death. H.—The authority of the Christian Church is not inferior to that of the Synagogue, only, "instead of death, excommunication is now inflicted" on the rebellious. S. Greg. Matt. xviii. 17. S. Aug. q. 38. In effect, S. Paul assures us that the priests of the law serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, Heb. viii. 5. If therefore the privilege of deciding points of faith and morality, without danger of mistake, was granted to the Synagogue, can any one doubt but that Christ would provide as ample a security for his Church, with which he has promised to remain for ever, and with his Holy Spirit to teach her all the truth? H.—S. Augustine dwells upon this argument, (Doct. 4.) and proves the infallibility both of the Jewish and of the Christian Church. Hence Christ said, with respect to the former, which was not yet rejected, All therefore whatsoever they shall say to you, observe and do: but according to their works, do ye not: for they say the truth, and do not practise what they require of others. If the heads of the Catholic Church should be equally immoral, their true doctrine must not therefore be despised, lest Christ and his Father be at the same time despised. For this is the express admonition of our heavenly lawgiver, hear the Church (Matt. xiii. 17): and this he does not require without giving us a full assurance that we may do it without fear of being led astray. We must show the most profound submission to the decrees of the Church. C.—Yet we are not bound to assent to the decisions of every teacher. Only, when the Church speaks, we must not refuse to obey, nor pretend to appoint ourselves judges of what she teaches. A private doctor, however eminent, may fall into some absurdities, but the major part of the pastors of the Church, with the Pope at their head, never can. In vain have the records of nineteen centuries been ransacked to find a single instance of such a general agreement in error. H.

VER. 12. And the decree. Some copies read with Sixtus V. ex decreto, by, &c., "decree," (H.) as if a lay-judge stood ready to put the sentence in execution. C.—But there was no necessity of any further judgment after the high priest had spoken, who is here declared the sovereign judge. S. Cyp. ep. 55. Heb. "or to the judge." Amama ridicules his friend, Ant. a Dominis, for saying that the Heb. and Vulg. have et decreto. H.—The Rabbin inform us, that if any judge refused to acquiesce in the decision, and endeavoured to draw others into his opinion, in matters of consequence, (as those are where the guilty is ordered to be cut off,) he was to be strangled, on a festival day, at Jerusalem, that all the people hearing it might fear, ver. 13. Seld. Syned. iii. 3. C.

VER. 13. Pride. Heb. "do presumptuously," as the Prot. translate. How will they excuse their leaders, Luther, &c., and themselves, from this grievous it, and shalt say: I will set a king over me, as all nations have that are round about:

15 Thou shalt set him, whom the Lord thy God shall choose out of the number of thy brethren. Thou mayst not make a man of another nation king, that is not thy brother.

16 And when he is made king, he shall not multiply horses to himself, nor lead back the people into Egypt, being lifted up with the number of his horsemen, especially since the Lord hath commanded you to return no more the same way.

17 He shall not have many wives, that may allure his mind, nor immense sums of silver and gold.

18 But after he is raised to the throne of his kingdom, he shall copy out to himself the Deuteronomy of this law in a volume, taking the copy of the priests of the Levitical tribe,

19 And he shall have it with him, and shall read it all the days of his life, that he may learn to fear the Lord his God, and keep his words and ceremonies, that are commanded in the law, charge? If the person, who presumed to assert that the leprosy had not infected some one, whom the priest condemned, (ver. 8,) could not escape death, shall we esteem those innocent whom the whole Church rejects? H.

VER. 14. King. The Rabbin observe, that one was to be elected before the place for the temple was fixed upon, that the tribes might not contend about that honour. Grotius.—God foresees that the people will insist upon having a king, and gives his consent, reserving to himself the choice, and appointing laws for him, that he may not forget that he is only the lieutenant of the Most High. Yet God testified his displeasure when the Israelites demanded a king, because they did it in a seditious manner, so as to reject the prophet Samuel, whom he had given them for a ruler, in whom they could discover no fault. C. 1 Kings viii. 7, and x. 19.

VER. 15. Choose, as he did Saul, David, and Solomon, who succeeded to the throne of his father, though he was not the eldest son. M.—Then the throne began to be hereditary, in virtue of God's promise to David. C.—Brother. The Jews neglected this law, when they willingly recognised the authority of Herod, two years after the birth of Christ. See Gen. xlix. 10. H.—A stranger might attempt to draw off the people from the service of the true God, and mutual love would not so easily subsist between them. M.

VER. 16. Horses. Josue and David rendered the captured horses useless, (Jos. xi. 6; 2 Kings viii. 4,) and the judges rode on asses. Judg. x. 4, and xii. 14. Solomon began to keep some, and in his days Egypt was noted for the traffic of horses; though, after Sesostris had intersected the country with canals, they were more neglected. Marsham. Canon. sæc. 13, and 14. God did not wish his people to engage in the tumults of war, nor would he permit their king to be puffed up with his own strength. Psal. xix. 8, and xxxii. 17. Philo says he would not have them to listen to any one who might promise to conduct them to a better country and thus teach them to lead a wandering life. C.—He precludes also the attempt to conquer Egypt. Heb. "he shall not make the people return to Egypt, in order that he may multiply horses," by their buying them for him in that country, 3 Kings x. 29.—Way. When the people proposed returning, God severely punished them. Num. xiv. 5.

VER. 17. Mind, and reign in his name. Heb. "and his heart turn not away" from the worship of the true God, as it happened to Solomon, and to many other kings, whom Moses seems to have had in view. Plurality of wives was not formerly a sin, though Solomon offended by too great excess. S. Aug. q. 27. W.—Gold. Immense riches are seldom possessed even by kings, without the oppression of their subjects, and great danger of falling into extravagance. If David amassed so much gold, it was destined for the building of the temple. But Solomon laying on heavy taxes alienated the hearts of his people, and gave occasion to the revolt of ten tribes; and Ezechias brought on a severe chastisement by making a parade of his treasures to the ambassadors of the king of Babylon, 4 Kings xx. 15. C.

VER. 18. Of this law, perhaps from the 14th verse to the end of the chapter, (H.) or the whole Book of Deuteronomy, which contains an abridgment of the law, (Jos. viii. 32. M.) or even the five books, which were formerly written without any division, and went under the name of the law. Grotius, &c.—Heb. seems favourable to this last opinion, (C.) "he shall write a copy of this law in a book, out of that which is kept by the priests," unless Moses might only require that he should have a copy of what he was then delivering. H.—The diadem and the law were presented to Joas, when he ascended the throne, 2 Par. xxiii. 11. C.—If (H.) Josias had not seen a copy of the law before the eighteenth year of his reign, this precept must have been very ill observed, 4 Kings xxii. 11. C.—But, very probably, that book, which Helcias discovered in the temple, was the autograph of Moses, and therefore made a deeper impression upon all who saw and heard it read than if it had been only an ordinary copy. H.

VER. 19. Law. Pious Christian emperors and kings have esteemed it their greatest glory and happiness to read and meditate on the holy commandments of God, in order to regulate their conduct, amid the various dangerous occupations of their station. H.—Constantine the Great, Charlemagne, S. Stephen of Hungary, Alphonsus I. of Spain, were noted for the zeal which they showed in the 20 And that his heart be not lifted up with pride over his brethren, nor decline to the right or to the left, that he and his sons may reign a long time over Israel.

CHAP. XVIII.

The Lord is the inheritance of the priests and Levites. Heathenish abominations are to be avoided. The great PROPHET, CHRIST, is promised. False prophets must be slain.

THE^a priests and Levites, and all that are of the same tribe, shall have no part nor inheritance with the rest of Israel, because they shall eat the sacrifices of the Lord, and his oblations.

2 And they shall receive nothing else of the possession of their brethren: for the Lord himself is their inheritance, as he hath said to them.

3 This shall be the priest's due from the people, and from them that offer victims: whether they sacrifice an ox, or a sheep, they shall give to the priest the shoulder and the breast:

4 ^bThe first-fruits also of corn, of wine, and of oil, and a part of the wool from the shearing of their sheep.

5 For the Lord thy God hath chosen him of all thy tribes, to stand, and to minister to the name of the Lord, him and his sons for ever.

6 If a Levite go out of any one of the cities throughout all Israel, in which he dwelleth, and have a longing mind to come to the place which the Lord shall choose, particular. Alphonsus of Arragon had read the Bible, with the Commentaries, fourteen times over, and the great Alfred wrote all the New Testament twice over with his own hand. C.—He had translated into English Saxon all or most of the Bible before 900, as king Athelstan did about 925. Eneye. Brit. Bible, &c. Yet the Catholic Church never condemned this conduct of her children, as Protestants would insinuate. Cath. Doct. by N. G.

7 He shall minister in the name of the Lord his God, as all his brethren the Levites do, that shall stand at that time before the Lord.

VER. 20. With pride. This is not expressed in Heb., but it is clearly (H.) implied. Humility is the most difficult virtue for a prince to practise, amid the flattery of his courtiers, and the splendour with which he is environed. See S. Aug. C. D. v. 24. C.—His sons. Wicked kings seldom left a quiet possession of the throne to their heirs. M.—David and his posterity reigned in succession, by an effect of the Divine bounty. C.

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 1. Oblations. Heb. "they shall eat the holocausts of the Lord and his inheritances." The priests shall have the parts of the sacrifices for peace allotted to them, &c., tithes shall be given to support the Levites. H.—These parts are what God claims from the people, as their Sovereign, (C.) and these he assigns to his ministers. Sept. "The fruits of the Lord are their inheritance, they shall eat them." H.

VER. 3. Due (judicium). Moses only mentions a part, having explained the rest, Exod. xxix. 27; Lev. vii. 32.—Breast (ventriculum). In the other places pectusculum occurs. Heb. "the shoulder, the two cheeks, and the maw, or caul," called in Latin omasum, being the last and the fattest of the four ventricles, and highly esteemed by the ancients. The cheeks or chops are specified no where else; so that some think that Moses here supplies what he had left imperfect, assigning to the priests the cheeks and the tongue. Jansenius supposes that this is only a part of the breast, which appears to have two cheeks when the shoulders are cut off. But Moses here probably speaks not of the peace-offerings, but of the beasts which were killed by the Israelites at home for their own uses, &c., (Clerc,) as Philo explains it, (de Præm.,) and Josephus (iv. 4) only specifies the right shoulder and the breast, which were given to the priests on these occasions. C.

VER. 5. Stand. This was the usual posture of the priests ministering in the temple, as well as of people praying.—Minister. Sam. and Sept. add, "and to bless in," &c.

VER. 6. Levite. In the days of Moses all the Levites probably assisted in the service of the tabernacle when they thought proper. But, after they should be dispersed, he encourages them to come willingly. David afterwards divided the priests and the Levites into classes, which were obliged to serve in their turns. 1 Par. xxiii., &c.

VER. 8. Portion. Whence this was taken, whether from the tithes in general, or from the treasury of the temple, or from the revenue of the high priest, &c., does not appear. C.—Fathers. The Levites might possess houses, suburbs, and cattle. M.—Heb. "besides that which ariseth from the sale of his patrimony" H.

8 He shall receive the same portion of food that the rest do: besides that which is due to him in his own city by succession from his fathers.

9 When thou art come into the land, which the Lord thy God shall give thee, beware lest thou have a mind to imitate the abominations of those nations.

10 "Neither let there be found among you any one that shall expiate his son or daughter, making them to pass through the fire: or that consulteth soothsayers, or observeth dreams and omens, neither let there be any wizard, 11 Nor charmer, nor any one that consulteth pythonic spirits, or fortune-tellers,^d or that seeketh the truth from the dead.

12 For the Lord abhorreth all these things, and for these abominations he will destroy them at thy coming.

13 Thou shalt be perfect, and without spot before the Lord thy God.

14 These nations, whose land thou shalt possess, hearken to soothsayers and diviners: but thou art otherwise instructed by the Lord thy God.

15 "The Lord thy God will raise up to thee a PROPHET of thy nation, and of thy brethren, like unto me: him thou shalt hear, 16 As thou desiredst of the Lord thy God in 'Horeb, when the assembly was gathered together, and saidst: Let me not hear any more the voice of the Lord my God, neither let me see any more this exceeding great fire, lest I die.

^e Lev. xx. 27.—^d 1 Kings xxviii. 7.—^e John i. 45; Acts iii. 22.—^f Exod. xx. 21.

VER. 10. Fire. This impiety is not punished with death, (Lev. xviii. 21,) as the burning of children was. Lev. xx. 2. Grotius.—It was done in imitation of the latter, and became more common, as it was less cruel; the person who was thus expiated being to pass between or to jump over fire. C.—Soothsayers. The original term may also signify, "that useth divination." Both those who set up for diviners, and those who consult them, are condemned. H.—Dreams. Heb. maunon, (Lev. xix. 26,) may denote one who judges from the sight of the clouds, or feigns revelations.—Wizard. Heb. "witch." Sept. "poisoner," or one who gives things to do harm. Rabbin.

VER. 11. Charmer of serpents. Psal. lvii. 6. One who makes a compact with the devil.—Spirits. Python was the name of the serpent which Apollo slew.—Tellers. Heb. "wise men." H.—Those who promise great knowledge from the secrets of the cabala, or magic.—Dead. Necromancy was already very common. Thus the witch of Endor made the ghost of Samuel appear to Saul, 1 Kings xxviii. 7.

VER. 13. And without spot. This is by way of explication of the word perfect. Any mixture of superstition in the worship of God is hateful to him; and that man who acknowledges any other spirit capable of foretelling what will come to pass, freely (H.) denies the Lord. C.

VER. 14. God, who has already informed thee how to proceed in difficult emergencies, (chap. xvii. 8,) by having recourse to the council of priests, and will also, after any death, send in due time a succession of true prophets. Heb. "God hath not suffered thee" to imitate those nations; (H.) or those prophets, whom the Lord thy God will give thee, shall not resemble these (C.) soothsayers (or observers of times) and diviners. H.—They shall be filled with my spirit. C.

VER. 15. Prophet. This passage plainly proves that the Scripture may have many literal senses: for the context insinuates that God would supply the wants of his people, so that they should not need to go far in order to consult diviners, since they should have leaders and prophets, after the death of Moses, who might explain to them God's will, as they had desired; but, at the same time, it clearly refers to the Messiah, as it is explained by S. Peter, (Acts iii. 22. W.) and by S. Stephen, Acts vii. 37. The Jews, at that time, were convinced of the truth of this application: but they only denied that Christ was the Messiah. They have since gone a step further, and deny that it regards the Messiah, sometimes referring it to Josue, others to Jeremias, &c. Ap. Munster & Fag. But surely what other prophet could be compared with Moses? Chap. xxxiv. 10. God the Father seems to allude to this passage, according to the remark of Tertullian, (c. Mar. iv. 22,) when he says hear ye him, (Luke ix. 35,) as S. Cyprian bears witness our Saviour does also, John v. 46. S. Athanasius (c. Arianos 2) condemns the error of the Jews, who would apply this passage to any other prophet but to the Messiah. C.

VER. 15. Die. This promise is not recorded, Exod. xx. 19. God will send you a mediator, who shall hide the splendour of his divinity (C. under the form of a servant. Phil. ii. 7. H.

17 And the Lord said to me: They have spoken all things well.

18 *I will raise them up a prophet out of the midst of their brethren, like to thee: and I will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak all that I shall command him.

19 And he that will not hear his words, which he shall speak in my name, I will be the revenger.

20 But the prophet, who being corrupted with pride, shall speak in my name, things that I did not command him to say, or in the name of strange gods, shall be slain.

21 And if in silent thought thou answer: How shall I know the word, that the Lord hath not spoken?

22 Thou shalt have this sign: Whatsoever that same prophet foretelleth in the name of the Lord, and it cometh not to pass: that thing the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath forged it by the pride of his mind: and therefore thou shalt not fear him.

CHAP. XIX.

The cities of refuge. Wilful murder and false witnesses must be punished.

WHEN ^bthe Lord thy God hath destroyed the nations, whose land he will deliver to thee, and thou shalt possess it, and shalt dwell in the cities and houses thereof:

2 *Thou shalt separate to thee three cities in the midst of the land, which the Lord will give thee in possession,

3 Paving diligently the way: and thou shalt divide the whole province of thy land equally into three parts: that he who is forced to flee for manslaughter, may have near at hand whither to escape.

4 This shall be the law of the slayer that fleeth, whose life is to be saved: He that killeth his neighbour ignorantly, and who is proved to have had no hatred against him yesterday and the day before:

5 But to have gone with him to the wood to hew wood, and in cutting down the tree the axe slipped out of his hand, and the iron slipping from the handle, struck his friend and killed him: he shall flee to one of the cities aforesaid, and live:

6 Lest perhaps the next kinsman of him whose blood was shed, pushed on by his grief, should pursue and apprehend him, if the way be too long, and take away the life of him who is not guilty of death, because he is proved to have had no hatred before against him that was slain.

7 Therefore I command thee, that thou separate three cities at equal distance one from another.

8 ^aAnd when the Lord thy God shall have enlarged thy borders, as he swore to thy fathers, and shall give thee all the land that he promised them,

9 (Yet so, if thou keep his commandments, and do the things which I command thee this day, that thou love the Lord thy God, and walk in his ways at all times,) thou shalt add to thee other three cities, and shalt double the number of the three cities aforesaid:

10 That innocent blood may not be shed in the midst of the land which the Lord thy God will give thee to possess, lest thou be guilty of blood.

11 ^aBut if any man hating his neighbour, lie in wait for his life, and rise and strike him, and he die, and he flee to one of the cities aforesaid,

12 The ancients of his city shall send, and take him out of the place of refuge, and shall deliver him into the hand of the kinsman of him, whose blood was shed, and he shall die.

13 Thou shalt not pity him, and thou shalt take away the guilt of innocent blood out of Israel, that it may be well with thee.

14 Thou shalt not take, nor remove thy neighbour's landmarks, which thy predecessors have set in thy possession, which the Lord thy God will give thee in the land that thou shalt receive to possess.

15 ^aOne witness shall not rise up against any man, whatsoever the sin, or wickedness be: but in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall stand.

16 If a lying witness stand against a man, accusing him of transgression, 17 Both of them, between whom the controversy is, shall stand before the Lord in the sight of the priests and the judges that shall be in those days.

18 ^aAnd when, after most diligent inquisition, they shall find that the false witness hath told a lie against his brother:

^e Num. xxxv. 20.—^f Supra. xvii. 6; Matt. xviii. 16; 2 Cor. xiii. 1. ^g Dan. xiii. 62.

VER. 18. Mouth. So Christ says, The words that I speak to you, I speak not of myself. John xiv. 10.

VER. 19. Revenger. S. Peter (Acts iii. 23) reads, And it shall be that every soul which will not hear that prophet, (instead of Heb. "my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him,") or he shall be destroyed from among the people. Tert. c. Mar. iv. 22. H.—God now chastises the faithless Jews. D.

VER. 22. Fear him. Sept. "you shall not spare him," but cut him off by death. H.—Though the completion of what has been foretold be not a sure sign of a true prophecy, (chap. xiii. 2,) yet when the thing does not come to pass which the prophet had spoken unconditionally, he must undoubtedly be rejected; as also when he speaks in the name of false gods. No miracles can then establish his credit. The prophecy of Jonas, and many of the other prophecies, were conditional. C.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 2. Cities. These were Hebron, Sichem, and Cades, on the west side of the Jordan. Jos. xx. 7. Those on the east were already appointed. Chap. iv. 41. Three others might also have been added, (ver. 8. C.) in case the Hebrews had gotten full possession of the countries as far as the Euphrates. H.—The cities of refuge were not above forty-five miles distant from each other, in the land of Chanaan. Those in Galaad were not so far off, as the territory was smaller. C.

VER. 7. At equal, &c. This addition is not in Heb. (C.) or the Sept., (H.) but is conformable to the regulation given, ver. 3. C.

VER. 8. And when. Sept. "but if." This condition was never fulfilled, at all times (ver. 9); and therefore the Israelites could blame only themselves, if the promises which God had made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, (Gen. xv., and xxvi., and xxviii., and xxxv.) were not realized. H.—Though the country was conquered under David and Solomon, the Israelites did not drive out the former inhabitants, (C.) nor did they keep possession for any long time. H.

VER. 13. Innocent. Many Latin copies have "guilty blood," noxium. By putting the offender to death Israel was expiated from the blood which had been shed unjustly. C.

VER. 14. Landmarks, either which divided the tribes, or the inheritance of individuals. The former were strictly kept up till after the captivity. Those who removed the latter were to be scourged for theft, and again for disobeying this law. Seld. Jur. vi. 3. Josephus (iv. 8) understands that encroachments on the territories of others, which give rise to many wars, are hereby prohibited. C.

VER. 15. One would suffice to make an inquiry into the affair, and to oblige the person accused, in pecuniary matters, to take an oath that he owed nothing. Maimonides.—Stand. This expression was become proverbial, to denote the certainty of a thing. Matt. xviii. 16; 2 Cor. xiii. 1. Two witnesses cannot so easily carry on a cheat, (C.) as was seen in the case of Susanna. H.—The law is satisfied with moral certainty. C.

VER. 16. Transgression against the law, by apostacy or by idolatry, (Junius) or by any other grievous crime. The person accused might, in this case, be examined, but he could not be condemned unless another witness appeared. C.

VER. 17. Lord, in the tabernacle. M.—Judges. Hence it appears evidently that the priests were to pass sentence in all difficult questions, as well in those 19 They shall render to him as he meant to do to his brother, and thou shalt take away the evil out of the midst of thee:

20 That others hearing may fear, and may not dare to do such things.

21 Thou shalt not pity him, ^abut shalt require life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot.

CHAP. XX.

Laws relating to war.

IF thou go out to war against thy enemies, ^band see horsemen and chariots, and the numbers of the enemy's army greater than thine, thou shalt not fear them: because the Lord thy God is with thee, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt.

2 And when the battle is now at hand, the priest shall stand before the army, and shall speak to the people in this manner:

3 Hear, O Israel, you join battle this day against your enemies, let not your heart be dismayed, be not afraid, do not give back, fear ye them not:

4 Because the Lord your God is in the midst of you, and will fight for you against your enemies, to deliver you from danger.

5 And the captains shall proclaim through every band, in the hearing of the army: ^cWhat man is there, that hath built a new house, and hath not dedicated it? let him go, and return to his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man dedicate it.

which regarded individuals, as in those which attacked the worship of God; since the false accuser is to lose life or limb, according as he had attempted to injure his neighbour (ver. 21); and the Lord ratifies their sentence. C.

VER. 21. Pity. This regarded the judge, who must act with impartiality. W.—The law admits of no mitigation, but inflicts the same punishment on the calumniating witness as he intended should fall upon his brother. Lyran, &c.—Some Rabbin (apud Fag.) pretend that this was executed with rigour only when the innocent had sustained some real injury. See Exod. xxi. 24. C.

CHAP. XX. VER. 1. Egypt. Hence it appears that the doctrine of the Quakers, who condemn all wars, is contrary to that of God. If they were always essentially unlawful, He would never have authorized them. H.

VER. 2. Priest. Eleazar, the high priest, acted in this capacity in the war against Midian, and sounded the trumpet, as it was not beneath his dignity. Many priests always attended the army, (C.) the captain of whom (H.) first made the declarations (ver. 5, 6, 7) to the whole army; and these were repeated by the inferior priests at the head of each company, when the army was set in array. So were also the promises of protection, (ver. 3, 4,) when all were ready for battle.

VER. 4. God. All must be done in his name, by the direction of his ministers. The Jews pretend that the ark was carried in the midst of the army. But this does not seem to have been generally the case. C.—Of you. "We must co-operate, being assisted" by God, as S. Aug. (q. 30) observes, in our spiritual conflicts. D.

VER. 5. Captains. Heb. "ssotrim, (Sept. grammateis,) shall proclaim to the people." Whether these were the chief officers, or only heralds, does not appear. C.—They were probably the priests attached to the army, ver. 2. See chap. i. 15. H.—Dedicate it. Heb. "begin to use ^d" on which occasion a feast was made. Jans.—Psal. xxix. seems to have been intended for such a solemnity. At the dedication of the walls of Jerusalem great rejoicings were made, 2 Esd. xii. 27.

VER. 6. Common. Heb. "hath not profaned it." M.—During the three first years the fruit was not eaten. In the fourth it was sacred to the Lord, and given to the priests, so that the owner could not partake of the fruit till the fifth year, when it ceased to be in a manner sacred. Jonathan translates, "and has not redeemed it," by paying the first-fruits of the fifth year. Sept. "has not rejoiced in it," by feasting, as was probably the custom at the first vintage. Other fruit-trees entitled the owner to the like privilege. Schikard. Jus. reg. 5.—Whereof all may eat, is added by the Vulg. to explain what is meant by common. C.

VER. 7. Taken her. It was customary to leave the espoused virgin in her father's house for the space of a year, (during which time, if she proved unfaithful, she was punished like an adulteress, chap. xxii. 23, &c.) and she could not be given till she was twelve years old ^e if she were thirteen complete, when she was 6 What man is there, that hath planted a vineyard, and hath not as yet made it to be common, whereof all men may eat? let him go, and return to his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man execute his office.

7 What man is there, that hath espoused a wife, and not taken her? let him go, and return to his house, lest he die in the war, and another man take her.

8 After these things are declared, they shall add the rest, and shall speak to the people: ^f"What man is there, that is fearful and faint-hearted? let him go, and return to his house, lest he make the hearts of his brethren to fear, as he himself is possessed with fear.

9 And when the captains of the army shall hold their peace, and have made an end of speaking, every man shall prepare their bands to fight.

10 If at any time thou come to fight against a city, thou shalt first offer it peace.

11 If they receive it, and open the gates to thee, all the people that are therein shall be saved, and shall serve thee, paying tribute.

12 But if they will not make peace, and shall begin war against thee, thou shalt besiege it,

13 And when the Lord thy God shall deliver it into thy hands, thou shalt slay all that are therein of the male sex, with the edge of the sword, 14 Excepting women and children, cattle and other things, that are in the city. And thou shalt divide all the prey to the army, and thou shalt eat the spoils of thy enemies, which the Lord thy God shall give thee.

^b A. M. 2553.—^c 1 Mac. iii. 56.—^d Judg. vii. 3.

asked in marriage, she was obliged to wait only thirty days. Seld. Uxor. ii. 1. Chap. xxv. 5. Philo allows this immunity from war only to those who had espoused a virgin. They were also freed from paying taxes, mending roads, &c. Chap. xxix. 5. C.—"That man who is enslaved to his wife cannot serve in the warfare of the Lord." S. Jer. c. Jov. i.

VER. 9. Man. Heb. and Sept. "when the officers have made an end of speaking to the people, they shall appoint captains of the armies to lead forth the people." H.—It seems rather late to have this to do, when the battle was ready to commence, unless perhaps the whole was arranged in a general assembly, when no one was at the head of the people, (C.) as was sometimes the case in the days of the judges. H.—Heb. of the Massorets implies, "The princes of the army shall make a review (or take down the numbers) at the head of the people."

VER. 10. Peace. Interpreters are not agreed whether this law was general, and included the nations whom God had ordered the Hebrews to exterminate, or not. They were nothing but the executioners of his decree. They were commanded not to marry any of their daughters, but to put all to fire and sword. Exod. xxxiv. 15, 16. The cities which were not assigned to them for a possession, were to be treated in a different manner (ver. 15); and hence the Gabaonites, being convinced that they were comprised in the number of the devoted cities, pretended that they came from a great distance. Josue, (ix. 4—7,) and the heads of the people, acknowledge that they could not make a league with those nations whose land they were to possess. Maimonides and Grotius (Jur. ii. 13) maintain that no war can be lawful, unless an offer of peace be made. The latter undertakes to prove that the commands respecting the Chanaanites were conditional, and presupposed that they would not yield to the terms which were offered. Hence Rahab was saved, the league with the Gabaonites was kept, even after it was known who they really were. Solomon, who conquered some of the surviving Chanaanites, did not think himself bound to destroy them, 3 Kings ix. 2; 2 Par. viii. 7. C.—The Israelites might have many reasons for going to war either with their brethren, or with foreign nations, as to punish a heinous crime, a rebellion, &c.; (see Judg. xx.; 2 Kings x. 4, and xx. 15;) on which occasions they were bound to offer terms. C.—"A wise man ought to try every expedient before he takes up arms." Terence.

VER. 11. Tribute. This was usually imposed by the victor to defray the expenses of the war, and to prevent its breaking out again. The kings of Moab had to pay 100,000 rams, and as many sheep, to the kings of Juda, 4 Kings 4. Hiram gave 120 talents of gold to Solomon, by way of tribute, 3 Kings ix. 15. Josue and Solomon condemned some of the Chanaanites to manual labour, 2 Par. viii. 8.

VER. 14. Excepting women, &c. These were supposed incapable of making any resistance, or of carrying arms. Slaves also were excused, on account of their want of liberty to choose for themselves, and old men, unless the war was undertaken by their advice.

15 So shalt thou do to all cities that are at a great distance from thee, and are not of these cities which thou shalt receive in possession.

16 But of those cities that shall be given thee, thou shalt suffer none at all to live :

17 But shalt kill them with the edge of the sword, to wit, the Hethite, and the Amorrite, and the Chanaanite, the Pherezite, and the Hevite, and the Jebusite, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee :

18 Lest they teach you to do all the abominations which they have done to their gods : and you should sin against the Lord your God.

19 When thou hast besieged a city a long time, and hast compassed it with bulwarks, to take it, thou shalt not cut down the trees that may be eaten of, neither shalt thou spoil the country round about with axes : for it is a tree, and not a man, neither can it increase the number of them that fight against thee.

20 But if there be any trees that are not fruitful, but wild, and fit for other uses, cut them down, and make engines, until thou take the city, which fighteth against thee.

CHAP. XXI.

The expiation of a secret murder. The marrying of a captive. The eldest son must not be deprived of his birth-right for hatred of his mother. A stubborn son is to be stoned to death. When one is hanged on a gibbet, he must be taken down the same day, and buried.

WHEN^a there shall be found in the land which the Lord thy God will give thee, the corpse of a man slain, and it is not known who is guilty of the murder,

2 Thy ancients and judges shall go out, and shall measure from the place where the body lieth, the distance of every city round about :

VER. 17. Jebusite. Sam. and Sept. add "the Gergesite." C.

VER. 19. Not a man. Heb. "the tree of the field, man." Which the Protestants supply, "is man's life to employ them in the siege." Sept. "is the tree . a man ?" H.—We might render the Heb. "as for the tree of the field, it shall come to thy assistance in the siege," ver. 20. H.—They are "like men," and may be of great service in making warlike engines. They are here contrasted with fruit-trees, which must not be cut down, unless they be in the way, or of service to the enemy. All other things of the same nature, as houses, corn, water, &c., must be spared, as well as those who do not bear arms. Yet God ordered the houses to be demolished in the war with the Moabites, 4 Kings iii. 19. C.

VER. 20. Engines. Heb. motsur. Besieged cities were surrounded with palisades, for which a great deal of wood was requisite. Luke xix. 45. Josephus (Bel. v. 31) informs us that Titus surrounded Jerusalem with a wall in the space of three days, having cut down the wood all around. See 4 Kings vi., and xvii., and xxv.; Ezec. xxvi. 7. C.

CHAP. XXI. VER. 1. Land. The Jewish doctors hence infer, that if the corpse was found hanging or drowned, &c., or nearer a town of the Gentiles than one of the Israelites, this law did not oblige. But the law shows us, that the author of the murder must be discovered, if possible, as the crime is so grievous as, in a manner, to defile the land, and draw down the vengeance of God, if it be carelessly left unpunished. C.

VER. 2. Ancients and judges. After the strictest inquiry, if the murderer could not be discovered, the magistrates and senate of the neighbouring cities measured which city the corpse was nearest. Josep. iv. 8. C.

VER. 4. Valley. In such places murders are most frequently perpetrated. Heb. may signify, "a desert," deep or inaccessible torrent, (H.) on the side of which the heifer was to be slain, and its body was then, it seems, thrown into the water.—Was. Some translate the Heb. "shall be," as if the place was to be hereafter considered as unclean and accursed. C.—Strike off, or cadent, "cut the neck," (H.) at the top, without perhaps separating it entirely from the body. Blood was given for blood, and this was the chief design of the bloody sacrifices. For this reason the Egyptians impressed a seal on the horns of the victim, representing a man kneeling, with his hands tied behind his back, as if ready to receive the stroke of death. Plut. Isis.

VER. 5. Judged. We see here again the great authority of the priests. Chap. xvii. 9. Heb. "by their word shall every controversy and every stroke be tried," as the Prot. render it. H.—Some understand by stroke the leprosy, of which they were undoubtedly the judges. But it is better to explain it of all wounds, and even of death, (C.) concerning which Moses is here speaking. H.—The Rabbins restrain the authority of priests as much as they can, to give greater power to their chimerical Sanhedrin. They pretend that here they had only to pronounce

3 And the ancients of that city, which they shall perceive to be nearer than the rest, shall take a heifer of the herd, that hath not drawn in the yoke, nor ploughed the ground,

4 And they shall bring her into a rough and stony valley, that never was ploughed, nor sown : and there they shall strike off the head of the heifer :

5 And the priests, the sons of Levi, shall come, whom the Lord thy God hath chosen to minister to him, and to bless in his name, and that by their word every matter should be decided, and whatsoever is clean or unclean should be judged.

6 And the ancients of that city shall come to the person slain, and shall wash their hands over the heifer that was killed in the valley,

7 And shall say : Our hands did not shed this blood, nor did our eyes see it.

8 Be merciful to thy people Israel, whom thou hast redeemed, O Lord, and lay not innocent blood to their charge in the midst of thy people Israel. And the guilt of blood shall be taken from them :

9 And thou shalt be free from the innocent's blood that was shed, when thou shalt have done what the Lord hath commanded thee.

10 If thou go out to fight against thy enemies, and the Lord thy God deliver them into thy hand, and thou lead them away captives,

11 And seest in the number of the captives a beautiful woman, and lovest her, and wilt have her to wife,

12 Thou shalt bring her into thy house : and she shall shave her hair, and pare her nails, the blessing, ver. 8. Josephus (iv. 8) joins the magistrates with them in the whole ceremony. This awful meeting of so many people tended to discover the authors of the murder, as all would naturally converse together on the subject, and each person declaring what he knew, some suspicions might at last be formed, which might by degrees lead to the detection. Josephus says rewards were proposed to any who might make a discovery. C.—Abulensis insinuates that if the murderer was present in the crowd, he might be detected by blood gushing from the corpse of the deceased, &c., as God often brings murder to light in a wonderful manner. Cic. Div. 1. T.

VER. 6. Wash. This was intended to testify that they were not guilty of the blood which had been shed, and that they wished to remove the punishment of it from themselves upon the head of the heifer, (C.) the representative of the unknown murderer. So Pilate conformed to this custom, when he condemned Christ on the bare accusation of the Jews (Matt. xxvii. 24); and the priest, at mass, washes his hands as an emblem of that innocence with which he ought to approach to the holy of holies. H.

VER. 7. It. Magistrates are in some degree responsible, if by their neglect the high-roads are unsafe. C.—They had testified that they had done their duty. W.

VER. 9. And, &c. Heb. "Thou shalt put away," (H.) or "extinguish the voice of innocent blood," which otherwise would cry to heaven for vengeance. Gen. iv. 10. In this sacrifice, (C.) though it deserve not the name, (M.) we may consider Jesus Christ suffering for the sins of others. C.

VER. 10. Captives. Some Rabbins say this was only lawful in what they call voluntary wars, which the Lord had not commanded, as in those which were waged against the devoted nations it was not permitted to reserve the women, even though they should embrace the true religion. Calmet seems to be of the same opinion in the preceding chapter, to which he even refers. But here he thinks that, upon their complying with the condition specified, they might be married, as Raab was, and consequently this law must be considered as an exception to those general laws, which prohibit matrimony with those nations of Chanaan, which were otherwise ordered to be entirely destroyed. Chap. vi. 16. "We believe," says he, "that if these women changed their religion, they might be espoused, of whatever nation they might be." He seems still to exclude the Chanaanite women, (chap. xxiii. 3,) which variation of sentiment shows that the point is not to be easily decided. H.

VER. 12. Hair. In mourning, people did the reverse to what they were accustomed to do in the days of joy. The men let their hair grow, the women cut this ornament of their head, a thing which the prophets often threaten. Isa. xv. 23; Jer. xlvii. 5, &c. C.—Nails. Some would translate the Heb. "she shall make her nails grow," as a mark of sorrow, perhaps tsalai among the pagans.

13 And shall put off the raiment, wherein she was taken : and shall remain in thy house, and mourn for her father and mother one month : and after that thou shalt go in unto her, and shalt sleep with her, and she shall be thy wife.

14 But if afterwards she please thee not, thou shalt let her go free, but thou mayst not sell her for money, nor oppress her by might : because thou hast humbled her.

15 If a man have two wives, one beloved, and the other hated, and they have had children by him, and the son of the hated be the first-born,

16 And he meaneth to divide his substance among his sons : he may not make the son of the beloved the first-born, and prefer him before the son of the hated ;

17 * But he shall acknowledge the son of the hated for the first-born, and shall give him a double portion of all he hath : for this is the first of his children, and to him are due the first birth-rights.

18 If a man have a stubborn and unruly son, who will not hear the commandments of his father or mother, and being corrected, slighteth obedience :

19 They shall take him, and bring him to the ancients of his city, and to the gate of judgment,

20 And shall say to them : This our son is rebellious and stubborn, he slighteth hearing our admonitions, he giveth himself to revelling, and to debauchery, and banquetings :

* 1 Par. v. 1.—Gal. iii. 13.

faciet unguis. But the Sept., Philo, &c. agree with the Vulg. (M.) ; and the Heb. may very well have the same sense.

VER. 13. Raiment. In mourning, people wore different clothes from what they did at other times. 2 Kings xiv. 2.—One month. So long the mourning for Aaron and Moses continued. Chap. ult. ; Num. xx. M.

VER. 14. Her. Nothing shows the weakness of the Hebrews more than this liberty, which the law was in a manner forced to allow, to prevent greater evils. The soldier who has married a captive may abandon her, if he set her free, (C.) which was but a slight punishment for his inconstancy.

VER. 15. Two wives. Moses never expressly (H.) sanctions polygamy ; but he tolerates it frequently, as excused by custom, the example of the patriarchs, &c. ; a toleration which Christ has revoked, as contrary to the primary design of God, and the institution of matrimony. C. Matt. xix.

VER. 16. Hated, or less loved. H.—The inheritance goes to the first-born independently of the father's disposition, in order to prevent the disturbances which would otherwise have taken place in families, where the different wives would have been continually endeavouring to get their respective children preferred before the rest. David, indeed, assigned the throne to Solomon, to the exclusion of Adonias ; but this was done by the command of God. 3 Kings i. 17. The regulation of Jacob, in favour of Joseph, was made prior to this law. The Jewish doctors inform us that a father cannot disinherit any of his lawful heirs, except the judges ratify his sentence while he is in health. But if he be dangerously ill, his verbal declaration will suffice, provided he appoint some one whom the law does not reject. For if he were to make a Gentile his heir, the will would be null. The testament must be made in the day-time, for which they cite Eccli. xxxiii. 24. They say likewise that a father may, while living, give his effects to whom he pleases, and by this means disinherit his children ; or he may give the succession to one of them, who is then considered as a tutor of the rest, and is bound to maintain them with necessaries till the year of jubilee, when each may claim his respective share. Seld. Succes. c. 24. But all these regulations seem to contradict the law. C.

VER. 17. Double portion. If a person left six children, his effects were divided into seven equal parts, and the eldest son received two of them, though others think that he was entitled to one half of the whole, (C.) in order to enable him to support the dignity of the family, (H.) and the greater expenses which he had to incur for sacrifices and solemn feasts. Grot.—If he were dead, his children or heirs were entitled to his portion. This was the prerogative of the first-born, 1 Par. v. 2. Selden.—The right to the priesthood, if they might have claimed it before the law, was now given to the family of Aaron. Females had no privilege above one another. They received equal shares, when there was no male issue. Num. xxxvi. H.—First. Heb. “the beginning of his strength.” See Gen. xlix. 3.

VER. 19. Ancients. In considerable cities there was a tribunal of three, and another of twenty-three judges. The former took cognizance of the first accusation, and condemned the stubborn child to be scourged ; but the latter sentenced him to be stoned in case of a relapse, provided both parents concurred in prosecuting their son, as they would not both surely be guided by passion. Theod. q. 20. The Rabbin, according to their custom, modify this law, and exempt girls, 21 The people of the city shall stone him : and he shall die, that you may take away the evil out of the midst of you, and all Israel hearing it may be afraid.

22 When a man hath committed a crime for which he is to be punished with death, and being condemned to die, is hanged on a gibbet :

23 His body shall not remain upon the tree, but shall be buried the same day :^b for he is accursed of God that hangeth on a tree : and thou shalt not defile thy land, which the Lord thy God shall give thee in possession.

CHAP. XXII.

Humanity towards neighbours. Neither sex may use the apparel of the other. Cruelty to be avoided, even to birds. Battlements about the roof of a house. Things of divers kinds not to be mixed. The punishment of him that slandereth his wife, as also of adultery and rape.

THOU^c shalt not pass by if thou seest thy brother's ox, or his sheep go astray : but thou shalt bring them back to thy brother.

2 And if thy brother be not nigh, or thou know him not : thou shalt bring them to thy house, and they shall be with thee until thy brother seek them, and receive them.

3 Thou shalt do in like manner with his ass, and with his raiment, and with every thing that is thy brother's, which is lost : if thou find it, neglect it not as pertaining to another.

4 If thou see thy brother's ass or his ox to be fallen orphans, and boys under thirteen years of age. Seld. Syned.—Josephus (xvi. 17) says that the parents laid their hands on the head of the undutiful, and then all the people stoned him. Moses has not specified the punishment of parricides, (C.) as he deemed it next to impossible. H.—But we may hence judge how he would have chastised so heinous a crime.

VER. 22. Gibbet. Whether the person was first killed, as the Jews assert, or he was left to die upon the gibbet, see Calmet's Diss. It is also a matter of doubt whether he was nailed to the gibbet, or hung on it by a rope. Bonfrere.

VER. 23. Of God. Chal. “he has been fixed on the gibbet for sinning against God.” Sym. and Arab. “he has blasphemed the Lord.” Syriac, “the man who has blasphemed shall be hung.” Only people accused of great crimes, such as blasphemy and idolatry, were condemned to this reproachful death, and prayers were not said for them in the synagogue, as they were for other persons, during the eleven months following their decease. C.—They are not to be remembered before God. Their dead bodies are to be buried before sun-set, that the country may not be defiled. The punishment itself is extremely infamous, and the name of God is often used by the Jews to express something in the highest degree, as the cedars of God, &c. H.—Some understand this passage as if the body were not to be left on the gibbet, because man, being created to the likeness of God, he will not allow the body to be insulted. Others think that the criminal having been treated with due severity, as accursed of God, his corpse must not be deprived of decent burial. S. Paul reads this verse in a different manner both from the Heb. and Sept., leaving out of God, and substituting, with the Sept., the words every one, and on a tree. Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us : for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree. Gal. iii. 13. S. Jerom remarks, that on this, as well as on other occasions, he adheres to the sense, without following the express words of Scripture. He also observes, with Tertullian, that only those are declared accursed by the law who are hung for their crimes ; and as Jesus Christ suffered not for any fault of his own, but being willing to appear in the character of one accursed, he has procured for us all blessings. C.—S. Jerom seems to think that the Jews have inserted of God, to intimate that Christ was accursed of him. H.

CHAP. XXII. VER. 1. Pass by. Heb. “hide thyself,” pretending not to see it.—Brother. Any fellow creature. Exod. xxiii. 4 ; Luke x. 30. C.—“We are very inhuman, not to show as much concern for a man as the Jews do for a beast of burden.” S. Chrys. ser. 13. D.

VER. 2. Not nigh, either in blood or in place, (C.) though the latter signification seems more applicable ; as, if the person lived at too great a distance, it would suffice to inform him where he might find what he had lost ; and if the owner was unknown, the thing must be taken care of by him who finds it till he be discovered. H.

VER. 3. If, &c. Heb. “thou must not hide thyself,” so as to pass it by, nor yet conceal it from the right owner. When a thing is certainly abandoned by him, it belongs to the person who seizes it first ; but if it be only lost it must surely be restored, if possible, (Grot. Jur. ii. 10,) as nature forbids us to take advantage of another's misfortune. Cicero.

down in the way, thou shalt not slight it, but shalt lift it up with him.

5 A woman shall not be clothed with man's apparel, neither shall a man use woman's apparel: for he that doth these things is abominable before God.

6 If thou find, as thou walkest by the way, a bird's nest in a tree, or on the ground, and the dam sitting upon the young, or upon the eggs: thou shalt not take her with her young:

7 But shalt let her go, keeping the young which thou hast caught: that it may be well with thee, and thou mayst live a long time.

8 When thou buildest a new house, thou shalt make a battlement to the roof round about: lest blood be shed in thy house, and thou be guilty, if any one slip and fall down headlong.

9 Thou shalt not sow thy vineyard with divers seeds: lest both the seed which thou hast sown, and the fruit of the vineyard, be sanctified together.

10 Thou shalt not plough with an ox and an ass together.

11 Thou shalt not wear a garment that is woven of woollen and linen together.

12 *Thou shalt make strings in the hem at the four corners of thy cloak, wherewith thou shalt be covered.

13 If a man marry a wife, and afterwards hate her,

14 And seek occasions to put her away, laying to her charge a very ill name, and say: I took this woman to wife, and going in to her, I found her not a virgin:

15 Her father and mother shall take her, and shall bring with them the tokens of her virginity to the ancients of the city that are in the gate:

* Num. xv. 38.

VER. 4. With him. Heb. "thou shalt not hide thyself, but help him to lift up." Exod. xxiii. 4.

VER. 5. God. Some take this literally, as the contrary practice is contrary to decency, and might be attended with very pernicious consequences. Others think that Moses here forbids some superstitious practice. Josephus (iv. 8) believes that women are here prohibited to engage in warfare. C.—Yet that disorderly conduct deserved to be reprobated in strong terms, (H.) when it was not excused by some necessity or proper motive, such as actuated some holy virgins, S. Theodora, &c. T.

VER. 6. Thou shalt not take, &c. This was to show them to exercise a certain mercy even to irrational creatures; and by that means to train them up to a horror of cruelty; and to the exercise of humanity, and mutual charity one to another. Ch.—Some were of opinion that the person who could take the old bird on the nest might assure himself of good fortune, fecundity, &c. S. Thom. i. 2, q. 102, a. 6. Such superstition is reprehensible. Phocildes advises not to take all the young ones, nor the hen, in consideration of one's having more birds. C.

VER. 7. Time. Those who refrain from cruelty, even towards beasts, will be induced more easily to show mercy to their fellow creatures, (Tert. c. Mare. ii.,) and will draw down the blessings of God upon themselves. M.

VER. 8. Battlement. This precaution was necessary, because all their houses had flat tops; and it was usual to walk and to converse together upon them. Ch.—King Ochozias had the misfortune to fall from the top of his house, (4 Kings i. 2,) and David saw Bethsabee when he was walking on the roof of his palace, 2 Kings xi. 2. Saul slept at the top of Samuel's house, 1 Kings ix. 25. See Jos. ii. 6; Matt. x. 27. H.

VER. 9. Together. If wheat was sown in a vineyard, it would ripen much sooner than the grapes; and as the first-fruits of both were offered to the Lord, the owner would lose the profit which he had too greedily sought after, the place being esteemed both pure and impure at the same time. This mixture of seeds would also impoverish the land, so that it would be like a place defiled, and unfit for cultivation. Jansen, in Lev. xix. 19.

VER. 10. Plough. People who have treated on agriculture observe, that it is a pernicious practice to make animals of unequal size and speed work together. Colum. vi. 2.—S. Paul explains to us the mystical sense of this passage. Bear not the yoke together with infidels, 2 Cor. vi. 14. C.—Marry not with such. H.—Employ not in the sacred ministry the imprudent and wicked with those of a virtuous disposition. S. Greg. Mor. i. 16.

16 And the father shall say: I gave my daughter unto this man to wife: and because he hateth her,

17 He layeth to her charge a very ill name, so as to say: I found not thy daughter a virgin: and behold these are the tokens of my daughter's virginity. And they shall spread the cloth before the ancients of the city:

18 And the ancients of that city shall take that man, and beat him,

19 Condemning him besides in a hundred sicles of silver, which he shall give to the damsel's father, because he hath defamed by a very ill name a virgin of Israel: and he shall have her to wife, and may not put her away all the days of his life.

20 But if what he chargeth her with be true, and virginity be not found in the damsel:

21 They shall cast her out of the doors of her father's house, and the men of the city shall stone her to death, and she shall die: because she hath done a wicked thing in Israel, to play the whore in her father's house: and thou shalt take away the evil out of the midst of thee.

22 ^bIf a man lie with another man's wife, they shall both die, that is to say, the adulterer and the adulteress: and thou shalt take away the evil out of Israel.

23 If a man have espoused a damsel that is a virgin, and some one find her in the city, and lie with her,

24 Thou shalt bring them both out to the gate of that city, and they shall be stoned: the damsel, because she cried not out, being in the city: the man, because he hath humbled his neighbour's wife: And thou shalt take away the evil from the midst of thee.

25 But if a man find a damsel that is betrothed, in the field, and taking hold of her, lie with her, he alone shall die:

^b Lev. xx. 10.

VER. 12. Strings, probably to gird the outer garment round the loins. See Num. xv. 38.

VER. 14. Name. Heb. "and occasion reports against her to bring an evil name upon her," (H.) that he may not have to return her dowry. For, according to many of the Rabbin, he might give her a bill of divorce simply if he did not like her. Seld. Uxor. iii. 1, &c.—The cause was to be tried before the twenty-three judges. Oftentimes only witnesses, probably matrons, were examined in defence of the woman. Josc. iv. 8. S. Ambrose (ep. viii. 64, ad Syagr.) highly disapproves of such unsatisfactory methods.

VER. 15. Her. It does not appear that the woman was present at the trial: she remained at her father's, or rather at her husband's house, till sentence was passed. C.

VER. 18. Beat him. Heb. "chastise." Sept. may signify also, "reprimand him." But (H.) Josephus says the husband was to receive thirty-nine lashes; and Philo informs us that the woman might leave him, if she thought proper, though, if she were willing to stay, he had not the power to divorce her, ver. 10.

VER. 19. A hundred. Josephus only mentions fifty. As it was presumed that the false accusation proceeded from a desire to defraud the woman of her dowry, the law obliged the husband to allow her double (C.) the usual sum. Yet this punishment, together with the scourging, was very inadequate to what the woman would have had to suffer if she had been condemned. H.—S. Augustine (q. 33) is surprised at this decision, as in other cases calumny was subjected to the law of retaliation, or punished with death. This shows also that wives, among the Jews, were considered as little more than servants. C.

VER. 21. Die. It was concluded that she had committed the sin after her espousal. If it had happened before, she was to receive only twenty-five sicles for a dowry; though, if she took an oath that violence had been offered to her, she was entitled to fifty: which opinion of the Rabbin seems very equitable. C.

VER. 22. Die. The man was to be strangled as well as the married woman; if she were espoused only, she was to be stoned. The daughter of a priest was burnt alive. Rabbin. C. See Lev. xx. 10.

VER. 24. Wife. After the woman was espoused, (ver. 23,) she was called a wife, and punished accordingly, if she proved unfaithful.

VER. 25. Hold. Sept. "offering violence," as also ver. 23. H.—Die. Moses supposes that the woman in the field had made all possible resistance, and that the one in the city had, by silence at least, consented. But if the case were otherwise, the judges were to make all necessary inquiries, and pass sentence accordingly. C.

26 The damsel shall suffer nothing, neither is she guilty of death: for as a robber riseth against his brother, and taketh away his life, so also did the damsel suffer:

27 She was alone in the field: she cried, and there was no man to help her.

28 If a man find a damsel that is a virgin, who is not espoused, and taking her, lie with her, and the matter come to judgment,

29 *He that lay with her, shall give to the father of the maid, fifty sicles of silver, and shall have her to wife, because he hath humbled her: he may not put her away all the days of his life.

30 No man shall take his father's wife, nor remove his covering.

VER. 29. Life. A law nearly similar occurs, Exod. xxii. 16, (H.) only there Moses speaks of seduction. M.—If the father or the woman refused their consent to the marriage, the person had only to pay the fifty sicles; which the woman received, if her father was not alive. But if they consented, the person who had been condemned by the judge was bound to marry the woman, how deformed soever. Seld. Uxor. i. 16. C.

VER. 30. Covering. See Lev. xx. 11. A wife should be hidden from all but her husband. H.

CHAP. XXIII. VER. 1. Eunuch. By these are meant, in the spiritual sense, such as are barren in good works. Ch. Theod. q. 25. W.—Church. That is, into the assembly or congregation of Israel, so as to have the privilege of an Israelite, or to be capable of any place or office among the people of God. Ch.—Philo says they were not to enter the court of the temple. Sec Lament. i. 10. Others think they could not embrace the Jewish religion. Exod. xii. 48. But this privilege could not be refused. C.

VER. 2. Mamzer, &c. The author of the Vulg. adds the explication of mamzer, which only occurs again, Zac. ix. 6. It may in both places denote a stranger, or one of a different religion from the Jews, as Jephth was the son of a prostitute, (Judg. x. 1,) and yet became a judge of Israel. But strangers, as long as they professed a false religion, could not be entitled to the privileges of Jewish citizens; and even after they had relinquished their false worship, they were bound to wait ten whole generations, or a long time, before they could fill the posts of honour and command. C.—This, however, seems to be contrary to the disposition made in favour of the Idumeans and Egyptians, who were admitted in the third generation. A mamzer may, therefore, be (H.) a bastard of a different nation from the Jews, (M.) which was not the case of Jephth. H.—In a word, some understand that mamzer comprises all concerning whose birth any doubts might be entertained. C.—It is observable, that such often imitate the wicked conduct of their parents; in which case they are unfit for the magistracy; and though they may live a very exemplary life, the law is intended to discourage such practices in parents, which may entail dishonour and loss upon their children; that, if they be not sufficiently restrained by their own personal disgrace, they may at least by the love for their innocent offspring. H.

VER. 3. Ever. This shows that the former verse only excludes bastards for a time. But why are these nations treated with more severity than the Edomite and Egyptian? Because their enmity seemed to proceed from pure malice, and they attempted to ruin the souls of the Hebrews by lust and by idolatry, without any prospect of interest to themselves. Their parents were also of very base origin, and Abraham had rescued their father, Lot, from destruction; so that for his children to oppose with such virulence the descendants of Abraham, manifested a degree of ingratitude and perversity. C.—They had found their attempts to hurt Israel abortive, and yet ceased not to persecute their near relations, (H.) by drawing them into carnal sins. Those who are obstinate in their evil ways can never 7 Thou shalt not abhor the Edomite, because he is thy brother: nor the Egyptian, because thou wast a stranger in his land.

8 They that are born of them, in the third generation shall enter into the church of the Lord.

9 When thou goest out to war against thy enemies, thou shalt keep thyself from every evil thing.

10 If there be among you any man, that is defiled in a dream by night, he shall go forth out of the camp, be rightly received into the Church of God. W.—Achior and Ruth embraced the Jewish religion, but it does not appear that they were admitted to places of trust. Judith xiv. 6. H.—These regulations were observed till the Babylonian captivity, while the genealogies might be ascertained. C.—In cases of extraordinary merit, as in that of Achior, the Ammonite, (Judith xiv.,) a dispensation might be granted. T.

VER. 4. Water: the necessities of life. This inhumanity is highly resented. —Son. Heb. "of Beor, of Pethor, a city of Mesopotamia, to curse thee." H. Num. xxii. 5.

VER. 6. Peace. Heb. "ask or seek not their peace nor their advantage" as a nation; keep at a proper distance; have no familiarity with them. H.—Their vices, not their persons, are to be hated. David behaved in a friendly manner with the king of Ammon, 2 Kings x. 2. He was afterwards forced to make war upon the people, though, without such extraordinary provocations, war was not to be declared against them. C.—Prosperity. Have no intercourse with them. M.—Sept. "Salute them not, wishing them what may tend to their peace and advantage."

VER. 7. Brother. Esau and Jacob were twins.—Land. The Egyptians had for some time afforded the Hebrews an asylum in their country, and though the kings had of late persecuted them, the people seem not to have entered into the views of their rulers, and spared the male children notwithstanding their cruel edicts. They gave them also very rich presents before their departure. Exod. xii. 35. Gratitude required that these things should be considered, (H.) and God orders his people generously to pass over the subsequent ill-treatment of these two nations.

VER. 9. Thing, rapine, libertinage, &c., which are but too common among soldiers. C.—We know what instructions S. John the Baptist gave to those who followed that lawful profession. Luke iii. 14. H.

VER. 10. Camp of the Levites, according to the Rabbin. C.—Bonifere explains this of priests. M.—But it rather refers to all who dwell in the camp, where the ark seems to have been generally present, along with the armies, ver 14; Num. xxxi. 6. C.—It is not clear, however, that the law alludes to any other camp but that in the midst of which the tabernacle was fixed; and Calmet elsewhere, denies that the ark commonly followed the army. H.

VER. 11. Water of the fountain. M.

VER. 14. No uncleanness. This caution against suffering any filth in the camp was to teach them to fly the filth of sin, which driveth God away from the soul. Ch.—In a camp where three million people were collected, if some such regulation had not been made, great and serious inconveniences would have ensued. The lawgiver, therefore, descends to several particulars which to us might appear minute; but besides the obvious meaning, which is very rational, the words convey other mystical instructions of the highest importance.—God was pleased to assume the character of a powerful monarch, residing among his people, and hence every appearance of indecency must be removed. H.

15 Thou shalt not deliver to his master the servant that is fled to thee.

16 He shall dwell with thee in the place that shall please him, and shall rest in one of thy cities: give him no trouble.

17 There shall be no whore among the daughters of Israel, nor whoremonger among the sons of Israel.

18 Thou shalt not offer the hire of a strumpet, nor the price of a dog, in the house of the Lord thy God, whatsoever it be that thou hast vowed: because both these are an abomination to the Lord thy God.

19 Thou shalt not lend to thy brother money to usury, nor corn, nor any other thing:

20 But to the stranger. To thy brother thou shalt lend that which he wanteth, without usury; that the Lord thy God may bless thee in all thy works in the land, which thou shalt go in to possess.

VER. 15. To thee, from among the Gentiles. The promised land was thus declared a land of liberty, (C.) to encourage poor slaves to embrace the service of the true God, and to flee from the slavery of the devil, and from the society of those who adored him in their idols. The whole earth belongs to the Lord, and He was thus pleased to punish those who might claim a right to these slaves. H.—Some believe that the price was given to the owner, at the public expense. The Rabbins allow this privilege of an asylum only to those who fled from a foreign country, or from an infidel master, to embrace the true religion. Circumcision was given to them as an inviolable mark of liberty. Chald. Those who had been sold for their crimes, or for debt, by the sentence of the judge, could not claim this exemption. Grot. Jur. iii. 7.—Philo (de Humanit.) says it would be unjust to give up a slave who has sought refuge with us. We ought either to reconcile him to his master, or sell him to another, and give the price to the former owner. Some translate the Heb. in a contrary sense, "Thou shalt not shut up the slave who has fled to thee from his master," as if it were unjust to refuse to deliver him up. But the law points out some cases where it is lawful for a slave to flee away, and consequently people must be allowed to receive him. The following verse is decisive in favour of this explanation.

VER. 17. Israel. Some hence very erroneously infer, that before this prohibition the thing was not criminal. Seld. Jur. v. 4. Notwithstanding the law, such lewd practices continued to be very common. C.—That the poor ignorant idolater should think by these means to appease those gods who, while here on earth, had been infamous for the like excesses, needs not so much to excite our surprise. But that the Gnostics, Manichees, and other heretics, almost of all ages since the light of the gospel shone forth, should have thought that they could honour the true God by abusing the flesh, is truly astonishing. Yet they gave into this delusion, by first persuading themselves that the flesh was the creature of an evil principle, fighting against the author of the spirit and of all good, with whom they intended to take part. The way of a fool is right in his own eyes. Yea, there is a way that seemeth to a man right, and the ends thereof lead to death. Prov. xii. 15, and xvi. 25. These wretches grounded their opinion on the authority of their gods, or of the Scripture. Will this excuse be admitted by the Sovereign Judge? But these delusions are perhaps now at an end.—A principle, however, is still maintained of a far more pernicious tendency, inasmuch as it strikes at the root of every law, Divine and human. This horrible doctrine was inculcated by J. Wesley for above thirty years, as we have already observed. Chap. xvi. 22. "O natural man," says he, (Serm. on Orig. Sin,) "thou canst do no good. Thy natural actions are sin; thy civil actions are sin; thy religious actions are sin. As many thoughts, words, and actions, so many sins; for nothing but sin comes from thee. Thy duties are sins. Can an evil tree bring forth good fruit?" Thus Scripture teaches him that to work for one's family, to pay taxes, to pray, read the Scriptures, or even to believe, will be a sin! "Knowest thou not that thou canst do nothing but sin, till thou art reconciled to God?" Sermon on the Righteousness of Faith. Hence arose the Still-Methodists, Jour. iv. p. 92. Even after this celebrated reformer had begun, when almost seventy years of age, to discover "the subtle poison which," he says, (Jour. viii. p. 90,) "has infected, more or less, almost all, from the highest to the lowest among us," it is astonishing that he still acknowledges those who were infected with it, as "the real children of God by faith." "If," says a great admirer of his, Mr. Fletcher, (1 Check, 4th letter,) "the three first propositions of the minutes are scriptural, Mr. Wesley may well begin the remaining part, by desiring the preachers in his connexion to emerge along with him from under the noisy billows of prejudice, and to struggle quite out of the muddy streams of Antinomian delusions, which have so long gone over our heads, and carried so many souls down the channels of vice into the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone." This is then to be the abode of those whom "God has taken out of the world, and who are real children of God by faith!" At least, the man whom they have so eagerly followed as their 'udge has passed this woeful sentence upon them, as if he had a mind to laugh at their credulity. If he join us also in the same condemnation, and say, "I have the same assurance that Jesus is the Christ, and that no Romanist can expect to be saved, according to the terms of his covenant" (Jour. iii. p. 94); we are not sollicitous about his good opinion; we have not chosen him for our judge, nor have his writings given us reason to think that he knew the nature of our covenant. It is the glory and happiness of the Catholic Church, that no one attempts to assail her, but he presently betrays the spirit by which he is inspired, the spirit of calumny, and of the perverse application of Scripture. It was thus that our 21 When thou hast made a vow to the Lord thy God, thou shalt not delay to pay it: because the Lord thy God will require it. And if thou delay, it shall be imputed to thee for a sin.

22 If thou wilt not promise, thou shalt be without sin.

23 But that which is once gone out of thy lips, thou shalt observe, and shalt do as thou hast promised to the Lord thy God, and hast spoken with thy own will, and with thy own mouth.

24 Going into thy neighbour's vineyard, thou mayst eat as many grapes as thou pleasest: but must carry none out with thee.

25 If thou go into thy friend's corn, thou mayst break the ears, and rub them in thy hand: but not reap them with a sickle.

Divine head was treated by the father of lies, who alleged Scripture to encourage suicide, or presumption. Matt. iv. 6. So in the various points of faith which Mr. Wesley attacks, he shamefully misrepresents our doctrine, that he may have something to oppose. We have seen how unjustly he accuses us of idolatry. Chap. xvi. 22. But in order, perhaps, to comfort us with the reflection, that we have many partners in guilt, he represents the Protestants as equally criminal. "They set up their idols in their churches; you set up yours in your heart. . . Oh how little is the difference before God! How small pre-eminence has the money worshipper at London over the image worshipper at Rome; or the idolizer of a living sinner over him that prays to a dead saint." Word to a Prot. How much soever the Protestants may be entangled in this species of idolatry, they do not at least pretend to authorize it by the principles of religion, as some of the Methodists have done. Witness the man with whom J. Wesley conversed at Birmingham. "Do you believe that you have nothing to do with the law of God? He answered, I have not, I am not under the law. . . Have you also a right to all the women in the world? Yes, if they consent. And is not this a sin? Yes, to him who thinks it is a sin; but not to those whose hearts are free. The same thing that wretch, Roger Ball, affirmed in Dublin. Surely these are the first-born children of Satan." Journal vi. p. 133. We may now easily believe to what lengths the dissolute examples and maxims of the heathenish mythology would lead their unhappy votaries, when we behold the purest lessons of the gospel so strangely perverted. H.—Whoremonger. It is very probable that the Scripture here means such as were guilty of unnatural impurities, "consecrated," as it were, to some idol of lust, as these crimes were common under several faithless kings of Israel and of Juda, 3 Kings xv. 12, and xxii. 47. Simple prostitutes are styled zona. C.—God will not allow these to be publicly tolerated, though they contrived but too often in private to ensnare the hearts of God's people, 3 Kings iii. 16. T.—Onkelos translates, "No Israelite shall give his daughter in marriage to a slave, nor take one for his son's wife," as the contract would be null, according to the Rabbins, for want of liberty. C.—He may, perhaps, have given this singular turn to this verse because the preceding one speaks of fugitive slaves.

VER. 18. Dog. Many explain this in a figurative sense, as we have done in the last verse, to denote the public impudence by which some thought to honour their gods. H.—Such impiety the Lord abhors, though practised by all the surrounding nations, as ancient records unanimously attest. How incredible soever it might otherwise appear, that a false notion of religion, joined to a natural depravity, could prompt people to such excesses, we cannot call in question the veracity of so many historians. See Herod. i. and ii. Just. xviii. 5. Euseb. Præp. iv. 6. S. Aug. C. D. iv. 10; and the sacred writers, Bar. vi. 42; Prov. xix. 13. Maimonides thinks that what the strumpet had received in kind, could not be presented, but with the price of it she might buy suitable victims. But Josephus and Philo admit of no such exceptions. They reject all sorts of presents made by strumpets, in detestation of their crimes; and it was probably from the same motive that the Jews concluded it was unlawful to put the price of blood into the treasury of the temple. Matt. xxvii. 6. In the Christian Church, the offerings of public sinners were not received, even to be distributed among the poor. These would not even take an alms from the hands of S. Afra, while she remained a courtesan of Augsburg. Even the pagan emperor, Severus, refused to admit into the sacred treasury the tribute arising from such unworthy means. Lamprid.—S. Augustine, (q. 38,) and others, believe that dogs are not to be redeemed as the first-born of other things are, probably because they were too mean, and the price too insignificant to purchase another victim. But we may adhere to the explication which was first proposed. C.

VER. 20. To the stranger. This was a dispensation granted by God to his people, who, being the Lord of all things, can give a right and title to one upon the goods of another. Otherwise the Scripture every where condemns usury as contrary to the law of God, and a crying sin. See Exod. xxii. 25; Lev. xxv. 36, 37; 2 Esd. v. 7; Psal. xiv. 5; Ezec. xviii. 8—13, &c. Ch.—The stranger means the devoted nations of Chanaan, &c., whom God authorized his people to destroy. "Exact usury of him whom thou mayst kill without a crime," says S. Amb., (de Tob. c. 15,) though this principle will not always excuse usury. C.

VER. 21. Delay, beyond the time appointed. M.—If no time was specified, the vow must be fulfilled without any unnecessary procrastination. See Num. xxx. 2. H.—Vows induce an obligation which before did not exist. W.

VER. 24. Thee. Heb. "thou shalt not put into thy vessel," or basket. This privilege is restrained by the Chal., &c. to vintagers. But Josephus (iv. 8)

CHAP. XXIV.

Divorce permitted to avoid greater evil: the newly married must not go to war: of men-stealers, of leprosy, of pledges, of labourers' hire, of justice, and of charity to the poor.

IF a man take a wife, and have her, and she find not favour in his eyes for some uncleanness: he shall write a bill of divorce,^b and shall give it in her hand, and send her out of his house.

2 And when she is departed, and marrieth another husband,

3 And he also hateth her, and hath given her a bill of divorce, and hath sent her out of his house, or is dead:

4 The former husband cannot take her again to wife: because she is defiled, and is become abominable before the Lord: lest thou cause thy land to sin, which the Lord thy God shall give thee to possess.

5 When a man hath lately taken a wife, he shall not go out to war, neither shall any public business be enjoined him, but he shall be free at home without fault, that for one year he may rejoice with his wife.

6 Thou shalt not take the nether, nor the upper millstone to pledge: for he hath pledged his life to thee.

7 If any man be found soliciting his brother of the children of Israel, and selling him shall take a price, he shall be put to death, and thou shalt take away the evil from the midst of thee.

8 Observe diligently that thou incur not the stroke of the leprosy, but thou shalt do whatsoever the priests of the Levitical race shall teach thee, according to what I have commanded them, and fulfil thou it carefully.

9 Remember what the Lord your God did to Mary, in the way when you came out of Egypt.

10 When thou shalt demand of thy neighbour any thing that he oweth thee, thou shalt not go into his house to take away a pledge:

11 But thou shalt stand without, and he shall bring out to thee what he hath.

12 But if he be poor, the pledge shall not lodge with thee that night,

13 But thou shalt restore it to him presently before the going down of the sun: that he may sleep in his own raiment, and bless thee, and thou mayst have justice before the Lord thy God.

14 Thou shalt not refuse the hire of the needy, and the poor, whether he be thy brother, or a stranger, that dwelleth with thee in the land, and is within thy gates:

15 But thou shalt pay him the price of his labour the same day, before the going down of the sun, because he is poor, and with it maintaineth his life, lest he cry against thee to the Lord, and it be reputed to thee for a sin.

16 The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, nor the children for the fathers, but every one shall die for his own sin.

17 Thou shalt not pervert the judgment of the stranger, nor of the fatherless, neither shalt thou take away the widow's raiment for a pledge.

18 Remember that thou wast a slave in Egypt, and the Lord thy God delivered thee from thence. Therefore I command thee to do this thing.

19 When thou hast reaped the corn in thy field, and hast forgot and left a sheaf, thou shalt not return to take it away: but thou shalt suffer the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow to take it away: that the Lord thy God may bless thee in all the works of thy hands.

extends it to all; and he says that those who did not even invite travellers to partake of their grapes, and other fruit, were to be punished with thirty-nine lashes.

CHAP. XXIV. VER. 1. Uncleanness. Tertullian (c. Marc. iv.) reads, "if she be found guilty of any impurity," negotium impudicum. Sept. "unseemly action;" and many learned commentators suppose that Moses only allows a divorce in cases of adultery, or in those which render the woman dangerous to a family, as if she had the leprosy, or some other infectious disorder, or was likely to corrupt the morals of her children, or if she were barren. The Pharisees were divided among themselves in determining the sense of this law, (C.) and they endeavoured to inveigle our Saviour, by proposing the question to him, If it were lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause, quacumque ex causa, or for any reason whatsoever. Matt. xix. 3. H.—Our Lord does not take notice of the limitation here added by Moses (Matt. v. 31); nor do the Pharisees, when he asks them, What did Moses command you? Mark x. 3. Whence it seems that the liberty which was taken was very great, and that the limitation was not regarded. Our Saviour, nevertheless, alludes to it, when he admits that Moses permitted a divorce in case of adultery. But he recalls them to the institution of marriage, and will no longer allow people to marry again, even in this case, as Moses had been forced to permit the Jews, on account of the hardness of their heart. C.—Before this permission, the Jews were therefore, it seems, much addicted to this practice.—Bill. The law does not command divorces; but in case the parties come to such a determination, it requires a bill to be given to the woman. C.—But it is sinful for them, or for any other, to marry the woman divorced till the first husband be dead. If they do they are guilty of adultery, as our Saviour and S. Paul repeatedly inculcate. S. Aug. de Adult. Conj. i. 11. W.

VER. 4. Defiled. This insinuates that the second marriage was a real adultery, (C.) and only tolerated by the law to prevent greater evils. H.—It might be said indeed that the woman was defiled, with regard to her former husband, who could not take her back without condemning his former proceeding (C.); as he would seem to have only lent her for some mean consideration. M.—But how then is the woman abominable before the Lord? Some say the thing itself is extremely dishonourable, as the Heb. intimates, though the woman have done nothing but what the law allows. God forbids his priests to marry with those who had been divorced, as it is to be presumed that they have not been rejected by their former husbands without great reason. Lev. xxi. 7.—To sin, or to incur the punishment due to it. C.—If the state connived at the transgression of the law, the judgments of God would fall upon the people.

VER. 6. Hire, or the means of supporting himself. H.—The upper millstone was deemed the less necessary. In more ancient times it was customary to dry the wheat by fire, and afterwards to pound it in a mortar. Then millstones were invented, which slaves of the meanest condition had to turn. Pliny (xviii. 10) mentions that some few water-mills were used in his time. But this useful invention had been neglected, till Belisarius restored it again in the fifth century, when he was besieged in Rome by the Goths. Procop.

VER. 7. Soliciting. Heb. "stealing a soul" (M.); or decoying one to a distance from home, where he may have an opportunity of selling him for a slave. H. Exod. xxi. 16.

VER. 8. Leprosy. Do nothing which may expose you to the danger of being infected, and if you have the misfortune to contract it, obey the directions of the priests. C.—It seems from this and the following verse that God frequently punished disobedience to his ministers, as he did Mary, (Num. xii.) by inflicting upon them this shameful disorder. H.—So he punished king Ozias, 2 Par. xxvi. M.—The design of this precept is, therefore, not so much to order people not to contract a disease, which they cannot perhaps always avoid, as to caution them against pride and rebellion. H.

VER. 12. Night, if it be a garment or bed covering, which may be necessary for the poor man. H.—By allowing the creditor to keep the pledge such a short time, God wished to discourage the taking of any from such as were in real distress. M.—The same regulation required that if a necessary implement for labour, during the day-time, was pledged, it should be returned in the morning. C.—This was done every day, to admonish the creditor and the debtor to exercise mercy and justice in their respective situations. The debtor was to remember to do his utmost in order to pay his debts. S. Aug. q. 41.—These daily debts were not remitted in the sabbatic years, according to the Rabbins, whose opinion seems very hard and inconsistent. H.—Solomon advises not to stand bond for another's debts. Prov. xx. 16, and xxii. 26. C.

VER. 13. Justice, or mercy, which never enters the breast of the unjust. Prov. xii. 10. M.

VER. 14. Hire. Heb. "Commit no violence (or fraud) towards an hired servant." Lev. xix. 13. H.

VER. 16. Sin. Judges have no right to punish any but those who have transgressed. C.—God may, for reasons known to himself, which cannot be unjust, visit the sins of the fathers upon their children (Exod. xx. 5); and hence (Jos. vii.) he ordered the family of Achan to be involved in his punishment. Temporal sufferings, or death itself, are not however always a misfortune. They frequently prove a source of inconceivable blessings. Rom. v. 3. H.

VER. 18. This thing. It is uncertain whether this refer to the preceding or 20 If thou have gathered the fruit of thy olive-trees, thou shalt not return to gather whatsoever remaineth on the trees: but shalt leave it for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow.

21 If thou make the vintage of thy vineyard, thou shalt not gather the clusters that remain, but they shall be for the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow.

22 Remember that thou also wast a bondman in Egypt, and therefore I command thee to do this thing.

CHAP. XXV.

Stripes must not exceed forty. The ox is not to be muzzled. Of raising seed to the brother. Of the immodest woman. Of unjust weight. Of destroying the Amalecites.

IF there be a controversy between men, and they call upon the judges: they shall give the prize of justice to him whom they perceive to be just: and him whom they find to be wicked, they shall condemn of wickedness.

2 And if they see that the offender be worthy of stripes: they shall lay him down, and shall cause him to be beaten before them. According to the measure of the sin shall the measure also of the stripes be:

3 Yet so, "that they exceed not the number of forty: est thy brother depart shamefully torn before thy eyes.

4 Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out thy corn on the floor.

5 When brethren dwell together, and one of them dieth without children, the wife of the deceased shall not marry to another: but his brother shall take her, and raise up seed for his brother:

6 And the first son he shall have of her, he shall call by his name, that his name be not abolished out of Israel.

7 But if he will not take his brother's wife, who by law belongeth to him, the woman shall go to the gate of the city, and call upon the ancients, and say: "My husband's brother refuseth to raise up his brother's name in Israel: and will not take me to wife.

8 And they shall cause him to be sent for forthwith, and shall ask him. If he answer: I will not take her to wife:

9 The woman shall come to him before the ancients, and shall take off his shoe from his foot, and spit in his face, and say: So shall it be done to the man, that will not build up his brother's house:

10 And his name shall be called in Israel, The house of the unshod.

11 If two men have words together, and one begin to fight against the other, and the other's wife, willing to deliver her husband out of the hand of the stronger, shall put forth her hand, and take him by the secrets:

12 Thou shalt cut off her hand, neither shalt thou be moved with any pity in her regard.

13 Thou shalt not have divers weights in thy bag, a greater and a less:

14 Neither shall there be in thy house a greater bushel and a less:

15 Thou shalt have a just and a true weight, and thy bushel shall be equal and true: that thou mayst live a long time upon the land which the Lord thy God shall give thee.

16 For the Lord thy God abhorreth him that doth these things, and he hateth all injustice.

17 Remember what Amalec did to thee in the way when thou camest out of Egypt:

18 How he met thee: and slew the hindmost of thy army, who sat down, being weary, when thou wast spent with hunger and labour, and he feared not God.

* A. M. 2553.—b 2 Cor. xi. 24.—c 1 Cor. ix. 9; 1 Tim. v. 18.—d Matt. xxii. 24; to the following law. It may be applied to both, as the remembrance of the Egyptian slavery might teach God's people not to oppress, but rather to show mercy to those in distress. As the same thing is however repeated, ver. 22, it seems more probable that the present verse forbids any oppression. H.

CHAP. XXV. VER. 2. Down, tying him to a low pillar (M. Grot.); though many assert that the criminal was forced to lie prostrate on the ground, as the Jews still do, in Germany, when they undergo this punishment. Buxtorf, Syn. 20.

VER. 4. Not muzzle, &c. S. Paul understands this of the spiritual labourer in the church of God, who is not to be denied his maintenance. 1 Cor. ix. 8, 9, 10. Ch.—Other labourers, and even beasts, must likewise be treated with humanity. It was formerly the custom in Egypt, Judea, Spain, &c. to have a clean spot in the field, round a tree, where, during the heat of the day, they spread the sheaves, and made oxen continually go round, to tread out the corn. Some had the ill nature to muzzle them, or to cover their mouths with dung (Ælian iv. 25); whence arose the proverb, "an ox in a heap" of corn, to denote a miser, who amidst plenty will not eat. Suidas.—Moses condemns this cruelty; as it is not just, says Josephus, to refuse these animals so small a recompence for the assistance which they afford us in procuring corn. C.—Besides this literal sense, God had principally in view the mystical one, which S. Paul unfolds to us. M.—Whether the mode of paying tithes be the most eligible for the support of God's ministers, is a question of smaller importance. It may at least plead a very high antiquity, (H.) as it was in force 400 years before the law of Moses. Abraham paid tithes to Melchisedeck, who was both king and priest.

VER. 5. Together, as the sons of Juda did (Gen. xxxviii. 8); though custom (C.) and analogy extend this to other brothers, at least to those who live in the promised land, and have the inheritance in common, as appears from the history of Ruth, i. 13, &c. Noemi supposes that all the sons whom she might have had would have been under the same obligation towards her daughter-in-law. C.—Half-brothers were included, (M.) and indeed every relation, in order, who, upon the refusal of the next heir, wished to take possession of the deceased person's land. Ruth iv. H.—The Jews no longer observe this law, as they have not possession of Chanaan. Cuneus i. 7.—Pagius asserts that it was neglected after the captivity of Babylon, because the inheritances were confounded. C.—This, however, does not seem to have been the opinion of those who have undertaken to reconcile the genealogy of our Saviour, given by St. Matthew and Luke, by supposing that S. Joseph was the son of Jacob by birth, and of Heli according to the law. S. Hilary. Africanus says (Ep. to Aristides) that "Heli dying without issue, Jacob was obliged to marry his widow, by whom he had Joseph, a descendant of Solomon by Jacob, and of Nathan by Heli," as their common mother, Esta, had married successively Mathan and Melchi, (or rather Mathath,) who sprung from those two branches of David's family. Dupin. H.

VER. 6. Name. Josephus (iv. 8) takes this literally, as S. Aug. once did, though afterwards he retracted that opinion, (B. ii. 12,) on considering that Booz called his son Obed, and not Mahalon, which was the name of the first husband of Ruth. Chap. iv. 17. C.—Houbigant thinks some omissions have taken place in the very short genealogy of David, mentioned in that chapter, and instead of Obed, he would substitute Jachin, as the first-born of Ruth. He thinks that Solomon alluded to two of his ancestors, when he styled the two pillars before the temple Jachin and Booz. "In strength it shall stand or establish." 3 Kings vii. 21. Heb. "the first-born which she beareth shall arise (or succeed) in the name (or by the right and title) of his brother." See Num. xxiv. 3. H.—Name is sometimes put for succession, (C.) or instead of another. M.

VER. 9. In his face, or presence, upon the ground, as appears from the Genarra of Jerusalem. The taking off the shoe was intended to humble him, as well as to show that he relinquished all his claim to the inheritance. Josephus (v. 11) says that Ruth gave the relation, who would not marry her, a slap on the face, or rather, as it ought to be printed, "she spat in his face," which was a mark of the greatest ignominy. Chap. xii. 14; Isa. i. 6; Matt. xxvi. 67. C.

VER. 10. Unshod. Those who have no consideration for their brethren, or for the commonwealth, deserve to be despised. Much more do they who are appointed pastors of the Church, if they do not zealously endeavour to increase the number of God's servants, whom they must attach to him, and not to themselves. Thus the disciples of S. Paul were known by the general name of Christians. S. Aug. c. Faust. xxxii. 10. W.

VER. 16. Injustice. Prov. xx. 10. To have a greater weight for buying and a less one for selling, is the way to grow rich here, or to obtain the manna of iniquity; though, when such mean practices are detected, the man who cheats often loses more than he had gained; and at any rate, must either make restitution, if possible, or receive the wages of his unjust labour and craft in the world to come. H.

VER. 17. Amalec. This order for destroying the Amalecites, in the mystical sense, sheweth how hateful they are to God, and what punishments they are to look for from his justice, who attack and discourage his servants when they are but just come out, as it were, of the Egypt of this wicked world, and being yet weak and faint-hearted, are but beginning their journey to the land of promise.

VER. 18. God. This circumstance is not mentioned, Exod. xvii. 14.

19 Therefore when the Lord thy God shall give thee rest, and shall have subdued all the nations round about in the land which he hath promised thee: thou shalt blot out his name from under heaven. See thou forget it not.

CHAP. XXVI.

The form of words with which the first-fruits and tithes are to be offered. God's covenant.

AND when thou art come into the land which the Lord thy God will give thee to possess, and hast conquered it, and dwellest in it:

2 Thou shalt take the first of all thy fruits, and put them in a basket, and shalt go to the place which the Lord thy God shall choose, that his name may be invoked there:

3 And thou shalt go to the priest that shall be in those days, and say to him: I profess this day before the Lord thy God, that I am come into the land, for which he swore to our fathers, that he would give it us.

4 And the priest taking the basket at thy hand, shall set it before the altar of the Lord thy God:

5 And thou shalt speak thus in the sight of the Lord thy God: The Syrian pursued my father, who went down into Egypt, and sojourned there in a very small number, and grew into a nation great and strong, and of an infinite multitude.

6 And the Egyptians afflicted us, and persecuted us, laying on us most grievous burdens:

7 And we cried to the Lord the God of our fathers: who heard us, and looked down upon our affliction, and labour, and distress:

8 And brought us out of Egypt with a strong hand, and a stretched-out arm, with great terror, with signs and wonders:

9 And brought us into this place, and gave us this land, flowing with milk and honey.

10 And therefore now I offer the first-fruits of the land, which the Lord hath given me. And thou shalt leave them in the sight of the Lord thy God, adoring the Lord thy God.

11 And thou shalt feast in all the good things which the Lord thy God hath given thee, and thy house, thou, and the Levite, and the stranger that is with thee.

12 When thou hast made an end of tithing all thy fruits, in the third year of tithes, thou shalt give it to the Levite, and to the stranger, and to the fatherless, and to the widow, that they may eat within thy gates, and be filled:

13 And thou shalt speak thus in the sight of the Lord thy God: *I have taken that which was sanctified out of my house, and I have given it to the Levite, and to the stranger, and to the fatherless, and to the widow, as thou hast commanded me: I have not transgressed thy commandments, nor forgotten thy precepts.

14 I have not eaten of them in my mourning, nor separated them for any uncleanness, nor spent any thing of them in funerals. I have obeyed the voice of the Lord my God, and have done all things as thou hast commanded me.

15 *Look from thy sanctuary, and thy high habitation of heaven, and bless thy people Israel, and the land which thou hast given us, as thou didst swear to our fathers, a land flowing with milk and honey.

16 This day the Lord thy God hath commanded thee to do these commandments and judgments: and to keep and fulfil them, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul.

17 Thou hast chosen the Lord this day to be thy God, and to walk in his ways, and keep his ceremonies, and precepts, and judgments, and obey his command.

18 *And the Lord hath chosen thee this day, to be his peculiar people, as he hath spoken to thee, and to keep all his commandments:

19 And to make thee higher than all nations which he hath created, to his own praise, and name, and glory: that thou mayst be a holy people of the Lord thy God, as he hath spoken.

CHAP. XXVII.

The commandments must be written on stones: and an altar erected, and sacrifices offered. The observers of the commandments are to be blessed, and the transgressors cursed.

AND Moses,^a with the ancients of Israel, commanded the people, saying: Keep every commandment that I command you this day.

2 And when you are passed over the Jordan into the land which the Lord thy God will give thee, thou shalt set up great stones, and shalt plaster them over with plaster,

VER. 19. Heaven. Destroy him entirely, a sentence which Saul was ordered to put in execution, 1 Kings xv. H.

CHAP. XXVI. VER. 1. It. The land where Moses was speaking, which had been already conquered, was no less under the obligation of paying the first-fruits, &c. than Chanaan, and the parts of Syria which were promised to the Israelites. H.—All the products of the earth seem to have been liable to be offered, (Matt. xxiii. 23,) in proportion as they ripened, at the feasts of the Passover and of Pentecost, (C.) and of tabernacles. M.—Each (C.) landholder, (H.) and even the king himself, was bound to bring his own basket to the temple, and to recite the words here prescribed. The wheat and barley were first winnowed, and the grapes and olives made into wine and oil. Before the offering was made to the Lord no one was allowed to taste any of the produce. Lev. xxiii. 10; Num. xviii. 12, &c. Whether legumes were to be tithed seems a matter of dispute. C.

VER. 5. The Syrian. Laban. Sec Gen. xxvii. Ch.—Heb. "My father was a Syrian, poor, (or ready to perish,) and he went down," &c. The ancestors of Jacob had, in effect, come from beyond the Euphrates, and he had dwelt in Mesopotamia for twenty years. But the translation of the Sept. seems preferable, "My father abandoned (apebalen) Syria." C.

VER. 9. Terror. Sept. "with surprising visions," (Heb.) or "with astonishing prodigies," &c. C.

VER. 11. Feast. The Jews could not yet be required with propriety to raise themselves to delights purely spiritual. Chap. xii. 7. C.

^c Supra, vii. 6.—^d A. M. 2553.

VER. 12. Third. It has been remarked (chap. xiv. 28, and Lev. xxvii. 30) that the Jews gave two tithes every year, the second was for feasts at Jerusalem, or on the third year at home, if there was not also a third tithe due on that year. H.

VER. 13. Taken. Heb. "burnt." C.—I have brought all that was due, (T.) so that no more can be found in my house than what the fire would have spared, if it had been thrown into it.

VER. 14. Mourning. It was then unlawful to taste what was set apart for the Lord, and even to touch a thing, at that time, would render it unclean. Osee ix. 4. Others explain it thus: I have not eaten, how much soever I was distressed; or, I eat it with a cheerful heart. But these interpretations seem unnatural. But the Jews are here taught to refer all such favours to God alone, and they testify that they have taken no part in the superstitious rites of other nations, nor spent any thing in funerals. Heb. "upon the dead." C.

VER. 16. This day. In this last solemn barangue of Moses the covenant between God and his people was ratified. M.

CHAP. XXVII. VER. 1. Ancients, particularly the priests, ver. 9. H.—These exhorted the people to observe diligently what they had all heard from the mouth of Moses. Chap. v. 1. C.

VER. 2. Stones. The Latin translation of the Sam. copy defines the number to be two, (Exod. xx. 18,) and shows that the law, which was to be written upon them, was no other than the decalogue, to which the curses and blessings here recorded have a direct reference. When no number is specified, the dual is com-

3 That thou mayst write on them all the words of this law, when thou art passed over the Jordan: that thou mayst enter into the land which the Lord thy God will give thee, a land flowing with milk and honey, as he swore to thy fathers.

4 Therefore when you are passed over the Jordan, set up the stones which I command you this day in Mount Hebal, and thou shalt plaster them with plaster:

5 And thou shalt build there an altar to the Lord thy God,* of stones which iron hath not touched,

6 And of stones not fashioned nor polished: and thou shalt offer upon it holocausts to the Lord thy God.

7 And shalt immolate peace-victims, and eat there, and feast before the Lord thy God.

8 And thou shalt write upon the stones all the words of this law plainly and clearly.

9 And Moses, and the priests of the race of Levi, said monly understood. H. Lev. xii. 5, &c.—Two large stones would be sufficient to contain the words of the decalogue, and they would more strikingly represent the two tables written with the finger of God. They were probably first polished, and the letters raised upon them in relief, as the Arabic marbles in the University of Oxford are done. The white plaster being then used to fill up the interstices between the letters of black marble, the words would appear very plainly. Kennicott, Dis. 2.—Others think that a high and durable monument was raised both for an altar and for the inscription, though some would allow four others for this purpose. C.

VER. 3. That, &c. Heb. and Sept. "And thou shalt write upon them (stones) all the words of," &c. H.—This law, the decalogue, (Masius in Jos. viii. 32,) or all the laws of Moses, leaving out the historical parts of his work, or the twentieth and three following chapters of Exodus, or the discourses of Moses in this book, &c. Josue, in effect, wrote upon stones the Deuteronomy of the law of Moses, which Josephus explains of the curses and blessings inscribed upon the two sides of the monument, as an abridgment of the whole law. C.—The Jordan is not in Heb. expressly, but in the Sept. After the Israelites had crossed this river, they were thus to make a solemn profession of their adherence to the law of God, (H.) as they did (ver. 12) after they had taken Hai; though Josephus insinuates that they deferred for five years the accomplishment of what is here required. T.

VER. 4. Hebal. It affords matter of surprise to Ludolf, that this barren mountain of cursing (ver. 13) should be fixed upon by God for the erection of his altar and for solemn feasting, instead of Garizim, which is most luxuriant. Reland believes that their very names designate sterility and fruitfulness. But we must observe that the Sam. copy, both here and Exod. xx., specifies that Garizim was to be the place so highly distinguished. Almost all interpreters agree in condemning the Samaritans of a wilful corruption of their text, on this account. But Kennicott adduces several very plausible arguments in their defence, and even throws the blame upon the Jews, who are accused of having taken similar liberties with their text, by S. Jerom.—It is not probable that they would designedly interpolate that very law, which alone they received as of Divine authority among the writings of the prophets. Besides, what interest could they have on this occasion to substitute Garizim? As they had possession of both the mountains in question, if they had known that Hebal had been honoured with the altar, &c., what hindered them from building their temple upon it? What could be the reason why Joatham chose Mount Garizim as the place from which he might address the men of Sichern, to bring them to a sense of their duty? unless because he was convinced not only that Abraham had sacrificed there when he first came into Chanaan, (Gen. xii. 6,) but also that God had chosen it for the place where his covenant with Israel should be ratified, as soon as the Israelites had taken possession of the country. But it may be said all the ancient versions agree with the Hebrew. No doubt those which have been taken from that text agree with it. But the Samaritans have a version in their own dialect, and another in Arabic, both which were in the possession of Walton, who believes that the former "was made not long after the days of Esdras, while the Samaritans and the Jews followed the same religion." This, as well as the Arabic, which is extant in this place, both in its own and in the Samaritan character, all admit the word Garizim; and the Greek version, which some believe was made from the same text soon after the reign of Alexander the Great, (Hottinger,) if it really ever existed, must no doubt have retained the same reading. These versions claim a higher antiquity than that of the Sept. But in reality the versions can prove nothing on either side, in the present case, as the interpolation is supposed to have taken place before they were made, and soon after the building of the famous temple of Sanaballat, which Prideaux places about the year 409, B. C. This temple chiefly enkindled the mortal hatred of the Jews against the Samaritans; and as it was built upon Mount Garizim, they were afraid lest they might from this text conciliate greater authority to that place, and assert that it was the house of the sanctuary, as they afterwards did, having priests of the stock of Aaron, who there offered holocausts, when Benjamin visited them above four hundred years ago. Their claim however was unjustifiable, and their priesthood schismatical. God to all Israel: Attend, and hear, O Israel: This day thou art made the people of the Lord thy God:

10 Thou shalt hear his voice, and do the commandments and justices which I command thee.

11 And Moses commanded the people in that day, saying:

12 These shall stand upon Mount Garizim to bless the people, when you are passed the Jordan: Simeon, Levi, Juda, Issachar, Joseph, and Benjamin.

13 And over against them shall stand on Mount Hebal to curse: Ruben, Gad, and Aser, and Zabulon, Dan, and Nephtali.

14 ^bAnd the Levites shall pronounce, and say to all the men of Israel, with a loud voice:

15 Cursed be the man that maketh a graven and molten thing, the abomination of the Lord, the work of the hands of artificers, and shall put it in a secret place: and all the people shall answer, and say: Amen.

^b Dan. ix. 11.

afterwards chose Mount Sion for his habitation, and revealed his will by his prophets. These the Samaritans ought to have obeyed, as well as the pastors, whom the Almighty had commissioned to determine all difficult matters. Chap. xvii. The text before us decides nothing in their favour. The substitution of Hebal makes nothing against them, much less does it establish the pretensions of the Jews, who, if they had intended to authorize the building of the temple at Jerusalem, ought rather, it should seem, to have written Moria or Sion. As they have not done this, perhaps it may be as well to admit that this variation may have originally happened by the inadvertency or malice of some transcriber of great authority, whose copy being followed by others for some time, without any criminal design, might at last supersede the proper word, particularly when the erroneous reading was become common, and was found to annoy an enemy. Authors of great eminence are forced, at least, to account for many variations of equal importance in this manner. It seems difficult to lay the blame of such mistakes upon a whole nation, which can never be prevailed upon to join in the collusion so heartily but that some man of more conscience than the rest will expose the imposture. When this variation took place, we may well suppose that the copies of the law were not very numerous. After a succession of wicked princes had reigned in Judea, they drew down the vengeance of God upon the whole nation, and almost all were led away captives to Babylon, where they remained seventy years. In this state of confusion, while impiety overflowed the land, how few would have an opportunity or a will to take an exact copy of the law! Some have thought that it was almost entirely forgotten in the days of Joas.

VER. 5. Stones: the same as those which composed the monument, (C.) or rather different from them, (M.) as those were polished, ver. 2.

VER. 6. Polished. Heb. simply, "of whole stones."

VER. 12. Garizim. The children of Jacob, by Lia and Rachel, have the more honourable function of blessing, while those of the handmaids, with Ruben and Zabulon, the first and the last of the sons of Lia, at their head, on Hebal, have to answer to the various curses which were to be proclaimed by the priests and Levites, ver. 14. These were stationed with the ark, between the two mountains; and when they pronounced, for example, "Blessed is he that maketh not a graven or molten thing," &c., those on Garizim answered Amen; and when they turned towards those on Hebal, and said, Cursed, &c., they replied in like manner.—Some think that Levi is placed with the rest only according to the order of his birth, and that Joseph stands for two tribes. Vatab.—Josephus asserts that the whole army was divided into two parts, as well as the tribe of Levi, part of which stood on each of the mountains. Then the tribes on Garizim prayed that God would bless the observers of his law; and those on Hebal answered, Amen; and after they had repeated the same blessings, those on Garizim made a similar acclamation. In like manner they repeated the curses one after another. C.—But this would make both the mountains equal in dignity. He places the altar likewise, with the inscription of blessings and curses on each side of it, in the midst of the valley, or rather nearer to Garizim; as he says it was not far from Sichern, which was built at the foot of that mountain, on the north side, while Hebal lay still further to the north of the city, and being searched with the sunbeams, was rendered fruitless and unpleasant. H.—If Josephus afterwards (Ant. v. 1) say that the altar was on Hebal, we must either acknowledge that his work has been there interpolated, or that he contradicts himself. Kennicott also takes notice of a strange mistake in the grand edition of S. Ephrem, in the Latin translation, by Benedict; which, in opposition to the Syriac, has (ver. 13) "these shall rise to curse on Mount Garizim," though Hebal is universally allowed to have been the mount of blessing.

VER. 14. Pronounce. Heb. "answer," as the older Protestant editions, 1540, &c., had it; though "our last translators, 1613," says Kennicott, "in this, as in several other instances, altered for the worse," shall speak. A select company of Levites in the valley repeated what had been declared from Hebal.

VER. 15. Thing. Protestant, any . . . image. They insert the word any, and translate image, as they almost constantly do where idols are meant, to make the ignorant believe that all images are to be rejected with the utmost abhorrence, as cursed things. Why then do they not observe the injunction themselves? Chap.

16 Cursed be he that honoureth not his father and mother: and all the people shall say: Amen.

17 Cursed be he that removeth his neighbour's landmarks: and all the people shall say: Amen.

18 Cursed be he that maketh the blind to wander out of his way: and all the people shall say: Amen.

19 Cursed be he that perverteth the judgment of the stranger, of the fatherless, and the widow: and all the people shall say: Amen.

20 Cursed be he that lieth with his father's wife, and uncovereth his bed: and all the people shall say: Amen.

21 Cursed be he that lieth with any beast: and all the people shall say: Amen.

22 Cursed be he that lieth with his sister, the daughter of his father, or of his mother: and all the people shall say: Amen.

23 Cursed be he that lieth with his mother-in-law: and all the people shall say: Amen.

24 Cursed be he that secretly killeth his neighbour: and all the people shall say: Amen.

25 Cursed be he that taketh gifts, to slay an innocent person: and all the people shall say: Amen.

26 Cursed be he that abideth not in the words of this law, and fulfilleth them not in work: and all the people shall say: Amen.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Many blessings are promised to the observers of God's commandments: and curses threatened to transgressors.

NOW if thou wilt hear the voice of the Lord thy God, to do and keep all his commandments, which I command thee this day, the Lord thy God will make thee higher than all the nations that are on the earth.

See Lev. xx. 9.—"Exod. xxi. 17, Moses proclaimed, He that curseth his father or (Heb. and) mother, shall die the death." But here he goes still further, and denounces a curse on those who make light of (Heb. mokle, vilipendit) their parents; or, as the Carthusian expresses it not amiss, on him "who does not honour, by showing their obedience in due time, or by not relieving their wants as far as possible; and chiefly, if instead of honouring, he curses and uses opprobrious language towards them." "I have made this remark," says Amama, (p. 376,) "in order to admonish the Germans and the Dutch that this passage has been translated by Luther with too great carelessness, curseth, as if the same Heb. word, moklot, were here used as in the text of Exodus. But those who are not too brazen will confess that the Heb. text, and the more accurate versions, require greater reverence to be shown to parents. Etiā illi judicabunt qui nondum ære lavantur." This author, in his animadversions upon the Vulg., often takes occasion to mention the blunders "of B. Luther," as well as of the Sept. and other interpreters; for he seems to be satisfied with no version which has hitherto been published. H.

VER. 2. All these blessings, &c. In the Old Testament God promised temporal blessings to the keepers of his law, heaven not being opened as yet; and that gross and sensual people being more moved with present and sensible things. 18 Cursed shall be the fruit of thy womb, and the fruit of thy ground, the herds of thy oxen, and the flocks of thy sheep.

19 Cursed shalt thou be coming in, and cursed going out.

20 The Lord shall send upon thee famine and hunger, and a rebuke upon all the works which thou shalt do: until he consume and destroy thee quickly, for thy most wicked inventions, by which thou hast forsaken me.

21 May the Lord set the pestilence upon thee, until he consume thee out of the land, which thou shalt go in to possess.

VER. 24. Consumed. Prot. "The Lord shall make the rain of thy land powder and dust: from heaven shall it come down upon thee, till thou be destroyed." H.—The dust coming instead of rain shall render the land more barren. C.

VER. 25. Scattered, as they are at present. The real import of the Heb. is doubtful. Some agree with the Vulg. and Sept. (H.); others translate, Thou shalt be trembling, an object of astonishment and horror. Others, All who see thee shall quake; they shall insult over thee, wagging their head. C.

VER. 26. Awake. No threat could be more terrible to the Jews. They did not refuse burial to those who had been hung on the gibbet. Chap. xxi. 23. Even the high priest, if he should find a corpse in the field, was obliged to bury it; though he was not allowed, on other occasions, to attend the funeral of his relations. H.

VER. 32 Hand. Heb. also, 'thy hand shall not be lifted up towards God.'

30 Mayst thou take a wife, and another sleep with her. Mayst thou build a house and not dwell therein. Mayst thou plant a vineyard, and not gather the vintage thereof.

31 May thy ox be slain before thee, and thou not eat thereof. May thy ass be taken away in thy sight, and not restored to thee. May thy sheep be given to thy enemies, and may there be none to help thee.

32 May thy sons and thy daughters be given to another people, thy eyes looking on, and languishing at the sight of them all the day, and may there be no strength in thy hand.

33 May a people which thou knowest not, eat the fruits of thy land, and all thy labours: and mayst thou always suffer oppression, and be crushed at all times,

34 And be astonished at the terror of those things, which thy eyes shall see.

35 May the Lord strike thee with a very sore ulcer in the knees and in the legs, and be thou incurable from the sole of the foot to the top of thy head.

36 The Lord shall bring thee, and thy king, whom thou shalt have appointed over thee, into a nation, which thou and thy fathers know not: and there thou shalt serve strange gods, wood, and stone.

37 And thou shalt be lost, as a proverb and a by-word to all people, among whom the Lord shall bring thee in.

38 "Thou shalt cast much seed into the ground, and gather little: because the locusts shall consume all.

39 Thou shalt plant a vineyard, and dig it, and shalt not drink the wine, nor gather any thing thereof: because it shall be wasted with worms.

40 Thou shalt have olive-trees in all thy borders, and shalt not be anointed with the oil: for the olives shall fall off, and perish.

41 Thou shalt beget sons and daughters, and shalt not enjoy them: because they shall be led into captivity.

42 The blast shall consume all the trees and the fruits of thy ground.

43 The stranger that liveth with thee in the land, shall rise up over thee, and shall be higher: and thou shalt go down, and be lower.

Targ. of Jerusalem says, Thou shalt possess nothing wherewith thou mayst render God propitiations. C.—Thou shalt not be able to rescue, (M.) or to assist thy distressed children.

VER. 33. A people. The Gentiles, whom the Jews so much despised, and whom the Scripture styles not a nation, have supplanted the Israelites, and entered into the inheritance, which they had lost by their prevarications. Rom. x. 19. H.

VER. 34. Astonished. Heb. "go mad," become stupefied at such a scene of misfortunes.

VER. 36. Thy king. Nabuchodonosor thus led Joachin and Sedecias, with almost all their people, captives to Babylon. 4 Kings xxiv., and xxv. 7.—Stone. The ten tribes mixed with other nations, (C.) and for the most part followed their idolatrous worship. Only some few returned with the tribes of Juda, Benjamin, and Levi, and became more careful than before not to irritate God by that hateful sin. H.

VER. 37. Lost. Heb. "an object of desolation, a fable and a mockery." Sept. "thou shalt be a riddle, a parable, and an example," to employ the thoughts and tongues of all nations, who will not be able to comprehend the greatness of thy distress. C.

VER. 38. All: so that the little which thou mayst gather will not be worth mentioning. H.—Heb. also may signify, "Thy field shall produce a great deal, and give thee abundant expectations, but the locusts shall consume it," to mortify thee the more.

to him. He shall be as the head, and thou shalt be the tail.

45 And all these curses shall come upon thee, and shall pursue and overtake thee, till thou perish: because thou heardst not the voice of the Lord thy God, and didst not keep his commandments and ceremonies, which he commanded thee.

46 And they shall be as signs and wonders on thee, and on thy seed for ever.

47 Because thou didst not serve the Lord thy God with joy and gladness of heart, for the abundance of all things:

48 Thou shalt serve thy enemy, whom the Lord will send upon thee, in hunger, and thirst, and nakedness, and in want of all things: and he shall put an iron yoke upon thy neck, till he consume thee.

49 The Lord will bring upon thee a nation from afar, and from the uttermost ends of the earth, like an eagle that flieth swiftly: whose tongue thou canst not understand:

50 A most insolent nation, that will show no regard to the ancient, nor have pity on the infant,

51 And will devour the fruit of thy cattle, and the fruits of thy land: until thou be destroyed, and will leave thee no wheat, nor wine, nor oil, nor herds of oxen, nor flocks of sheep: until he destroy thee,

52 And consume thee in all thy cities, and thy strong and high walls be brought down, wherein thou trustedst in all thy land. Thou shalt be besieged within thy gates in all thy land, which the Lord thy God will give thee:

53 *And thou shalt eat the fruit of thy womb, and the flesh of thy sons, and of thy daughters, which the Lord thy God shall give thee, in the distress and extremity wherewith thy enemy shall oppress thee.

54 The man that is nice among you, and very delicate, shall envy his own brother, and his wife that lieth in his bosom, 55 So that he will not give them of the flesh of his children, which he shall eat: because he hath nothing else in the siege and the want, wherewith thy enemies shall distress thee within all thy gates.

56 The tender and delicate woman that could not go upon the ground, nor set down her foot for over-much niceness and tenderness, will envy her husband who lieth in her bosom, the flesh of her son, and of her daughter.

57 And the filth of the after-births, that come forth from between her thighs, and the children that are born the same hour. For they shall eat them secretly, for the want of all things, in the siege and distress wherewith thy enemy shall oppress thee within thy gates.

58 If thou wilt not keep, and fulfil all the words of this law, that are written in this volume, and fear his glorious and terrible name, that is: The Lord thy God:

59 The Lord shall increase thy plagues, and the plagues of thy seed, plagues great and lasting, infirmities grievous and perpetual.

60 And he shall bring back on thee all the afflictions of Egypt, which thou wast afraid of, and they shall stick fast to thee.

61 Moreover the Lord will bring upon thee all the diseases, and plagues, that are not written in the volume of this law, till he consume thee:

62 And you shall remain few in number, who before were as the stars of heaven for multitude, because thou heardst not the voice of the Lord thy God.

63 And as the Lord rejoiced upon you before, doing good to you, and multiplying you: so he shall rejoice, destroying and bringing you to nought, so that you shall be taken away from the land which thou shalt go in to possess.

64 The Lord shall scatter thee among all people, from the farthest parts of the earth to the ends thereof: and there thou shalt serve strange gods, which both thou art ignorant of, and thy fathers, wood and stone.

65 Neither shalt thou be quiet, even in those nations, nor shall there be any rest for the sole of thy foot. For the Lord will give thee a fearful heart, and languishing eyes, and a soul consumed with pensiveness:

66 And thy life shall be as it were hanging before thee. Thou shalt fear night and day, neither shalt thou trust thy life.

67 In the morning thou shalt say: Who will grant me evening? and at evening: Who will grant me morning? for the fearfulness of thy heart, wherewith thou shalt be terrified, and for those things, which thou shalt see with thy eyes.

68 The Lord shall bring thee again with ships into

VER. 46. For ever. The nations which were employed by God to scourge the Jews, recognised that they were the instruments of his indignation. We are accustomed to consider many evils as the necessary appendages of human nature; but the surprising misfortunes with which God visited his people, subjecting them to the Babylonians, Greeks, and Romans, could not be taken in this light. C.

VER. 47. Things: as in gratitude thou oughtest to have done. On the contrary, the more the Jews were cherished by God, the more insolent they became. Chap. xxxii. 15.

VER. 49. Swiftly. The Chaldees are designated in the same manner. Jer. v. 5; Ezec. xvii. 3, 12.

VER. 50. Insolent. Heb. "of a fierce countenance." It is well known how the Babylonians treated the princes of the Jews. C.

VER. 51. Until thou be destroyed. This was not expressed in the Sept.

VER. 53. Womb; a cruelty which the Jews were guilty of in the sieges of Samaria and of Jerusalem. See Bar. ii. 2, 13; Lam. ii. 20, and iv.; 4 Kings vi. 28. Joseph. Bel. vii. 8. C.

VER. 54. Delicate (luxurious), abandoned to his pleasures. Josephus (Bel. vi. 11) seems to have had this passage in view when he informs us that parents and children snatched from each other's mouths the wretched food with which they endeavoured to support themselves. C.

VER. 56. Envy. Heb. "her eye shall be evil towards the husband of her bosom," &c. H.

VER. 57. And the filth, &c. They will eat the child just born, through extreme hunger. Lam. ii. 20. The Chal., Sept., &c. agree with the Vulg., which conveys an idea of the most horrible distress. C.—Indeed it is so horrible and disgusting, that we find no vestiges in history of the completion of the prophecy, taken in this sense. Some, therefore, explain the original, "And her feast, or dressed meat, (shall be) between her feet, even of her own children, which she shall bring forth." Bate, p. 71. Parkhurst on itsoth. The Sept. translate Korion, "the skin," or Chorion, "a little girl," (Houbigant,) unless (H.) the former word may rather have this signification. Hill.—The Arab. deviates a little from the Heb. "She will deny her husband, her son, and her daughter, her secondines, which fall from her." This prophetic and terrible denunciation was realized in the siege of Samaria, when two women agreed to eat their own children, one of whom was actually boiled, and the very word here in dispute is used, 4 Kings vi. 29. Kennicott.—And in the last siege of Jerusalem we read (Joseph. vii. 8) of a mother killing her own child, to satisfy the cravings of hunger and rage against the rioters who had repeatedly plundered her house. Her name was Mary. She also boiled her suckling infant, and actually devoured a part of it. H.

VER. 68. With ships, so that thou wilt have no means of escaping by flight. M.—The Romans had a fleet in the Mediterranean, with which they would probably convey the captives into Egypt. Josephus (Ant. xii. 2, &c. Bel. vii. 16) informs us that many of the Jews had been conveyed into that country after Jerusalem had been ruined by the Chaldees (C.); and after it was at last destroyed by the Romans, some of "those who were above seventeen years of age were sent thither in chains to work at the public works;" others were reserved to Egypt, by the way whereof he said to thee, that thou shouldst see it no more. There shalt thou be set to sale to thy enemies for bond-men and bond-women, and no man shall buy you.

CHAP. XXIX.

The covenant is solemnly confirmed between God and his people. Threats against those that shall break it.

THESE "are the words of the covenant, which the Lord commanded Moses to make with the children of Israel, in the land of Moab: beside that covenant which he made with them in Horeb.

2 And Moses called all Israel, and said to them: "You have seen all the things that the Lord did before you in the land of Egypt to Pharaoh, and to all the servants, and to his whole land.

3 The great temptations, which thy eyes have seen, those mighty signs, and wonders.

4 And the Lord hath not given you a heart to understand, and eyes to see, and ears that may hear, unto this present day.

5 "He hath brought you forty years through the desert: your garments are not worn out, neither are the shoes of your feet consumed with age.

6 You have not eaten bread, nor have you drunk wine or strong drink: that you might know that I am the Lord your God.

7 And you came to this place: "and Sehon, king of Hesebon, and Og, king of Basan, came out against us to fight. And we slew them, 8 And took their land and delivered it for a possession to "Ruben and Gad, and the half tribe of Manasses.

9 Keep therefore the words of this covenant, and fulfil them: that you may understand all that you do.

grace the victor's triumph, or "to be destroyed by the sword, or by wild beasts in the theatres, while those who were under seventeen were sold." 1b. chap. xvii. Pompey had carried away many captives into Egypt about 120 years before. Pharaoh Sesac took and pillaged the city, under Roboam, 2 Par. xii. 2.—That. Heb. "by the way, concerning which I spoke to thee, (that is, by returning back, through this wilderness, as thou formerly desiredst,) thou shalt see it no more." —Set to sale (vendēris), lit. "shall be sold." After the Jews had been sold, their new masters could not find any to take them off their hands. H.—Buy you. Prot. "there ye shall be sold . . . and no man shall buy you." Can a man be sold without being bought? Whereas if the verb vethmocrōthom was rendered, and ye shall offer yourselves to sale, the sense would be proper, and expressive of "the most bitter sufferings. Kennicott.—Hegesippus (v. 47) says, "there were many to be sold, but few purchasers; because the Romans disdained receiving the Jews as slaves, nor were there any Jews left to redeem their countrymen."

CHAP. XXIX. VER. 1. Covenant renewed, and confirmed with an oath, ver. 12. M.—Horeb. Thus the speech of Moses is concluded, (C.) and consequently this verse should be at the end of the last chapter, as it is placed in the celebrated editions of Michaelis and Houbigant. The latter observes that, beside that covenant, &c. shows, that the curses there recorded are not by way of explication of those mentioned in the preceding 27th chapter, "but of a quite different kind. The former are denounced against those who violate the law of the decalogue, which was given at Horeb; neither do they threaten that the chastisements shall be inflicted in this life: the latter maledictions threaten present punishments, and those of a public nature." See chap. xxvii. 26. II.—Josue put in execution in a more solemn manner what Moses here describes, (Jos. viii. 30,) to intimate that Jesus would give the last finishing to the outlines of the old covenant.

VER. 3. Seen. Many who were present had seen the plagues of Egypt, and what the Israelites themselves had suffered in the wilderness. C.

VER. 4. Hath not given you, &c. Through your own fault, and because you resisted his grace. Ch.—If they had not been guilty Moses would never have made them this reproach. "But he shows that they could not understand or obey without God's assistance, . . . and yet if . . . it be wanting, si adjutorium Dei desit, the vice of man is not on that account deserving of excuse, since the judgments of God are just, though they be hidden." S. Aug. q. 50. C.—God sometimes delivers people over to a reprobate sense, and to their own will. Theod. 3. 37. W.

VER. 6. Bread, &c., as your ordinary food, (M.) though they might have 10 You all stand this day before the Lord your God, your princes, and tribes, and ancients, and doctors, all the people of Israel,

11 Your children and your wives, and the stranger that abideth with thee in the camp, besides the hewers of wood, and them that bring water:

12 That thou mayst pass in the covenant of the Lord thy God, and in the oath which this day the Lord thy God maketh with thee:

13 That he may raise thee up a people to himself, and he may be thy God, as he hath spoken to thee, and as he swore to thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

14 Neither with you only do I make this covenant, and confirm these oaths, 15 But with all that are present and that are absent.

16 For you know how we dwelt in the land of Egypt, and how we have passed through the midst of nations; and passing through them,

17 You have seen their abominations and filth, that is to say, their idols, wood and stone, silver and gold, which they worshipped.

18 Lest perhaps there should be among you a man or a woman, a family or a tribe, whose heart is turned away this day from the Lord our God, to go and serve the gods of those nations: and there should be among you a root bringing forth gall and bitterness.

19 And when he shall hear the words of this oath, he should bless himself in his heart, saying: I shall have peace, and will walk on in the naughtiness of my heart: and the drunken may consume the thirsty.

20 And the Lord should not forgive him: but his wrath and jealousy against that man should be exceedingly enkindled at that time, and all the curses that are written both bread and wine on some occasions; as when they adored the calf, &c. S. Aug. q. 51. See chap. viii. 4. C.—Your God, by providing a miraculous food for you. M.

VER. 9. Understand. Heb. "succeed in all your undertakings." C.

VER. 10. Doctors. Heb. ssotrim. Sept. grammaticisagogis, (C.) "officers, heralds," &c. Chap. i. 15; xix. 18, they are translated magistros, "masters or magistrates." H.

VER. 11. Besides (exceptis), which may signify that all were present; c rather that the strangers of Egypt, &c., who were employed in servile offices, were alone excluded, as having no part in the covenant made with the Israelites. C.—S. Jerom seems to have rendered min, præter, in the latter sense; but the Chal., Sept., &c. take it in the former, as if none at all were absent, from the highest to the lowest. M.

VER. 12. Pass; alluding to the custom of people who pass between the victims when they engage in a solemn covenant, as Abraham did, Gen. xv. 10.—Oath. Sept. "imprecations," specified in the preceding chapters. Ver. 14. C.

VER. 15. Absent. Heb. "with him that standeth here this day before the Lord, and with him that is not here with us this day." If all were present, (ver. 11,) the absent must here denote the posterity of the Israelites yet unborn. II.—God made the covenant with Abraham and with his seed before he had any children in the world.

VER. 17. Idols. Heb. "you have seen their abominations and their filth, (or idols,) wood," &c. Sept. "their abominations and their idols."

VER. 18. Bitterness; an Israelite, who cherishes now in his heart any idol, (H.) and who may draw God's judgments upon the people, (C.) or induce them to follow his wicked example. H.—Let all watch over their children, lest they fall off. Chaldee, "Let there be none among you now whose heart may be filled with the sin of pride." See Acts viii. 13, and Heb. xii. 15, where this text is cited. C.

VER. 19. The drunken, &c.: absumat ebria sitientem. It is a proverbial expression, which may either be understood as spoken by the sinner, blessing, that is, flattering himself in his sins with the imagination of peace, and so great an abundance as may satisfy, and, as it were, consume all thirst and want, or it may be referred to the root of bitterness, spoken of before, which being drunken with sin may attract, and by that means consume such as thirst after the like evils. Ch.—S. Jerom seems to have translated soputh by absumat, as the MSS. and interpreters read, before the correction of Sixtus V., who adopted the other signification of the Heb. absumat. C.—The sense however seems to be the same as evil communications corrupt good manners, the wicked draw on those who in this volume should light upon him: and the Lord should blot out his name from under heaven,

21 And utterly destroy him out of all the tribes of Israel, according to the curses that are contained in the book of ^a his law and covenant:

22 And the following generation shall say, and the children that shall be born hereafter, and the strangers that shall come from afar, seeing the plagues of that land, and the evils wherewith the Lord hath afflicted it,

23 Burning it with brimstone, and the heat of salt, so that it cannot be sown any more, nor any green thing grow therein,* after the example of the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrha, Adama and Seboim, which the Lord destroyed in his wrath and indignation:

24 And all the nations shall say: ^b Why hath the Lord done thus to this land? what meaneth this exceeding great heat of his wrath?

25 And they shall answer: Because they forsook the covenant of the Lord, which he made with their fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egypt:

26 And they have served strange gods, and adored them, whom they knew not, and for whom they had not been assigned:

27 Therefore the wrath of the Lord was kindled against this land, to bring upon it all the curses that are written in this volume:

28 And he hath cast them out of their land, in anger and in wrath, and in very great indignation, and hath thrown them into a strange land, as it is seen this day.

29 Secret things to the Lord our God: things that are manifest, to us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law.

CHAP. XXX.

Great mercies are promised to the penitent: God's commandment is feasible. Life and death are set before them.

NOW ^cwhen all these things shall be come upon thee, the blessing, or the curse, which I have set forth before were dry, or thirsty, and superior to the allurements of pleasure, but not quite so sincere and constant as to shut out from their hearts the desire of tasting what the man of the world so highly extols, and thus the just give way to the temptation, and become the companion of the libertine and of the idolater, and of course share in his destruction. H.—Chal. translates, "Let him not say . . . lest he should add sins of ignorance to sins of pride." C.—Sept. "lest the innocent be involved in the destruction of the sinner." Cornelius a Lapide would leave out the negation, and translate, "that the innocent may be," &c. M.—Bonfrere believes that the earth is to be understood; "and the earth drunken or deluged with rain, may take away its former dryness, yet so as to be rendered unfit for cultivation." The proverb affects those who wish for things which will prove destructive to them: so the man who expects to derive great pleasure and advantage from the practice of idolatry will be miserably deceived, and will only bring on his own ruin; or, if his passions be gratified for a moment, he must, if he die in that state, endure eternal torments in destruction from the face of the Lord. H.—The flesh being indulged, presently perverts the understanding. D.

VER. 20. Enkindled (fumes). Lit. "smoke." H.—Heb. "the anger (lit. nose) . . . smoke." The Greeks and Romans adopt similar expressions to denote the wrath and eagerness with which a person is actuated. "Fierce anger always sits upon his nose." Theocrit. So Persius says, Disce, sed ira eadat naso, rugosaque sanna.

VER. 23. Of salt. This salt was of a bituminous or sulphureous nature, which would burn like oil, and was sometimes used in lamps. Herod. ii. 62; Plin. ii. 104. It dried up the moisture of the earth, and rendered it barren. For which reason it was scattered upon such places as were no longer to be cultivated, or inhabited. Abimelech sowed some on the ruins of Sichem. Judg. ix. 45. It seems that Palestine now feels the effects of this curse; as, for the most part, it is uncultivated, and a desert, though once so flourishing. C.

VER. 29. Secret things, &c. As much as to say, secret things belong to, and are known to God alone: our business must be to observe what he has revealed and manifested to us, and to direct our lives accordingly. Ch.—The nations, full of surprise at the miseries which were inflicted upon the Jews, and upon their before thee: and thou shalt be touched with repentance of thy heart among all the nations, into which the Lord thy God shall have scattered thee,

2 And shalt return to him, and obey his commandments, as I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul:

3 The Lord thy God will bring back again thy captivity, and will have mercy on thee, and gather thee again out of all the nations, into which he scattered thee before.

4 If thou be driven as far as the poles of heaven, the Lord thy God will fetch thee back from thence,

5 "And will take thee to himself, and bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it: and blessing thee, he will make thee more numerous than were thy fathers.

6 The Lord thy God will circumcise thy heart, and the heart of thy seed: that thou mayst love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayst live.

7 And he will turn all these curses upon thy enemies and upon them that hate and persecute thee.

8 But thou shalt return, and hear the voice of the Lord thy God, and shalt do all the commandments which I command thee this day:

9 And the Lord will make thee abound in all the works of thy hands, in the fruit of thy womb, and in the fruit of thy cattle, in the fruitfulness of thy land, and in the plenty of all things. For the Lord will return to rejoice over thee in all good things, as he rejoiced in thy fathers:

10 Yet so, if thou hear the voice of the Lord thy God, and keep his precepts and ceremonies, which are written in this law: and return to the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul.

11 This commandment, that I command thee this day, is not above thee, nor far off from thee:

12 Nor is it in heaven, that thou shouldst say: Which country, could not comprehend what might have brought on so severe a chastisement, as they little suspected that it was their worshipping those gods, which they themselves adored, ver. 2. But those who had been converted, and had been able to penetrate the secrets of God, by means of his gracious revelation, answered, (ver. 25, &c.) that idolatry had been the chief cause of such inconceivable distress, and a crime of no less enormity, the refusing to acknowledge the true God, in the person of the Messias, and the putting him even to a disgraceful death, when he came unto his own, (John i.) had served to complete their misery. H.—Moses resumes his discourse, and says that these chastisements had been reserved in the treasury of God's wrath, and he had not denounced them to their fathers; but now, since he had told them so plainly what they had to expect, they would be inexcusable if they ran into the danger. Heb. may signify, "The secrets of the Lord . . . are manifest to us." He has shown us this favour in preference to other nations. Psal. cxlvi. 20. Vatab.

CHAP. XXX. VER. 1. Or the curse. The sequel shows that this would prove their portion, and that they would have to do penance among all the nations. H.

VER. 3. Before. The Jews are still in expectation of this deliverance, as they say this prediction does not relate to the captivity at Babylon. But Neumeias understood it in this sense, (2 Esd. i. 8,) though it will not have its perfect accomplishment till the latter days, when the Israelites will embrace the true faith. Rom. xi. 25.

VER. 6. Circumcise. Sept. "purify." Chal. "take away the folly from." After the captivity idolatry was never very prevalent among the Jews. H.—But this prediction will not be fulfilled till the Jews acknowledge the Messias. C.

VER. 9. Fathers. He will again take a pleasure in bestowing favours upon thee, (C.) of a spiritual and more lasting nature. Hence the Jews may understand that they have not yet repented as they ought to do; since they have been under the wrath of God for above 1500 years. Salien. H.

VER. 11. Above. Heb. "separated. unknown," &c. Sept. "too heavy." S. Paul (Rom. x. 6) adapts this to the Christian law, which is the perfection of that given by Moses. The precepts of Jesus Christ are well known, and easily if us can go up to heaven, to bring it unto us, and we may hear and fulfil it in work?

13 Nor is it beyond the sea: that thou mayst excuse thyself, and say: "Which of us can cross the sea, and bring it unto us that we may hear, and do that which is commanded?"

14 But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayst do it.

15 Consider that I have set before thee this day life and good; and on the other hand, death and evil:

16 That thou mayst love the Lord thy God, and walk in his ways, and keep his commandments and ceremonies, and judgments; and thou mayst live, and he may multiply thee, and bless thee in the land, which thou shalt go in to possess.

17 But if thy heart be turned away, so that thou wilt not hear, and being deceived with error, thou adore strange gods, and serve them:

18 I foretell thee this day that thou shalt perish, and shalt remain but a short time in the land, to which thou shalt pass over the Jordan, and shalt go in to possess it.

19 I call heaven and earth to witness this day, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing. Choose therefore life, that both thou, and thy seed may live:

20 And that thou mayst love the Lord thy God, and obey his voice, and adhere to him, (for he is thy life, and the length of thy days,) that thou mayst dwell in the land, for which the Lord swore to thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, that he would give it them.

CHAP. XXXI.

Moses encourageth the people, and Josue, who is appointed to succeed him. He delivereth the law to the priests. God foretelleth that the people will often forsake him, and that he will punish them. He commandeth Moses to write a canticle, as a constant remembrance of the law.

accomplished (C.) by the sincere lover of justice, (H.) assisted by a powerful grace. S. Aug. q. 54.

VER. 12. Work. There is no need of studying the mysteries of astrology, as the Magi do, to understand the will of God. Grot.—S. Paul adds, (ver. 7,) or who shall descend into the deep? which is not in Heb. C.—But he probably alludes to the following verse, as the sea is often styled the deep.

VER. 14. Heart. Sept. add, "and in thy hands." Thou art often obliged to talk about the law, and to learn it by heart. Nothing hinders thee, with the grace of God, from putting it in practice. C.—No teacher could more plainly inculcate the liberty of the human will. Theod. q. 38; S. Aug. de Nat. 69; S. Amb., &c. W.

VER. 19. I call. He begins his canticle in the same emphatical manner (chap. xxii.) as Isaiah does his prophecy. H.

CHAP. XXXI. VER. 1. Went. Began. M.—"Concluded." Sept. continued, or, just before he dismissed the audience, he spoke to them as follows. C.

VER. 2. Come in, to conduct you. M.—Especially. Heb. "and the Lord." It was not the want of strength which hindered Moses from continuing to perform his arduous functions, as he was still full of vigour both in soul and body (chap. xxxiv. 7. C.); but it was his submission to the will of God, who had resolved thus to punish his former diffidence. H.

VER. 3. Then. This word is not in Heb. or the Sept.; neither does Moses mean to insinuate that God would take his place in conducting the people; but only that after he should be no more the Divine providence would no less watch over his people, and direct the counsels of Josue, who stood beside him. H.

VER. 7. Called. Heb. "unto Josue." He did this publicly, that no dispute might arise after his death respecting the choice of a successor. H.—Lot. Heb. and Chal., "thou shalt put them in possession of it." C.

VER. 9. This law of Deuteronomy. M.—Some think that he had written so especially as the Lord also hath said to me: 'Thou shalt not pass over this Jordan.'

3 The Lord thy God then will pass over before thee: he will destroy all these nations in thy sight, and thou shalt possess them: and this Josue shall go over before thee, as the Lord hath spoken.

4 And the Lord shall do to them ^das he did to Sehon and Og, the kings of the Amorrites, and to their land, and shall destroy them.

5 Therefore when the Lord shall have delivered these also to you, ^eyou shall do in like manner to them as I have commanded you.

6 Do manfully, and be of good heart: fear not, nor be ye dismayed at their sight: for the Lord thy God he himself is thy leader, and will not leave thee, nor forsake thee.

7 And Moses called Josue, and said to him before all Israel: 'Take courage, and be valiant: for thou shalt bring this people into the land which the Lord swore he would give to their fathers, and thou shalt divide it by lot.'

8 And the Lord who is your leader, he himself will be with thee; he will not leave thee, nor forsake thee: fear not, neither be dismayed.

9 And Moses wrote this law, and delivered it to the priests, the sons of Levi, who carried the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and to all the ancients of Israel.

10 And he commanded them, saying: After seven years, in the year of remission, in the feast of tabernacles,

11 When all Israel come together, to appear in the sight of the Lord thy God, in the place which the Lord shall choose, thou shalt read the words of this law before all Israel, in their hearing;

12 And the people being all assembled together, both men and women, children and strangers, that are within thy gates: that hearing they may learn, and fear the Lord your God, and keep, and fulfil all the words of this law:

13 That their children also, who now are ignorant, may hear, and fear the Lord their God, all the days that far before he came to the assembly, as well as the Canticle: because God commanded him the same day to ascend the mount. Chap. xxxii. 48. C.—But Moses did not speak the discourses recorded in this book at one time. After he had, therefore, dismissed the people with his blessing, and with an assurance that God would be with their newly appointed leader, he committed to writing what he had delivered by God's order, at different times, and gave a copy of the Pentateuch to the priests, who were to keep it carefully on the side of the ark, and explain it to the people, particularly every seventh year.—Priests, whose duty it is to instruct the people. Mal. ii. 7. C.—Ancients, or magistrates, who must put the law in execution, and guide their decisions by it. H.—The mention of the ark in this place is to insinuate that the book was to be reposit on one side of it, ver. 26. C.

VER. 10. Years commenced. Heb. "at the extremity of seven years." The sabbatic years began at the expiration of every six years, (H.) after the land of Chanaan was conquered, (C.) or perhaps after the passage of the Jordan, which took place soon after this discourse was made. Josue spent above six years in the conquest of the country, and then divided it among the tribes. The seventh year was the first year of remission; as the Israelites, particularly on the east side of the Jordan, had already enjoyed the benefits of the country for a considerable time. At this time the ark was removed from Galgala to Silo, where it remained about 350 years. Jos. xviii. H.

VER. 11. Thou shalt. Sept. "you shall read." Josephus says the high priest had to perform this office; while the Rabbins assert that the chief magistrate, Moses, and his successors, the kings of Juda, had to read the law publicly. The princes did this in the court of the temple, designed for the women, as they also were bound to hear it. We find that Josias read aloud in the temple the words of the covenant, which had been lately discovered, 4 Kings xxiii. 2. C.—But Esdras, a Levite, did the like (1 Esd. viii. 2); and the command seems to be directed chiefly to the priests, from whose number Moses was not excluded. Psal. xcvi. 6. H.

they live in the land whither you are going over the Jordan to possess it.

14 And the Lord said to Moses: Behold the days of thy death are nigh: call Josue, and stand ye in the tabernacle of the testimony, that I may give him a charge. So Moses and Josue went, and stood in the tabernacle of the testimony:

15 And the Lord appeared there in the pillar of a cloud, which stood in the entry of the tabernacle.

16 And the Lord said to Moses: Behold thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, and this people rising up, will go a whoring after strange gods in the land to which it goeth in to dwell: there will they forsake me, and will make void the covenant, which I have made with them:

17 And my wrath shall be kindled against them in that day: and I will forsake them, and will hide my face from them, and they shall be devoured: all evils and afflictions shall find them, so that they shall say in that day: In truth it is because God is not with me, that these evils have found me.

18 But I will hide, and cover my face in that day, for all the evils which they have done, because they have followed strange gods.

19 Now therefore write you this canticle, and teach the children of Israel: that they may know it by heart, and sing it by mouth, and this song may be unto me for a testimony among the children of Israel.

20 For I will bring them into the land, for which I swore to their fathers, that floweth with milk and honey. And when they have eaten, and are full, and fat, they will turn away after strange gods, and will serve them: and will despise me, and make void my covenant.

21 And after many evils and afflictions shall have come upon them, this canticle shall answer them for a testimony, which no oblivion shall take away out of the mouth of their seed. For I know their thoughts, and what they are about to do this day, before that I bring them into the land which I have promised them.

22 Moses therefore wrote the canticle, and taught it the children of Israel.

23 And the Lord commanded Josue, the son of Nun,

VER. 14. In the court, as none but priests were allowed to enter the tabernacle. M.

VER. 19. This canticle, which will be given in the following chapter. Hence this law, (ver. 9,) may comprise not only what had gone before, but also the remaining part of the book of Deuteronomy. H.—The canticle, containing an abridgment of the book of Deuteronomy, (C.) as the latter did of the whole law, was to be copied out more frequently, (H.) and committed to memory. Some suppose that Moses and Josue are here ordered to see this put in execution. Others think that Moses gives this commission to the priests.—That they. Heb. “put it in their mouths, (C.) that this song may be a witness for me against,” &c. God foresaw that the Israelites would prove rebellious; but he leaves them without excuse, as they could not plead ignorance. H.—This testimony against them was written in the form of a canticle, that it might be more easily remembered. W.

VER. 20. Despise (detrahent), “detract,” (H.) and represent me as an unjust and weak God. Heb. “they will despise, or blaspheme,” &c. Sept. “they will irritate me.” C.

VER. 21. Thoughts. Heb. “imagination.” Sept. “wickedness.”—Them. Heb. “concerning which I swore.” Sept. add “to their fathers.” H.

VER. 23. The Lord. Heb. has not this word, so that it would seem as if Moses had given this charge to Josue; but the context shows (C.) that it was the Lord (ver. 14); for he swore to give the land to Israel. The Sept. insert the words Moses and the Lord. “And Moses commanded Josue . . . the land which the Lord swore.” H.—This is the first time that God addresses Josue, in order to confirm his authority. M.

VER. 26. Side. But not within, (M.) according to the generality of interpreters, whom Calmet follows. Exod. xxv. 10. But here he adopts the contrary and said: Take courage, and be valiant: for thou shalt bring the children of Israel into the land which I have promised, and I will be with thee.

24 Therefore after Moses had wrote the words of this law in a volume, and finished it:

25 He commanded the Levites, who carried the ark of the covenant of the Lord, saying:

26 Take this book, and put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God: that it may be there for a testimony against thee.

27 For I know thy obstinacy, and thy most stiff neck. While I am yet living, and going in with you, you have always been rebellious against the Lord: how much more when I shall be dead?

28 Gather unto me all the ancients of your tribes, and your doctors, and I will speak these words in their hearing, and will call heaven and earth to witness against them.

29 For I know that, after my death, you will do wickedly, and will quickly turn aside from the way that I have commanded you: and evils shall come upon you in the latter times, when you shall do evil in the sight of the Lord, to provoke him by the works of your hands.

30 Moses therefore spoke, in the hearing of the whole assembly of Israel, the words of this canticle, and finished it even to the end.

CHAP. XXXII.

A canticle for the remembrance of the law. Moses is commanded to go up into a mountain, from whence he shall see the promised land, but not enter into it.

HEAR, *O ye heavens, the things I speak, let the earth give ear to the words of my mouth.

2 Let my doctrine gather as the rain, let my speech distil as the dew, as a shower upon the herb, and as drops upon the grass.

3 Because I will invoke the name of the Lord: give ye magnificence to our God.

4 The works of God are perfect, and all his ways are judgments: God is faithful, and without any iniquity, he is just and right.

opinion of Jonathan and Grotius, and asserts that this writing, containing the 29th, 30th, and 31st chapters, on thin boards, was placed in the ark beside the tables of the law, in the same manner as the Philistines placed in it a coffin of gold, 1 Kings vi. 8. C.—This difficulty cannot, however, be now easily decided, as the Scripture often uses the word in to denote near to, &c. ver. 14. H.—Thou. This act of the ratification of the covenant, which had been made at Horeb thirty-nine years before, (C.) was placed in or near the ark. H.—Kennicott thinks that Helcias discovered the very MS. which Moses had written with his own hand, and which he deposited neither in, nor fastened to any side of the ark, but only placed by the side (motod, juxta, Noldius) of it, or upon the same table; so that it might not be taken by the Philistines, but kept in some suitable place. Dis. ii. It is surprising that Huet cites Jonathan as delivering this sentiment, in capsâ ad latus dextrum. H.

CHAP. XXXII. VER. 1. Speak. Heb. and Sept. “Heaven attend, and I will speak.” H.—Never was there an exordium more pompous, or better adapted to the subject. Moses calls those who never die to witness what he asserts, as if to insinuate that these truths ought never to be forgotten. See Num. iv. 6.

VER. 2. Gather, as rain does from vapours (M.); so let the sum of what I have taught you be collected into this short canticle, and penetrate your hearts. H.—Chal. “may my discourse be as delightful as the rain.” Sept. “may my apophthegm (or sententious discourse, C.) be expected with earnestness, like rain,” when the soil is thirsty. H.—Drops. Some explain this and the former term in the original, of “a stormy and vehement shower,” while others attach this idea only to the last part of the sentence. C.

VER. 4. Right. You cannot complain of having been first abandoned by God. All his works and proceedings are entitled to praise. Heb. “This rock, (etsur,) his works are perfect.” C.—Sept. “God, his works are true.” H.

5 They have sinned against him, and are none of his children, in their filth: they are a wicked and perverse generation.

6 Is this the return thou makest to the Lord, O foolish and senseless people? Is not he thy father; that hath possessed thee, and made thee, and created thee?

7 *Remember the days of old, think upon every generation: ask thy father, and he will declare to thee: thy elders, and they will tell thee.

8 When the Most High divided the nations: when he separated the sons of Adam, he appointed the bounds of people according to the number of the children of Israel.

9 But the Lord's portion is his people: Jacob the lot of his inheritance.

10 He found him in a desert land, in a place of horror, and of waste wilderness: he led him about, and taught him: and he kept him as the apple of his eye.

11 As the eagle enticing her young to fly, and hovering over them, he spread his wings, and hath taken him, and carried him on his shoulders.

12 The Lord alone was his leader: and there was no strange god with him.

13 He set him upon high land: that he might eat the fruits of the field, that he might suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the hardest stone.

14 Butter of the herd, and milk of the sheep, with the fat of lambs, and of the rams of the breed of Basan: and

^a Job viii. 8.

VER. 5. Filth, or idolatry. The fidelity of God is contrasted with the infidelity of his people, who deserve not to be called his children. C.

VER. 6. Possessed thee, as his peculiar inheritance. M.—Heb. “has purchased thee, made thee, and established thee.” C.

VER. 8. Israel. He suffered the people of Chanaan to occupy as much land as would be requisite for the Israelites. Sept. “according to the number of the angels of God.” Hence many of the ancients gathered that there were seventy angel guardians of provinces, and as many languages; while others did not pretend to determine the exact number. But the version which they have followed is in opposition to all the rest. C.—They have also disputed, on this occasion, whether the elect will be equal in number to the good angels, as S. Greg. thinks (hom. 34, in Luc. xv.); or they will only fill up the places of those who have fallen. See Mag. Sent. ii. 9. Abenezra observes, that interpreters understand this text as alluding to the dispersion of nations, (Gen. xi.,) when God decreed that the land of the seven nations should belong to and be sufficient for the Israelites. Amama. II.—The Heb. may be rendered, “He fixed the limits of each people. At that time the children of Israel were few in number, (9) when the Lord chose his people,” &c. Long after the division of the earth (which the Lord had ordered, Acts xvii. 26) the Israelites were very few in number, as Jacob observes, Gen. xxxiv. 30. See chap. xxvi. 5; Psal. civ. 9, 12. C.—But this explication does not satisfy Houbigant (p. 76, Prol.) no more than that of Le Clerc. He is convinced that a word has been transposed, and another left out, as the Sam. copy has Israel twice, and he would therefore translate, “He divided his people according to the number of the sons of Israel.” In his eternal decrees, He allotted twelve portions of land in Chanaan to the descendants of Jacob, and these Josue was ordered to mark out for them. See Jos. iv. 5. II.

VER. 9. Lot. Heb. lit. “the cord,” in allusion to the ancient method of dividing lands with a cord. Herodotus (ii. 6) observes, that the length of one, in the Upper Egypt, was 60 stadia, or 7700 paces, while it was only half as much in the Lower Egypt.

VER. 10. He found. Sept. and Chal. “he gave him what was sufficient, in the desert land.” God made choice of a nation destitute of every thing, that they might confess with gratitude that they had received all from him. C.—“Taught him” both by “instructions,” and by various “chastisements.” H.—The space of forty years was necessary (C.) to eradicate the propensity to evil, and the corrupt manners of the Hebrews, who were therefore conducted through a wilderness where they might not be contaminated by the company of other nations, (H.) but might have leisure to meditate on the law of God. C.—Eye, with the utmost care. M.

VER. 11. Shoulders, as (Exod. xix. 4) upon the wings of eagles. It is said that the eagle hovers over the nest to encourage her young ones to fly, and when she sees them exhausted, she takes them upon her back. This similitude shows the extreme affection of God towards his people. Heb. and Chal. may also be, “as an eagle makes (C. or stirs up) her nest, hatches her young, spreads her wings over them, and bears them upon her wings, so the Lord alone was his leader.” H goats with the marrow of wheat, and might drink the purest blood of the grape.

15 The beloved grew fat, and kicked: he grew fat, and thick and gross, he forsook God who made him, and departed from God his Saviour.

16 They provoked him by strange gods, and stirred him up to anger with their abominations.

17 They sacrificed to devils and not to God, to gods whom they knew not: that were newly come up, whom their fathers worshipped not.

18 Thou hast forsaken the God that begot thee, and hast forgotten the Lord that created thee.

19 The Lord saw, and was moved to wrath: because his own sons and daughters provoked him.

20 And he said: I will hide my face from them, and will consider what their last end shall be: for it is a perverse generation, and unfaithful children.

21 They have provoked me with that which was no god, and have angered me with their vanities: and I will provoke them with that, which is no people, and will vex them with a foolish nation.

22 A fire is kindled in my wrath, and shall burn even to the lowest hell: and shall devour the earth with her increase, and shall burn the foundations of the mountains.

23 I will heap evils upon them, and will spend my arrows among them.

24 They shall be consumed with famine, and birds

^b Jer. xv. 14; Rom. x. 19.

VER. 13. High land, in a place of safety, both against the enemy, and the inundations of water. The Nile renders Egypt like one continued sea for about eighty days in summer season. C.—God had already begun to put the Israelites in possession of the fertile countries east of the Jordan, where there were several high mountains. H.—But when this canticle should be recited, in after ages, they would also enjoy the other regions, which had been promised unto them, on the west. Moses speaks, like a prophet, of things to come, as if they were already past. M.—Stone. Bees make honey in such places, and olive trees flourish on the side of a hill. II.

VER. 14. Butter, or “cream,” as the former article was probably not yet discovered. Gen. xviii. 8. C.—The proofs of this assertion, from the original, emath, and from the Scripture, frequently representing butter as a liquid, seem not, however, very solid. See Judg. v. 25; Prov. xxx. 33. The Sept. have lit. “the butter of oxen,” but the latter name includes all of the species. II.—Basan. The Sept. have “the young of bulls and of he-goats;” though they generally translate “fat sheep.” See S. Jer. in Isa. liii.—Wheat. Heb. “fat of the kidneys of wheat.”—Grape. See Gen. xlix. 11.

VER. 17. Devils. Heb. “to the destroyers, or to those of the fields.” See Lev. xvii. 7; Bar. iv. 7, 35. C.—Knew not. Sept. “reverted not.” II.—Heb. may be “who knew them not,” who had bestowed nothing upon them. Chap. xxix. 26.

VER. 18. Created. Sept. “gave thee food.” Heb. “of the rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee, (II.) or praises thee,” the source of thy felicity. C.

VER. 20. From them. The Jews themselves acknowledged, in the siege of Jerusalem, that God had abandoned and given up to destruction his once beloved people. Joseph. Bel. vii. 8. C.—Consider, or look on their utter ruin with indifference, or rather with complacency. II.—I will laugh at your destruction. Prov. i. 16. C.—God loves without seeing any preceding merit in his creatures, but he never abandons them till they have first proved unfaithful. W.

VER. 21. Vanities. Sept. “idols.” H.—Nation. The Gentiles were of this description, when they were called to the true faith. This excited the indignation of the Jews, as they would neither enter heaven themselves, nor suffer others to obtain that happiness. Rom. i. 19. Theod. q. 41.

VER. 22. A fire. He alludes to the destruction of Sodom, (C.) which may be considered as a figure of that which will overtake the whole world at the last day, and exorcise both the souls and the bodies of the reprobate in the flames of hell. H.—Fire also denotes war, the horrors of which overwhelmed the Jews both at the first and the last sieges of Jerusalem. C.

VER. 23. Arrows. Pestilence, famine, war, sickness, and death, are termed the arrows of God.

VER. 24. Birds. This refers in a particular manner to those who are deprived of sepulture, and hung on a gibbet. Chap. xxvii. 26. C.—Bite. Sept. “with a painful contraction of the nerves.” Chal. “infested with evil spirits.”—Beasts. Thus God forced the people of Samaria to obey his law, 4 Kings xvii. 25.—Fury, “venom.” Pagnin. M.

shall devour them with a most bitter bite: I will send the teeth of beasts upon them, with the fury of creatures that trail upon the ground, and of serpents.

25 Without, the sword shall lay them waste, and terror within, both the young man and the virgin, the sucking child with the man in years.

26 I said: Where are they? I will make the memory of them to cease from among men.

27 But for the wrath of the enemies, I have deferred it: lest perhaps their enemies might be proud, and should say: Our mighty hand, and not the Lord, hath done all these things.

28 They are a nation without counsel, and without wisdom.

29 "O that they would be wise, and would understand, and would provide for their last end.

30 How should one pursue after a thousand, and two chase ten thousand? Was it not because their God had sold them, and the Lord had shut them up?

31 For our God is not as their gods: our enemies themselves are judges.

32 Their vines are of the vineyard of Sodom, and of the suburbs of Gomorrah: their grapes are grapes of gall, and their clusters most bitter.

33 Their wine is the gall of dragons, and the venom of asps, which is incurable.

34 Are not these things stored up with me, and sealed up in my treasures?

35 "Revenge is mine, and I will repay them in due time, that their foot may slide: the day of destruction is at hand, and the time makes haste to come.

36 The Lord will judge his people,* and will have mercy on his servants: he shall see that their hand is weakened, and that they who were shut up have also failed, and they that remained are consumed.

* Jer. ix. 12.—b Eccl. xxviii. 1; Rom. xii. 19; Heb. x. 30.—c 2 Mac. vii. 6.—d Jer. ii. 28.

VER. 26. Men. Heb. "I said I will disperse or exterminate them." Samar. "my tury shall consume them." We may translate, "I had resolved to destroy them; (27) But," &c., (C.) or Prot. "I said I would scatter them into corners, and would . . . were it not that I feared the wrath of the enemy," &c.—Where are they? In the mouth of God, shows an utter destruction, so that no vestiges of them remain. Their memory is perished. H.—God sometimes defers punishing the sinner for just reasons. W.

VER. 27. Wrath. The enemies of the Israelites wished nothing more than their destruction. If therefore God had gratified this desire, by punishing his people as they deserved, the enemy would have presently insinuated that He had not been able to drive them out, or that (H.) he was fickle, &c.—Mighty (excellent), "lifted up." H.

VER. 28. Wisdom. Interpreters generally explain this and the eight following verses of those nations whom God employed to scourge his people, though some understand it all of the Israelites. C.

VER. 30. Thousand. In the battles which the Israelites had fought, the hand of God had appeared so visibly in their defence, giving them the victory over nations much more numerous, (C.) that all must confess their defeat must be in punishment of some former transgression, and that it is not the mighty hand of the enemy, but God himself, who elastics his people, as he had foretold. Chap. xxviii. 7, 25, 49. H.—Of this the neighbouring nations were convinced, as Achior declared to Holofernes. Judith v. 17. When the Hebrews neglected the law of God they were oppressed, and their conversion was presently rewarded with liberty, (C.) and a profusion of blessings.

VER. 31. Judges. The Egyptians, Amalecites, &c., had witnessed the miracles which God had now wrought for forty years' time in favour of his people. H.—They knew also how the Israelites had been punished for their sins. M.

VER. 32. Bitter. The enemies of Israel were of an accursed progeny. H.—They imitated the vices of those wicked cities. Moses cautioned his people to beware of the root of bitterness. Chap. xxix. 18. C.—If they should neglect the admonition, and become like the Chanaanites, they knew what they had to expect. H.

VER. 34. Treasures. Whether we refer the preceding remarks to the faithless Israelites, whose corruption was less pardonable, as they had received so many favours from above, or to their proud and cruel enemies, who exceeded the bounds 37 And he shall say: "Where are their gods, in whom they trusted?

38 Of whose victims they ate the fat, and drank the wine of their drink-offerings: Let them arise and help you, and protect you in your distress.

39 See ye that I alone am, and there is no other God besides me: 'I will kill, and I will make to live: I will strike, and I will heal, 'and there is none that can deliver out of my hand.

40 I will lift up my hand to heaven, and I will say: I live for ever.

41 If I shall whet my sword as the lightning, and my hand take hold on judgment: I will render vengeance to my enemies, and repay them that hate me.

42 I will make my arrows drunk with blood, and my sword shall devour flesh, of the blood of the slain and of the captivity, of the bare head of the enemies.

43 "Praise his people, ye nations, for he will revenge the blood of his servants: and will render vengeance to their enemies, and he will be merciful to the land of his people.

44 So Moses came and spoke all the words of this canticle, in the ears of the people, and Josue, the son of Nun.

45 And he ended all these words, speaking to all Israel.

46 And he said to them: Set your hearts on all the words which I testify to you this day: which you shall command your children to observe and to do, and to fulfil all that is written in this law:

47 For they are not commanded you in vain, but that every one should live in them: and that doing them, you may continue a long time in the land whither you are going over the Jordan to possess it.

48 And the Lord spoke to Moses the same day, saying:

* 1 Kings ii. 6; Tob. xiii. 2; Wisd. xvi. 13.—f Job x. 7, Wisd. xvi. 15.—g 2 Mac. vii. 6.

of moderation in their wars, God keeps an exact account of all, and will shortly punish both according to their deserts. H.

VER. 35. Time. Men are eager to punish their enemies, for fear lest they should escape. But God defers his chastisements frequently in this world, designing to make his enemies feel the weight of his indignation for all eternity. How consoling it is for the just to think that they have God for an avenger!

VER. 36. People who have been guilty, that he may spare them when they repent. M.—"He will give judgment in favour of his people," &c. Houbig.—Servants. He will not involve the innocent in the ruin of the rebellious. M.—But, at the same time, he will have them to be convinced that their salvation came not from themselves. He will assist them when all human aid has proved abortive, (H.) and when they are reduced to the utmost distress. See Isa. xxxv. 3; 3 Kings xxi. 21. Those who may have thought themselves secure in their sins will not escape punishment. W.

VER. 38. Wine. Hence the Jews abhor the wine of Christians, whom they consider as the greatest enemies of God. The pagans were accustomed to make libations to their idols even in their ordinary repasts. C.—The fat was always sacred to God. Lev. iii. 17. M.

VER. 40. For ever. God can swear by no one greater than himself. Heb. vi. 13.

VER. 42. Enemies. I will tear the crown from off their head. Chal. I will destroy the king, as well as the meanest captives. Prot. "from the beginning of revenges upon the enemy." At the very first I will completely destroy them. H.

VER. 43. People. Though God afflicted the Israelites for a time, he was always disposed to receive them to his favour again upon their repentance; and he will even receive them into his Church before the day of judgment. Rom. xi. 25. C.—In some editions of the Sept., after Let all the angels of God adore him, (edited Heb. i. 6. Cappcl,) they read, Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people, which S. Paul quotes, Rom. xv. 10; and then they add, "And Moses wrote this canticle on that day, and he taught it to the children of Israel (C.): (44) and Moses came forth to the people, and spoke all the words of this law in the ears of the people; he and Jesus, the son of Nave," by which name they designate Josue, the son of Nun. H.—He assisted Moses in singing the canticle, as his colleague in office, to whom the obligation of withdrawing the people from idolatry would henceforth devolve. M.

49 Go up into this mountain Abarim, (that is to say, of passages,) unto Mount Nebo, which is in the land of Moub, over against Jericho: and see the land of Chanaan, which I will deliver to the children of Israel to possess, and die thou in the mountain.

50 When thou art gone up into it, thou shalt be gathered to thy people,* as Aaron thy brother died in Mount Hor, and was gathered to his people:

51 "Because you trespassed against me, in the midst of the children of Israel, at the waters of contradiction, in Cades, of the desert of Sin: and you did not sanctify me among the children of Israel.

52 Thou shalt see the land before thee, which I will give to the children of Israel, but thou shalt not enter into it.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Moses, before his death, blesseth the tribes of Israel.

THIS is the blessing wherewith the man of God, Moses, blessed the children of Israel, before his death.

2 And he said: The Lord came from Sinai, and from Seir he rose up to us: he hath appeared from Mount Pharan, and with him thousands of saints. In his right hand a fiery law.

* Num. xx. 26, and xxvii. 13.—b Num. xx. 12, and xxvii. 14.

VER. 49. Passages. The author of the Vulgate has given this expliation of Abarim. C.

VER. 51. Cades. Heb. "at the waters of Meriba-Cadesh," &c.

VER. 52. Into it. By repeating this reproach and judgment God excited in his servant the most lively sentiments of repentance for his fault. Num. xx.—Aaron had been deprived of the sight of this delightful country. H.

CHAP. XXXIII. VER. 1. Blessing. The Fathers, S. Aug., (q. 56,) &c., explain this of the Christian Church, rather than of the Synagogue. Theod.—Man of God. A title given to a prophet, 1 Kings ii. 27, and ix. 6. The prophets often speak of things to come as if they were past, as we have seen in the conduct of Balaam. Num. xxiv. 3. Moses here delivers his last testament, and speaks as one no longer in the world, so that there is no reason to affirm that this chapter has been added by another hand (C.): though Kennicott thinks it probable.

VER. 2. Pharan. Habacuc (iii. 3) mentions this apparition. See also Psal. lxxvii. 9.—Saints. God was accompanied by legions of angels when he delivered the law to the Israelites, who are styled a nation of saints. Num. xvi. 3. Sept. "he hastened from Mount Pharan, with ten thousands to Cades. At his right hand are his angels attending." H.—Kodoss does not mean saints, but holiness, or the city of Cades; and the preceding word, which Prot. translate, with ten thousands, more probably refers to another title of the city, as it is specified Meriba-Cadesh. Chap. xxxii. 51; Ezec. xlvi. 28. Ken.—Law. Chal. "from the midst of the fire he has given us a law, written with his own hand." We may translate, "He hath shone from Mount Pharan, and multitudes accompanied him. The Holy One, who hath in his hand fire and the law." See Isa. vi. 3. God conducted his people, like a victorious general, through the wilderness, frequently appearing to them to strike terror into the rebellious. C.—When he first descended upon Sinai, his glory shone on Pharan and Seir, as it were in its progress thither. M.—The law is styled fiery, not only because it was given from the midst of flames, but also because it was to be put in execution with the utmost rigour. H.—But both is Chaldee, and no where else used for the law in the books written before the captivity, nor is it acknowledged by the Sept., Syr., &c. Perhaps it was originally aur, as it is in the Sam. version, "shone forth," conformably to a similar passage, Hab. iii. 4. "His brightness was as the sun, horns, or rather splendours (issuing forth) from his hand," &c. Ken.

VER. 3. People (populos). God loves and watches over all, but particularly (C.) over the nation which he has enosen. Chal. See Wisd. iii. 1; Isa. xlix. 16.—Doctrine. It was formerly the custom for disciples to sit at their master's feet, (Acts xxii. 3,) as it is still in the Eastern countries. Bellon. iii. 12. Sept. "and these are under thee (H.);" subject to thy orders. C.

VER. 4. Moses. He expresses himself as if the people were speaking. The change of persons is very frequent in this discourse.—Inheritance. So the psalmist, (viii. 111) says, I have purchased thy testimonies for an inheritance for ever. C.

VER. 5. He shall, &c. Erit rex, may perhaps be as well rendered indefinitely, "There shall be a king;" or, with the Sept., "And there shall be over the beloved a ruler," as (H.) some understand this of Moses, others of Saul, though it most probably refers to God himself, who gave the law, and was acknowledged, in the most solemn manner, for the King of Israel.—Right. Heb. Issrun, a term which S. Jeron translates, with the Sept., (C.) chap. xxxii. 15, the beloved, as it is supposed to be a diminutive of Israel, to express greater tenderness. Thus Cicero called his daughter Tulliola. H.

VER. 6. Number. This is conformable to the prophecy of Jacob, who deprived Ruben of his birthright, on account of incest. He is even treated with 3 He hath loved the people, 'all the saints are in his hand: and they that approach to his feet, shall receive of his doctrine.

4 Moses commanded us a law, the inheritance of the multitude of Jacob.

5 He shall be king with the most right, the princes of the people being assembled with the tribes of Israel.

6 Let Ruben live, and not die, and be he small in number.

7 This is the blessing of Juda. Hear, O Lord, the voice of Juda, and bring him in unto his people: his hands shall fight for him, and he shall be his helper against his enemies.

8 To Levi also he said: Thy perfection and thy doctrine be to thy holy man, whom thou hast proved in the temptation, and judged at the waters of contradiction:

9 "Who hath said to his father, and to his mother: I do not know you; and to his brethren: I know you not: and their own children they have not known. These have kept thy word, and observed thy covenant,

10 Thy judgments, O Jacob, and thy law, O Israel: they shall put incense in thy wrath, and holocaust upon thy altar.

* Wisd. iii. 1, and v. 5.—d Exod. xxxii. 27; Lev. x. 5.

indulgence, in being permitted to form one of the tribes. Yet some copies of the Sept., Syr., (Theod. q. 42,) and many interpreters, take this in a quite contrary sense, "let him be numerous, or not few;" the negation being supplied from the former part of the verse, which is not unusual in Hebrew. See Gen. ii. 6; Psal. ix. 19; Prov. xxxi. 1, &c. The tribe of Ruben was in effect more numerous than those of Gad, Joseph, or Benjamin. Simeon receives no blessing, probably on account of the crimes for which so many of that tribe were exterminated, (Num. i. 23, and xxvi. 14. C.,) and particularly Zambri, one of the chief princes. Ib. chap. xxv. W.—But Grabe's Sept. applies to Simeon what the rest attribute to Ruben. "And let Simeon be many in number." No solid reason can be given why he should be passed over entirely, as, notwithstanding the infidelity of some of his children, and his own cruelty in not endeavouring to rescue Joseph, &c., he was to form a tribe among his brethren. H.—Some, therefore, imagine that he was to share in the blessings of Ruben, or of Levi, (with whom he is joined by Jacob, Gen. xlix. 5,) or of Juda, near whom he had his allotment of the promised land. Part of the tribe of Simeon afterwards dwelt in the territories of Juda. Jos. xix. 1; 1 Par. iv. 42; Judg. i. 3. But (C.) it is more likely that the name has been omitted or changed in the original, by the mistake of some early transcriber, in like manner as the tribe of Manasses, included in that of Joseph, seems to have been placed for that of Dan, which otherwise would be omitted. Apoc. vii. 6, 8. H.

VER. 7. Of Juda, "when he goes to war, and bring him back in peace to his people." Onkelos.—The general made a solemn prayer on such occasions; and Psal. xix. was composed, and is still used, to draw down God's blessing in times of war. Moses thus clearly insinuates that the tribe of Juda should obtain the sovereign authority, though it would not be without opposition, that Israel would submit to David. He begs that God would remove all obstacles. This tribe was always distinguished for its valour. C.—And he, God. M.—If God be for us, who is against us? Rom. viii. 31. H.

VER. 8. Holy man. Aaron and his successors in the priesthood. Ch.—They were adorned with the Urin and Thummim, which are here rendered perfection and doctrine. C.—Sept. "give to Levi his insignia, (délous,) and his truth, to the holy man, the same whom they tried at the temptation, they spoke ill of him at the waters," &c. It was in consequence of the seditious conduct of the Israelites that the two brothers betrayed a want of confidence in God, and were excluded from the land of promise, as Moses often reminds them. Chap. iii. 26. H.—Temptation. The place which goes by this name is at Raphidim, near Horeb. Exod. xvii. 6. But the word here probably includes all the other places where the Hebrews tempted God, and particularly that where so holy a man as Aaron was permitted to fall. C. Num. xx. 12.—The priesthood is the peculiar blessing and honour of the tribe of Levi. M.

VER. 9. Who hath said, &c. It is the duty of the priestly tribe to prefer God's honour and service before all considerations of flesh and blood: in such manner as to behave as strangers to their nearest akin, when these would withdraw them from the business of their calling. Ch.—Covenant. Priests ought to be more exemplary in their conduct than other men. W.—It is their duty also to instruct others, and to inculcate the observance of the law, as Heb. and Sept. more clearly specify. "They shall teach thy judgments to Jacob, and thy law to Israel." H.—They were appointed judges (chap. xvii. 8, and xix. 17) and monitors. Osee iv. 6, &c.

VER. 10. Wrath. He seems to allude to the action of Aaron, Num. xvi. 46. C.—Heb. has, "incense before thee," (H.) as it is explained by the Chal., Sept. &c.—Holocaust, of flour, &c., colil; that of beasts was styled aulé. See chap. xiii. 16. C.

11 Bless, O Lord, his strength, and receive the works of his hands. Strike the backs of his enemies, and let not them that hate him rise.

12 And to Benjamin he said: The best beloved of the Lord shall dwell confidently in him: as in a bride-chamber shall he abide all the day long, and between his shoulders shall he rest.

13 To Joseph also he said: Of the blessing of the Lord be his land, of the fruits of heaven and of the dew, and of the deep that lieth beneath.

14 Of the fruits brought forth by the sun and by the moon:

15 Of the tops of the ancient mountains, of the fruits of the everlasting hills:

16 And of the fruits of the earth, and of the fulness thereof. The blessing of him* that appeared in the bush, come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the crown of the Nazarite, among his brethren.

17 His beauty as of the firstling of a bullock, his horns as the horns of a rhinoceros: with them shall he push the nations even to the ends of the earth. These are the multitudes of Ephraim, and these the thousands of Manasses.

18 And to Zabulon he said: Rejoice, O Zabulon, in thy going out: and Issachar, in thy tabernacles.

19 They shall call the people to the mountain: there

* Exod. iii. 2.

VER. 11. Rise. The martial prowess of the Machabees, who were of this tribe, was conspicuous. M.—As the Levites had no portion with the rest, but were to live by tithes, &c., Moses begs that God would bless their labours, (C.) and suffer none to defraud them of their right. H.

VER. 12. Shall dwell, &c. This seems to allude to the temple being built in the confines of the tribe of Benjamin, (Ch.) on the northern part of Jerusalem. The southern division of the city was in the territory of Juda; and hence Jerusalem is attributed to both. Jos. xv. 63, and Judg. i. 21. C.—He rest. The temple was situated on Mount Moria, which was higher than the rest of the city, as the head is above the shoulders. M.—Chal. "The majesty of the Lord shall dwell in his land." This was the sure ground of confidence to Benjamin. H.

VER. 13. Fruits. Heb. "for the precious things of heaven, for the dew," &c., so also it has precious, ver. 14, &c.

VER. 14. Moon; both those which are annual, as wheat, and those which come every month. Chal. C.—Both the tribes of Ephraim and of Manasses inhabited a fertile region. M.

VER. 15. Everlasting hills. Chal. "which never fail" to produce an abundant crop. H.—The hills of the Israelites were very productive. But when they rebelled against their God, in very deed the hills were liars, and yielded little or nothing. Jer. iii. 23.

VER. 16. Thereof, whatever the earth can produce, particularly wheat, &c. The fruits of heaven, (ver. 13,) may denote such as grew on trees. C.—Bush; God, who appeared to Moses. H.—Nazarite. See the note on Gen. xlix. 26. Ch.—Joseph was distinguished by God, by his father, and by the king of Egypt, in a particular manner.

VER. 17. Bullock, or cow. Ssur denotes all the species. Chap. xv. 19.—Firstling is likewise often put for the most excellent. Thus "his beauty, like the finest bullock." H.—Rhinoceros, as stronger and more penetrating. See Num. xxxii. 22. C.—Horns designate strength and beauty. Psal. lxxiv. N.—Push, alluding to the manner in which bulls attack their opponents, and hurl them into the air, sparsa ad pugnam protudit arenâ. Georg. 3. C.—Manasses. To these two tribes the blessings of their father, Joseph, belong; and their multitudes shall render them very formidable to the nations around them, as long as they obey their God. H.—The younger brother, Ephraim, is preferred before the elder. Gen. xlviii. W.

VER. 18. Out to sea. C.—The territory of Zabulon had the Mediterranean Sea on the west, and the lake of Tiberias, into which the Jordan flowed, on the east. H.—By the advantages of their situation, and by the example of the Tyrians, the people were induced to engage in commerce, and to study the art of navigation.—Tabernacles. Issachar preferred staying at home to cultivate his rich soil. Gen. xlix. 13. C.

VER. 19. Sands. This blessing chiefly regarded Zabulon, who received the riches of the sea by commerce, bringing home the gold dust which is found among the sand of some rivers. C.—The Sept. render this verse, "They shall destroy the nations, and you shall call thither, and there you shall sacrifice, . . . because the riches of the sea shall suckle thee, and the merchandise of those who inhabit the sea-shore." These tribes greatly contributed to overthrow the army of Sisara beside the torrent of Cisson, which divides their territories. Judg. iv. and v. H.

VER. 20. Breadth. The tribe of Gad, &c. slew or drove the Agarites from their neighbourhood, and seized their country, 1 Par. v. 18, 22. Heb., Sept., shall they sacrifice the victims of justice. Who shall suck as milk the abundance of the sea, and the hidden treasures of the sands.

20 And to Gad he said: Blessed be Gad in his breadth: he hath rested as a lion, and hath seized upon the arm and the top of the head.

21 And he saw his pre-eminence, that in his portion the teacher was laid up: who was with the princes of the people, and did the justices of the Lord, and his judgment with Israel.

22 To Dan also he said: Dan is a young lion, he shall flow plentifully from Basan.

23 And to Nephtali he said: Nephtali shall enjoy abundance, and shall be full of the blessings of the Lord: he shall possess the sea and the south.

24 To Aser also he said: Let Aser be blessed with children, let him be acceptable to his brethren, and let him dip his foot in oil.

25 His shoe shall be iron and brass. As the days of thy youth, so also shall thy old age be.

26 There is no other god like the God of the rightest: he that is mounted upon the heaven is thy helper. By his magnificence the clouds run hither and thither.

27 His dwelling is above, and underneath are the everlasting arms: he shall cast out the enemy from before thee, and shall say: Be thou brought to nought.

and Chal. "Blessed be he that enlargeth Gad," which was verified in Jephtha. Judg. xi. 33. C.

VER. 21. He saw, &c. The pre-eminence of the tribe of Gad, to which this alludeth, was their having the lawgiver, Moses, buried in their borders; though the particular place was not known. Ch.—Prot. "and he provided the first part for himself; because there, in a portion of the lawgiver, was he seated, and he came with the heads of the people," &c. Sept. "And he saw his first-fruits," (the first conquered country of Sehon and of Og,) because there the land of the princes was divided, the leaders of the people being assembled, or who were assembled with the leaders. H.—Gad and the two other tribes petitioned for that part of the country, and obtained their request of Moses. Num. xxxii. 27.—Israel. This is generally understood of Moses; but it may be explained of the tribe of Gad, which complied with the conditions imposed on him, and on his brethren, by the Lord, when he allotted the land of Galaad to them. Chap. iii. 18. C.—Heb. "he executed the justice of the Lord," &c. Sept. "the Lord did justice and his judgment with Israel," approving his choice. H.

VER. 22. Basan. As the Jordan rushes with impetuosity (H.) from Lais, which was seized by some of this tribe (Judg. xviii.); and as a lion falls on its prey from the mountains of Basan, so shall this tribe give birth to Samson, who was stronger than a lion, (C.) and terribly harassed the Philistines. Judg. xiv. 5—14, &c. When the Danites found themselves straitened for room, they sent a colony, (H.) which took possession of Lais, and called it after their own name: one of the fountains of the Jordan was in this place, the other was called Jor, (M.) though the river may have a more distant and obscure source in the lake of Phiala, whence Josephus says (H.) it runs, by a subterraneous passage, to the fountain of Dan. As it then takes its course through the promised land, of which it is the principal river, Dan may thus be said to supply waters abundantly for the whole country. M.—But the Heb. and Sept. have, "he shall leap from Basan," which must be understood of the lion, since the territory of Dan was very remote from that mountain. H.

VER. 23. The sea. The lake of Genesareth. Ch.—South. That lake forms the southern extremity of the tribe of Nephtali. H.—The Mediterranean, and the countries south of Palestine, are commonly understood in this manner, but they cannot be understood here. C.—By means of their neighbours of Tyre and Sidon, (M.) and of Zabulon, who lay on the west, (H.) they would be supplied with all the luxuries of the sea and of the south. M.

VER. 24. Blessed. He alludes to the name of Aser, which has this signification. H.—This tribe had been upon the increase in the desert, (C.) and now comprised 53,000 warriors. H.—The province of Galilee, where Aser dwelt, was one of the most fertile of all Chanaan, and noted for abundance of oil. Gen. xlix. 20. Joseph. Bel. iii. 2, and ii. 22. C.—Oil. So Job (xxix. 6) says, When I washed my feet with butter. M.

VER. 25. Iron and brass, to denote the warlike disposition of this tribe.

VER. 26. Rightest (rectissimi). Heb. issrun, "the beloved" Israel. H.—Thither, as messengers. Heb. "The clouds are in his elevation," like so many steps to his throne. Who maketh the clouds thy chariot, (ascensum tuum), who walketh upon the wings of the winds. Psal. ciii. 3. C.—Sept. "He is the great ornament of the firmament." None is like to him in power and majesty. H.

VER. 27. Underneath are the everlasting arms. Though the dwelling of God be above in heaven, his arms are always stretched out to help us here below.

28 Israel shall dwell in safety, and alone. The eye of Jacob in a land of corn and wine, and the heavens shall be misty with dew.

29 Blessed art thou, Israel: who is like to thee, O people, that art saved by the Lord? the shield of thy help, and the sword of thy glory: thy enemies shall deny thee, and thou shalt tread upon their necks.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Moses seeth the promised land, but is not suffered to go into it. He dieth at the age of one hundred and twenty years. God burieth his body secretly, and all Israel mourn for him thirty days. Josue, replenished (by the imposition of Moses's hands) with the Spirit of God, succeedeth. But Moses, for his special familiarity with God, and for most wonderful miracles, is commended above all other prophets.

THEN "Moses went up from the plains of Moab, upon Mount Nebo, to the top of Phasga," over against Jericho: and the Lord showed him all the land of Galaad, as far as Dan,

2 And all Nephtali, and the land of Ephraim and Manasses, and all the land of Juda unto the furthestmost sea,

3 And the south part, and the breadth of the plain of Jericho, the city of palm-trees, as far as Segor.

4 And the Lord said to him: "This is the land, for which I swore to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, saying: I will give it to thy seed. Thou hast seen it with thy eyes and shall not pass over to it.

5 And Moses, the servant of the Lord, died there, in the land of Moab, by the commandment of the Lord:

6 And he buried him in the valley of the land of Moab, over against Phogor: and no man hath known of his sepulchre until this present day.

7 Moses was a hundred and twenty years old when he died: his eye was not dim, neither were his teeth moved

8 And the children of Israel mourned for him, in the plains of Moab, thirty days: and the days of their mourning, in which they mourned for Moses, were ended.

9 And Josue, the son of Nun, was filled with the spirit of wisdom, because Moses had laid his hands upon him. And the children of Israel obeyed him, and did as the Lord commanded Moses.

10 And there arose no more a prophet in Israel, like unto Moses, whom the Lord knew face to face,

11 In all the signs and wonders which he sent by him, to do in the land of Egypt to Pharaoh, and to all his servants, and to his whole land, 12 And all the mighty hand, and great miracles; which Moses did before all Israel.

* A. M. 2553.—^b Supra, iii. 27, and xxxii. 49; 2 Mac. ii. 4.

c Gen. xii. 7, and xv. 18.

Ch.—Heb. "The eternal God is thy refuge; or, From eternity is the abode of God, or in fine, the protection of the Lord is before, and his eternal arms underneath;" so that nothing can hurt you. C

VER. 28. Alone, without standing in need of the assistance of any other but God. See Num. xxiii. 9. H.—Some of the ancient Germans would have no communication with any other nation; and they depopulated the country around, to keep all at a distance. C.—The Chinese seem to be at present nearly of the same disposition, as well as those who inhabit Japan, &c.—The eye of Jacob. His posterity, by whom he sees the transactions of the world. H.—Heb. the fountain, is taken in the same sense. The country which his descendants enjoyed, was well watered with springs. Num. xxiv. 7.—Dew, it will be so abundant. Chal. The heavens will drop down dew. Chap. xxxii. 2.

VER. 29. Deny thee. Break their word and most solemn treaties. Heb. "shall lie unto thee," which will afford thee a just reason to seize their effects. H.—Somo translate, "the efforts of thy enemies shall be frustrated."—Necks. Thus Josue ordered the five kings to be treated, Jos. x. 24. C.

CHAP. XXXIV. VER. 1. Phasga was the highest part of Nebo, which was a summit of the Abarim mountains.—Dan. All the conquered countries east of the Jordan, as far as the source of that river. Chap. xxxiii. 22; Gen. xiv. 14. C.

VER. 2. Nephtali, from Libanus to the lake of Genesareth. C.—The other three tribes occupied the greatest part of the country southward, as far as Idumea. H.—Sea. Heb. "the sea behind," or to the west; as, in determining the situation of places, the Jews looked towards the east.

VER. 3. South part; the mountains of Judea. C.—Trees. Jericho, (H.) or Engaddi.—Segor was on the south of the Dead Sea. C.

VER. 4. This land, which has been just described, is what God chiefly promised to the patriarchs, comprising the countries on the east, as well as those on the western side of the Jordan. H.—To it. But thou shalt be translated to a better land, the land of the living. Moses was now perfectly resigned to the will of God. Salien.—There seems no reason why Moses might not have written the preceding verses at least, though the names of some of the tribes are mentioned who obtained possession only after his death. As he knew the limits of the promised land, so, by the prophetic spirit, he might know that these tribes would be settled in the country; and he does not mark out their divisions with any degree of precision. In a word, there seems to be hardly a single passage in the Pentateuch which may not have Moses for its author. H.

VER. 5. Died there. This last chapter of Deuteronomy, in which the death of Moses is related, was written by Josue, or by some of the prophets. Ch.—Josephus (iv. 9), Philo, and Origen (c. Cels. 2, p. 95), believe, however, that Moses wrote the account of his own death. See pref. to Deut. H.—Moab, which had formerly belonged to that nation. M.—Commandment. Heb. lit. "the mouth." The Rabbin say God kissed him, and thus released his soul. C.

VER. 6. He buried him, viz. by the ministry of angels, and would have the place of his burial to be unknown, lest the Israelites, who were so prone to idolatry, might worship him with Divine honours. Ch.—S. Michael therefore contended with Satan about his body. Jude 9. Some have maintained that Josue and Eleazar performed these last rites to their deceased lawgiver. C.—But then some men would have known where he was buried. H.—Day. It is pretended that Jeremias discovered the place, 2 Mac. ii. 4, 5. He found, indeed, a hollow cave . . . and so stopped the door. Yet this does not prove that he found the sepulchre of Moses, (C.) who was buried in some valley over against Phogor, but it is not said in a cave. H.—Cajetan infers from the body of Moses not being buried in the mountain, that it was conveyed by angels to some vale, where his attendants could not see him.

VER. 7. Eye. Heb. also, "colour." His sight and complexion were as good as in his youth, though he was 120 years old.—Moved. The rays "of glory never changed," but attended him to the grave. Chal. Heb. "his natural force (and vigour) never left him; or his cheeks did not fall in." C.—The Rom. Martyrology places the death of Moses on the 4th of September, though the Rabbin say he died in the twelfth month. Salien.

VER. 8. Days, as they had done for Mary and for Aaron: (Joseph.) the usual term was only seven days. C.—The Jews would probably have prolonged their mourning for Moses forty days, in honour of the years of his government, if they had not been ordered to cross the Jordan. Salien.

VER. 9. Because. God was pleased to accompany this exterior sign with his blessing. H.

VER. 10. Moses. No prophet ever appeared with greater dignity, in the old law, than Moses. He behaved in all respects as the envoy of God, who has been pleased to give his character and eulogium. Num. xii. 6; Eccl. xlv. 1. His miracles were most astonishing; performed in the presence both of friends and of enemies, not for a short time, but for a continuance of many years. C.—But when we compare Moses with the Messias, his person and law must be regarded indeed as illustrious figures, but infinitely beneath the reality. Moses was liable to failings, which caused him to be debarred from entering the land of promise; and he wore a veil, to show that his law was only the shadow of a better, and that it could bring nothing to perfection. He works miracles in the name of the Lord, and with a rod: Jesus performs all by the word of his own power, (Heb. i. 3.) as the sovereign of the world. H.

THE BOOK OF JOSUE.

This Book is called JOSUE, because it contains the history of what passed under him, and, according to the common opinion, was written by him. The Greeks call him Jesus; for Josue and Jesus, in the Hebrew, are the same name, and have the same signification, viz. A Saviour. And it was not without a mystery, that he who was to bring the people into the land of promise should have his name changed from Osee (for so he was called before, Num. xiii. 17) to Josue, or Jesus, to give us to understand that Moses, by his law, could only bring the people within sight of the promised inheritance, but that our Saviour, Jesus, was to bring us into it. Ch.—The Hebrews, who had been so rebellious under Moses, behaved with remarkable fidelity and respect towards his successor; who, by these means, more forcibly represented the Christian Church, (D.) which will be ever obedient to her Divine head, and observe his directions. Josue had been trained up a long time under the hand of Moses, and God had given him the commission to govern his people, in so public a manner, that no one offered to claim that high and arduous office. In effect, the whole conduct of Josue before and after his exaltation showed him to be the most deserving of command. 11.—Josue, says the Holy Ghost, (Eccli. xlv. 1,) was successor of Moses among the prophets, or, according to the Greek, “in prophecies.” Many explain this of the obligation incumbent on him to continue the sacred history (C.) and revelations where Moses had left off. The last chapter of this book informs us that he did so. Respecting the death of Josue, we may make the same observations as on that of Moses. It may have been written by the author of the Book of Judges. Theodoret seems to have thought that the work before us was compiled out of the public registers, which are quoted, chap. x., under the name of the Book of the Lord. See Num. xxi. 14. C.—The history of Josue sets before us the passage of the Jordan, the conquest of Chanaan, and the distribution of the country. After the pious general had performed all that could be expected from him, after he had twice ratified the covenant between God and his people, and exhorted the latter, with his last breath, to observe an inviolable fidelity to their only Lord, he departed this life in peace, in the 110th year of his age, and was buried at Thannath Sare, which he had built for the place of his abode. H.

CHAPTER I.

Josue, encouraged by the Lord, admonisheth the people to prepare themselves to pass over the Jordan.

NOW^a it came to pass after the death of Moses, the servant of the Lord, that the Lord spoke to Josue, the son of Nun, the minister of Moses, and said to him :

2 Moses my servant is dead : arise, and pass over this Jordan, thou and thy people with thee, into the land which I will give to the children of Israel.

3 ^bI will deliver to you every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, as I have said to Moses.

4 From the desert, and from Libanus unto the great river Euphrates, all the land of the Hethites, unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your border.

5 No man shall be able to resist you all the days of thy life : ^cas I have been with Moses, so will I be with thee : I will not leave thee, nor forsake thee.

6 “Take courage, and be strong : for thou shalt divide by lot to this people the land for which I swore to their fathers, that I would deliver it to them.

7 Take courage therefore, and be very valiant : that thou mayst observe and do all the law, which Moses my servant hath commanded thee : turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayst understand all things which thou dost.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Now: lit. And. Thus the sacred history is connected, the last chapter of Deuteronomy being, in the opinion of many, a part of the work of Josue. H.—Moses died on the 1st of the 12th month, Adar, and as soon as that month of mourning had expired, and the spies had returned on the 4th of Nisan, God ordered the people to prepare for their departure.—Minister. This was by no means degrading. He was designed for the successor of Moses, as Eliseus was to succeed Elias. See Exod. xvii. 10.

VER. 2. Jordan, a river well known, which rises in Antilibanus, not from Panion, but from the lake Phiala, as Herod the tetrarch discovered by throwing some straw into the latter, which passed by a subterraneous passage into Panion. Thence it proceeds to the Semonite lake and to Daphne, where it begins to be called the Great Jordan. Joseph. Bel. iii. 33. Having traversed the land of Palestine in a southern direction, it loses itself in the lake of Sodom. C.—It is a very rapid river, and hence its appellation from irod, or jord, descendit is very probably derived. H.

VER. 3. Moses. Thus the preceding permission, which the Jews extend, as if God had authorized them to conquer the whole world, is limited. II. See Deut. xi. 24.—Their right to the land of Chanaan depends on this grant of God, who is the Lord of all things, and who thus took away all the privileges of the former inhabitants. But the warrant of destruction only regarded the people of Chanaan. Those who lived towards the Euphrates were obliged only to pay tribute by David and Solomon, though their country formed part of what had been promised to the Israelites. They might have possessed all that region, if 8 Let not the book of this law depart from thy mouth : but thou shalt meditate on it day and night, that thou mayst observe and do all things that are written in it : then shalt thou direct thy way, and understand it.

9 Behold I command thee, take courage, and be strong. Fear not, and be not dismayed : because the Lord thy God is with thee in all things whatsoever thou shalt go to.

10 And Josue commanded the princes of the people, saying : Pass through the midst of the camp, and command the people, and say :

11 Prepare you victuals : for after the third day you shall pass over the Jordan, and shall go in to possess the land, which the Lord your God will give you.

12 And he said to the Rubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasses :

13 Remember the word, which Moses the servant of the Lord commanded you, saying : The Lord your God hath given you rest, and all this land.

14 “Your wives, and children, and cattle, shall remain in the land which Moses gave you on this side of the Jordan : but pass you over armed before your brethren, all of you that are strong of hand, and fight for them,

15 Until the Lord give rest to your brethren, as he hath given you, and they also possess the land which the Lord your God will give them : and so you shall return into the land of your possession, and you shall dwell in it, they had proved faithful. The limits of the promised land vary, as they are considered under various lights. C.

VER. 4. Hethites, the most formidable of the nations of Chanaan. Masius.

VER. 10. Princes. Sotrim may denote both judges and heralds, such as those mentioned in Homer, the messengers of gods and men, whose persons were deemed sacred. They bore a wand or sceptre as a mark of their authority.

VER. 11. Victuals. The manna still supplied the army after they had passed the Jordan. Chap. v. 12. But Josue might fear lest the people might not have liberty to gather it in the midst of the enemy's country, or he might perhaps suppose that this miraculous food would be withdrawn as soon as they had entered Chanaan. He therefore takes all necessary precautions, and gets other sorts of provisions in the neighbourhood. C.—Third day, after their departure from Setim ; or perhaps this order was only published when the Israelites were arrived on the banks of the Jordan. C.

VER. 14. Armed before, in order of battle, at the head of the army, and not according to the disposition of the tribes which was observed in the desert. Only 40,000 men were selected out of 110,580, the rest were very prudently left to guard the new conquered country. See Num. xxxii. 17.—For them. Heb. “help them.”

VER. 15. Beyond. The same expression is translated, on this side, ver. 14. Heb. balor means also, “in the passage.” If we have regard to Josue, when he spoke this, he was beyond, that is, on the east side of the river, though perhaps (H.) he might be on the other side when he wrote the history. CHAP. II.

Two spies are sent to Jericho, who are received and concealed by Rahab.

AND Josue, "the son of Nun, sent from Setim two men, to spy secretly : and said to them : Go, and view the land, and the city of Jericho." They went, and entered into the house of a woman that was a harlot, named Rahab, and lodged with her.

2 And it was told the king of Jericho, and was said : Behold there are men come in hither, by night, of the children of Israel, to spy the land.

3 And the king of Jericho sent to Rahab, saying : Bring forth the men that came to thee, and are entered into thy house : for they are spies, and are come to view all the land.

4 "And the woman taking the men, hid them, and said : I confess they came to me, but I knew not whence they were :

5 And at the time of shutting the gate in the dark, they also went out together. I know not whither they are gone : pursue after them quickly, and you will overtake them.

6 But she made the men go up to the top of her house, and covered them with the stalks of flax, which was there.

7 Now they that were sent, pursued after them, by the

VER. 17. Moses. Thus they express their ardent wish that God would extend his protection to Josue. M.—They do not mean to insinuate that they will obey him only as long as he complies with God's law. C.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Sent, or, as many translate, "had sent," as if Josue had dismissed the spies immediately after the mourning for Moses was ended, (C.) on the first of Nisan. On the second day they examined the city, and were obliged to flee in the night. But they only returned to their brethren on the 6th. On the following day Josue gave orders to make all necessary preparations for their departure, and crossed the Jordan on the 10th of the month. Salien. B. C. 1469. —Setim was about eight or nine miles from the river, "or sixty stadia." Joseph. v. 1.—Two men. Sept. intimate that they were young. See chap. vi. 23. H.—Harlot. Heb. zune may also signify an "innkeeper," as such places were under the direction of women, who were commonly of a very loose character. Hence the Greeks deemed it a dishonour to enter into a public-house. Isocrates says that "even an honest servant will not dare to enter into an ale-house, to eat or drink." Athen. Dipn. xiii.—Rahab might have been formerly addicted to pleasure, as the Scripture and the Fathers agree (Heb. xi. 31 ; James ii. 25. C.) ; though she might at this time be very discreet, being awakened by the account of the miracles which God had wrought in favour of his people, who, she knew, were approaching to take possession of the country. H.—With her. They spent the first night in her house, entering the city in the dusk of the evening, so that they had not time to make any observations till the following day. Salien.

VER. 2. By night. Heb. "this night." C.

VER. 3. House. She spoke to them through a window. The messengers did not enter into her house. C.

VER. 4. Hid, or "had hidden," as (ver. 6) she had made the men retire before she spoke to the messengers, and probably before they came to demand them. She felt herself authorized by God on this occasion to abandon those upon whom he had declared war, and who could have derived no benefit from the spies being betrayed to them. H.

VER. 5. At the time, not precisely, as otherwise the men who shut the gates must have seen them, but about that time (C.) Rahab pretends that the spies had left her house, and had directed their course towards the gate, so that she way that leadeth to the fords of the Jordan : and as soon as they were gone out, the gate was presently shut.

8 The men that were hid were not yet asleep, when behold the woman went up to them, and said :

9 I know that the Lord hath given this land to you for the dread of you is fallen upon us, and all the inhabitants of the land have lost all strength.

10 We have heard that "the Lord dried up the water of the Red Sea, at your going in, when you came out of Egypt : "and what things you did to the two kings of the Amorrites, that were beyond the Jordan, Sehon and Og, whom you slew.

11 And at the hearing these things, we were affrighted, and our heart fainted away, neither did there remain any spirit in us, at your coming in : for the Lord your God he is God in heaven above, and in the earth beneath.

12 'Now, therefore, swear ye to me by the Lord, that as I have showed mercy to you, so you also will show mercy to my father's house : and give me a true token, 13 That you will save my father and mother, my brethren and sisters, and all things that are theirs, and deliver our souls from death.

14 They answered her : Be our lives for you unto death, only if thou betray us not. And when the Lord shall have delivered us the land, we will show thee mercy and truth.

15 Then she let them down with a cord out of a window : for her house joined close to the wall.

16 And she said to them : Get ye up to the mountains, lest perhaps they meet you as they return : and there lie ye hid three days, till they come back, and so you shall go on your way.

17 And they said to her : We shall be blameless of this oath, which thou hast made us swear,

18 If, when we come into the land, this scarlet cord be a sign, and thou tie it in the window, by which thou made no doubt but they might easily overtake them. H.—Notwithstanding this officious lie, which is a venial sin, S. Paul and S. James testify that she was justified by her faith in God, and by good works towards these men. See S. Aug. c. Mend. xvii., and note on James ii. 25. W.

VER. 6. There. The roofs were flat in that country, and consequently very proper to dry flax, or "cotton," as Masius understands.

VER. 7. Jordan, where they had probably come over, though perhaps in a boat, (M.) and where the messengers concluded they would have the best chance of finding them, as the Israelites were on the opposite side of the river. H.—As soon as they were gone out of the city, the guards shut the gate, that if the spies should still be lurking within, they might be hindered from making their escape. M.

VER. 8. Asleep. It seems as if the spies had been ignorant of the danger to which they had been just exposed, and had gone to the roof of the house with a design to pass the night in greater security. Rahab perceives, however, that it would be extremely rash for them to continue with her any longer, and therefore she gives them the best advice, to secure their safety by fleeing in the dead of the night, and without further delay. H.

VER. 9. Strength. Heb. "they faint or melt away," deprived both of strength and counsel.

VER. 11. Beneath. This is the confession of a true convert, (C.) inspired by God. H.—For S. Paul commends her faith. Heb. xi. 31. M.

VER. 12. True token, such a one as, when I show it to the Israelites, they may preserve me and mine. She is not content with a verbal promise, she requires something permanent and sensible, as a mark of their mutual engagements, (C.) a token of their sincerity. They afterwards appointed a piece of scarlet to be hung out of the house, where those were to be collected who should be entitled to protection. H.

VER. 16. Days, the remainder of this night, and the day and night following. It is probable that they would travel only in the night time. C.—If they had gone by the high road they might easily have been discovered by the messengers, who would be on their return. H.—But retiring to the mountains south of Jericho, till they had re-entered the city, the spies made their escape. C.

hast let us down: and gather together thy father and mother, and brethren, and all thy kindred into thy house.

19 Whosoever shall go out of the door of thy house, his blood shall be upon his own head, and we shall be quit. But the blood of all that shall be with thee in the house, shall light upon our head, if any man touch them.

20 But if thou wilt betray us, and utter this word abroad, we shall be quit of this oath, which thou hast made us swear.

21 And she answered: As you have spoken, so be it done: and sending them on their way, she hung the scarlet cord in the window.

22 But they went and came to the mountains, and stayed there three days, till they that pursued them were returned. For having sought them through all the way, they found them not.

23 And when they were gone back into the city, the spies returned, and came down from the mountain: and passing over the Jordan, they came to Josue, the son of Nun, and told him all that befell them, 24 And said: The Lord hath delivered all this land into our hands, and all the inhabitants thereof are overthrown with fear.

CHAP. III.

The river Jordan is miraculously dried up, for the passage of the children of Israel.

AND *Josue rose before day-light, and removed the camp: and they departed from Setim, and came to the Jordan: he, and all the children of Israel, and they abode there for three days.

2 After which, the heralds went through the midst of the camp,

* A. M. 2553.—b Supra, i. 5.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Days, in part, as they arrived on the 8th of Nisan, staid there the following day, and crossed the Jordan on the 10th, on Friday the 30th of our April. Thus Christ is said to have remained three days in the tomb, (C.) though he was there only a small part of Friday and of Sunday, and the whole of Saturday. Heb. "they lodged there before they passed over, (2) and it came to pass after three days that the," &c.

VER. 3. Levi. Sigonius thinks that the Caathites performed this office on this as on other occasions. But the Vulgate shows that the priests sometimes carried the ark, perhaps because it was uncovered. Chap. vi. 6; 2 Kings xv. 25. At this period the number of priests was but small.

VER. 4. Space of. Heb. adds, "about . . . by measure." It was not easy to observe the exact distance in a march. This was prescribed both to keep the people at a respectful distance, and also to enable them to see which way they were to proceed. When the priests stood in the bed of the river, the waters rose up like a firm wall on the north side, while those to the south flowed away into the lake of Sodom, leaving about sixteen miles open for the army of Israel to pass on dry land. The soldiers did not approach within 600 paces of the ark.—Before. This insinuated that they would pass over in a miraculous manner; though perhaps Josue did not know by what means God would enable them to cross (C.) the overflowing waters.—And take, &c. Heb. places these words at the beginning of the sentence, after cubits. H.

VER. 6. Commands. Josue was only the organ of God, (C.) whose orders he announces to the sacred ministers (ver. 8, M.); though, as a civil magistrate, he was bound to hear and to obey them in matters of religion. C.—When he ordered circumcision to be administered, when he blessed the multitude, and ratified the covenant between God and the people, (chap. v. and xxiv., &c.,) he did nothing but what a virtuous governor ought to do; yet he did not these things by virtue of his civil jurisdiction, or in opposition to the spiritual authority of Eleazar. Moses had been the supreme head, being both priest and king. But only part of his glory was communicated to Josue; while Eleazar was directed to consult the Lord for him, (Num. xxvii. 21; Theod. q. 48, in Num.,) Josue was to govern at his word, so that he was bound to consider the high priest as his superior. What he therefore did was in subordination and conformity to the will of Eleazar and of God, and not designed to show that the priestly authority belonged to himself, as English Protestants would hence infer. The best of princes, both in the Old and New Testament, have always looked upon it as a part of their duty to promote the true religion. W.—Constantine ratified the judgment passed already by the bishops in the cause of Cecilian, though he confessed at the same time that the determination did not belong to his tribunal (W.); and he greatly disapproved of the conduct of the Donatists, who appealed

3 And began to proclaim: When you shall see the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God, and the priests of the race of Levi carrying it, rise you up also, and follow them as they go before:

4 And let there be between you and the ark the space of two thousand cubits: that you may see it afar off, and know which way you must go: for you have not gone this way before: and take care you come not near the ark.

5 And Josue said to the people: Be ye sanctified: for to-morrow the Lord will do wonders among you.

6 And he said to the priests: Take up the ark of the covenant, and go before the people. And they obeyed his commands, and took it up, and walked before them.

7 And the Lord said to Josue: This day will I begin to exalt thee before Israel: that they may know that as I was with Moses, so I am with thee also.

8 And do thou command the priests, that carry the ark of the covenant, and say to them: When you shall have entered into part of the water of the Jordan, stand in it.

9 And Josue said to the children of Israel: Come hither, and hear the word of the Lord your God.

10 And again he said: By this you shall know, that the Lord, the living God, is in the midst of you, and that he shall destroy, before your sight, the Chanaanite and the Hethite, the Hevite and the Pherezite, the Gergesite also, and the Jebusite, and the Amorrite.

11 Behold, the ark of the covenant of the Lord of all the earth shall go before you into the Jordan.

12 Prepare ye twelve men of the tribes of Israel, one of every tribe.

to him, as the heathens might have done to an emperor, who was at the same time one of their high priests. II.—O rabida furoris audacia, said he, sicut in causis gentilium fieri solet, appellationem interposuerunt. 1. Optat. c. Parm. 1. S. Aug. ep. 166. Other emperors and kings have acquired great fame on account of their labours and zeal in defence of the Church. Thus the kings of Spain and of France have obtained the titles of Catholic and Most Christian, and our Henry VIII. was honoured by Pope Leo X. with the title of Defender of the Faith, in 1521, (W.) on account of the book which he presented to that pontiff, while he was yet an obedient son of the Catholic Church, and undertook to defend her faith on the sacraments, against the objections of Luther. Is this the faith which the kings of England defend at present? Whatever the princes might do in the old law in spiritual matters, no inference can be drawn for the same right being now exercised by civil magistrates, how supreme soever in their own sphere. The kingdom of Christ is not of this world; neither did he appoint kings to be the pastors of his Church. II.

VER. 7. Also. Grotius remarks that God made known his choice of the governors of his people by miracles till the days of Saul. In effect we hardly find any, before that time, whose public authority was not sanctioned by some prodigy. C.

VER. 8. It. Heb. "when you shall have come to the brink (or extremity) of the water of Jordan, you shall stand still in the Jordan," (H.) which some explain by saying that they were to stop on the eastern bank, as soon as they had wet their feet, (Scrarius,) while others say they crossed quite over, and stood at the other side. Masius.—But it is more probable, that as soon as they had touched the waters, the priests halted till the bed of the river was presently dried up, and then they placed themselves in the middle of it, close to the raging billows, which, rising up like mountains, were stopped in their career, (H.) and forced to retire backwards to their source, ver. 15—17; chap. iv. 9. Bouffere. A. Lap.—Some translate, "into the division," instead of part, or extremity. C.

VER. 10. Living God, in opposition to the idols of the Gentiles, who were dead men, or at least incapable of affording any assistance to their votaries. Josue gives the people two signs of the Divine protection, the destruction of the devoted nations, and the miraculous division of the Jordan, or rather the latter prodigy would be an earnest of the former event; and all, both friends and enemies, might be convinced that the Lord was with his people and their present leader, as he had been with Moses. No miracle could have been more suitable for the occasion, none more convincing or useful. C.—Destroy. Heb. "dispossess, or drive out before you the Chanaanite," &c. These seven nations comprised the ten which are mentioned, Gen. xv. 19. The Chanaanite occupied the countries chiefly about Tyre, while the Hethite dwelt in the southern part of Palestine. The 13 And when the priests, that carry the ark of the Lord the God of the whole earth, shall set the soles of their feet in the waters of the Jordan, the waters that are beneath shall run down and go off: and those that come from above, shall stand together upon a heap.

14 So the people went out of their tents, to pass over the Jordan: and the priests that carried the ark of the covenant, went on before them.

15 And as soon as they came into the Jordan, and their feet were dipped in part of the water, (now the Jordan, "it being harvest time, had filled the banks of its channel,")

16 The waters that came down from above stood in one place, and swelling up like a mountain, were seen afar off, from the city that is called Adom, to the place of Sarthan: but those that were beneath, ran down into the sea of the wilderness, (which now is called the Dead Sea,) until they wholly failed.

17 And the people marched over against Jericho: and the priests that carried the ark of the covenant of the Lord, stood girded upon the dry ground in the midst of the Jordan, and all the people passed over, through the channel that was dried up.

CHAP. IV.

Twelve stones are taken out of the river, to be set up for a monument of the miracle: and other twelve are placed in the midst of the river.

AND when they were passed over, the Lord said to Josue:

2 Choose twelve men, one of every tribe:

3 And command them to take out of the midst of the Jordan, where the feet of the priests stood, twelve very hard stones, which you shall set in the place of the camp, where you shall pitch your tents this night.

4 And Josue called twelve men, whom he had chosen out of the children of Israel, one out of every tribe,

* Eccli. xxiv. 36.

Hevite possessed Mount Hermon, Garizim, &c. The Pherezite were not perhaps a separate people, but employed in cultivating the country. The Gergesite was fixed to the east of the lake of Genesareth, the Sebusite at Jerusalem, and the Amorrhite about the Dead Sea. C.—But they were often mixed with one another, so that their limits cannot be ascertained with any degree of precision. II.

VER. 13. Heap. Heb. "the waters of the Jordan shall be cut off: the waters that come down from above, even they shall stand as upon a heap," like mountains of ice. The Vulg. informs us what became of the waters (II.) below this division. Where it took place we do not find recorded, so that we cannot know exactly how large a space would be left dry. Calmet allows "near six leagues," ver. 4, and 16. But here, supposing that the Jordan was divided over against Jericho, he says that "the waters running off into the Dead Sea, would, in all probability, leave not less than two or three thousand paces of the channel dry."

VER. 15. Water. Thus they manifested the strength of their faith. C.—Channel. The barley harvest was ready about the 30th of April. Lev. xxiii. 10. On other occasions this overflowing of the Jordan is noticed, 1 Par. xii. 15; Eccli. xxiv. 36.

VER. 16. Mountain. Heb. "heap or bottle." The billows were forced to roll back almost as far as the lake of Genesareth, where Sarthan stands, about twenty leagues above Jericho.—Sarthan. Heb. "rose up on a heap, very far" (or to) the city of Adom, that is beside Sarthan." The situation of Adom can only be ascertained by that of Sarthan, which was near Bethsan, or Scythopolis, (3 Kings iv. 12,) in the vale of Jezreel, on the Jordan. Many copies of the Sept. read Cariathiarim, though it was six or seven leagues up the country, west of Jericho. C.—The swelling billows might perhaps be seen from this place. H.—But it could not properly determine how far the waters rolled back. C.—Failed. Heb. "and those that came down towards the sea of the plain, (or of Araba, which means a desert, fit only for pasturage,) the salt sea, failed, were cut off" from the waters above Jericho.

VER. 17. Jericho, at Bethabara, which was five or six leagues from the Dead Sea, all which space was left dry. Jericho was three leagues from the Jordan. C.—Girded. Sept. "ready," preparing the way for all the army. Heb. "firm," and undaunted. H.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Over. Heb. and Sept. "clean, or entirely;" perhaps

5 And he said to them: Go before the ark of the Lord your God to the midst of the Jordan, and carry from thence every man a stone on your shoulders, according to the number of the children of Israel,

6 That it may be a sign among you: and when your children shall ask you to-morrow, saying: What mean these stones?

7 You shall answer them: The waters of the Jordan ran off before the ark of the covenant of the Lord, when it passed over the same: therefore were these stones set for a monument of the children of Israel for ever.

8 The children of Israel therefore did as Josue commanded them, carrying out of the channel of the Jordan twelve stones, as the Lord had commanded him, according to the number of the children of Israel, unto the place wherein they camped, and there they set them.

9 And Josue put other twelve stones in the midst of the channel of the Jordan, where the priests stood, that carried the ark of the covenant: and they are there until this present day.

10 Now the priests that carried the ark, stood in the midst of the Jordan, till all things were accomplished, which the Lord had commanded Josue to speak to the people, and Moses had said to him. And the people made haste, and passed over.

11 And when they had all passed over, the ark also of the Lord passed over, and the priests went before the people.

12 The children of Ruben also, and Gad, and half the tribe of Manasses, went armed before the children of Israel, as Moses had commanded them.

13 And forty thousand fighting men by their troops and bands, marched through the plains and fields of the city of Jericho.

two million people, with all their possessions, had crossed the river on that day the tenth of Nisan, leaving many of their brethren to cultivate and defend the eastern parts of the Jordan. H.

VER. 2. Choose. Heb. "take," as chap. iii. 12. Those twelve men were ordered to attend the ark, and to observe the miracle with care: these are chosen to carry the stones for the monuments. Salien.—Calmet supposes that they are the same people, and that the former verse might be translated, "the Lord had said." But this does not agree with the context. Heb. "and it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed over Jordan, that the Lord spake." The former injunction was given before they entered the river. Heb. "The ark passeth. . . Now therefore take," &c. II.—One was selected from the tribe of Levi, and one from that of Joseph, so that all the twelve tribes were represented. M.

VER. 9. Day. Some hence infer that Josue did not write this book. But surely if he wrote it towards the end of his life, he might well use this expression, (M.) as S. Matthew does to denote a shorter term. The twelve stones at Galgal, and in the bed of the Jordan, at Bethabara, (H.) were probably each placed apart. See Exod. xxiv. 4. M.—They were still to be seen in the days of S. Jerom.

VER. 10. To him. Moses had been dead forty days. But it seems this miraculous division of the Jordan had been revealed to him, and he had cautioned Josue to let slip no opportunity of attaching the people to God's service, by erecting monuments of religion, as he did on this occasion. C.

VER. 11. People, who passed over 2000 cubits lower down, and always kept the same distance, till they arrived at Galgal. C.

VER. 13. Bands. Heb. "prepared for war passed over, before the Lord, unto battle, to the plains of Jericho." H.—These formed the van-guard.—Plains. Heb. araboth, which is translated desert. Jer. lii. 8. A large plain, fit for pasturage, extended from the city to the Jordan, on the east side. C.

VER. 14. In, &c. Josue recapitulates how this miracle established his authority, and how he was ordered to command the priests to come up from the midst of the Jordan, after the people had all got to the other side, and the stones were fixed to denote where the ark had stood, like a wall, to hinder the waters from rushing down. H.

of all Israel, that they should fear him, as they had feared Moses, while he lived.

15 And he said to him :

16 Command the priests, that carry the ark of the covenant, to come up out of the Jordan.

17 And he commanded them, saying : Come ye up out of the Jordan.

18 And when they that carried the ark of the covenant of the Lord were come up, and began to tread on the dry ground, the waters returned into their channel, and ran as they were wont before.

19 And the people came up out of the Jordan, the tenth day of the first month, and camped in Galgal, over against the east side of the city of Jericho.

20 And the twelve stones, which they had taken out of the channel of the Jordan, Josue pitched in Galgal, 21 And said to the children of Israel : When your children shall ask their fathers to-morrow, and shall say to them : What mean these stones ?

22 You shall teach them, and say : Israel passed over his Jordan through the dry channel,

23 The Lord your God drying up the waters thereof in your sight, until you passed over :

24 "As he had done before in the Red Sea, which he dried up till we passed through :

25 That all the people of the earth may learn the most mighty hand of the Lord, that you also may fear the Lord your God for ever.

CHAP. V.

The people are circumcised : they keep the Pasch. The manna ceaseth. An angel appeareth to Josue.

NOW when all the kings of the Amorrites, who dwelt beyond the Jordan, westward, and all the kings of Chanaan, who possessed the places near the great sea, had heard that the Lord had dried up the waters of a Exod. xiv. 21.

VER. 19. Month of the ecclesiastical year. They had left Egypt on the 15th of Nisan, so that they had spent forty years, within five days, on their journey. C.

VER. 20. Galgal. It received this name afterwards. Chap. v. 9 It lay in a direct line from Jericho to the Jordan eastwards, being ten stadia from the former, and fifty from the latter place. Josue had his camp here while he subdued the kings of Chanaan, (C.) as it had plenty of water and wood in its environs (M.); though perhaps at this time there were no houses. Saul was here recognised king of all Israel. 1 Kings xi. 14.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Chanaan. These occupied the countries situated on the Mediterranean Sea, as far as Egypt: the Amorrites dwelt nearer to the lake of Sodom. The whole country is divided between these two nations, including that territory which the Philistines had seized, and which belonged also to Israel.—Till they. Heb. "we . . . their heart melted, neither was there spirit in them any more, because of the children of Israel." They fainted as it were through fear, and could not take their breath, or, according to the Sept., adopt any thing rational; "they had no prudence," phronesis. H.

VER. 2. Time. While the enemy was rendered incapable of attacking the Israelites by excessive fear (C.) and consternation, Josue was commanded to renew the sign of the covenant, by which they were to take possession of the land, and it is supposed that he complied the day after he arrived at Galgal (H.); so that the wound would be healing when the feast of the Passover commenced four days after. On the third day it is most painful. Gen. xxxiv. 25.—Time. Not that such as had been circumcised before were to be circumcised again; but that they were now to renew, and take up again the practice of circumcision; which had been omitted during their forty years' sojourning in the wilderness, by reason of their being always uncertain when they should be obliged to march Ch.—S. Augustine (q. 6) seems to think that the Israelites despised this ceremony in the desert. Theodoret (q. 2) supposes it was disused because it was not then necessary, to distinguish the Israelites from other nations. Masius is of opinion that God would not allow them to employ it after their revolt at Cades-barne, when they would not take possession of the land of Chanaan; and hence they could not resume that privilege till God had authorized them again, ver. 7; Num. xiv. 33. The covenant with God, of which circumcision was the seal, had been, in the mean time, suspended. But as the Israelites are no where blamed, in Scripture, the Jordan before the children of Israel, till they passed over, their heart failed them, and there remained no spirit in them, fearing the coming in of the children of Israel.

2 At that time the Lord said to Josue: Make thee knives of stone, and circumcise the second time the children of Israel.

3 He did what the Lord had commanded, and he circumcised the children of Israel in the hill of the fore-skins.

4 Now this is the cause of the second circumcision: All the people that came out of Egypt that were males, all the men fit for war, died in the desert, during the time of the long going about in the way:

5 Now these were all circumcised. But the people that were born in the desert,

6 During the forty years of the journey in the wide wilderness, were uncircumcised: till all they were consumed that had not heard the voice of the Lord, and to whom he had sworn before, that he would not show them the land flowing with milk and honey.

7 The children of these succeeded in the place of their fathers, and were circumcised by Josue: for they were uncircumcised even as they were born, and no one had circumcised them in the way.

8 Now after they were all circumcised, they remained in the same place of the camp, until they were healed.

9 And the Lord said to Josue: This day have I taken away from you the reproach of Egypt. And the name of that place was called Galgal, until this present day.

10 And the children of Israel abode in Galgal, and they kept the Phase, on the fourteenth day of the month at evening, in the plains of Jericho:

11 And they ate on the next day unleavened bread of the corn of the land, and frumenty of the same year.

12 ^b And the manna ceased after they ate of the corn

b A. M. 2553.

on account of this omission, it seems that God dispensed with them during the thirty-eight years after they left Sinai, that the children might not be exposed to the evident danger of perishing, as the people knew not how soon the cloud would give notice for an immediate departure. C.

VER. 5. Desert. After the departure from Sinai, where the Passover was celebrated, and where, of course, the people must have been circumcised. C.

VER. 6. Forty. Some copies of the Sept. add, "two," as if the forty years' wandering in the desert were to be dated from the time that the spies discouraged the people, in the second year of their departure from Egypt. But the Heb. and the best chronologers allow only forty years in the whole. C.—Heb. "For the children of Israel walked forty years in the wilderness, till all the men fit for war, who came out of Egypt, were consumed, because they obeyed not the voice of the Lord, unto whom the Lord swore that he would not show them the land, which the Lord swore unto their fathers that he would give us, a land flowing with milk and honey; (7) and their children he raised up in their stead, them Josue circumcised." H.—The Sept. is also rather fuller than the Vulg., but gives the same sense.

VER. 8. Healed. The Passover lasted eight days; after which they proceeded to attack Jericho. Yet the people unfit for war remained at Galgal; where the camp continued a long time afterwards.

VER. 9. Egypt. The people of that country adopted circumcision only after this period, (C.) and it never became general among them. They were therefore held in abhorrence, like the rest of the uncircumcised nations, among the Jews. Gen. xxxiv. 14; 1 Kings xiv. 6.—Galgal is interpreted "liberty," by Josephus; but moderns render it "a rolling away," (C.) or revolution. Heb. "I have rolled away the reproach of Egypt from off you." H.

VER. 10. Phase. This was the third. The first was celebrated in Egypt Exod. xii. The second at Sinai. Num. ix. M.—Afterwards it was disused till the Israelites took possession of Chanaan, as it was chiefly designed for that country Exod. xii. 25.

VER. 11. Corn. Some pretend that the Heb. means "old corn." But the ancient interpreters take no notice of this restriction. The offering of corn was probably omitted on this occasion, as the Israelites had not cultivated the land.—Frumenty. Sept. "new corn." Heb. "parched, on that same day." These last words are taken by the Sept. as a part of the next sentence.

of the land, neither did the children of Israel use that food any more, but they ate of the corn of the present year of the land of Chanaan.

13 And when Josue was in the field of the city of Jericho, he lifted up his eyes, and saw a man standing over against him, holding a drawn sword, and he went to him, and said: Art thou one of ours, or of our adversaries?

14 And he answered: No; but I am prince of the host of the Lord, and now I am come.

15 Josue fell on his face to the ground. And worshipping, said: What saith my lord to his servant?

16 ^aLoose, saith he, thy shoes from off thy feet: for the place whereon thou standest is holy. And Josue did as was commanded him.

CHAP. VI.

After seven days' processions, the priests sounding the trumpets, the walls of Jericho fell down: and the city is taken and destroyed.

NOW ^bJericho was close shut up and fenced, for fear of the children of Israel, and no man durst go out or come in.

2 And the Lord said to Josue: Behold I have given into thy hands Jericho, and the king thereof, and all the valiant men.

3 Go round about the city all ye fighting men once a day: so shall ye do for six days.

4 And on the seventh day the priests shall take the seven trumpets, which are used in the jubilee, and shall go before the ark of the covenant: and you shall go about the city seven times, and the priests shall sound the trumpets.

5 And when the voice of the trumpet shall give a longer and broken tune, and shall sound in your ears, all the people shall shout together with a very great shout, and the walls of the city shall fall to the ground, and they shall enter in every one at the place against which they shall stand.

6 Then Josue, the son of Nun, called the priests, and said to them: Take the ark of the covenant: and let seven other priests take the seven trumpets of the jubilee, and march before the ark of the Lord.

7 And he said to the people: Go, and compass the city, armed, marching before the ark of the Lord.

8 And when Josue had ended his words, and the seven priests blew the seven trumpets before the ark of the covenant of the Lord,

9 And all the armed men went before, the rest of the common people followed the ark, and the sound of the trumpets was heard on all sides.

10 But Josue had commanded the people, saying: You shall not shout, nor shall your voice be heard, nor any word go out of your mouth: until the day come wherein I shall say to you: Cry and shout.

11 So the ark of the Lord went about the city once a day, and returning into the camp, abode there.

12 And Josue rising before day, the priests took the ark of the Lord, 13 And seven of them seven trumpets, which are used in the jubilee: and they went before the ark of the Lord, walking and sounding the trumpets: and the armed men went before them, and the rest of the common people followed the ark, and they blew the trumpets.

14 And they went round about the city the second day once, and returned into the camp. So they did six days.

15 But the seventh day, rising up early, they went about the city, as it was ordered, seven times.

16 And when in the seventh going about the priests sounded with the trumpets, Josue said to all Israel: Shout: for the Lord hath delivered the city to you:

17 And let this city be an anathema, and all things that are in it, to the Lord. Let only Rahab, the harlot, live, with all that are with her in the house: for she hid the messengers whom we sent.

18 But beware ye lest you touch aught of those things that are forbidden, and you be guilty of transgression, and all the camp of Israel be under sin, and be troubled.

19 But whatsoever gold or silver there shall be, or ^c Supra, ii. 4; Heb. xi. 31.

VER. 12. Land. The Sept. intimate on the 15th. The Heb. seems to say the 10th Nisan, "on the morrow after they had eaten of the (old) corn." C.—Grabe's Septuagint agrees with the Vulgate and Heb., and specifies that the Israelites "eat of the corn of the country on the day after the Passover, unleavened and new. On that day, the morrow, manna ceased." All depends on the determination of the first day of the festival. If we date from the eating of the paschal lamb on the 14th, or from the solemn day, which was the 15th, manna must have been withdrawn either on the 15th or 16th of the month; though Salien thinks that it ceased as soon as the Israelites had begun to eat of the fruit of the country, on the eastern side of the Jordan. H.

VER. 14. Prince of the host of the Lord, &c. S. Michael, who is called prince of the people of Israel. Dan. x. 21. Ch.—Some of the Fathers explain it of the Son of God. Orig. hom. 6. But S. Aug. C. D. xi. 13, S. Jerom in Gal. iii., and interpreters in general agree, that the person who here appeared to Josue was the archangel Michael. He came, in the name of God, to assure Josue of success, as the angel had appeared to Moses in the burning bush, as if to denote the distress of the Hebrews, and to encourage Moses to undertake their liberation. C.—Chal. "I am an angel sent by God." In that character he is called the Lord. H.

VER. 15. Worshipping. Not with Divine honour, but with a religious veneration of an inferior kind, suitable to the dignity of his person. Ch.—He styles the angel Adonai, which is a title frequently given to men; and hence he does not seem to have designed to give him supreme worship. C.—If he did, (H) it was referred to God. C.—See Exod. xx.

VER. 16. Loose. The angel did not only accept of the honour done to him, but also required more, showing that the field near Jericho was rendered holy by his presence. W.—Hence he ordered Josue to put off his shoes, as Moses had done at the bush. Exod. iii. 5.

CHAP. VI. VER. 2. The Lord, in the person of the angel, who appeared to Josue, as he was praying in silent meditation, or reconnoitring the city of Jericho. Chap. v. 13. H.—Men. People of the different nations had come to defend the city. Chap. xxiv. 11.

VER. 4. Jubilee. Num. x. 2. The number seven is often used to express an indefinite number. But here a particular stress is laid upon it. See Masius. As on the seventh year the Hebrews regained the possessions which they had sold so now they assert their right to the land of Chanaan. The sound of the trumpets announced joyful tidings to them. M.

VER. 5. Tune, with certain modulations, continued for a long time. Num. x. 5. H.

VER. 11. There. This singular procession served to exercise the obedience of the people, and to teach them to despise the enemy, who durst not come out to attack them, though many were unarmed. C.

VER. 16. Said, or "had said," when he gave the people the sound of the trumpet for a sign (H.) when they were to shout, ver. 5. He probably gave the regulations respecting the plunder of the city, before the army left the camp. C.

VER. 17. An anathema. That is, a thing accursed and devoted to utter destruction. Ch.—Only the metal that was found was consecrated to the Lord. (ver. 19.) and the family of Rahab saved. In devoting things, the person who laid on the curse might extend its operation as he pleased. On some occasions all was to be destroyed; on others, some things were preserved. Deut. ii. 34; Lev. xxvii. 21. C.—This first city which the Israelites attacked was treated with peculiar severity, to terrify the rest.

VER. 19. Treasures, probably in the tabernacle. See Num. xxxi. 48. God claims the first-fruits of the booty, as an acknowledgment that he granted the victory, (C.) and all the riches of the country, to his people. H.

vessels of brass and iron, let it be consecrated to the Lord, and laid up in his treasures.

20 "So all the people making a shout, and the trumpets sounding, when the voice and the sound thundered in the ears of the multitude, the walls forthwith fell down: and every man went up by the place that was over against him: and they took the city,

21 And killed all that were in it, man and woman, young and old. The oxen also, and the sheep, and the asses, they slew with the edge of the sword.

22 "But Josue said to the two men that had been sent for spies: Go into the harlot's house, and bring her out, and all things that are hers, as you assured her by oath.

23 "And the young men went in, and brought out Rahab, and her parents, her brethren also, and all her goods, and her kindred, and made them to stay without the camp.

24 "But they burned the city, and all things that were therein; except the gold and silver, and vessels of brass and iron, which they consecrated unto the treasury of the Lord.

25 But Josue saved Rahab the harlot, and her father's house, and all she had, and they dwelt in the midst of Israel until this present day: because she hid the messengers whom he had sent to spy out Jericho. At that time, Josue made an imprecation, saying:

26 "Cursed be the man before the Lord, that shall raise up and build the city of Jericho. In his first-born may he lay the foundation thereof, and in the last of his children set up its gates.

27 And the Lord was with Josue, and his name was noised throughout all the land.

CHAP. VII.

For the sin of Achan the Israelites are defeated at Hai. The offender is found out, and stoned to death; and God's wrath is turned from them.

BUT "the children of Israel transgressed the commandment, and took to their own use of that which was accursed. "For Achan, the son of Charmi, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zare, of the tribe of Juda, took something of the anathema: and the Lord was angry against the children of Israel.

• Infra, viii. 2.—f 3 Kings xvi. 34.

VER. 26. Cursed, &c. Jericho, in the mystical sense, signifies iniquity: the sounding of the trumpets by the priests, the preaching of the word of God; by which the walls of Jericho are thrown down, when sinners are converted: and a dreadful curse will light on them who build them up again. Ch.—Gates. Some copies of the Sept. insert here that the curse fell upon Azan (Hiel) of Bethel, 3 Kings xvi. 34. Before his time there was a city of palm-trees, or Jericho, built in the neighbourhood. Joseph. Bel. v. 4. Though Hiel was so severely punished, no one made any scruple to live there. Elias and Jesus Christ himself honoured the place with their presence. The city is now almost in ruins, and the territory uncultivated. C.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Children. Achan was guilty of theft: some of the rest might have connived at his fault. He had taken what was reserved for the Lord. The offender was discovered, to inspire all with a horror for his conduct. Some of his brethren were punished, (ver. 5,) but they suffered for their own secret transgressions, or death might be no real punishment to them; while the Israelites were awakened to a sense of their own inability to conquer without the Divine protection, and were forced to humble themselves. H.—Chastisements are the marks of God's displeasure, though they frequently proceed also from his clemency.—Achan is called Achar, 1 Par. ii. 7.

VER. 2. Against Hai, to see the situation and strength of that city, which was about ten miles west, or rather north, of Jericho. It was afterwards rebuilt, 1 Esd. ii. 28.—Bethaven and Bethel are the same place (S. Jerom. C.); though many distinguish them, with Cellarius. The former name means "the house of

2 And when Josue sent men from Jericho against Hai, which is beside Bethaven, on the east side of the town of Bethel, he said to them: Go up, and view the country: and they fulfilled his command, and viewed Hai.

3 And returning, they said to him: Let not all the people go up, but let two or three thousand men go, and destroy the city: why should all the people be troubled in vain, against enemies that are very few?

4 There went up therefore three thousand fighting men: who immediately turned their backs,

5 And were defeated by the men of the city of Hai, and there fell of them six and thirty men: and the enemies pursued them from the gate as far as Sabarim, and they slew them as they fled by the descent: and the heart of the people was struck with fear, and melted like water.

6 But Josue rent his garments, and fell flat on the ground, before the ark of the Lord, until the evening, both he and all the ancients of Israel: and they put dust upon their heads.

7 And Josue said: Alas, O Lord God, why wouldst thou bring this people over the river Jordan, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorrite, and to destroy us? would God we had staid beyond the Jordan, as we began.

8 My Lord God, what shall I say, seeing Israel turning their backs to their enemies?

9 The Chanaanites, and all the inhabitants of the land, will hear of it, and being gathered together will surround us, and cut off our name from the earth: and what wilt thou do to thy great name?

10 And the Lord said to Josue: Arise, why liest thou flat on the ground?

11 Israel hath sinned, and transgressed my covenant: and they have taken of the anathema, and have stolen and lied, and have hid it among their goods.

12 Neither can Israel stand before his enemies, but he shall flee from them: because he is defiled with the anathema. I will be no more with you, till you destroy him that is guilty of this wickedness.

13 Arise, 'sanctify the people, and say to them: Be ye iniquity," because Jeroboam there set up a golden calf. Bethel was its former appellation, in consequence of the vision of Jacob. Gen. xxviii.

VER. 3. Few. It appears, however, that the city contained 12,000 fighting men; so that these spies must have formed a false notion of its strength. Chap. viii. 25.

VER. 5. Sabarim, which means people "broken and defeated." Sept. "they pursued them from the gate, till they had entirely broken them," destroying thirty-six, and putting the rest to flight. C.—This small disaster filled the whole camp with dismay, as the Lord generally caused the victories of his people to be complete, and without any loss, as long as they continued in his favour. None were found wanting of those who attacked and destroyed so many of the Madianites. Num. xxxi. 49. H.

VER. 7. Began. Some had established themselves in the land of Galaad. M.—Heb. "would to God we had been content, and dwelt on the other side of the Jordan." Josue speaks in this animated manner through zeal for the glory of God, (C.) more than for any personal inconvenience. He was grieved that any one should have merited God's displeasure. He was afraid that the Chanaanite would blaspheme the great name of the Lord, ver. 9.

VER. 11. Lied. Each one, on delivering up what he had taken, made profession, at least by his behaviour, (H.) that he retained nothing. Achan did like the rest, but he kept back part of the plunder. C.—He lied, and did not comply with the promise made by all Israel, which he was bound to observe as much as if he had made it with his own mouth.

sanctified against to-morrow : for thus saith the Lord God of Israel : The curse is in the midst of thee, O Israel : thou canst not stand before thy enemies, till he be destroyed out of thee, that is defiled with this wickedness.

14 And you shall come in the morning, every one by your tribes : and what tribe soever the lot shall find, it shall come by its kindreds, and the kindred by its houses, and the house by the men.

15 And whosoever he be that shall be found guilty of this fact, he shall be burnt with fire, with all his substance, because he hath transgressed the covenant of the Lord, and hath done wickedness in Israel.

16 Josue, therefore, when he rose in the morning, made Israel to come by their tribes, and the tribe of Juda was found.

17 Which being brought by its families, it was found to be the family of Zabdi :

18 And bringing his house man by man, he found Achan, the son of Charmi, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zare, of the tribe of Juda.

19 And Josue said to Achan : My son, give glory to the Lord God of Israel, and confess, and tell me what thou hast done, hide it not.

20 And Achan answered Josue, and said to him : Indeed I have sinned against the Lord, the God of Israel, and thus and thus have I done.

21 For I saw among the spoils a scarlet garment, exceeding good, and two hundred sicles of silver, and a golden rule of fifty sicles : and I coveted them, and I took them away, and hid them in the ground in the midst of my tent, and the silver I covered with the earth that I dug up.

22 Josue therefore sent ministers : who running to his tent, found all hid in the same place, together with the silver.

23 And taking them away out of the tent, they brought them to Josue, and to all the children of Israel, and threw them down before the Lord.

24 Then Josue, and all Israel with him, took Achan, the son of Zare, and the silver, and the garment, and the golden rule, his sons also, and his daughters, his oxen, and asses, and sheep, the tent also, and all the goods : and brought them to the valley of Achor :

25 Where Josue said : Because thou hast troubled us, the Lord trouble thee this day. And all Israel stoned him : and all things that were his, were consumed with fire.

26 *And they gathered together upon him a great heap of stones, which remaineth until this present day. And the wrath of the Lord was turned away from them. And the name of that place was called the Valley of Achor, until this day.

CHAP. VIII.

Hai is taken and burnt, and all the inhabitants slain. An altar is built, and sacrifices offered. The law is written on stones, and the blessings and cursings are read before all the people.

AND the Lord said to Josue : *Fear not, nor be thou dismayed : take with thee all the multitude of fighting men, arise, and go up to the town of Hai : Behold I have delivered into thy hand the king thereof, and the people, and the city, and the land.

2 And thou shalt do to the city of Hai, and to the king thereof, as thou hast done to Jericho,^c and to the king thereof : but the spoils, and all the cattle, you shall take for a prey to yourselves . lay an ambush for the city behind it.

3 And Josue arose, and all the army of the fighting men with him, to go up against Hai : and he sent thirty thousand chosen valiant men, in the night,

4 And commanded them, saying : Lay an ambush behind the city : and go not very far from it : and be ye all ready.

5 But I, and the rest of the multitude which is with me, will approach on the contrary side against the city. And when they shall come out against us,^d we will flee, and turn our backs, as we did before :

6 Till they pursuing us be drawn farther from the city for they will think that we flee as before.

7 And whilst we are fleeing, and they pursuing, you shall rise out of the ambush, and shall destroy the city : and the Lord your God will deliver it into your hands.

8 And when you shall have taken it, set it on fire, and you shall do all things so as I have commanded.

9 And he sent them away, and they went on to the place of the ambush, and abode between Bethel and Hai, on the west side of the city of Hai. But Josue staid that night in the midst of the people,

10 And rising early in the morning, he mustered his

VER. 14. Find. Heb. "it shall be the tribe which the Lord taketh." H.—This was done by lots, as on similar occasions, 1 Kings x. 20, and xiv. 41. When God authorized this method, there could be no danger in it. But to have recourse to lots without such authority, would be often tempting God. The apostles chose an apostle by lot ; but they had first taken every precaution (C.) to select two persons, both fit for the important charge. H.—To commit the choice of sacred ministers to chance would be extremely improper. "We forbid the use of lots in the elections," said Honorius. C.

VER. 18. Juda. The dignity of this tribe enhanced the fault of Achan. M.

VER. 24. His sons, &c. Probably conscious to, or accomplices of, the crime of their father, (Ch.) as he could hardly have concealed these things in the midst of his tent without their knowledge. M.

VER. 25. Day. Hence some have drawn a very weak argument to prove the repentance of Achan, as if he had only to undergo a temporary punishment. It is probable, however, that his sincere confession, proceeding from a penitent heart, might influence God to show him mercy.—Fire. Children, as well as his other effects ; though some have supposed that the former were spared, as they are not here specified. Heb. seems to include them ; "and burnt them with fire after they had stoned them with stones." Chaldee says they were stoned first. C.

VER. 26. Achor. That is, trouble (Ch.) ; in allusion to the name of Achar, as he is called in the Sept. invariably, and in the Heb. and Vulg. in the Book of Chronicles. H.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 2. King. There was this difference, that the king of Hai was to be gibbeted, and his corpse stoned, while the city was to be plundered by the Israelites.—It. This mode of warfare is equally just, as if the enemy was attacked in the open field. God was pleased to authorize it on this occasion, that his people might be less exposed, being under some apprehensions on account of the former defeat. Some nations have preferred to encounter the enemy openly. Grot. Jur. iii. 1, 20. But their example is no law for others. "When the war is just, it matters not whether a person gain the victory by open fighting or by stratagem." S. Aug. q. 10. People engaged in warfare allow each other to take such advantages. C.

VER. 4. Ready to enter the city, when its soldiers are all in pursuit of us. H.

VER. 5. And turn, &c. Josue had not fled before. C.—Heb. "against us, as at the first, we will flee before them."

VER. 8. Fire. They were to set some houses on fire for a signal, but the whole city was not to be destroyed (C.) till the Israelites had collected the plunder. H.

soldiers, and went up with the ancients in the front of the army, environed with the aid of the fighting men.

11 And when they were come, and were gone up over against the city, they stood on the north side of the city, between which and them there was a valley in the midst.

12 And he had chosen five thousand men, and set them to lie in ambush between Bethel and Hai, on the west side of the same city :

13 But all the rest of the army went in battle array on the north side, so that the last of that multitude reached to the west side of the city. So Josue went that night, and stood in the midst of the valley.

14 And when the king of Hai saw this, he made haste in the morning, and went out with all the army of the city, and set it in battle array, toward the desert, not knowing that there lay an ambush behind his back.

15 But Josue and all Israel gave back, making as if they were afraid, and fleeing by the way of the wilderness.

16 But they shouting together, and encouraging one another, pursued them. And when they were come from the city,

17 And not one remained in the city of Hai and of Bethel, that did not pursue after Israel, leaving the towns open as they had rushed out,

18 The Lord said to Josue : Lift up the shield that is in thy hand, towards the city of Hai, for I will deliver it to thee.

19 And when he had lifted up his shield towards the city, the ambush, that lay hid, rose up immediately : and going to the city, took it, and set it on fire.

20 And the men of the city, that pursued after Josue, looking back, and seeing the smoke of the city rise up to heaven, had no more power to flee this way or that way : especially as they that had counterfeited flight, and were going toward the wilderness, turned back most valiantly against them that pursued.

21 So Josue, and all Israel, seeing that the city was taken, and that the smoke of the city rose up, returned, and slew the men of Hai.

22 And they also that had taken and set the city on fire, issuing out of the city to meet their own men, began to cut off the enemies who were surrounded by them. So that the enemies being cut off on both sides, not one of so great a multitude was saved.

23 And they took the king of the city of Hai alive, and brought him to Josue.

24 So all being slain that had pursued after Israel, in his flight to the wilderness, and falling by the sword in the same place, the children of Israel returned and laid waste the city.

25 And the number of them that fell that day, both of men and women, was twelve thousand persons, all of the city of Hai.

26 But Josue drew not back his hand, which he had stretched out on high, holding the shield, till all the inhabitants of Hai were slain.

27 And the children of Israel divided among them the cattle and the prey of the city, as the Lord had commanded Josue.

28 And he burnt the city, and made it a heap for ever :

29 And he hung the king thereof on a gibbet, until the evening and the going down of the sun. Then Josue commanded, and they took down his carcass from the gibbet : and threw it in the very entrance of the city, heaping upon it a great heap of stones, which remaineth until this present day.

30 Then Josue built an altar to the Lord, the God of Israel, in Mount Hebal, 31 As Moses, the servant of the Lord, had commanded the children of Israel, and it is written in the book of the law of Moses : an altar of unhewn stones, which iron had not touched : and he offered upon it holocausts to the Lord, and immolated victims of peace-offerings.

32 And he wrote upon stones, the Deuteronomy of

* Exod. xx. 25 ; Deut. xxvii. 5.

VER. 10. Ancients, who had a command in the army, and assisted Josue with their counsel. They gave him an account of the state and numbers of the army. C.

VER. 12. Five thousand. These were part of the 30,000 mentioned above, ver. 3. Ch.—Josue had given orders to have them placed in ambush apart (C.) ; unless, perhaps, he places these himself in some secret place. H.

VER. 13. Night. He spent the forepart of it at Galgal, to prevent any suspicion, ver. 9. But setting out very early, (ver. 10,) he arrived at Hai before sun-rise.

VER. 14. Desert of Bethel, fit only for pasturage. Chap. xviii. 12.

VER. 15. Affraid. Heb. "made as if they were beaten before them, and fled." Thus they drew on the king of Hai, so as to leave the ambush in his rear. C.

VER. 17. Not one fit to bear arms. W.—Bethel. As soon as the people of this city perceived the Israelites fleeing, they rushed out to assist the king of Hai in the pursuit. But when they saw the former rally, before they had joined their friends, (C.) they very prudently retired, and left the unhappy citizens of Hai to their fate. H.—Hence all who were slain belonged to the latter city, ver. 25.

VER. 18. Shield, as Moses lifted up his hands. Exod. xvii. 11. Some translate, "dart, spear," or "sword." Sept. and Eccl. xvi. 3. C.

VER. 28. For ever, or for a long time. It was rebuilt before the captivity. 2 Esd. vii. 31

VER. 30. Hebal. The Sam. Chronicle says on Mount Garizim. No doubt Josue complied with the injunctions of Moses : but we have seen that there are reasons to doubt which mountain he pitched upon. Deut. xxvii. 4. H.—"It seems more probable that the altar would be upon Garizim, where the blessings were proclaimed, if the texts of Moses and of Josue did not formally assert the contrary." C.—But if they have been interpolated, nothing certain can be deduced from those passages. Josephus (iv. 8) says that the altar was between the two mountains, not far from Sichem, which was built at the foot of Garizim ; and it is not probable that this historian, the mortal enemy of the Samaritans, would have hesitated to assert that the altar was upon Hebal, if the texts had been so positive, in his time. It is undeniable that the tribes of Levi, and of Ephraim, were upon Garizim ; and consequently Josue and the priests must have been there ; and who would then officiate at the altar on Hebal ? See Kennicott, who ably refutes the insinuations of the infidel, Collins, against the character of the Samaritans. H.

VER. 31. Iron. Spenser complains that the Prot. have not translated borzol, "iron tool," as Deut. xxvii. 5. This translation is found in their more ancient editions of 1537-49, &c. Ken.—But the difference is very unimportant. The reason of this prohibition is given, Exod. xx. 25.—He offered ; so we read that he wrote, blessed and cursed, &c., because these things were done at least by his authority. It is not necessary to suppose that he engraved the words of the law with his own hands, or that he passed from Garizim, where he had been pronouncing the blessings, to Hebal, in order to denounce the curses. H.—Various instances are produced to show that princes and prophets have, on extraordinary occasions, performed this office themselves, 1 Kings vi. 15, and vii. 9 ; 3 Kings xviii. 32. C.—But these must have either received a dispensation from God, or they must have employed the ministry of the legal priests : or, in fine, their actions, like that of Saul, (1 Kings xiii. 9,) of Absalom, (ib. i. 9,) Herod, &c., may have been deserving of blame. H.—The Jews assert that in the desert no one was permitted to sacrifice, except in the tabernacle : but that this prohibition ceased at Galgal, as the ark had no fixed abode, and thus Josue might offer sacrifice himself. Afterwards the law was enforced, while the ark was at Silo. But upon its being removed to Nob, Maspha, and Gabaon, people resumed their former liberty ; and hence there was nothing to hinder Samuel, Saul, and David from offering sacrifice, till the temple was erected. Outram de Sac. i. 2 ; Grot. in Deut. xii. 8.

VER. 32. Stones, of which the altar was formed, (C.) or on a separate monument, (Masius,) consisting of two stones of black marble, so as to leave the letters prominent, and to fill up the vacancies with white plaster, that they might be seen more plainly, and might, at the same time, be more durable than if they had been only written on the cement, whatever some may have said of the tenacity of the ancient plaster.—Deuteronomy, &c., or copy of the Decalogue the law of Moses, which he had ordered before the children of Israel.

33 And all the people, and the ancients, and the princes, and judges, stood on both sides of the ark, before the priests that carried the ark of the covenant of the Lord, both the stranger and he that was born among them, half of them by Mount Garizim, and half by Mount Hebal, as Moses, the servant of the Lord, had commanded. And first he blessed the people of Israel.

34 After this, he read all the words of the blessing and the cursing, and all things that were written in the book of the law.

35 He left out nothing of those things which Moses had commanded, but he repeated all before all the people of Israel, with the women and children, and strangers, that dwelt among them.

CHAP. IX.

Josue is deceived by the Gabaonites; who, being detected, are condemned to be perpetual servants.

NOW *when these things were heard of, all the kings beyond the Jordan, that dwelt in the mountains, and in the plains, in the places near the sea, and on the coasts of the great sea, they also that dwelt by Libanus, the Hethite, and the Amorrite, the Chanaanite, the Pherezite, and the Hevite, and the Jebusite,

2 Gathered themselves together, to fight against Josue and Israel, with one mind, and one resolution.

3 But they that dwelt in Gabaon, hearing all that Josue had done to Jericho and Hai :

4 Cunningly devising, took for themselves provisions, laying old sacks upon their asses, and wine bottles rent and sewed up again,

5 And very old shoes, which for a show of age were clouted with patches, and old garments upon them : the which, by way of eminence, is called the Law. Acts vii. 53. It is distinguished from the blessings and the curses (ver. 34) ; and Moses referred to it as already existing, (Deut. xxvii. 3—8,) though the Book of Deuteronomy was not finished till afterwards. That the Decalogue was to be thus solemnly proclaimed is evident, from the Sam. text. Exod. xx. 18. Kennicott.—This was the covenant which God had made with his people, (Deut. iv. 13,) and which Moses cautions the Israelites to observe ; as upon their fidelity their present and future happiness entirely depended. H.

VER. 33. Hebal. "Gerizim and Ebal," says Maundrell, p. 59, "are separated by a narrow valley, not above a furlong broad; and Naplosa, (the ancient Sychem,) consisting chiefly of two streets lying parallel, is built at the foot of, and under Gerizim." The princes, representing the different tribes, were stationed on these mountains, and the crowd at the foot of them, while a select company of Levites attended the ark in the midst, and repeated what the princes proclaimed, that the multitude might answer Amen, as they turned successively to them (Kennicott) ; or the princes might answer Amen, from the top of the two hills. C.—And first. Prot. "as Moses . . . had commanded before, that they should bless the people of Israel." But if Josue blessed them himself, (H.) all superiors might do so, as parents bless their children. W.

VER. 34. Words. Heb. "words of the law, the blessings," &c. H.

VER. 35. Repeated. Coverdale's Bible has "Josua caused it to be proclaimed." "It is very common in Scripture to represent a person as doing that which is done by another, in his name and by his authority." Kennicott.—Josue might be in the midst to preside, (C.) or rather he would be along with the princes of the six tribes on Mount Garizim, ver. 30. H.—Thus the covenant entered into between God and the Israelites was solemnly ratified when the latter first entered the promised land. The greatest part of those who had been present at Horeb had perished in the wilderness. C.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. These things. The solemn covenant by which the Israelites took possession of Chanaan, (H.) and the destruction of the two cities of Jericho and Hai. C.—The kings on that side of the Jordan, and in all the neighbourhood, perceiving that, if the Israelites were suffered to attack them singly, in this manner, they would all presently lose their dominions and their lives. They resolved, therefore, to form a general league, offensive and defensive. H.—Beyond. Heb. "on the side of."—Mountains, on the south of Judea.—Sea. All the nations of Phœnicia, and the country of the Philistines, (C.) who had seized a loaves also, which they carried for provision by the way, were hard, and broken into pieces :

6 And they went to Josue, who then abode in the camp at Galgal, and said to him, and to all Israel with him : We are come from a far country, desiring to make peace with you. And the children of Israel answered them, and said :

7 Perhaps you dwell in the land which falls to our lot ; if so, we can make no league with you.

8 But they said to Josue : We are thy servants. Josue said to them : Who are you ? and whence came you ?

9 They answered : From a very far country thy servants are come, in the name of the Lord thy God. For we have heard the fame of his power, all the things that he did in Egypt,

10 ^bAnd to the two kings of the Amorrites, that were beyond the Jordan, Sehon, king of Heshon, and Og, king of Basan, that was in Astaroth :

11 And our ancients, and all the inhabitants of our country, said to us : Take with you victuals for a long way, and go meet them, and say : We are your servants. make ye a league with us.

12 Behold, these loaves we took hot, when we set out from our houses to come to you, now they are become dry, and broken in pieces by being exceeding old.

13 These bottles of wine when we filled them were new, now they are rent and burst. These garments we have on, and the shoes we have on our feet, by reason of the very long journey, are worn out, and almost consumed.

14 They took therefore of their victuals, and consulted not the mouth of the Lord.

15 ^cAnd Josue made peace with them, and entering part of the country, which belonged to the Israelites. Josue divided their territory among the people, though he did not live to make the conquest of it. H.—Libanus. Heb. "and in all the coasts of the great sea, over against Libanus" as if the Phœnicians were alone meant. C.

VER. 4. Provisions. By the alteration of a single letter, Heb. means, "they feigned themselves to be ambassadors." But the Chal., Syr., and Sept. agree with the Vulgate. C.—The Gabaonites were Hevites, though they are called by the more general name of Amorrites, 2 Kings xxi. 2. S. Jerom says that their city stood in the tribe of Benjamin ; according to Josephus, forty or fifty stadia north of Jerusalem. M.

VER. 5. Patches. Heb. "spotted," or of different colours, like shoes worn out and spoiled with dirt.—Pieces. Heb. is translated, "dry, burnt, eaten, mouldy," &c. But it means fine thin bread, or wafers, (3 Kings xiv. 3,) full of holes. The Israelites partook of this bread, which they would hardly have done if it had been mouldy. C.

VER. 8. Servants. They did not mean to submit to servitude, but to make a league ; otherwise they would not have needed to have recourse to such artifices. C.—But finding that no other terms could be procured, they were willing, at any rate, to save their lives. H.

VER. 9. God. So the queen of Saba came to Solomon, 3 Kings x. The people of Gabaon being convinced that the God of Israel was the only true God, came to join themselves to his people, and to worship him. Serarius.

VER. 10. Astaroth. They take care not to mention what had happened so recently at Jericho, lest they might be detected. C.

VER. 14. Victuals, to examine whether they were as old as they pretended ; or they eat of them in sign of friendship. M.—Lord. By the high priest, clothed with the Urim and Thummim. C.—This remark shows that the Israelites had been guilty of some negligence. H.—Hence they were so easily deceived, being perhaps overjoyed that their friendship should be courted by so distant a nation. M.

VER. 15. Them. Were they bound to keep this promise ? Some maintain the negative, as it was obtained by fraud, and therefore the Gabaonites leave themselves to the mercy of Josue, (ver. 25,) who condemns them to perpetual servitude in the house of the Lord. He could not, however, have taken away their lives after what had passed. If we make a contract with a person who pretends to be of a nation to which he does not belong, the contract will hold good. The deceit of the Gabaonites was punished as it deserved. But God required that into a league, promised that they should not be slain: the princes also of the multitude swore to them.

16 Now three days after the league was made, they heard that they dwelt nigh, and they should be among them.

17 And the children of Israel removed the camp, and came into their cities on the third day, the names of which are, Gabaon, and Caphira, and Beroth, and Cariathiarim.

18 And they slew them not, because the princes of the multitude had sworn in the name of the Lord, the God of Israel. Then all the common people murmured against the princes.

19 And they answered them: We have sworn to them in the name of the Lord the God of Israel, and therefore we may not touch them.

20 But this we will do to them: Let their lives be saved, lest the wrath of the Lord be stirred up against us, if we should be forsworn:

21 But so let them live, as to serve the whole multitude in hewing wood, and bringing in water. As they were speaking these things, 22 Josue called the Gabaonites, and said to them: Why would you impose upon us, saying: We dwell very far off from you, whereas you are in the midst of us?

23 Therefore you shall be under a curse, and your race shall always be hewers of wood, and carriers of water, into the house of my God.

24 They answered: It was told us, thy servants, that the Lord thy God had promised his servant Moses, to give you all the land, and to destroy all the inhabitants thereof. Therefore we feared exceedingly, and provided for our lives, compelled by the dread we had of you, and we took this counsel.

25 And now we are in thy hand: deal with us as it seemeth good and right unto thee.

26 So Josue did as he had said, and delivered them from the hand of the children of Israel, that they should not be slain.

27 And he gave orders in that day, that they should be in the service of all the people, and of the altar of the Lord, hewing wood, and carrying water, until this present time, in the place which the Lord hath chosen.

CHAP. X.

Five kings war against Gabaon. Josue defeateth them; many are slain with hail-stones. At the prayer of Josue the sun and moon stand still the space of one day. The five kings are hanged. Divers cities are taken.

WHEN Adonisedec, king of Jerusalem, had heard these things, to wit, that Josue had taken Hai, and had destroyed it, (for as he had done to Jericho and the king thereof, so did he to Hai and its king,) and that the Gabaonites were gone over to Israel, and were their confederates,

2 He was exceedingly afraid. For Gabaon was a great city, and one of the royal cities, and greater than the town of Hai, and all its fighting men were most valiant.

3 Therefore Adonisedec, king of Jerusalem, sent to Oham, king of Hebron, and to Pharam, king of Jerimoth, and to Japhia, king of Lachis, and to Dabir, king of Eglon, saying:

4 Come up to me, and bring help, that we may take Gabaon, because it hath gone over to Josue, and to the children of Israel.

5 So the five kings of the Amorrites being assembled together, went up: the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jerimoth, the king of Lachis, the king of Eglon, they and their armies, and camped about Gabaon, laying siege to it.

6 But the inhabitants of the city of Gabaon, which was besieged, sent to Josue, who then abode in the camp at Galgal, and said to him: Withdraw not thy hands from helping thy servants: come up quickly, and save us, and bring us succour: for all the kings of the Amorrites, who dwell in the mountains, are gathered together against us.

7 And Josue went up from Galgal, and all the army of the warriors with him, most valiant men.

8 But the Lord said to Josue: Fear them not: for I have delivered them into thy hands: none of them shall be able to stand against thee.

the conditions which were granted to them should be diligently observed; and the family of Saul was severely punished, because he had slain some of them. 3 Kings xxi. If the rest of the Chanaanites had changed their religion, and submitted to the Israelites, they might have been preserved, as Rahab, and so many others were, with whom the pious kings scrupled not to form alliances. Chap. xi. 19; Deut. xx. 10, &c. Masius. Bonfire. C.—They were, however, obliged to yield possession of the land to the Israelites, and to renounce idolatry. The Gabaonites were willing to accede to these conditions, and therefore Josue might justly make a peace with them. M.

VER. 18. Israel. This is one reason why their lives were spared. But we have seen that they could not, with justice, have treated them as enemies, on their submitting to the conditions required, even if they had not engaged themselves by oath.

VER. 21. Multitude. The common people, only considering their own private advantage, murmured at the conduct of their leaders, as they supposed that they were thus deprived of the plunder (C.) of many cities, and engaged in a dangerous war with the five confederate kings. But this war was in no degree detrimental to them, as they knew they had to subdue the whole country; and as for the Gabaonites, they eased the people of Israel of a great burden, by doing the drudgery of the tabernacle, which otherwise must have fallen upon them. H.—These people were dispersed through the country, particularly in the cities of the priests and Levites, whose servants they were forced to be. Gabaon was allotted to the priests. M.

VER. 23. Curse. Heb. "you are cursed, and there shall be none of you freed from being bondmen" (H.); you are a part of those nations which are under an anathema, and you deserve to be severely punished. C.—But we shall fulfil our engagements with you only in punishment of your craftiness (H.): you must submit to change your religion, (C.) which will be your greatest blessing, (H.) and to perform the meanest offices, which may be considered as a sort of curse. It is thought that some recompence was allowed the Gabaonites for their labour. Serarius, q. 17.

VER. 24. Thereof. It seems they knew not that any conditions would be admitted; and many interpreters have supposed that none could be offered by the Israelites. See Deut. xx. 15.

VER. 27. Chosen in the tabernacle and temple. M.—In these Gabaonites, of the race of Chanaan, the prediction of Noe, that he should serve Sem, was fulfilled. Gen. ix. W.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. Adonisedec means, "Lord of justice," as Melchisedec denotes "the king of justice:" perhaps Salem was originally styled Zedee. Masius. —This king had probably some control over the neighbouring cities. M.—He was also in the greatest danger; and not daring to attack the Israelites, he resolves to fall upon the Gabaonites unawares, that other cities might be deterred from following their example.

VER. 2. Cities. Yet we read not of its king. Chap. ix. 11. C.—Sept. "It was like a royal metropolis." H.—Valiant. Prudence therefore, and not fear, had influenced them to take this step.

VER. 3. Hebron was about twenty-four miles south of Jerusalem, and Jerimoth sixteen, Lachis was a very famous city, (4 Kings xiv., and xviii. 14.) about nine miles south of Eleutheropolis, which was itself situated about 20,000 paces towards the south of Jerusalem (Itin. Anton.); though some assert it was twenty-two or thirty-two miles distant. Eusebius and S. Jerom generally fix the situation of places by this city.—Eglon was twelve miles to the eastward of it. The Sept. read Odollam, (C.) which was either the same city, (Euseb.) or one probably near it. Chap. xii. 12—15, and ver. 35—39.

VER. 5. Amorrites is a general term, as well as Chanaanite, to denote the people of the country. The other kings did not come to the assistance (C.) of these five, ver. 40. H.—Yet the people of Gabaon might suspect the worst, or exaggerate, in order to make Josue come with greater expedition. He was then 9 So Josue going up from Galgal all the night, came upon them suddenly.

10 And the Lord troubled them, at the sight of Israel: and he slew them with a great slaughter, in Gabaon, and pursued them by the way of the ascent to Bethoron, and cut them off all the way to Azeca and Maceda.

11 And when they were fleeing from the children of Israel, and were in the descent of Bethoron; the Lord cast down upon them great stones from heaven, as far as Azeca: and many more were killed with the hailstones, than were slain by the swords of the children of Israel.

12 Then Josue spoke to the Lord, in the day that he delivered the Amorrite in the sight of the children of Israel, and he said before them: Move not, O sun, toward Gabaon, nor thou, O moon, toward the valley of Aialon.

13 And the sun and the moon stood still, till the people revenged themselves of their enemies. Is not this written in the book of the just? So the sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down the space of one day.

14 There was not before, nor after, so long a day, the Lord obeying the voice of a man, and fighting for Israel.

15 And Josue returned, with all Israel, into the camp of Galgal.

16 For the five kings were fled, and had hid themselves in a cave of the city of Maceda.

at Galgal, above twenty miles distant, and set off the next night, coming unexpectedly upon the confederate kings early in the morning, ver. 9.

VER. 10. Troubled them. Sept. "filled them with consternation;" so that they knew not what to do. Exod. xxiii. 17.—Bethoron. There were two cities of this name in the tribe of Ephraim, rebuilt by Sara. 1 Par. vii. 24. The lower was twelve miles from Jerusalem.—Maceda was eight from Eleutheropolis to the east, as Azeca was about the same distance west of Jerusalem, and not far from Socco. 1 Kings xvii. 1. H.

VER. 11. Azeca, for the space of twelve miles.—Hailstones, of an uncommon size, accompanied with thunder and lightning. Hab. iii. 11. Joseph. v. 1. C. Eccli. xvi. 6.

VER. 12. Them. This may be considered as a canticle of victory, containing a fervent prayer, which was presently followed with the desired effect.—Aialon. Heb. "Sun, in Gabaon, be silent (move not); and thou, moon, in the valley of Aialon," or "of the wood," which was probably not far from Gabaon. Josue had pursued the enemy at mid-day to the west of that city, when, turning round, he addressed this wonderful command to the sun. It is supposed that the moon appeared at the same time. But the meaning may only be, that the sun and the course of the stars should be interrupted for a time. C.—The sun and the moon stood still in their habitation. Hab. iii. 11. M.—Many have called in question this miracle, with Maimonides, or have devised various means to explain it away, by having recourse to a perihelion or reflection of the sun by a cloud, or to a light which was reverberated by the mountains, after the sun was set, &c. Prodam iv. 6. Spinosa, Grotius, Le Clerc.—But if these authors believe the Scriptures, they may spare themselves the trouble of devising such improbable explanations, as this fact is constantly represented as a most striking miracle. C.—The pretended impossibility of it, or the inconvenience arising to the fatigued soldiers from the long continuance of the day, will make but small impression upon those who consider that God was the chief agent; and that He who made all out of nothing, might easily stop the whole machine of the world for a time, and afterwards put it in motion again, without causing any derangement in the different parts. C.—Aialon lay to the south-west of Gabaon. H.—Josue ordered the moon to stop as a necessary consequence of the sun's standing still. God condescended to grant his request. W.

VER. 13. The book of the just. In Hebrew Jasher; an ancient book long since lost. Ch.—It was probably of the same nature with that of the Wars of the Lord, (Num. xxi. 4,) containing an account of the most memorable occurrences which concerned the people of Israel, the just, or Ischuron. Deut. xxxiii. 5. Josephus (v. 2) says such "records were kept in the archives of the temple." They were drawn up by people of character. The quotations inserted are in a poetical style, as the book might contain various canticles, though the rest was written in prose. See 2 Kings i. 18. It might appear unnecessary for Josue to appeal to this work, as the fact in question was known to all. C.—Midst. It was then almost noon. C.—Josue was nevertheless afraid lest the day should not allow them time to destroy their fleeing enemies completely. H.—If the evening had been at hand, he would have said, Return, sun, towards Gabaon, as it would 17 And it was told Josue, that the five kings were found hid in a cave of the city of Maceda.

18 And he commanded them that were with him, saying: Roll great stones to the mouth of the cave, and set careful men to keep them shut up:

19 And stay you not, but pursue after the enemies, and kill all the hindermost of them as they flee, and do not suffer them whom the Lord God hath delivered into your hands, to shelter themselves in their cities.

20 So the enemies being slain with a great slaughter, and almost utterly consumed, they that were able to escape from Israel, entered into fenced cities.

21 And all the army returned to Josue, in Maceda, where the camp then was, in good health, and without the loss of any one: and no man durst move his tongue against the children of Israel.

22 And Josue gave orders, saying: Open the mouth of the cave, and bring forth to me the five kings that lie hid therein.

23 And the ministers did as they were commanded: and they brought out to him the five kings out of the cave: the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jerimoth, the king of Lachis, the king of Eglon.

24 And when they were brought out to him, he called all the men of Israel, and said to the chiefs of the army that were with him: Go, and set your feet on the necks of these kings. And when they had gone, and put their feet upon the necks of them lying under them, have been on the west of his army. The battle had begun early in the morning, and the pursuit had lasted perhaps four or five hours. C.—Day. Heb. "about a whole day." Many think that a day here comprises twenty-four hours; and as the sun had been above the horizon six hours, and continued other six, it must have been visible for the space of thirty-six hours, as the Jews believe, and as it is specified in S. Justin. Dial. The author of Eccli. xvi. 5, says, Was not the sun stopped in his anger, and one day made as two? that is, twenty-four hours long, allowing twelve unequal ones to form a day, according to the reckoning of those times. Others suppose that the day of Josue might consist of eighteen, (C.) or of forty-eight hours.

VER. 14. Long. This word is not found in Heb. "and there was no day like that, before it or after it, that the Lord hearkened unto," &c. But God had often wrought miracles before at the prayer of his servants. The difference between this day and all others, must be therefore in the length, or in the stopping of the heavenly bodies. H.—The long day which the prayer of Ezechias procured, (4 Kings xx., and Isa. xxxviii.,) consisted of thirty-two hours; or, supposing that the retrograde motion of the sun was instantaneous on the dial, it might only be twenty-two hours in length. C.—But if the day of Ezechias had been even longer, the words of this text may be verified that neither in times past, nor while the author lived, had any such day been known. See Anania, p. 383. H.—Obedying. God is ready to grant the requests of his servants. Isa. lviii. 9. "We remark something still stronger, in the power which he has given to priests, to consecrate the body and blood of Jesus Christ in the sacrament of the eucharist." C.

VER. 15. Galgal. Masius supposes that here the quotation from the book of the just terminates. The Roman and Alex. Sept. place this verse at the end of the chapter. C.—Grabe has it in both places with a star, to show that it is taken from Theodotion. H.—In effect, Josue did not return to his camp till he had completed the business of the day, by destroying the five kings. After which he proceeded to conquer that part of the country. He might have designed to return, (C.) and even have begun his march, (D.) when he was diverted from proceeding by the news that the kings had been discovered. So we often say that a person does what he is on the point of doing. See Gen. xxxvii. 21; Num. xxxiv. 25.

VER. 17. City, or territory. C.—The kings had sought their own safety in flight, leaving their people to make their escape as well as they could. But their cowardly behaviour only brought upon them a more dishonourable death. Josue and some of the forces stopped in the environs of Maceda, while the rest pursued after the fugitives, and slew all that had not strength to enter the fenced cities. H.—Then all the army assembled round their leader, took Maceda, and completed the victory of that most memorable day, by the ignominious death of the five kings. C.—God permitted some to escape, lest the land should be overrun with wild beasts (Exod. xxiii. 29); and to instruct us that his children must suffer tribulation, to prevent the growth of vice. W.

VER. 21. No man (nullus). Some supply canis, "dog," alluding to the proverbial expression. Exod. xi. 7. Masius, &c.—Sept. "not one of the Israelites moved his tongue." C.

VER. 24. Feet, as Moses had foretold. Deut. xxxiii. 20. The conduct of 25 He said again to them: Fear not, neither be ye dismayed, take courage, and be strong: for so will the Lord do to all your enemies, against whom you fight.

26 And Josue struck, and slew them, and hanged them upon five gibbets; and they hung until the evening.

27 "And when the sun was down, he commanded the soldiers to take them down from the gibbets. And after they were taken down, they cast them into the cave, where they had lain hid, and put great stones at the mouth thereof, which remain until this day.

28 The same day Josue took Maceda, and destroyed it with the edge of the sword, and killed the king and all the inhabitants thereof: he left not in it the least remains. And he did to the king of Maceda, as he had done to the king of Jericho.

29 And he passed from Maceda with all Israel to Lebna, and fought against it:

30 And the Lord delivered it with the king thereof into the hands of Israel: and they destroyed the city with the edge of the sword, and all the inhabitants thereof. They left not in it any remains. And they did to the king of Lebna, as they had done to the king of Jericho.

31 From Lebna he passed unto Lachis, with all Israel: and investing it with his army, besieged it.

32 And the Lord delivered Lachis into the hands of Israel, and he took it the following day, and put it to the sword, and every soul that was in it, as he had done to Lebna.

33 At that time Horam, king of Gazer, came up to succour Lachis: and Josue slew him with all his people, so as to leave none alive.

34 And he passed from Lachis to Eglon, and surrounded it,

35 And took it the same day: and put to the sword all the souls that were in it, according to all that he had done to Lachis.

36 He went up also with all Israel from Eglon to Hebron, and fought against it:

37 Took it, and destroyed it with the edge of the sword: the king also thereof, and all the towns of that country, and all the souls that dwelt in it: he left not therein any remains: as he had done to Eglon, so did he also to Hebron, putting to the sword all that he found in it.

38 Returning from thence to Dabir,

39 He took it, and destroyed it: the king also thereof, and all the towns round about, he destroyed with the edge of the sword. He left not in it any remains: as he had done to Hebron and Lebna, and to their kings, so did he to Dabir, and to the king thereof.

40 So Josue conquered all the country of the hills, and of the south, and of the plain, and of Asedoth, with their kings: he left not any remains therein, but slew all that breathed, as the Lord, the God of Israel, had commanded him,

41 From Cades-barne even to Guza. All the land of Gosen even to Gabaon, 42 And all their kings, and their lands he took and wasted at one onset: for the Lord the God of Israel fought for him.

43 And he returned with all Israel to the place of the camp in Galgal.

CHAP. XI.

The kings of the north are overthrown: the whole country is taken.

AND when Jabin king of Asor had heard these things, he sent to Jobab, king of Madon, and to the king of Semeron, and to the king of Achsaph:

2 And to the kings of the north, that dwelt in the mountains and in the plains over against the south side of Ceneroth, and in the levels and the countries of Dor by the sea side:

3 To the Chanaanite also, on the east and on the west, and the Amorrite, and the Hethite, and the Pherezite, and the Jebusite, in the mountains: to the Hevite also who dwelt at the foot of Hermon, in the land of Maspha.

4 And they all came out with their troops, a people exceeding numerous as the sand that is on the sea-shore, their horses also and chariots, a very great multitude.

5 And all these kings assembled together at the waters of Merom, to fight against Israel.

6 And the Lord said to Josue: Fear them not: for tomorrow at this same hour I will deliver all these to be slain in the sight of Israel: thou shalt hamstring their horses, and thou shalt burn their chariots with fire.

^a Deut. xxi. 23.

^b Supra, vi. 2.

Josue would appear cruel, if we did not reflect that he was only the executioner of the Divine justice, which was pleased thus to punish these proud and impious princes, that others might not imitate their example.

VER. 30. Lebna, not far from Elcuthropolis. From before this city Senacherib despatched his menacing orders to Ezechias, 4 Kings xix. 8. C.

VER. 32. Lachis was still farther south. Josue took it the second day of the siege.

VER. 33. Gazer, near Azotus, in the country of the Philistines. It is not said that Josue took this city. It was given long after to Solomon by the king of Egypt, 3 Kings ix. 15; chap. xvi. 10. C.

VER. 37. The king, viz. the new king, who succeeded him that was slain, ver. 26. Ch.—Caleb afterwards took Hebron, which, it seems, the Chanaanites had seized again and fortified, while Josue was conquering other parts of the country. He could not leave garrisons in all the cities which he took, and hence he set many of them on fire.

VER. 38. Dabir, which was formerly called Cariath sepher, "the city of the book," (chap. xv. 15,) or of Senna, (ib. 45,) near Hebron. It was taken again by Othniel and Caleb.

VER. 40. Hills of Judea.—South of the promised land.—Plain. Heb. Sephela, a flat country near Eleutheropolis. S. Jer. in Abd. i. 19; 1 Mac. xii. 38.—Asedoth, "of the springs."—Remains. God ordered these people to be utterly destroyed, in punishment of their manifold abominations; and that they might not draw the Israelites into the like sins. Ch.

VER. 41. Gaza. These cities were on the southern limits of the land of Chanaan, and of the Philistines.—Gosen, or Gessen, where the Hebrews had formerly dwelt. It was then very fertile. Chap. xiii. 3. The territory of Juda extended as far as the Nile (C.); or this country may have resembled the country of Gessen. Gen. xli. M.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Jabin, "the intelligent," was perhaps the common name of the kings of Asor, the most powerful city in the northern parts of the country, (ver. 10. C.) not far from the Casarea, (M.) which was built by Philip, where Lais stood before. H.—Being the most interested in this warfare, Jabin assembled all the petty kings of the country as far as Dor, to resist the common enemy. H.

VER. 2. Ceneroth, or having the lake of Genesareth on the south. The city of Cineroth, or of Tiberias, was situated on the southern borders of the lake. S. Jerom.

VER. 3. Chanaanite. Some lived near the Jordan, others upon the Mediterranean.—Maspha. Probably where Laban and Jacob had met. Gen. xxxi. 48.—Hermon lay to the east of Libanus. C.—There was another Hermon near the torrent Cisson. M.

VER. 5. Merom, or the lake of Semechon, according to most interpreters; though it is more probable that the confederates would advance to meet Josue near the lake of Cisson, to the important pass twelve miles north of Samaria, in the canton of Meron, or Merone. Judg. iv. 10, and v. 18. This place was famous for the victory of Barac, and for the defeat of king Josias.

VER. 6. Hamstring their horses, &c. God so ordained, that his people might not trust in chariots and horses, but in him. Ch.—He mentions the very 7 And Josue came, and all the army with him, against them, to the waters of Merom, on a sudden, and fell upon them.

8 And the Lord delivered them into the hands of Israel. And they defeated them, and chased them as far as the great Sidon, and the waters of Maserephoth, and the field of Masphe, which is on the east side thereof. He slew them all, so as to leave no remains of them :

9 And he did as the Lord had commanded him, he hamstrunged their horses, and burnt their chariots.

10 And presently turning back, he took Asor, and slew the king thereof with the sword. Now Asor, of old, was the head of all these kingdoms.

11 And he cut off all the souls that abode there : he left not in it any remains, but utterly destroyed all, and burned the city itself with fire.

12 And he took and put to the sword and destroyed all the cities round about, and their kings, *as Moses, the servant of God, had commanded him :

13 Except the cities that were on hills and high places, the rest Israel burnt : only Asor, that was very strong, he consumed with fire.

14 And the children of Israel divided among themselves all the spoil of these cities, and the cattle, killing all the men.

15 ^bAs the Lord had commanded Moses, his servant, so did Moses command Josue, and he accomplished all : he left not one thing undone, of all the commandments which the Lord had commanded Moses.

16 So Josue took all the country of the hills, and of the south, and the land of Gosen, and the plains, and the west country, and the mountain of Israel, and the plains thereof :

17 And part of the mountain that goeth up to Seir, as far as Baalgad, by the plain of Libanus, under Mount Hermon : all their kings he took, smote, and slew.

18 Josue made war a long time against these kings.

19 There was not a city that delivered itself to the children of Israel, except the Hevite, who dwelt in Gabaon : for he took all by fight.

* Deut. vii. 1.—^b Exod. xxxiv. 11; time, when the victory will be obtained, to inspire the Israelites with greater confidence. Josue had proceeded from Galgal to Meron, about 90 miles; or if he had to go to the Semonite lake, 120 miles. Josephus says he had marched five days.

VER. 8. Thereof. Josue divided his forces, and sent some to pursue the fugitives to Sidon and Sarepta, and others he despatched to the east side of the Jordan.—Sidon was famous for its commerce, and for its glass works. Plin. v. 19.

VER. 10. King. Jabin had thrown himself into the city, or perhaps a new king had been appointed, according to the custom of Persia, &c., when the former went to battle.

VER. 12. Him. Deut. vii. 22. All the Chanaanites in arms are ordered to be slain. C.

VER. 13. Fire. Several towns built on eminences were reserved to keep the country in subjection. But it was thought proper to destroy Asor. Heb. may be, "He burnt not the towns which remained standing, with their fortifications," &c., or such as had opened their gates to the Israelites. Chal., Sept., &c.

VER. 14. Spoil, excepting what was found on the idols, which was burnt. Deut. vii. 25. C.

VER. 16. So. Here follows a recapitulation of the victories of Josue.—Israel, or of Ephraim, which was the chief tribe of the kingdom of Israel; after the commencement of which this seems to have been inserted (C.); or having designated the southern parts by the name of Juda, (ver. 21,) the more northern countries are called the mountain of Israel, which refers particularly to Samaria, or Bethel. H.

VER. 18. A long time. Seven years, as appears from chap. xiv. 10, (Ch.) where Caleb informs us that he was eighty-five years old. He was forty when he went to explore the country, and thirty-eight years were spent in the wilderness. God was pleased to allow the Chanaanites time to repent, and he would not render 20 For it was the sentence of the Lord, that their hearts should be hardened, and they should fight against Israel, and fall, and should not deserve any clemency, and should be destroyed, as the Lord had commanded Moses.

21 At that time Josue came, and cut off the Enacims from the mountains, from Hebron, and Dabir, and Anab, and from all the mountain of Juda and Israel, and destroyed their cities ;

22 He left not any of the stock of the Enacims, in the land of the children of Israel : except the cities of Gaza, and Geth, and Azotus, in which alone they were left.

23 So Josue took all the land, as the Lord spoke to Moses, and delivered it in possession to the children of Israel, according to their divisions and tribes.* And the land rested from wars.

CHAP. XII.

A list of the kings slain by Moses and Josue.

THESE are the kings whom the children of Israel slew, and possessed their land, beyond the Jordan, towards the rising of the sun, from the torrent Arnon unto Mount Hermon, and all the east country that looketh towards the wilderness.

2 Sehon, king of the Amorrites, who dwelt in Hesebon, and had dominion from Aroer, which is seated upon the bank of the torrent Arnon, and of the middle part in the valley, and of half Galaad, as far as the torrent Jaboc, which is the border of the children of Ammon.

3 And from the wilderness to the sea of Ceneroth, towards the east, and to the sea of the wilderness, which is the most salt sea, on the east side, by the way that leadeth to Bethsimoth : and on the south side, that lieth under Asedoth, Phasga.

4 The border of Og, the king of Basan, of the remnant of the Raphaims, who dwelt in Astaroth, and in Edrai, and had dominion in Mount Hermon, and in Salecha, and in all Basan, unto the borders

5 Of Gessuri, and Machati, and of half Galaad : the borders of Sehon, the king of Hesebon.

6 Moses, the servant of the Lord, and the children of the country desolate all at once, lest wild beasts should overrun it. Exod. xxxiii. 19; Wisd. xii. 10. C.

VER. 20. Hardened. This hardening of their hearts, was their having no thought of yielding or submitting : which was a sentence or judgment of God upon them, in punishment of their enormous crimes. Ch.

VER. 21. Time. Among his other conquests, after the victory of Gabaon, Josue defeated the Enacim at Hebron, &c. Many of them fled into the country of the Philistines, and afterwards seized an opportunity of re-establishing themselves, so that Caleb had to drive them out afresh. Chap. xv. 14.—Cities, or inhabitants. We have seen that he did not demolish all the cities, which were built on a commanding situation, ver. 13.—Enacim. Goliath is supposed to have been of this family, being six cubits and a span high, 1 Kings xvii. 4. C.

VER. 22. Gaza, the most southern city of the Philistines, was afterwards taken by the tribe of Juda, but lost again in a short time.—Geth was probably taken by David, who found a refuge with its king, 1 Kings xxi. After the reign of Solomon it returned to its former masters.—Azotus, or as the Heb. writes, Asdod, on the Mediterranean, was noted for the temple of Dagon, (1 Kings v. 1.) which Jonathas destroyed. Joseph. xxii. 8. C.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Wilderness. Heb. "all the plain country (Araba) on the east."

VER. 2. Galaad. Sehon occupied from the middle of the torrent Arnon as far as half of the mountains of Galaad, and the torrent Jaboc. C.—Og possessed the other half of the mountains northward, while the Ammonites had the eastern parts. H.

VER. 3. Bethsimoth is ten miles from Jericho, (Eus.) near the Dead Sea, in the plains of Moab. C.—Phasga. Asedoth lay at the foot of this mountain, being well supplied with water. H.

VER. 4. Og. See Num. xxi. 33; Deut. iii. 11.

Israel slew them, and Moses delivered their land in possession to the Rubenites, and Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasses.

7 These are the kings of the land, whom Josue and the children of Israel slew, beyond the Jordan, on the west side, from Baalgad, in the field of Libanus, unto the mount, part of which goeth up into Seir: and Josue delivered it in possession to the tribes of Israel, to every one their divisions,

8 As well in the mountains as in the plains, and the champaign countries. In Asedoth, and in the wilderness, and in the south, was the Hethite and the Amorrlite, the Chanaanite and the Pherezite, the Hevite and the Jebusite.

9 The king of Jericho, one; the king of Hai, which is on the side of Bethel, one;

10 The king of Jerusalem, one; the king of Hebron, one;

11 The king of Jerimoth, one; the king of Lachis, one;

12 The king of Eglon, one; the king of Gazer, one;

13 The king of Dabir, one; the king of Gader, one;

14 The king of Herma, one; the king of Hered, one;

15 The king of Lebna, one; the king of Odullam, one;

16 The king of Maceda, one; the king of Bethel, one;

17 The king of Taphua, one; the king of Opher, one;

18 The king of Aphec, one; the king of Saron, one;

19 The king of Madon, one; the king of Asor, one;

20 The king of Semeron, one; the king of Achsaph, one;

21 The king of Thenac, one; the king of Mageddo, one;

22 The king of Cades, one; the king of Jachanan, of Carmel, one;

23 The king of Dor, and of the province of Dor, one; the king of the nations of Galgal, one;

24 The king of Thersa, one: all the kings, thirty and one.

a A. M. 2559.

VER. 7. Seir. The same expression occurs, chap. xi. 17. Heb. "from Baalgad, in the vale of Libanus, even unto Mount Halak, that goeth up to Seir." H. —Halak means, "bald, or naked." It is not known what mountain it denotes. Josue, (C.) or the Israelites, (H.) conquered "all the country beyond the Jordan, on the north from Baalgad, at the foot of Libanus, and from Hermon, where these mountains meet, as far as the mountains of separation," which divide the country of Chanaan from that of Seir, on the south of Judea. C.—Baalgad was situated on the north-western borders of this territory, not of the Jordan. H.

VER. 8. Asedoth, or "in the springs," or valleys, ver. 3.

VER. 14. Herma; "a curse," where the Israelites defeated king Arad. Num. xiv. 45, and xxi. 3.

VER. 15. Odullam, ten miles east of Eleutheropolis, and famous for the retreat of David. C.

VER. 16. Bethel. Josue perhaps slew the king, but did not take the city. Judg. i. 22. M.

VER. 18. Aphec. A place of this name was in the tribe of Aser, another in that of Juda.—Saron. Heb. "Lasaron;" probably Sarona, (Acts ix. 35,) or a canton near Joppa. Euseb.

VER. 19. Madon, or Maron. Sept. chap. xi. 1. This place is joined with Semeron, in Heb. (ver. 20,) improperly. Perhaps it may be the Meros, (Judg. i. 23,) or Maronia, a city of Phœnicia.

VER. 21. Thenac, a city of the Levites, but seized afterwards by the Chanaanites. Judg. i. 27. It was near the town of Legion, built by the Romans.—Mageddo, where Josias was overcome, 2 Par. xxxv. 22. C.

VER. 22. Jachanan was near Mount Carmel. Sometimes Josue specifies both the city and the canton where it was situated; at other times he only mentions the latter, as in the following verse.

VER. 23. Galgal, not where the Israelites had encamped, but that part which was afterwards called the Galilee of the Gentiles, in some corner of which the king in question had fixed his residence. For we cannot suppose that he ruled over all that country, extending from Tyre to beyond the Jordan

CHAP. XIII.

God commandeth Josue to divide the land: the possessions of Ruben, Gad and half the tribe of Manasses, beyond the Jordan.

JOSUE was old,^a and far advanced in years, and the Lord said to him: Thou art grown old, and advanced in age, and there is a very large country left, which is not yet divided by lot,

2 To wit, all Galilee, Philistia, and all Gessuri.

3 From the troubled river, that watereth Egypt, unto the borders of Accaron northward: the land of Chanaan, which is divided among the lords of the Philistines, the Gazites, the Azotians, the Ascalonites, the Gethites, and the Accaronites.

4 And on the south side are the Hevites, all the land of Chanaan, and Maara of the Sidonians, as far as Apheca, and the borders of the Amorrlite,

5 And his confines. The country also of Libanus toward the east, from Baalgad under Mount Hermon, to the entering into Emath.

6 Of all that dwell in the mountains, from Libanus to the waters of Maserephoth, and all the Sidonians. I am he that will cut them off from before the face of the children of Israel. So let their land come in as a part of the inheritance of Israel, as I have commanded thee.

7 And now divide the land in possession to the nine tribes, and to the half tribe of Manasses,

8 With whom Ruben and Gad have possessed the land, which Moses, the servant of the Lord, delivered to them beyond the river Jordan, on the east side.

9 From Aroer, which is upon the bank of the torrent Arnon, and in the midst of the valley, and all the plains of Medaba, as far as Dibon:

10 And all the cities of Sehon, king of the Amorrlites, who reigned in Hesebon, unto the borders of the children of Ammon.

11 And Galiad, and the borders of Gessuri and Machati, and all Mount Hermon, and all Basan, as far as Salecha, b Num. xxxii. 33.

VER. 24. Thersa. Here the kings of Israel kept their court, till Amri built Samaria, (C.) about nine miles more to the north. Brocard.—One. The two kings slain by Moses (W.) are not included. M.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Age. Josue was now one hundred years old. He lived ten more, (C.) having governed the people in all seventeen. H.—Lot. Heb. "to be possessed." Only the country east of the Jordan was yet divided.

VER. 2. Galilee. As Josue had been making such conquests in that part lately, some would translate Goliluth, "the confines" of the Philistines, in which sense it seems to be taken. Chap. xviii. 18, and xxii. 10. C.—Bonfrere suspects that S. Jerom wrote Galila.—Gessuri, either near Mount Hermon, (M.) or bordering upon Arabia. 1 Kings xv., and xxvii. 10.

VER. 3. Egypt. Heb. "from the Sieûr, (or Sichor,) which is on the face, (or over against) Egypt." Jeremias (ii. 18) informs us that this river was in Egypt, which is not true of the torrent of Rhinocorure; which the Sept. and many commentators understand in this place to be the boundary fixed for the promised land. Strabo, &c. attribute that torrent to Phœnicia; which they extend as far as Pelusium. S. Jerom (in Amos vi.) seems dubious whether the branch of the Nile passes by that city, or the aforesaid torrent he meant. David collected all his forces from the Sichor, or the torrent of Egypt, to the entrance of Emath. 1 Par. xiii. 5. Epiphanes constituted Lysanias governor of all the countries between the Euphrates and the river of Egypt, (2 Mac. iii. 32,) and he undoubtedly had extended his conquests as far as the Nile. Though the country beyond Gaza be now mostly barren, and therefore little inhabited or noticed, yet the Israelites were entitled to assert their right to it, as they seem to have done by taking possession of Gosen. Chap. x. 41. Some parts were formerly well peopled, 1 Kings xxvii. 8. It is not unusual for the Nile, and other great rivers, to be styled torrents. The Heb. nêl, is often applied to rivers. Eccle. i. 7. C.—Accaron, the most northern city of the Philistian principalities, (H.) attributed to Juda or Dan, though neither held it for any length of time.

VER. 8. With whom. That is, with the other half of that same tribe.

VER. 9. Aroer, and part of the town of Dibon, belonged to Gad. Num. xxxii. 34

12 All the kingdom of Og, in Basan, who reigned in Astaroth and Edrai, he was of the remains of the Raphaims; and Moses overthrew and destroyed them.

13 And the children of Israel would not destroy Gessari and Machati: and they have dwelt in the midst of Israel, until this present day.

14 *But to the tribe of Levi he gave no possession: but the sacrifices and victims of the Lord God of Israel, are his inheritance, as he spoke to him.

15 And Moses gave a possession to the children of Ruben, according to their kindreds.

16 And their border was from Aroer, which is on the bank of the torrent Arnon, and in the midst of the valley of the same torrent: all the plain that leadeth to Medaba,

17 And Hesebon, and all their villages, which are in the plains. Dibon also, and Bamothbaal, and the town of Baalmaon,

18 And Jassa, and Cedimoth, and Mephaath,

19 And Cariathaim, and Sabama, and Sarathasar in the mountain of the valley.

20 Bethphogor and Asedoth, Phasga and Bethiesimoth,

21 And all the cities of the plain, and all the kingdoms of Sehon, king of the Amorrites, that reigned in Hesebon,^b whom Moses slew, with the princes of Madian: Hevi, and Recem, and Sur, and Hur, and Rebe, dukes of Sehon, inhabitants of the land.

22 Balaam also, the son of Beor, the soothsayer, the children of Israel slew with the sword, among the rest that were slain.

23 And the river Jordan was the border of the children of Ruben. This is the possession of the Rubenites, by their kindreds, of cities and villages.

24 And Moses gave to the tribe of Gad, and to his children, by their kindreds, a possession, of which this is the division.

25 The border of Jaser, and all the cities of Galaad, and half the land of the children of Ammon; as far as Aroer, which is over against Rabba:

26 And from Hesebon unto Ramoth, Masphe, and Betonim: and from Manaim unto the borders of Dabir.

27 And in the valley Betharan, and Bethnemra, and Socoth, and Saphon, the other part of the kingdom of Sehon, king of Hesebon: the limit of this also is the Jordan, as far as the uttermost part of the sea of Cenereth, beyond the Jordan, on the east side.

28 This is the possession of the children of Gad, by their families, their cities, and villages.

VER. 13. Day. The Israelites were satisfied with what they had already conquered. M.—But herein they deserved blame, as they were ordered to reduce them entirely, and never suffer them to continue their idolatrous practices in the country which God had chosen for his people. H.

VER. 18. Mephaath, near the desert, where the Romans afterwards kept a garrison. It was given to the Levites, but was seized by the Moabites after the reign of David. C.

VER. 21. The princes of Madian. It appears from hence that these were subjects of king Sehon: they are said to have been slain with him, that is, about the same time, but not in the same battle. Ch.

VER. 22. Suin. Sept. "they slew Balaam . . with the sword in the moment." Num. xxii. 5, and xxxi. 8. H.

VER. 25. Rabba, "the great," being a title of Ar, the capital of the Moabites.

VER. 30. Towns, which were conquered by Jair, of the tribe of Juda; though he belonged, in some degree, to that of Manasses, by his grandmother. Num. xxii. 41.

29 He gave also to the half tribe of Manasses, and his children, possession according to their kindreds,

30 The beginning whereof is this: from Manaim, all Basan, and all the kingdoms of Og, king of Basan, and all the villages of Jair, which are in Basan, threescore towns:

31 And half Galaad, and Astaroth, and Edrai, cities of the kingdom of Og, in Basan: to the children of Machir, the son of Manasses, to one half of the children of Machir, according to their kindreds.

32 This possession Moses divided in the plains of Moab, beyond the Jordan, over against Jericho, on the east side.

33 *But to the tribe of Levi he gave no possession: because the Lord, the God of Israel, himself is their possession, as he spoke to them.

CHAP. XIV.

Caleb's petition. Hebron is given to him, and to his seed.

THIS is what the children of Israel possessed in the land of Chanaan, which Eleazar the priest, and Josue, the son of Nun, and the princes of the families, by the tribes of Israel, gave to them:

2 Dividing all by lot, "as the Lord had commanded by the hand of Moses, to the nine tribes, and the half tribe.

3 For to two tribes and a half, Moses had given possession beyond the Jordan: besides the Levites, who received no land among their brethren:

4 But in their place succeeded the children of Joseph, divided into two tribes, of Manasses and Ephraim: neither did the Levites receive other portion of land, but cities to dwell in, and their suburbs to feed their beasts and flocks.

5 As the Lord had commanded Moses, so did the children of Israel, and they divided the land.

6 Then the children of Juda came to Josue, in Galgal; and Caleb, the son of Jephone, the Cenezite, spoke to him: "Thou knowest what the Lord spoke to Moses, the man of God, concerning me and thee in Cades-barne.

7 I was forty years old when Moses, the servant of the Lord, sent me 'from Cades-barne, to view the land, and I brought him word again as to me seemed true.

8 But my brethren, that had gone up with me, discouraged the heart of the people: and I nevertheless followed the Lord my God.

9 And Moses swore in that day, saying: The land which thy foot hath trodden upon, shall be thy possession, ^d Num. xxxiii. 13.—^e Num. xiv. 24.—^f Deut. ii. 14.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Princes, whose names are given, Num. xxxiv. 17. There were twelve, including Josue and Eleazar. The tribes of Ruben and Gad sent none of their princes, as they were not concerned in this distribution.

VER. 2. Tribe. God regulated the lots, as he had authorized Jacob and Moses to foretell how the country should be divided.—Only the tribes of Juda and of Joseph received their portions at Galgal. Chap. xviii.

VER. 4. Suburbs. A certain quantity of ground, which the Levites were not allowed to till or plant with vines. Grot. Num. xxxv. 4.—The tribe of Manasses, which was divided, fell heir to the portion which would have been allotted to Levi, who was also scattered among his brethren. H.—Thus Joseph obtained the birth-right of Ruben. C.—Twelve portions were made, as Jacob had adopted Ephraim and Manasses. Gen. xlviii. W.

VER. 6. Jephone was the father of Caleb. Esron and Cenez, probably some of his ancestors, 1 Par. ii. 18; Num. xxxiii. 12. What Caleb here asserts must have been delivered by word of mouth, in the hearing of the people. Deut. i. 36. Moses declared not that Caleb was to have the whole country, but that he should enter into it, and possess the environs of Hebron. C.

and thy children's, for ever, because thou hast followed the Lord my God.

10 The Lord therefore hath granted me life, as he promised, until this present day. It is forty and five years since the Lord spoke this word to Moses, when Israel journeyed through the wilderness: this day I am eighty-five years old.

11 As strong as I was at that time when I was sent to view the land:^a the strength of that time continueth in me until this day, as well to fight, as to march.

12 Give me therefore this mountain, which the Lord promised, in thy hearing also, wherein are the Enacims, and cities great and strong: if so be the Lord will be with me, and I shall be able to destroy them, as he promised me.

13 And Josue blessed him, and gave him Hebron in possession.

14 And from that time Hebron belonged to Caleb, the son of Jephone, the Cenezite, until this present day: because he followed the Lord, the God of Israel.

15 The name of Hebron before was called Cariath Arbe: Adam, the greatest among the Enacims, was laid there:^b and the land rested from wars.

CHAP. XV.

The borders of the lot of Juda. Caleb's portion and conquest. The cities of Juda.

NOW 'the lot of the children of Juda, by their kindreds, was this:'^a From the frontier of Edom, to the desert of Sin, southward, and to the uttermost part of the south coast.

2 Its beginning was from the top of the most salt sea, and from the bay thereof, that looketh to the south:

3 And it goeth out towards the ascent of the Scorpion, and passeth on to Sinai: and ascendeth into Cades-barne, and reacheth into Esron, going up to Addar, and compassing Carcaa,

4 And from thence passing along into Asemona, and reaching the torrent of Egypt: and the bounds thereof shall be the great sea: this shall be the limit of the south coast.

5 But on the east side, the beginning shall be the most salt sea, even to the end of the Jordan: and towards the north, from the bay of the sea unto the same river Jordan.

6 And the border goeth up into Beth-Hagla, and passeth by the north into Beth-Araba: going up to the stone of Boen, the son of Ruben:

7 And reaching as far as the borders of Debara, from the valley of Achor, and so northward, looking towards Galgal, which is opposite to the ascent of Adommim, on the south side of the torrent: and the border passeth the waters that are called the fountain of the sun: and the goings out thereof shall be at the fountain Rogel.

8 And it goeth up by the valley of the son of Ennom, on the side of the Jebusite towards the south, the same is Jerusalem: and thence ascending to the top of the mountain, which is over against Geennom to the west, in the end of the valley of Raphaim, northward.

9 And it passeth on from the top of the mountain, to the fountain of the water of Nephtoa: and reacheth to the towns of Mount Ephron: and it bendeth towards Baala, which is Cariathiarim, that is to say, the city of the woods.

10 And it compasseth from Baala westward, unto Mount Seir: and passeth by the side of Mount Jarim to the north into Cheslon: and goeth down into Bethsames, and passeth into Thamna.

11 And it reacheth northward to a part of Accaron, at the side: and bendeth to Sechrona, and passeth Mount Baala: and cometh into Jebneel, and is bounded westward with the great sea.

12 These are the borders round about of the children of Juda, in their kindreds.

13 But to Caleb, the son of Jephone, he gave a portion in the midst of the children of Juda, as the Lord had commanded him: Cariath Arbe, the father of Enac, which is Hebron.

^a Eccl. xlii. 11.—^b Supra, xi. 23.

^c A. M. 2560.—^d Num. xxxiv. 3.

VER. 11. March. Heb. "to enter and to go out." Sept. add, "to war."

VER. 12. Me. He trusts not in his own strength, but in the assistance of God, which he modestly acknowledges is not due to him. C.

VER. 13. Blessed him, wishing him all success.—Gave him. Some think that Josue himself attacked the giants of that country with all the forces, as it is mentioned by anticipation. Chap. x. 28. But there seems to be no need of this, as Caleb might attack them a second time with his own family and the assistance of the tribe of Juda, after they had seized those places again, while Josue was in the north. Hebron was granted to him without drawing lots. When he was besieging Cariath Sepher, he promised his daughter to the person who should first enter; and Othoniel, his brother, or nephew, obtained her in marriage. Chap. xv. 17; Judg. i. 10. C.

VER. 14. Hebron belonged, &c. All the country thereabouts, depending on Hebron, was given to Caleb; but the city itself, with the suburbs, was one of those that were given to the priests to dwell in. Ch.

VER. 15. Cariath Arbe, "the city of Arbe," an ancient giant; or "of four," which the Jews explain of four great patriarchs, who were buried there.—Adam, &c. S. Jerom seems to favour the opinion that Adam was one of those whose tomb ennobled Hebron, though many of the Fathers think he was buried on Mount Calvary. Others think that his body, or skull at least, was translated thither. But we cannot depend on any of these traditions. Most commentators explain the Heb. "The ancient name of Hebron was Cariath Arbe (C.); he was a man great among the Enacim." H.—Adam is often put for a man in general, 2 Kings vii. 19; Osee xi. C. Amama.—Sept. "the city of Arbo. This was the metropolis of the Enacim." H.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. Sin, or Sina, (ver. 3,) bordering upon Idumea, where the city of Cades-barne was situated. Num. xiii. 22. It is now impossible to ascertain the precise situation of all the places mentioned in Scripture, as the land of Chanaan has been subject to so many changes. But this inconvenience attends all ancient geography. It was once very necessary to have the limits of the tribes marked out with precision, that, at the return from captivity, they might occupy their own. Now we may be satisfied if we can point out some of the places of the greatest importance. The limits of the tribe of Juda are specified with particular care, on account of the dignity and power of that tribe, which was to give kings to all the land, and a Messias to the world, as well as to preserve the true religion. The greatest part of the southern regions of Chanaan fell to their share, from the Dead Sea, by Idumea, to the Nile, and as far north as Jerusalem and the torrent of Cedron. C.

VER. 2. Bay, (lingua,) tongue. Chal. "a promontory," or rather a gulf. C.

VER. 3. Scorpion. A mountain infested with those creatures, by which people travelled from Idumea into Chanaan, leaving Sina on the left.

VER. 4. Asemona, which lies nearest to the river of Egypt of all the cities of Juda. Num. xxxiv. 4; chap. xiii. 3.

VER. 5. Jordan, where it discharges itself into the Dead Sea.

VER. 6. Stone. It is not certain that this was a city.

VER. 7. Galgal. Heb. Geiliah, may designate "the limits." The valley of Achor lay south of Galgal.—Sun. Heb. "En-Shemesh." It was not a city.—Rogel, "of the fuller." This fountain was in the king's gardens, running eastward from Zion into the torrent of Cedron. Joseph. vii. 11. It was used to wash linen. Rogel signifies "to trample on," as they formerly washed their linen with their feet.

VER. 8. Ennom. Heb. "Ge-ben-Ennom," or simply Ge-ennom, whence Gehennas has probably been formed. In this vale children were immolated to Moloch: the beating of drums, to hinder their lamentations from being heard, caused it perhaps to be called Tophet. It was to the east of Jerusalem. (C.) inclining to the south. H.—Northward. The valley extends south to Bethlehem. Joseph. vii. 10. Here David gained a great victory, 2 Kings v. 23. C.

VER. 10. Bethsames, "the house of the sun," was at the same distance westward. C.

VER. 13. Arbe, who was the father and the greatest man of the race of Enac. Chap. xiv. 15. H.

14 *And Caleb destroyed out of it the three sons of Enac, Sesai, and Ahiman, and Tholmai, of the race of Enac.

15 And going up from thence, he came to the inhabitants of Dabir, which before was called Cariath Sepher, that is to say, the city of letters.

16 And Caleb said: He that shall smite Cariath Sepher, and take it, I will give him Axa, my daughter, to wife.

17 And Othoniel, the son of Cenez, the younger brother of Caleb, took it: and he gave him Axa, his daughter, to wife.

18 And as they were going together, she was moved by her husband to ask a field of her father, and she sighed as she sat on her ass. And Caleb said to her: What ail-eth thee?

19 But she answered: Give me a blessing: thou hast given me a southern and dry land, give me also a land that is watered. And Caleb gave her the upper and the nether watery ground.

20 This is the possession of the tribe of the children of Juda, by their kindreds.

21 And the cities from the uttermost parts of the children of Juda, by the borders of Edom, to the south: were Gabseel, and Eder, and Jagur,

22 And Cina, and Dimona, and Adada,

23 And Cades, and Asor, and Jethnam,

24 Ziph, and Telem, and Baloth,

25 New Asor and Carioth, Hesron, which is Asor.

26 Amam, Sama, and Molada,

27 And Asergadda, and Hassemon, and Bethphelet,

28 And Hasersual, and Bersabee, and Bazioutha,

29 And Baala, and Jim, and Esem,

30 And Eltholad, and Cesil, and Harma,

31 And Siceleg, and Medemena, and Sensenna,

32 Lebaoth, and Selim, and Aen, and Remmon: all the cities, twenty-nine, and their villages.

33 But in the plains: Estaol, and Sarca, and Asena,

* Judg. i. 20; Num. xiii. 23.

VER. 14. Enac. These three giants were at Hebron when the spies came thither. Num. xiii.

VER. 15. Letters, as the Sept. render it. S. Jerom adds this interpretation. II.—It means literally “the city of the book.” Senna may also mean “instruction,” ver. 49. Here probably a famous school was kept, before the arrival of the Israelites; or the archives of the nation might be deposited among these giants, as the Chal. Kariat-arche, “the city of the library, or archives,” insinuates. Bochart, Phaleg. ii. 17.

VER. 17. Brother. It is not clear in the original whether this relate to Cenez or to Othoniel, (II.) as younger is not found in Heb., but it is in the Syr., Sept., and Judg. i. 13. Many think that Cenez was the brother of Caleb. In confirmation of the Vulg. we may remark, that Cenez is never (C.) clearly (II.) represented as the brother of Caleb; and there is no inconvenience in asserting that Othoniel was the brother of the latter, whether we take this word to denote a near relation, or strictly. In the former supposition, Othoniel might marry his cousin, Axa, the daughter of Caleb, while he himself was descended from Cenez, the brother of Jephone. C.—But if we take the word strictly, as the remark of his being younger brother, both here and Judg. i. 13, may seem to imply, we must then allow that Othoniel followed the custom of his nation, (II.) in marrying his niece. M.

VER. 18. Was moved; as the Syr., Arab., Junius, &c. represent the matter. Others render the Heb. in a different sense: “she moved him to ask of her father a field, and she lighted off her ass, and Caleb said unto her,” &c., which seems very abrupt, as she herself is represented as soliciting for the favour in the next verse, instead of her husband. The Chaldee supposes that she was restrained by natural modesty from preferring the petition; but when Othoniel refused to do it, or was denied what he requested, she took courage and asked herself. The sense of the Vulgate seems more natural, (C.) as the husband might easily suppose that she would have greater influence with her father. H.—Sighed. The original term is found only in this history, and in that of the death of Sisara, Judg. iv. 21. Sept. “she cried out.” Others translate, “she remained fixed,” (M.) or “she waited sitting on the ass,” till she had obtained her request.

VER. 19. Blessing, or “favour, present,” &c. 1 Kings xxv. 27. C.—And dry.

34 And Zanoë, and Engannim, and Taphua, and Enaim.

35 And Jerimoth, and Adullain, Socho, and Azeca,

36 And Saraim, and Adithaim, and Gedera, and Gederotnaim: fourteen cities, and their villages.

39 Lachis, and Bascath, and Eglon,

40 Chebbon, and Leleman, and Cethlis,

41 And Gideroth, and Bethdagon, and Naama, and Maceda: sixteen cities, and their villages.

42 Labana, and Ethier, and Asan,

43 Jephtha, and Esna, and Nesib,

44 And Ceila, and Achzib, and Maresa: nine cities, and their villages.

45 Accaron, with the towns and villages thereof.

46 From Accaron, even to the sea: all places that lie towards Azotus, and the villages thereof

47 Azotus, with its towns and villages. Gaza, with its towns and villages, even to the torrent of Egypt, and the great sea, that is the border thereof.

48 And in the mountain: Samir, and Jether, and Socoth,

49 And Dauna, and Cariath-senna, that is Dabir:

50 Anab, and Istemo, and Anim,

51 Gosen, and Olon, and Gilo: eleven cities, and their villages.

52 Arab, and Ruma, and Esaan,

53 And Janum, and Bethaphua, and Apheca,

54 Athmatha, and Cariath Arbe, this is Hebron, and Sior: nine cities, and their villages.

55 Maon, and Carmel, and Ziph, and Jota,

56 Jezrael, and Jucadain, and Zanoë,

57 Accain, Gabaa, and Thamna: ten cities, and their villages.

58 Halhul, and Bessur, and Gedor,

59 Mareth, and Bethanoth, and Eltecon: six cities, and their villages.

This is a further explanation of southern; as the lands in that situation being exposed to the sun-beams, in Palestine, are often destitute of sufficient moisture, which is the cause of the sterility of Mount Hebal, &c.—Watered and ground Heb. “springs of water, and he gave her the upper springs and the lower springs.” Aquila leaves springs untranslated. II.—Golgot. Sept. “Golathmair, and the upper Golath,” &c. Sym. translates, “possession on the high places.” Judg. i. C.

VER. 25. New Asor, to distinguish it from the capital of Jabin, in the north. This was dependent on Ascalon. Euseb.—Heb. “and Hazor, Hadatta, and (or) Keriath (‘the towns’) of Hebron, which is Hazor.” The Sept. only specify the same town of Asor by different names. There was one towards Arabia. Num. xi. 35.

VER. 28. Bersabee, noted for the residence of Abraham, &c.

VER. 31. Siceleg. The Philistines kept possession of it till king Achis gave it to David; and it continued afterwards the property of the kings of Juda.

VER. 32. Villages. Twenty-nine of the former cities were of greater note, the six, or taking in the three belonging to Caleb, the nine others which are mentioned, (C.) were only villages. M.

VER. 33. Plains. Heb. Schephala, near Eleutheropolis. Chap. x. 40. — Estaol was afterwards given to Dan. Samson was buried near it and Sarca Judg. xvi.

VER. 36. Fourteen. One of those mentioned above may have been a village. M.

VER. 44. Ceila, which David took from the Philistines, and where he was nearly betrayed into the hands of Saul, 1 Kings xxiii

VER. 55. Carmel. Not where Elias dwelt, but a city and mountain ten miles east of Eleutheropolis. Nabal rendered it famous by his imprudence, (1 Kings xxv.) and Saul by a triumphal arch, 1 Kings xv. 12.

VER. 58. Bessur. About twenty miles from Jerusalem, fortified by Simon, 1 Mac. xiv. 33.

VER. 59. Eltecon: given afterwards to the tribe of Dan, (chap. xix. 44,) and then to the Levites. Chap. xxi. 13. The Alex. Sept. here add many cities, which are omitted in Heb. C.—“Theco and Ephrata, (this is Bethlehem,) and Phagor and Artam, and Koulon, and Tatami, and Sores, and Karem, and Gallim, and”

60 Cariathbaal, the same is Cariathiarim, the city of woods, and Arebba: two cities, and their villages.

61 In the desert Betharaba, Meddin, and Sachacha,

62 And Nebsān, and the city of salt, and Engaddi: six cities, and their villages.

63 But the children of Juda could not destroy the Jebusite, that dwelt in Jerusalem: and the Jebusite dwelt with the children of Juda, in Jerusalem, until this present day.

CHAP. XVI.

The lot of the sons of Joseph. The borders of the tribe of Ephraim.

AND ^athe lot of the sons of Joseph fell from the Jordan over against Jericho, and the waters thereof, on the east: the wilderness which goeth up from Jericho to the mountain of Bethel:

2 And goeth out from Bethel to Luza: and passeth the border of Archi, to Atharoth:

3 And goeth down westward, by the border of Jephleti, unto the borders of Bethoron the nether, and to Gazer: and the countries of it are ended by the great sea:

4 And Manasses and Ephraim, the children of Joseph, possessed it.

5 And the border of the children of Ephraim was according to their kindreds: and their possession towards the east, was Atharoth-addar unto Bethoron the upper.

6 And the confines go out unto the sea: but Machmethath looketh to the north, and it goeth round the borders eastward into Thanath-selo; and passeth along on the east side to Janoe:

7 And it goeth down from Janoe into Atharoth and Naaratha: and it cometh to Jericho, and goeth out to the Jordan.

Baither, and Mancho, eleven cities, and their villages." H. See S. Jer. in Mic. v. 1. C. Deut. xxvii. 4.—Dr. Wall says, "these cities were doubtless in the Heb. copy of the Sept.," and "they are of such a nature that it is scarcely possible to think them an interpolation." The former critic thinks "the omission in the Heb. was occasioned by the word villages occurring immediately before, and at the end of the words thus omitted; and indeed the same word occurring in different places has been the cause of many and great omissions in the Heb. MSS. He thinks it less likely that the Jews should have designedly omitted Bethlehem here, because that place is mentioned as belonging to Juda, in several other parts of Scripture." But is Ephrata ever joined with it, except in this passage, and in the text of Micheas? "And, therefore, though this remarkable omission was probably owing, at first, to some transcriber's mistake, its not being reinserted might be owing to the reason specified by S. Jerom, out of malice to Christianity." Kennicott, 2 Diss. 56.—S. Jerom will not decide absolutely whether the Jews have erased these cities, or the Sept. have inserted them. As he undertook to translate the Hebrew as he found it, he has not admitted these cities into his translation, though there seems to be abundant reason for supposing that they are genuine. H.

VER. 62. Salt. Bonfrere supposes it is Segor, which was preserved for Lot's sake.—Engaddi, which was famous for its balm and palm trees, in the desert of Jericho. Solin. 35.—We may here remark, that in the preceding catalogues many towns are repeated, like Zanoë, (ver. 34, and 56,) and others are left out. Some are also afterwards attributed to other tribes. Hence some have inferred that alterations have been made in the original copies. But we may rather believe that the reason of these variations is because the cities were parcelled out among the ten families of Juda, (1 Par. ii. 3,) as was the case in the distribution of land to Manasses (chap. xvii. 2); and hence the same cities were sometimes given to two different families. C.

VER. 63. Jerusalem. The Benjamites claimed the northern part of this city (H.), and they did not drive out the Jebusites, but lived with them. Judg. i. 21. The tribe of Juda had burnt a part of the city, ib. ver. 8. But it seems the Jebusites kept their hold, (C.) at least in the citadel, (H.) and frequently in the lower town, till they were entirely banished by David, 2 Kings v. 7. See Judg. xix. 11. C.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. Joseph. The double portion is given to him, as Ruben forfeited his birth-right. Chal. W.—Waters; or the celebrated fountain, which renders the territory so fruitful, and which was made sweet by Eliseus casting salt sea. This is the possession of the tribe of the children of Ephraim, by their families.

9 And there were cities with their villages, separated for the children of Ephraim, in the midst of the possession of the children of Manasses.

10 And the children of Ephraim slew not the Chanaanite, who dwelt in Gazer: and the Chanaanite dwelt in the midst of Ephraim until this day, paying tribute.

CHAP. XVII.

The lot of the half tribe of Manasses.

AND ^athis lot fell to the tribe of Manasses, (for he is the first-born of Joseph,) to Machir, the first-born of Manasses, the father of Galaad, who was a warlike man, and had for possession Galaad and Basan:

2 And to the rest of the children of Manasses, according to their families: to the children of Abiezer, and to the children of Helec, and to the children of Esriel, and to the children of Sechem, and to the children of Hephher, and to the children of Semida; these are the male children of Manasses, the son of Joseph, by their kindreds.

3 But Salphaad, the son of Hephher, the son of Galaad, the son of Machir, the son of Manasses, had no sons, but only daughters: whose names are these, Maala, and Noa, and Hegla, and Melcha, and Thersa.

4 And they came in the presence of Eleazar, the priest, and of Josue, the son of Nun, and of the princes, saying: The Lord commanded by the hand of Moses, that a possession should be given us in the midst of our brethren. And he gave them, according to the commandment of the Lord, a possession amongst the brethren of their father.

5 And there fell ten portions to Manasses, beside the land of Galaad and Basan, beyond the Jordan.

salt into it, 4 Kings ii. 19.—Wilderness of Bethaven. Chap. xviii. 12, and viii. 14. C.—Which is not to be referred to wilderness, but to the word lot. Masius. M.

VER. 2. To Luza. The Vulg. reads Bethel Luza, which may be supposed to be two names (chap. xviii. 13. H.) for the same city. M. Gen. xxviii. 29.—Bethel was probably the country, (C.) or mountain, (H.) to the east of Luza, on the frontiers of Benjamin and of Ephraim; for which reason it is sometimes attributed to both.

VER. 3. Nether. See chap. x. 11. The upper Bethoron was of much less note, near the Jordan.—Gazer was in the vicinity of Azotus, 1 Mac. xiv. 34; chap. x. 33. C.

VER. 4. Possessed it, or divided the country between them. The territories of Ephraim are henceforward described to the end of the chapter. M.

VER. 6. Looketh to the north, &c. The meaning is, that the border went towards the north, by Machmethath; and then turned eastward to Thanath-selo. Ch.—Borders. It should be terminus. "The border turneth eastward." Sept. Bonfrere.—Janoe, twelve miles east of Sichem. Euseb. 4 Kings xv. 29.

VER. 8. Reeds. Sept. "of Cana." The vale belonged to Manasses, but the cities were ceded to Ephraim, ver. 9; chap. xvii. 19. The limits of these two tribes are very confused. C.—Most salt. The epithet is not found in Heb. or Sept., (C.) and Serarius thinks it has crept in here by mistake. M.

VER. 10. Gazer. It is not certain when the Ephraimites rendered this city tributary, or when it threw off the yoke. The king of Egypt afterwards conquered it, and gave it with his daughter to Solomon. Chap. x. 33. C. See Judg. i. 29.—The negligence of Ephraim was contrary to God's order. Exod. xx. M.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. Born. Machir was the only son of Manasses. But the Scripture uses the word first-born for such, as it does for our Saviour. Matt. i. M.—If Machir was living when Moses assigned the territory to the half tribe of Manasses, he must have been a hundred and eighty years old. G.—But he probably received the inheritance only in his posterity. H.

VER. 2. Children here comprises grandchildren, &c. These who are specified sprang from Galaad or from Jair, as they all dwelt on the east side of the Jordan, 1 Par. v. 23, and vii. 14. C.

VER. 5. Jordan. Some of the families, which had possessions there already, were permitted to have a share on the west side also. Here Manasses had ten portions, schœnus, or cords, which Herodotus (ii. 6) reckons to contain each sixty stadia; so that he would have six hundred stadia, (C.) or at least half of that quantity. Chap. xv. 58. Herod. ii. H.

in the midst of his sons. And the land of Galaad fell to the lot of the rest of the children of Manasses.

7 And the border of Manasses was from Aser, Machmethath, which looketh towards Sichem: and it goeth out on the right hand by the inhabitants of the fountain of Taphua.

8 For the lot of Manasses took in the land of Taphua, which is on the borders of Manasses, and belongs to the children of Ephraim.

9 And the border goeth down to the valley of the reeds, to the south of the torrent of the cities of Ephraim, which are in the midst of the cities of Manasses: the border of Manasses is on the north side of the torrent, and the outgoings of it are at the sea:

10 So that the possession of Ephraim is on the south, and on the north that of Manasses, and the sea is the border of both; and they are joined together in the tribe of Aser, on the north, and in the tribe of Issachar, on the east.

11 And the inheritance of Manasses, in Issachar and in Aser, was Bethsan and its villages, and Jebllaam with its villages, and the inhabitants of Dor, with the towns thereof: the inhabitants also of Endor, with the villages thereof: and in like manner the inhabitants of Thenac, with the villages thereof: and the inhabitants of Mageddo, with their villages: and the third part of the city of Nopheth.

12 Neither could the children of Manasses overthrow these cities, but the Chanaanite began to dwell in his land.

13 But after that the children of Israel were grown strong, they subdued the Chanaanites, and made them their tributaries, and they did not kill them.

14 And the children of Joseph spoke to Josue, and said: Why hast thou given me but one lot and one portion to possess, whereas I am of so great a multitude, and the Lord hath blessed me?

15 And Josue said to them: If thou be a great people, go up into the woodland, and cut down room for thyself, in the land of the Pherezite and the Raphaims: because the possession of Mount Ephraim is too narrow for thee.

16 And the children of Joseph answered him: We cannot go up to the mountains, for the Chanaanites that dwell in the low lands, (wherein are situate Bethsan, with its towns, and Jezrael, in the midst of the valley,) have chariots of iron.

17 And Josue said to the house of Joseph, to Ephraim and Manasses: Thou art a great people, and of great strength, thou shalt not have one lot only:

18 But thou shalt pass to the mountain, and shalt cut down the wood, and make thyself room to dwell in: and mayst proceed farther, when thou hast destroyed the Chanaanite, who, as thou sayst, hath iron chariots, and is very strong.

Surveyors are sent to divide the rest of the land into seven parts, for the other seven tribes. The lot of Benjamin.

AND^a all the children of Israel assembled together in Silo, and there they set up the tabernacle of the testimony, and the land was subdued before them.

2 But there remained seven tribes of the children of Israel, which as yet had not received their possessions.

3^b And Josue said to them: How long are you indolent and slack, and go not in to possess the land which the Lord, the God of your fathers, hath given you?

VER. 7. Aser was contiguous to Machmethath, fifteen miles from Sichem, towards Scythopolis. S. Jerom. C.—The limits of Manasses are described from the south, where he joins Ephraim. Chap. xvi. 6. C.

VER. 8. Taphua; which city, though situated in the territory of Manasses, belonged to Ephraim, (W.) as the Heb. intimates.

VER. 10. East. These two tribes are contiguous to the tribe of Joseph, taken all together, ver. 14. M.—Aser extended as far as Mount Carmel, which was not far from Dor, a city of Manasses, ver. 11; chap. xix. 26. The tribes of Issachar and of Zabulon seem, indeed, to come between Manasses and Aser; so that we might say, that the tribe of Joseph finding itself too much straitened, was forced to seek for more room in the cities of the other tribes, which we find it really inhabited, ver. 11. We might avoid all difficulties by translating "they invaded (or made an irruption into) the tribe of Aser," &c., as the Heb. will allow. Thus Dan conquered Lais, which lies at so great a distance from its own portion, and the tribes of Juda and Simeon were frequently intermixed. C.

VER. 11. In Aser. The following towns were upon the frontiers of these two tribes, (M.) or they properly belonged to them respectively. But the children of Manasses took possession of them, after conquering, by degrees, the former inhabitants, who were suffered to live among them, as the Jebusites were for some time at Jerusalem. Chap. xv. 63. H.—Bethsan, or Scythopolis, as it was called by the Greeks, after the Scythians had invaded those countries, (Herod. i. 105,) A. M. 3391, almost one hundred years from the destruction of the kingdom of Israel. Bethsan was situated to the south of the sea of Tiberias, six hundred stadia from Jerusalem (2 Mac. xii. 29); that is, about thirty-seven leagues, (C.) or one hundred and eleven miles. H.—Dor, nine miles north of Cesarea.—Endor, "the fountain of Dor," four miles south of Mount Thabor. Euseb.—Here Saul consulted the witch, 1 Kings xxxviii. 7.—Thenac, near Legion, and the torrent of Cisson, where Barac gained a victory. Judg. v.—Nopheth means "a canton," and thus Manasses may have had three portions of land round the three aforesaid cities, in which sense it is translated. Chap. xi. 2. C. Masius.—But Serarius takes Nopheth to mean a city, (M.) agreeably to the Sept., "the third part of Naphetha, and its villages." H.—The other two parts of the city might be occupied by Zabulon. Bonfrere.—No mention is made of Nopheth. Judg. i. 27. H.

VER. 12. Could, because they would not. Judg. i. 27. The children of Manasses took these cities; but not putting the inhabitants to death, the latter got possession again, as was the case with respect to many other cities taken (C.) and destroyed (H.) by Josue. Heb. "the Chanaanite consented to dwell," &c. The Israelites spared their lives on their paying tribute; and this prevarication was the cause of their being afterwards reduced to submit to the yoke of these nations. C. Judg. ii. 20; Deut. xx. 16. M.—The Chanaanite dwelt with Manasses for a time (W.); perhaps they were never wholly expelled. H.

VER. 14. Spoke. Sept. "contradicted Josue." In effect, they spoke with a good deal of emotion.—Portion. Heb. "cord." C.

VER. 16. Iron, armed with scythes, who will obstruct our passage to the mountains, as we dare not encounter them in the open field. H. 4 Kings xx. 23.—Heb. "the hill is not enough for us (or it will not be found, or be attacked by us) and all the Chanaanites," &c. C.—Sept. "the mountain of Ephraim will not contain us; all the Chanaanites who dwell in the land of Emek, (or of the valley,) in Bethsan, and its villages, and in the vale of Jezrael, have chosen cavalry and iron." H.—They are invincible. C.—Valley, extending about 10,000 paces from Bethsan to Legion. Jezrael was in the middle of it, and is attributed to Issachar Chap. xix. 18. But it was probably on the frontiers of Manasses, who seems to have spoken as if it would belong to the first who had driven out the Chanaanites.

VER. 18. Mountain, probably of Gelboe, as that of Ephraim was not sufficient, ver. 15. Gelboe extended almost as far as Bethsan, and it would afford a fine opportunity of attacking the nations below. C.

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 1. Silo was delightfully situated, about the midst of the country, twelve miles south of Sichem. Hither the Israelites removed with the ark from Galgal after having had their camp in the latter place seven years at least; the Jews say fourteen. But Josue might reproach the Israelites for their indolence, (ver. 3,) without waiting seven years after the country was divided.—Tabernacle. It is supposed that this tabernacle continued at Silo till the days of Samuel. The ark was certainly in it till the Israelites unfortunately sent it into the camp, where it was taken by the Philistines. When they sent back the ark it was deposited at Gabaa, and not in the tabernacle, which was at Silo. Then it was sent to Nob. We find that the tabernacle was at Gabaa some time after the ark was translated to Jerusalem. C.

VER. 3. Slack. These seven tribes had been accustomed to live in indolence having their food provided for them in a miraculous manner. They were perhaps afraid lest, if the army of Israel should be divided, the different tribes would be too weak to make head against the enemy. C.—Josue had, however, made all things easy, and they might at their leisure conquer the few towns which yet remained in the hands of the Chanaanites, if they had not cherished this indolent disposition, which was so displeasing to God, and brought upon them so many evils. H.

VER. 4. Tribe: it is not clear whether any but these seven were concerned.—Out. Josephus says that people well skilled in geometry accompanied them. C.— it out according to the number of each multitude: and bring back to me what they have marked out.

5 Divide to yourselves the land into seven parts: let Juda be in his bounds on the south side, and the house of Joseph on the north.

6 The land in the midst between these, mark ye out into seven parts; and you shall come hither to me, that I may cast lots for you before the Lord your God.

7 For the Levites have no part among you; but the priesthood of the Lord is their inheritance. And Gad and Ruben, and the half tribe of Manasses, have already received their possessions beyond the Jordan eastward: which Moses, the servant of the Lord, gave them.

8 And when the men were risen up, to go to mark out the land, Josue commanded them, saying: Go round the land and mark it out, and return to me: that I may cast lots for you before the Lord, in Silo.

9 So they went: and surveying it, divided it into seven parts, writing them down in a book. And they returned to Josue, to the camp, in Silo.

10 And he cast lots before the Lord, in Silo, and divided the land to the children of Israel, into seven parts.

11 And first came up the lot of the children of Benjamin, by their families, to possess the land between the children of Juda and the children of Joseph.

12 And their border northward was from the Jordan: going along by the side of Jericho on the north side, and thence going up westward to the mountains, and reaching to the wilderness of Bethaven,

13 And passing along southward by^a Luza, the same is Bethel: and it goeth down into Ataroth-addar to the mountain, that is on the south of the nether Bethoron:

14 And it bendeth thence, going round towards the sea, south of the mountain that looketh towards Bethoron to the south-west: and the outgoings thereof, are into Cariathbaal, which is called also Cariathiarim, a city of the children of Juda. This is their coast towards the sea, westward.

15 But on the south side, the border goeth out from part of Cariathiarim, towards the sea, and cometh to the fountain of the waters of Nephtoa:

^a Gen. xxviii. 19.

They had to mark out seven portions of land, which might suffice for these remaining tribes, (H.) who would receive them by lot, to take away all cause of discontent. They still received according to their numbers. Num. xxvi. 54. W.

VER. 5. North, with respect to Silo. Juda had taken possession of his territory, as well as the tribes of Joseph.

VER. 6. The land in the midst between these, mark ye out into seven parts: that is to say, the rest of the land, which is not already assigned to Juda or Joseph. Ch.—For we must not suppose that Joseph occupied the most northern parts of the country, so as, with Juda on the south, to enclose all the other tribes. H.—Heb. “As for you, you shall describe the land into seven parts.” C.—Only the tribe of Benjamin was between these two tribes, (ver. 11,) so that Serarius thinks that mediam has been substituted for aliam, “the other.” M.

VER. 7. Priesthood, and the rights attached to it, tithes, &c. C.—It was not therefore necessary to make eight portions. M.

VER. 9. Book. Heb. “described it, according to the cities, into seven parts, in a volume,” (H.) or table, resembling a map. The ancients commonly wrote on boards covered with wax, and engraved on stone, lead, &c.

VER. 12. Bethaven, or Bethel. Josephus says (Ant. v. 3) that the territory of Benjamin extended as far as the Mediterranean: but it only went to Ataroth, ver. 13. M.

VER. 15. Sea, on the west. H.—The northern limits of Juda form the southern ones of Benjamin, only here Josue proceeds in a contrary direction, from west to east. M. See chap. xv. 5–8.

VER. 16. Part. Heb. “end, or summit.” C.—That is, &c., an explication added by S. Jerom.

VER. 18. Hills. Heb. Gelilot, “the limits,” (C.) or Galgal on the road to 16 And it goeth down to that part of the mountain, that looketh on the valley of the children of Ennom: and is over against the north quarter, in the furthestmost part of the valley of Raphaim, and it goeth down into Geenom, (that is the valley of Ennom,) by the side of the Jebusite to the south: and cometh to the fountain of Rogel,

17 Passing thence to the north, and going out to Ensesmes, that is to say, the fountain of the sun:

18 And it passeth along to the hills that are over against the ascent of Adommim: and it goeth down to Abenboen, that is, the stone of Boen, the son of Ruben: and it passeth on the north side to the champaign countries, and goeth down into the plain,

19 And it passeth by Bethhagla northward: and the outgoings thereof are towards the north of the most salt sea, at the south end of the Jordan,

20 Which is the border of it on the east side. This is the possession of the children of Benjamin by their borders round about, and their families.

21 And their cities were, Jericho, and Bethhagla, and Vale-Casis,

22 Betharaba, and Samaraim, and Bethel,

23 And Avim, and Aphara, and Ophera,

24 The town Emona, and Ophni, and Gabee: twelve cities, and their villages.

25 Gabaon, and Rama, and Beroth,

26 And Mesphe, and Caphara, and Amosa,

27 And Recem, Jarephel, and Tharela,

28 And Sela, Eleph, and Jebus, which is Jerusalem, Gabaath, and Cariath: fourteen cities, and their villages. This is the possession of the children of Benjamin by their families.

Jerusalem from Jericho, and different from that where the Israelites encamped, chap. xv. 7.—Adommim is a narrow pass in the vicinity, much infested with robbers.—Abenboen. The explication is alone given. Chap. xv. 6.—Plain. Sept. “and it shall pass by Betharaba, on the south from the north, and it shall descend.” Grabe supplies “to Araba;” or the plain desert country. II.—Betharaba is, in effect, mentioned as one of the cities of Benjamin, (ver. 22,) as it had before been assigned to Juda, (C.) being inhabited by both tribes. H.

VER. 19. Towards (contra linguam) “the bay on the north,” &c. II.—There is another on the south. Chap. xv. 2.

VER. 24. Ophni, the Gophna so celebrated in latter times, fifteen miles from Gabaa. S. Jerom attributes it to Ephraim, as perhaps it was chiefly inhabited by people of that tribe.—Gabee. The wickedness of its citizens almost involved the whole tribe in destruction. Judg. xix. It was twenty miles north of Jerusalem. Joseph. v. 2.

VER. 26. Mesphe, where Samuel assembled the people, 1 Kings vii. 5. It was regarded as a place of devotion while the temple was in the hands of the profane. 1 Mac. iii. 46.

VER. 28. Jebus. The city was called Salem in the days of Abraham. Gen. xiv. 18; Psal. lxxv. 3. S. Jerom supposes that Melchisedee resided near Seythopolis, at Salem. Gen. xxxiii. 17, ep. ad Evang. Usher thinks he lived at Salim. Joht. iii. 23. C.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 2. Juda. Thus was verified the prediction of Jacob that Simeon and Levi, who had been too much united for the destruction of Sichem, should be scattered among their brethren. Gen. xxxiv. and xlix. 6. The tribe of Simeon was not very numerous. Num. xxvi. 14. Yet all his cities are not here enumerated, but only such as served to point out the limits. The lot of Simeon

4 And Eltholan, Bethul, and Harma,
5 And Siceleg, and Bethmarchaboth, and Hasersusa,
6 And Bethlebaoth, and Sarohen : thirteen cities, and their villages :

7 Ain, and Remmon, and Athor, and Asan : four cities, and their villages :

8 And all the villages round about these cities to Baalath Beer Ramath, to the south quarter. This is the inheritance of the children of Simeon according to their kindreds,

9 In the possession and lot of the children of Juda : because it was too great, and therefore the children of Simeon had their possession in the midst of their inheritance.

10 And the third lot fell to the children of Zabulon by their kindreds : and the border of their possession was unto Sarid.

11 And it went up from the sea, and from Merala, and came to Debbaseth : as far as the torrent, which is over against Jeconam.

12 And it returneth from Sarid eastward to the borders of Ceseleththabor : and it goeth out to Dabereh, and ascendeth towards Japhie.

13 And it passeth along from thence to the east side of Gethhepher and Thacasin : and goeth out to Remmon, Amthar and Noa.

14 And it turneth about to the north of Hanathon : and the outgoings thereof are the valley of Jephthahel, 15 And Cateth, and Naalol, and Semeron, and Jedala, and Bethlehem : twelve cities and their villages.

16 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Zabulon, by their kindreds, the cities and their villages.

17 The fourth lot came out to Issachar by their kindreds.

18 And his inheritance was Jezrael, and Casaloth, and Sunem.

19 And Hapharaim, and Seon, and Anaharath,

20 And Rabboth, and Cesion, Abes.

21 And Rameth, and Engannim, and Enladda, and Bethphases.

22 And the border thereof cometh to Thabor, and Sehesima, and Bethsames : and the outgoings thereof shall be at the Jordan : sixteen cities, and their villages.

23 This is the possession of the sons of Issachar by their kindreds, the cities and their villages.

24 And the fifth lot fell to the tribe of the children of Aser by their kindreds :

25 And their border was Halcath, and Chali, and Beten, and Axaph,

26 And Elmelech, and Amaad, and Messal : and it reacheth to Carmel by the sea, and Sihor, and Labanath,

27 And it returneth towards the east to Bethdagon : and passeth along to Zabulon and to the valley of Jephthael towards the north to Bethemec and Nehiel. And it goeth out to the left side of Cabul, 28 And to Abaran, and Rohob, and Hamon, and Cana, as far as the great Sidon.

29 And it returneth to Horma to the strong city of Tyre, and to Hosa : and the outgoings thereof shall be at the sea from the portion of Achziba :

30 And Amma, and Aphec, and Rohob : twenty-two cities and their villages.

31 This is the possession of the children of Aser by their kindreds, and the cities and their villages.

32 The sixth lot came out to the sons of Nephtali by their families :

33 And the border began from Heleph and Elon to Saananim, and Adami, which is Neceb, and Jebnael even to Lecum : and their outgoings unto the Jordan :

34 And the border returneth westward to Azanotthabor, and goeth out from thence to Hucuca, and passeth along to Zabulon southward, and to Aser westward, and to Juda upon the Jordan towards the rising of the sun.

was not in the centre of Juda, but only within his limits, (C.) either on the south, (Cellarius,) or on the west side, (C.) or on both. H.—And Sabec. This is the same town with the preceding, otherwise there would be fourteen instead of thirteen, ver. 6. M.

VER. 11. From the sea. Heb. "towards the sea." Bonfrere asserts that Zabulon did not extend quite to the shore of the Mediterranean. Chap. xvii. 10. C.—Torrent, near Sidon, which some call the river Belus or Papis. Plin. v. 19.

VER. 13. Gethhepher, the birth-place of Jonas, 4 Kings xiv. 25. See chap. xii. 17.

VER. 15. Bethlehem, very different from that of Juda.—Twelve. Nineteen are mentioned, but some of them belonged to other tribes, (C.) or were not properly cities. M.—All the towns of Zabulon are not specified, C.

VER. 17. Issachar. The reason why he has been placed after his younger brother, Zabulon, both here and in the blessing of Jacob, is not known.

VER. 18. Jezrael. This was a city of the first note, (M.) situated in the vale between Mount Hermon and Gelboe, having Bethsan on the east.—Sunem, where Eliseus raised the child to life, five miles south of Thabor. S. Jerom.—Here the Philistines were encamped the day before the battle in which Saul was slain and Israel dispersed, 1 Kings xxviii. 4. C.

VER. 20. Rabboth. These four cities formed the western boundary, though Serarius observes, this tribe extended as far as the Mediterranean, being in possession of Carmel, which lay close to the shore. M.

VER. 21. Engannim, called Enam, 1 Par. vi. 73.—Enladda. There was no other town of this name, ten miles from Eleutheropolis. C.—This and the four following towns lay on the north of Issachar. M.—Bethsames, "the house of the sun." Juda and Nephtali had also a Bethsames.

VER. 26. Carmel, so famous for the miracles of Elias, 3 Kings xviii. 20. Josephus (Bel. ii. 17) places it one hundred and twenty stadia south of Ptolemais. This range of mountains extended northward through the tribes of Issachar and of Zabulon. Pliny (v. 17) speaks of a promontory and of a town of this name. Carmel means "the vineyard of the Lord," or the excellent vineyard, &c. It was so rich and beautiful as to become proverbial. The city which was built upon this mountain, and which Pliny calls by the same name, was formerly styled Eebatana. The oracle had denounced to Cambyzes that he should die at Eebatana, and he concluded that the city of Media was meant ; but it was "that of Syria," says Herodotus, (iii. 64,) where he died.—Labanath. Heb. leaves out the conjunction.—Sihor means a "troubled" river, (chap. xiii. 3,) or brook, which probably ran near the white promontory mentioned by Pliny, (v. 19,) near Tyre. Labanath signifies "white."

VER. 27. Bethdagon. "The temple of Dagon, or of the fish," different from the town of Juda. Chap. xv. 41.—Zabulon, a city which took its name from the tribe, and separated Ptolemais from Judea. Joseph. Bel. ii. 37.—Left ; that is, the north side of Cabul.

VER. 28. Rohob, on the northern extremity of the land. Num. xiii. 22. It was assigned to the Levites. But the tribe of Aser never drove out the Chanaanites. Judg. i. 31.—Cana, where Christ wrought his first miracle, about twenty-three miles west of Tiberias, as we may gather from Josephus. (Vita) Cellarius.—Some would admit another Cana nearer Sidon.

VER. 29. Horma. Heb., Sept., &c., Rama, "a height."—Of Tyre. When this city was founded is wrapped up in obscurity. It was a colony of Sidon. Isa. xxiii. 12. Old Tyre was on the continent ; the new city was built in an island, where the temple of Jupiter Olympius formerly stood. Whether Nabuchodonosor besieged the Old or the New Tyre, soon after he had taken Jerusalem, authors are not agreed. S. Jerom (in Ezec. xxviii. ; Amos i., &c.) seems to think that he attacked the new city ; whereas Marsham believes that it was built only after the other had fallen a prey to the arms of the Chaldees. It was only five or seven hundred paces from the continent.—Portion. Heb. "from the coast to Achzib," which is the same town as Eedippe, south of Tyre, and nine miles from Ptolemais. C.

VER. 30. Amma ; perhaps on Mount Amana, a part of Libanus. Cant. iv. 6. For though the Israelites had possession of these parts only a short time, they had a right to them, and to the countries as far as the Euphrates and Pelusium. Sept. read, "Akorn or Archob," (C.) in some copies, though the Alexandrian agrees with the Vulg. H.—Aphec, beyond Antilibanus, from which city the Israelites could not drive the Chanaanites. Judg. i. 31. Here the kings of Syria assembled their forces to attack the people of God, 1 Kings xx. 26.—Twenty-two. More are mentioned above, but some might belong to other tribes.

VER. 33. Heleph seems to have been on the north-eastern limits of Nephtali. The cities on the Jordan southwards, as far as Genesareth, are specified. H.

VER. 34. Juda was in possession of the southern parts of the Jordan, as 49 And when he had made an end of dividing the land by lot to each one by their tribes, the children of Israel gave a possession to Josue, the son of Nun, in the midst of them,

51 These are the possessions, which Eleazar, the priest, and Josue, the son of Nun, and the princes of the families, and of the tribes of the children of Israel, distributed by lot in Silo, before the Lord at the door of the tabernacle of the testimony, and they divided the land.

CHAP. XX.

The cities of refuge are appointed for casual manslaughter.

AND "the Lord spoke to Josue, saying: Speak to the children of Israel, and say to them:

2 Appoint cities of refuge, "of which I spoke to you by the hand of Moses:

3 That whosoever shall kill a person unawares may flee to them: and may escape the wrath of the kinsman, who is the avenger of blood:

4 And when he shall flee to one of these cities: he shall stand before the gate of the city, and shall speak to the ancients of that city, such things, as prove him innocent: and so they shall receive him, and give him a place to dwell in.

5 And when the avenger of blood shall pursue him, they shall not deliver him into his hands, because he slew his neighbour unawares, and is not proved to have been his enemy two or three days before.

6 And he shall dwell in that city, till he stand before judgment to give an account of his fact, and till the death of the high priest, who shall be at that time: then shall the manslayer return, and go into his own city and house from whence he fled.

7 And they appointed Cedes in Galilee, of Mount Nephtali, and Sichem in Mount Ephraim, and Cariatharbe, the same is Hebron in the mountain of Juda.

8 And beyond the Jordan to the east of Jericho, they appointed Bosor, which is upon the plain of the wilderness of the tribe of Ruben, and Ramoth in Galaad of the tribe of Gad, and Gaulon in Basan of the tribe of Manasses.

9 These cities were appointed for all the children of Israel, and for the strangers that dwelt among them: that whosoever had killed a person unawares might flee to them, and not die by the hand of the kinsman, coveting to revenge the blood that was shed, until he should stand before the people to lay open his cause.

VER. 50. Lord, by the mouth of Eleazar. Josue was content with one of the most barren parts of the country. He waits till all are provided for, showing throughout his life a pattern of moderation and disinterestedness, which render him worthy to be considered as a figure of Jesus Christ, who reduced himself to the lowest state of abjection for our sakes. Revenge was never lawful: but to prosecute offenders in the courts of justice, (C.) or agreeably to the law of God, can never deserve blame. VER. 6. Fact. Sept. "before the synagogue for judgment." H.—Whether this took place in the same city, or where the murder was committed, (see Num. xxxv. 12, and ver. 25,) the reasons are given why the manslayer was released at the death of the high priest. C.

VER. 7. Cedes and Gaulon lay on the north, Sichem and Ramoth in the middle, Hebron and Bosor on the south of the country. H.

VER. 9. Strangers. The limitations of the Jews in favour of their own nation are rejected. The civil and criminal law should affect all alike, except God order it otherwise. C.

CHAP. XXI.

Cities, with their suburbs, are assigned for the priests and Levites.

THEN *the princes of the families of Levi came to Eleazar, the priest, and to Josue, the son of Nun, and to the princes of the kindreds of all the tribes of the children of Israel :

2 And they spoke to them in Silo, in the land of Chanaan, and said : "The Lord commanded by the hand of Moses, that cities should be given us to dwell in, and their suburbs to feed our cattle.

3 And the children of Israel gave out of their possessions, according to the commandment of the Lord, cities and their suburbs.

4 And the lot came out for the family of Caath, of the children of Aaron the priest, out of the tribes of Juda, and of Simeon, and of Benjamin, thirteen cities :

5 And to the rest of the children of Caath, that is, to the Levites, who remained out of the tribes of Ephraim, and of Dan, and the half tribe of Manasses, ten cities.

6 And the lot came out to the children of Gerson, that they should take of the tribes of Issachar, and of Aser, and of Nephtali, and of the half tribe of Manasses in Basan, thirteen cities.

7 And to the sons of Merari, by their kindreds, of the tribes of Ruben, and of Gad, and of Zabulon, twelve cities.

8 And the children of Israel gave to the Levites the cities and their suburbs, as the Lord commanded by the hand of Moses, giving to every one by lot.

9 Of the tribes of the children of Juda and of Simeon, Josue gave cities : "whose names are these,

10 To the sons of Aaron, of the families of Caath, of the race of Levi, (for the first lot came out for them,)

11 The city of Arbe, the father of Enac, which is called Hebron, in the mountain of Juda, and the suburbs thereof round about.

* A. M. 2562.—b Num. xxxv. 2.—c 1 Par. vi. 2.

CHAP. XXI. VER. 1. The priest, who seems to have presided, as he is always placed first. A select number of the tribe of Levi came to represent the priests and those of an inferior order ; and to obtain what God had promised them. Num. xxxv. 2. There was one family of priests, who sprang from Aaron, the son of Caath. The rest of Caath's family, with the children of Gerson and Merari, were simply Levites, constituting three other families. God was pleased that they should be dispersed through Israel, that they might instruct the people both by word and by example, 1 Par. xxvi. 29. C.—Josue would not have neglected them. M.—But they were naturally solicitous to know where they were to live, as the tribes had now all received their portions. H.

VER. 3. Gave, by lot, ver. 4, &c. M.—Whether any changes were afterwards made, to grant more or less, in proportion to the numbers of the four families, (as seems to have been done with regard to the other tribes,) or the cities were specified in four parcels, and the priests received the first lot, the text does not explain. C.—It is also uncertain what right the Levites had to these forty-eight cities. Some say that they had only the use of them, while others maintain that the cities were their property entirely, so that no other could live there without their consent. They could sell the houses, which returned to them in the year of jubilee, if not redeemed before ; but the suburbs were a common property of all the Levites, and could not be sold by any. Lev. xxv. The priests and Levites were not indeed at this time sufficiently numerous to people all these cities ; and Calmet supposes that they only received as many houses as they might occupy, being supplied with more by the magistrates as their numbers increased. H.—Many of the priests and Levites chose to reside near the tabernacle, as Moses had encouraged them to do. Deut. xviii. 6. Thus Nobe became a sacerdotal city (1 Kings xxi. 1) ; and after the temple was built Jerusalem and its environs were the places of abode for most of the priests. C.

VER. 4. Thirteen. These three tribes give more cities than any of the others, because their territories were the largest. Num. xxxv. 8. Juda, in particular, had a most extensive portion allotted to him at first ; so that a part was afterwards taken away to accommodate Simeon and Dan, and now so many cities are appointed for the priests, (C.) who would thus have their residence near the temple, when it should be built. H.—God ordered the lots according to the designs of his providence ; and gave the priests, though so few in number, more than what fell to the share of all the rest of the family of Caath. C.—This family 12 "But the fields and the villages thereof he had given to Caleb, the son of Jephone, for his possession.

13 He gave therefore to the children of Aaron the priest, Hebron a city of refuge, and the suburbs thereof : and Lobnam with the suburbs thereof,

14 And Jether, and Estemo,

15 And Holon, and Dahir,

16 And Ain, and Jeta, and Bethsames, with their suburbs : nine cities out of the two tribes, as hath been said.

17 And out of the tribe of the children of Benjamin, Gabaon, and Gabae, 18 And Anathoth, and Almon, with their suburbs four cities.

19 All the cities together of the children of Aaron the priest, were thirteen, with their suburbs.

20 And to the rest of the families of the children of Caath, of the race of Levi, was given this possession.

21 Of the tribe of Ephraim, Sichem one of the cities of refuge, with the suburbs thereof in Mount Ephraim, and Gazer, 22 And Cibsaim, and Beth-horon, with their suburbs, four cities.

23 And of the tribe of Dan, Eltheco and Gabathon,

24 And Aialon and Gethremmon, with their suburbs, four cities.

25 And of the half tribe of Manasses, Thanac and Gethremmon, with their suburbs, two cities.

26 All the cities were ten, with their suburbs, which were given to the children of Caath of the inferior degree.

27 To the children of Gerson also, of the race of Levi, out of the half tribe of Manasses, Gaulon, in Basan, one of the cities of refuge, and Bosra, with their suburbs, two cities.

28 And of the tribe of Issachar, Cesion, and Dabereh, 29 And Jaramoth, and Engannim, with their suburbs, four cities.

had in all twenty-three cities, lying south of Dor and Bethsan, and leaving the tribe of Issachar on the north. Gerson had thirteen cities among the three other northern tribes, and that of Manasses on the east side of the Jordan ; while Merari had twelve, more southward on the same side, in the tribes of Gad and of Ruben, and on the west of the Jordan, in the tribe of Zabulon. Thus these two families were more intermixed. H.

VER. 12. Possession. Only the houses which the priests occupied were taken from him. C.—Caleb enjoyed all the dependencies of Hebron, and took the city, as he would not have been secure while the Chanaanites dwelt there. Magdalen.

VER. 16. Ain and Jeta. Sept. of Grabe agrees with the Vulg. But the Vatican copy (H.) has, "Asa . . and Tanu." In 1 Par. vi. 59, only Asan and Bethsames are mentioned. C.—As has, &c., words added by S. Jerom, or rather expressing more fully the Heb. "those" two tribes. H.

VER. 21. One of (urbes confugii Sichem . . and Gazer). Lit. "Cities of refuge, Sichem, . . Gazer," &c., as if all the Levitical cities had enjoyed this privilege, which, we have seen, (Num. xxxv. 6,) is the opinion of some. But the Heb., Sept., and Chal. read in the singular, "Sichem, a city of refuge ;" and interpreters generally allow only six cities of this description. C.—See Bonfrere how the Vulg. may be vindicated. M.

VER. 22. Beth-horon. Grabe's Sept. adds, "the upper," which is the received opinion. C.

VER. 23. And of, &c. This verse is omitted in Paralipomenon, (H.) whence we find Helon and Gethremmon (probably the same as Aialon and Bethremmon, ver. 24) assigned to Ephraim.—Eltheco. See chap. xv. 59, and xix. 44.—Gabathon continued a long time in the hands of the Philistines. 3 Kings xv. 27.

VER. 26. Degree, who were not priests. Caath is placed before his eldest brother Gerson, on account of the honour of the priesthood and of Moses. M.

VER. 27. Refuge. Lit. "the cities of refuge, Gaulon . . and Bosra." See ver. 21. H.—The latter gives place to Asteroth, in Paral.

VER. 29. Cities. These are called Cedes and Daboreth, Ramoth and Anem, in Paralipomenon.

30 And of the tribe of Aser, Masal, and Abdon,
31 And Helcath, and Rohob, with their suburbs, four cities

32 Of the tribe also of Nephtali, Cedec in Galilee, one of the cities of refuge: and Hammoth Dor, and Carthan, with their suburbs, three cities.

33 All the cities of the families of Gerson, were thirteen, with their suburbs.

34 And to the children of Merari, Levites of the inferior degree, by their families, were given of the tribe of Zabulon, Jecnam, and Cartha,

35 And Damna, and Naalol, four cities, with their suburbs.

36 Of the tribe of Ruben, beyond the Jordan over against Jericho, Bosor in the wilderness, one of the cities of refuge, Misor, and Jaser, and Jethson, and Mephaath, four cities, with their suburbs.

37 Of the tribe of Gad, Ramoth in Galaad, one of the cities of refuge, and Manaim, and Hesebon, and Jaser, four cities, with their suburbs.

38 All the cities of the children of Merari by their families and kindreds, were twelve.

39 So all the cities of the Levites within the possession of the children of Israel were forty-eight,

40 With their suburbs, each distributed by the families.

41 And the Lord God gave to Israel all the land that he had sworn to give to their fathers: and they possessed it, and dwelt in it.

42 And he gave them peace from all nations round about: and none of their enemies durst stand against them, but all were brought under their dominion.

43 Not so much as one word, which he had promised to perform unto them, was made void, but all came to pass.

the other tribes. An embassy is sent to them, to which they give a satisfactory answer.

AT the same time Josue called the Rubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasses,

2 And said to them: You have done all that Moses the servant of the Lord commanded you: you have also obeyed me in all things,

3 Neither have you left your brethren this long time, until this present day, keeping the commandment of the Lord your God.

4 Therefore as the Lord your God hath given your brethren rest and peace, as he promised: return and go to your dwellings, and to the land of your possession,^b which Moses the servant of the Lord gave you beyond the Jordan:

5 Yet so that you observe attentively, and in work fulfil the commandment, and the law which Moses the servant of the Lord commanded you: that you love the Lord your God, and walk in all his ways, and keep all his commandments, and cleave to him, and serve him with all your heart, and with all your soul.

6 And Josue blessed them, and sent them away, and they returned to their dwellings.

7 Now to half the tribe of Manasses, Moses had given a possession in Basan: and therefore to the half that remained, Josue gave a lot among the rest of their brethren, beyond the Jordan to the west. And when he sent them away to their dwellings, and had blessed them,

8 He said to them: With much substance and riches, you return to your settlements, with silver and gold, brass and iron, and variety of raiment: divide the prey of your enemies with your brethren.

9 So the children of Ruben, and the children of Gad, and the half tribe of Manasses, returned, and parted from the children of Israel in Silo, which is in Chanaan, to go into Galaad, the land of their possession, which they had b Num. xxii. 33; Supra, i. 13, and xii. 8.

VER. 35. Suburbs. Paralipomenon only mentions two, Remmon and Thabor.

VER. 36. Four cities. There are no more, though there be five names: for Misor is the same city as Bosor, which is to be observed in some other places, where the number of names exceeds the number of cities. Ch.—With regard to the 36th and 37th verses, there seems to have been great confusion in the Hebrew MSS., both ancient and modern. In some they have been totally omitted, in others only a part. H.—The famous MS. of Hillel, and the Masorets, reject them, (C.) because they had reckoned only 656 verses in Josue, and these two verses would destroy their authority. Hence they erased them wherever they might be found; and Kimchi assures us that he never could meet with them “in any MS. (thus) corrected.” Yet the Paralipomena universally acknowledge them, (Ken.) as the context of Josue must also do, otherwise there will be only eight cities instead of twelve, and four will be wanting to complete the number of forty-eight. H.—These verses were not in the Heb. text of the Hexapla, as they are obelized in the Sept. and in the Syriac MS. of Masius; and yet, as they are found in the old Greek and Syriac versions, and in the Chal. paraphrase, they were probably omitted between the years 100 and 200. They are left out in several printed editions of the Heb. Bible, and even in that of Jablonski, (1699,) though in opposition to his better judgment and all the MSS. which he had consulted: legunt omnia nostra MSS. Michaelis (1720) reprinted this text, with some few emendations, particularly with these two verses very laudably inserted. Kennicott, 2 Diss.—In the Bened. Edit. of S. Jerom, Martianay observes, that the Heb. MSS. of S. Jerom seem to have been mutilated, for if they had admitted this 36th verse, S. Jerom would have translated it, and it would have been found in the more ancient MSS. of the Latin edition, where it is wanting. Hence this editor leaves it out. H.—In some editions of the Vulg. this verse is transposed, and placed after the cities of Gad. Louvain, R. Steph., &c.—It is therefore probable that S. Jerom found it not in Heb., but, if he inserted it, he borrowed it from the Sept. The Syriac version places these verses before the 34th and 35th. All this shows that the Heb. MSS. have not been kept with great care in this place. C.—Jaser, or Jassa, (chap. xiii. 18,) different from that ver. 37, which lay on the river of the same name, in the tribe of Gad. C.

VER. 40. Families, the four great ones, which parcelled out the cities among the several branches. H.—The Levites were only 23,000, (Num. xxvi. 62,) yet they receive more cities than what are specified for any other tribe. It must be observed, however, that all the cities of the different tribes are not mentioned, and the Israelites might live along with those of the tribe of Levi, ver. 3. Moreover these had only the cities, with 2000 cubits of land round them.

VER. 43. Pass. How then did the Chanaanites keep possession of so many places? S. Augustine (q. 21) answers, that they were suffered to do it for the “utility and trial” of the Israelites. For the latter were not sufficiently numerous at first to cultivate all the land. God had therefore promised that the nations should not be driven out all at once, lest the country should fall a prey to wild beasts. Exod. xxiii. 29. Masius.—During the life-time of Josue none of them durst make head against him; and if many of the tribes did not take possession of all their cities, it was owing to their own negligence. After this hero was no more, the natives took courage, and greatly harassed the Israelites; but it is plain that the latter were not straitened for room while Josue lived, since they invited the other tribes east of the Jordan to come and reside with them on the west, if they thought proper. Chap. xxii. 19. C.

CHAP. XXII. VER. 1. Time; before the assembly broke up. The 40,000 had continued to fight along with their brethren (C.) as long as there was occasion. Now, peace being obtained, they are permitted to return to their families. H.

VER. 4. And peace. This is a further explication of rest, (H.) which alone occurs in Heb. It may denote a fixed and permanent abode. Deut. iii. 20; Ruth i. 9.

VER. 6. Blessed them, like a good magistrate, having given them a solemn admonition not to forget God, the source of all blessings. H.

VER. 8. Riches. Heb., Sept., &c. “cattle.”—Brethren. Grotius pretends that they were to keep what they had gotten. But his proofs rather show that they were to follow the ancient custom and law, which prescribed that those who had remained at home to guard the country should share the booty with those who had gone to battle, 1 Kings xxx. 24; Num. xxxi. 27. Some suppose that the booty was divided into equal parts, and the 40,000 would retain as much as all the rest of their brethren, who had been less exposed. The Israelites, however, made all alike, as other nations seem to have done. Exod. xv. 9, &c.

VER. 9. Galaad here denotes all that country, (C.) as Chanaan does that to the west of the Jordan, (H.) and Ephraim; the ten tribes. C.

obtained according to the commandment of the Lord, by the hand of Moses.

10 And when they were come to the banks of the Jordan, in the land of Chanaan, they built an altar immensely great near the Jordan.

11 And when the children of Israel had heard of it, and certain messengers had brought them an account that the children of Ruben, and of Gad, and the half tribe of Manasses, had built an altar in the land of Chanaan, upon the banks of the Jordan over against the children of Israel:

12 They all assembled in Silo, to go up and fight against them.

13 And in the mean time they sent to them, into the land of Galaad, Phinees the son of Eleazar the priest,

14 And ten princes with him, one of every tribe,

15 Who came to the children of Ruben, and of Gad, and the half tribe of Manasses, into the land of Galaad, and said to them:

16 Thus-saith all the people of the Lord: What meaneth this transgression? Why have you forsaken the Lord, the God of Israel, building a sacrilegious altar, and revolting from the worship of him?

17 Is it a small thing to you ^athat you sinned with Beelphegor, and the stain of that crime remaineth in us to this day? and many of the people perished.

18 And you have forsaken the Lord to-day, and to-morrow his wrath will rage against all Israel.

19 But if you think the land of your possession to be unclean, pass over to the land wherein is the tabernacle of the Lord, and dwell among us: only depart not from the Lord, and from our society, by building an altar beside the altar of the Lord our God.

20 ^bDid not Achan, the son of Zare, transgress the commandment of the Lord, and his wrath lay upon all the people of Israel? And he was but one man, and would to God he alone had perished in his wickedness.

21 And the children of Ruben, and of Gad, and of the half tribe of Manasses, answered the princes of the embassy of Israel:

22 The Lord the most mighty God, the Lord the most mighty God, he knoweth, and Israel also shall understand: If with the design of transgression we have set up this altar, let him not save us, but punish us immediately:

23 And if we did it with that mind, that we might lay upon it holocausts, and sacrifice, and victims of peace-offerings, let him require and judge:

24 And not rather with this thought and design, that we should say: To-morrow your children will say to our children: What have you to do with the Lord the God of Israel?

25 The Lord hath put the river Jordan for a border between us and you, O ye children of Ruben, and ye children of Gad: and therefore you have no part in the Lord. And by this occasion your children shall turn away our children from the fear of the Lord. We therefore thought it best,

26 And said: Let us build us an altar, not for holocausts, nor to offer victims,

27 But for a testimony between us and you, and our posterity and yours, that we may serve the Lord, and that we may have a right to offer both holocausts, and victims and sacrifices of peace-offerings: and that your children to-morrow may not say to our children: You have no part in the Lord:

28 And if they will say so, they shall answer them: Behold the altar of the Lord, which our fathers made, not for holocausts, nor for sacrifice, but for a testimony between us and you.

29 God keep us from any such wickedness that we should revolt from the Lord, and leave off following his steps, by building an altar to offer holocausts, and sacrifices, and victims, beside the altar of the Lord our God, which is erected before his tabernacle.

30 And when Phinees the priest, and the princes of the embassy, which were with him, had heard this, they were satisfied: and they admitted most willingly the words of the children of Ruben, and of Gad, and of the half tribe of Manasses.

31 And Phinees the priest, the son of Eleazar, said to them: Now we know that the Lord is with us, because ^b Supra, vii. 1.

VER. 10. Banks. Heb. Goliluth, which is (chap. xiii. 2, &c.) rendered Galilee, Galgal, "limits," &c. H.—Chanaan, consequently on the western banks. Vatable, however, says that the eastern country went sometimes by this name, on account of the Amorrites having dwelt in it. Josephus (v. 1) and the Jews affirm that the altar was built on that side; and it seems natural that these tribes would erect it in their own territories, for the benefit of their children. C.—Immensely. Heb. "a great altar to be seen."

VER. 12. In Silo, without being called, as they were all fired with a holy zeal (M.) to prevent the growth of idolatry among their brethren. H.—They knew that one altar was to be allowed (M.) in the place which the Lord should appoint. Lev. xvii. 8; Deut. xii. 5, &c. H.—God had ordered such cities as embraced idolatry among them to be exterminated. Deut. xiii. 12. C.

VER. 14. Tribe. Another of the tribe of Levi, and deputies from the other nine tribes, accompanied Phinees on this important occasion. The Levites were most of all concerned, as their rights seemed to be particularly invaded. H.—The princes of the tribes did not (C.) perhaps (H.) go, but only men of high rank. Kimchi says, men set over a thousand. Heb. "ten princes with him of each chief house, a prince of all the tribes of Israel, and each one head of the house of his fathers, among the thousands of Israel." C.

VER. 16. Lord. Thus Phinees shows that he speaks in the name of those who still continued faithful to the Lord. He imputes the crime of apostasy to Ruben, &c., that they may declare more openly for what reason they had built this altar. M.

VER. 17. Beelphegor. As they lived in the country where this idol had been adored, Phinees was afraid lest they might have built the altar in his honour.

He reminds them what destruction that worship had brought upon all Israel. He had been particularly zealous in appeasing the wrath of God, and therefore speaks with more authority. Heb. "is not the crime of Phegor enough for us, that we should not wish to expiate it until this day?" (C.) or Prot. "is the iniquity of Peor too little for us, from which we are not cleansed until this day? (although there was a plague in the congregation of the Lord)." H.—There was reason to fear lest the Lord should punish this sin still more, as he is accustomed to do when people relapse. C.

VER. 19. Unclean, as being destitute of the ark, &c. The Israelites had the greatest veneration for the land which God had chosen for their habitation. Naaman loaded two mules with some of the earth.

VER. 20. Wickedness. Heb. "he did not expire in his sin," (C.) but repented; (H.) or, Did he not? &c. Sept. "he did not alone die in his sin." Chal. "but this man alone did not die in his transgression." C.

VER. 22. God. In Heb. there are three terms, (C.) Al, Aloim, Jev, "the strong, the judge, the self-existent Being." To him they make their appeal. Him they acknowledge in the first place, as the only true God, as they had been accused of departing from him, ver. 19. H.—They are willing to undergo any punishment if they had any evil intention. M.

VER. 23. Sacrifice. Heb. intimates particularly "of flour or libations." C. VER. 24. To-morrow. At any future period. H.—Israel. The same idea is expressed, ver. 27. You have no part in the Lord. You are not his peculiar people. Of this title the Israelites were always very jealous, even when they neglected the worship and covenant of the Lord. C.

VER. 31. Lord, who would not have failed to punish Israel for such a crime. C.

you are not guilty of this revolt, and you have delivered the children of Israel from the hand of the Lord.

32 And he returned with the princes from the children of Ruben and Gad, out of the land of Galaad, into the land of Chanaan, to the children of Israel, and brought them word again.

33 And the saying pleased all that heard it. And the children of Israel praised God, and they no longer said that they would go up against them, and fight, and destroy the land of their possession.

34 And the children of Ruben, and the children of Gad, called the altar which they had built, Our testimony, that the Lord is God.

CHAP. XXIII.

Josue being old, admonisheth the people to keep God's commandments; and to avoid marriages, and all society, with the Gentiles, for fear of being brought to idolatry.

AND when a long time was passed, after that the Lord had given peace to Israel, all the nations round about being subdued, and Josue being now old, and far advanced in years:

2 Josue called for all Israel, and for the elders, and for the princes, and for the judges, and for the masters, and said to them: I am old, and far advanced in years:

3 And you see all that the Lord your God hath done to all the nations round about, how he himself hath fought for you:

4 And now since he hath divided to you by lot all the land, from the east of the Jordan unto the great sea, and many nations yet remain:

5 The Lord your God will destroy them, and take them away from before your face, and you shall possess the land, as he hath promised you.

6 Only take courage, and be careful to observe all things that are written in the book of the law of Moses: and turn not aside from them, neither to the right hand nor to the left:

• A. M. 2570, A. C. 1434.

VER. 32. Into, &c., (finium Chanaan,) "of the confines of Chanaan," which is ambiguous. H.

VER. 34. God. Heb. seems rather defective (C.); "called the altar, (Syriac supplies the altar of witness,) for it shall be a witness between us, that the Lord he is the God." Ed, "witness," is placed in the margin of Plantin's edit., (Kennic.) and the Prot. have inserted it in the text, though in a different character, (H.) as "it is confirmed by the Syr., Arab., and Vulg. versions." Kimchi quotes the Chal. paraphrase as having the word seid, "witness," twice, which, if read in two places formerly, has been lately omitted in one, as many other alterations have perhaps been made in it, in conformity to the later copies of the Hebrew text. It is still found in one Chal. MS. and in that of Masius. Between the two last words of this verse, some Heb. MSS. read eva, "He," "The Lord, He is the God;" which not only gives an emphasis, but is expressly confirmed by the Chal.; and indeed this seems to have been a common form of confessing the belief of the one true God, 3 Kings xviii. 39. Kennic. Diss. 1.—Masius would translate, "They made an inscription upon the altar, declaring that it should be an eternal witness of their attachment to the Lord." Cora, in effect, sometimes means to write, as Alcoran, in the Arabic tongue, signifies "the scripture" (C.) of the Mahometans, which they hold in the utmost veneration, as containing the life and doctrine of their great prophet. The Sept. (Grabe) insinuate that Josue approved of what had been done, "and Jesus gave a name to the altar, . . . and said, it is a witness in the midst of them, that the Lord God is their God."

CHAP. XXIII. VER. 1. Long time. Josue governed only ten years after the distribution of the land. Towards the close of his life, perceiving that the Israelites were too indolent in subduing the people of the country, and fearing lest they should by degrees begin to imitate their corrupt manners, he called a general assembly either at his own city, or at Silo, or more probably at Sichem, (as it is mentioned chap. xxiv. 1, which seems to give further particulars of this assembly,) and laid before his people, in the strongest terms, the dangers to which they would be exposed by entertaining a friendship for the enemies of God, and by abandoning him C.—He called together all the heads of the people. M

7 Lest after that you are come in among the Gentiles, who will remain among you, you should swear by the name of their gods, and serve them, and adore them:

8 But cleave ye unto the Lord your God: as you have done until this day.

9 And then the Lord God will take away before your eyes nations that are great and very strong, and no man shall be able to resist you.

10 One of you shall chase a thousand men of the enemies: because the Lord your God himself will fight for you, as he hath promised.

11 This only take care of with all diligence, that you love the Lord your God.

12 But if you will embrace the errors of these nations that dwell among you, and make marriages with them, and join friendships:

13 Know ye for a certainty that the Lord your God will not destroy them before your face, but they shall be a pit and a snare in your way, and a stumbling-block at your side, and stakes in your eyes, till he take you away and destroy you from off this excellent land, which he hath given you.

14 Behold this day I am going into the way of all the earth, and you shall know with all your mind, that of all the words which the Lord promised to perform for you, not one hath failed.

15 Therefore as he hath fulfilled in deed what he promised, and all things prosperous have come: so will he bring upon you all the evils he hath threatened, till he take you away and destroy you from off this excellent land, which he hath given you,

16 When you shall have transgressed the covenant of the Lord your God, which he hath made with you, and shall have served strange gods, and adored them: then shall the indignation of the Lord rise up quickly and speedily against you, and you shall be taken away from this excellent land which he hath delivered to you.

• 3 Kings xxiii. 2.

VER. 4. And now. Heb. "Behold, I have divided unto you by lot these nations, which remain to be subdued, to be an inheritance for your tribes from Jordan, (these two words are transposed, and should come after, C.) with all the nations that I have cut off—even unto the great sea westward." H.

VER. 7. Come in, an expression which may denote any familiarity, or marriage. M.—Heb. is in the form of a prohibition, "Come not among (have no connexions with) these nations. . . Neither mention their gods, nor swear (or cause to swear by them)." The psalmist (xv. 4) says, speaking either of idols, (H.) or of sinners, Nor will I be mindful of their names by my lips. Osee (ii. 16) says, She shall call me no more BAALI, ("my lord," a term applied by wives to their husbands,) on account of its reminding one of the idol Baal. Hence David calls Jerobaal, or Gedeon, Jeroboschot, 2 Kings xi. 21. S. Paul would not have Christians so much as to name the sins of impurity. Ephes. v. 3. The more religious Jews will not even mention an idol, or an unclean animal; and they beg pardon before they speak of a heretic. Drusius.—Some understand that the worship of idols is meant by naming them, as those who invoked the name of Jesus Christ were his disciples. Acts ix. 14; 1 Tim. ii. 19; Exod. xx. 24. To swear by idols is always sinful, (Exod. xxiii. 13,) while it is an act of religion to swear, on proper occasions, by the name of God. C.

VER. 10. Thousand. This Moses had repeatedly foretold. Lev. xxvi. 13; Deut. xxviii. 7.

VER. 13. Side. Heb. "snares and traps unto you, and scourges in your sides." H.—Sept. render side, "they shall be nails in your heels."

VER. 14. This day: shortly I must die. C.—Mind. Heb. "you know in your hearts, and in all your souls;" you are convinced, you cannot be ignorant that God has fulfilled his engagements. C.—The Sept. read, "you shall know," &c. H.

VER. 16. And speedily. This word is added to express the force of the Heb. term. M.—This. The threat or prediction was verified during the captivity, and still more after the destruction of Jerusalem. C.

CHAP XXIV. VER. 1. Of Israel. There seems no reason for restricting

CHAP. XXIV.

Josue assembleth the people, and reneweth the covenant between them and God. His death and burial.

AND ^aJosue gathered together all the tribes of Israel in Sichem, and called for the ancients, and the princes, and the judges, and the masters: and they stood in the sight of the Lord:

2 And he spoke thus to the people: Thus saith the Lord the God of Israel: Your fathers dwelt of old on the other side of the river, ^bThare, the father of Abraham, and Nachor: and they served strange gods.

3 ^cAnd I took your father, Abraham, from the borders of Mesopotamia: and brought him into the land of Chanaan: and I multiplied his seed,

4 ^dAnd gave him Isaac: ^eand to him again I gave Jacob and Esau. ^fAnd I gave to Esau Mount Seir for his possession: ^gbut Jacob and his children went down into Egypt.

5 ^hAnd I sent Moses and Aaron, and I struck Egypt with many signs and wonders.

6 ⁱAnd I brought you and your fathers out of Egypt, and you came to the sea: ^kand the Egyptians pursued your fathers with chariots and horsemen, as far as the Red Sea.

7 And the children of Israel cried to the Lord: and he put darkness between you and the Egyptians, and brought the sea upon them, and covered them. Your eyes saw all that I did in Egypt, and you dwelt in the wilderness a long time.

8 And I brought you into the land of the Amorrite, who dwelt beyond the Jordan. ^lAnd when they fought against you, I delivered them into your hands, and you possessed their land, and slew them.

9 And Balac, son of Sefhor, king of Moab, arose and this to the ancients, &c. On this solemn occasion, when all Israel was probably assembled at one of the great festivals, Josue concluded his exhortation, by renewing the covenant (C.) in the place where he had formerly complied with the injunction of Moses. Chap. viii. 31. H.—In Sichem, in the field which Jacob had purchased, and where a great oak (ver. 26) was growing that had been honoured, it is thought, with the presence of the patriarchs. It was near the two famous mountains of Garizim and Hebal. C.—Sichem was at the foot of the former mountain of blessings; and Josephus informs us the altar was erected in its vicinity. No fitter place could therefore have been selected by the aged chief, to conclude the actions of his life, and to attach the people to the religion which they had once received, in the most signal manner. The Vat. and Alex. copies (H.) of the Sept., followed by S. Aug., (q. 30,) read Silo, where the tabernacle was fixed: but all the rest agree with the original, and with the ancient versions, in retaining Sichem, to which place the ark was removed on this occasion, (C.) the distance of ten (S. Jer.) or twelve miles. Eus.

VER. 2. Of the river. The Euphrates. Ch.—Gods. Some think that Abraham himself was in his youth engaged in the worship of idols, (though this is denied by S. Aug. C. D. xvi. 13; Theod. q. 18, &c. W.) as well as his father, &c. ver. 14; Gen. xi. 31. There was the father of both Abraham and Nachor, (Gen. xi. 26,) unless (H.) the grandfather (M.) of Abraham be meant, who was also called Nachor, (H.) as well as Rebecca's grandfather. Gen. xxiv. W.

VER. 3. From the. Heb. and Sept. "other side of the flood or river," where Mesopotamia commences. H.

VER. 4. Isaac, the promised seed and heir of the blessings, (C.) after Ismael was born. H.

VER. 6. You. Many still survived, and had seen these wonders, as God had only exterminated those who had murmured.

VER. 9. Fought, not perhaps with the sword, but by endeavouring to get Israel cursed, that so he might be unable to make any resistance. He had the will to fight, and in this sense princes are said to be at war, though they never come to an engagement. 3 Kings xiv. 38. C.—Balac shut his gates against Israel. S. Aug. q. 26.

VER. 11. Men. Heb. "the masters of Jericho," which may denote either the king or the inhabitants. It is thought that people of the different nations were come to defend the city, or the text may signify that not only Jericho, but these different people, (C.) fought successively against the people of God, but all fought against Israel. ^mAnd he sent and called for Balaam, son of Beor, to curse you:

10 And I would not hear him, but on the contrary I blessed you by him, and I delivered you out of his hand.

11 ⁿAnd you passed over the Jordan, and you came to Jericho. And the men of that city fought against you, the Amorrite, and the Pherezite, and the Chanaanite, and the Hethite, and the Gergesite, and the Hevite, and the Jebusite: and I delivered them into your hands.

12 ^oAnd I sent before you hornets: and I drove them out from their places, the two kings of the Amorrites, not with thy sword, nor with thy bow.

13 And I gave you a land, in which you had not laboured, and cities to dwell in, which you built not, vineyards and oliveyards, which you planted not.

14 ^pNow therefore fear the Lord, and serve him with a perfect and most sincere heart: and put away the gods which your fathers served in Mesopotamia, and in Egypt, and serve the Lord.

15 But if it seem evil to you to serve the Lord, you have your choice: choose this day that which pleaseth you, whom you would rather serve, whether the gods which your fathers served in Mesopotamia, or the gods of the Amorrites, in whose land you dwell: but as for me and my house we will serve the Lord.

16 And the people answered, and said: God forbid we should leave the Lord, and serve strange gods:

17 The Lord our God he brought us and our fathers out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage: and did very great signs in our sight, and preserved us in all the way by which we journeyed, and among all the people through whom we passed.

in vain. H.—The fighting of the inhabitants of Jericho was only intentional; a miracle rendered all their efforts abortive. Yet this is called fighting in Scripture, (ver. 9,) as well as in other authors.

VER. 12. Hornets. S. Aug. explains this of the rumours, or devils, which terrified the people of the country. But it is generally understood literally. Wisd. xii. 8. M. Exod. xxiii. 28. C.—The two, &c., not only the nations on the west, but also those on the east side of the Jordan, who fell, not so much by the valour of the Israelites, as by the terror and judgments of God. H.

VER. 14. The gods. Some still retained in their hearts an affection for these idols, though privately (C.); so that Josue could not convict them, or bring them to condign punishment; as no doubt he, and Moses before him, would have done, if they had been apprized of any overt act of idolatry. Amos (v. 26) says, You carried a tabernacle for your Moloch and the image of your idols, &c.; which is confirmed by Ezec. xxiii. 3—8, and Acts vii. 42. For these acts many of the people were punished, (Num. xxv. 3—9,) and the rest were either sincerely converted, or took care to hide their impiety till after the death of Josue. H.—Fathers. He does not exempt Abraham, and the Jews acknowledge that he was once an idolater, which is the opinion of S. Ephrem, of the author of the Recognitions, B. i., and of many moderns; some of whom think that S. Paul gives him the epithet of impious, or ungodly, on that account. Rom. iv. 5. The idolatry of the Hebrews in Egypt is no less certain than that of their ancestors in Mesopotamia. Ezec. xxiii. 2, 8, 27. C.

VER. 15. Choice. Josue was persuaded that no restraint could bind the will (H.); and that, if the Israelites did not freely adhere to the Lord, they would not serve him long, nor would their adoration have any merit. C.—Hence he endeavours by all means to draw from them a free and candid acknowledgment of his divinity; and he leads the way, by declaring that all his house will adhere to the true and only God. They answer his fullest expectations, and profess, in the most cordial manner, that every tie of gratitude must bind them for ever to the service of the same Lord. H.—Elias makes a similar proposition (3 Kings xviii. 21. See Eccli. xv. 18. M.); not that it can be ever lawful to choose evil and to reject the sovereign good. But by this method the minds and hearts of the audience are stimulated to make the free and decided election of what alone can insure their eternal happiness. H.—Thus we often set before the people hell or heaven for their choice. M.

VER. 19. You will not be able to serve the Lord, &c. This was not said by the inhabitant of the land, into which we are come. Therefore we will serve the Lord, for he is our God.

19 And Josue said to the people: You will not be able to serve the Lord: for he is a holy God, and mighty and jealous, and will not forgive your wickedness and sins.

20 If you leave the Lord, and serve strange gods, he will turn, and will afflict you, and will destroy you, after all the good he hath done you.

21 And the people said to Josue: No, it shall not be so as thou sayst, but we will serve the Lord.

22 And Josue said to the people: You are witnesses, that you yourselves have chosen you the Lord to serve him. And they answered: We are witnesses.

23 Now therefore, said he, put away strange gods from among you, and incline your hearts to the Lord, the God of Israel.

24 And the people said to Josue: We will serve the Lord our God, and we will be obedient to his commandments.

25 Josue therefore on that day made a covenant, and set before the people commandments and judgments in Sichem.

26 And he wrote all these things in the volume of the law of the Lord: and he took a great stone, and set it under the oak that was in the sanctuary of the Lord:

way of discouraging them; but rather to make them more earnest and resolute, by setting before them the greatness of the undertaking, and the courage and constancy necessary to go through with it. Ch.—Heb. La thuciu, “you cannot,” may perhaps have the first u redundant (Ken.); as that is a letter which is often inserted or omitted at the transcriber’s pleasure. Aben Ezra. Simon.—Hallet suggests that we ought to read la thociu, “you shall not cease,” which would obviate the apparent difficulty of Josue’s attempting, as it were, to cool the fervour of the people, by insinuating that they will not be able to stick to their resolutions, and that at a time when he is exerting every nerve to make them sensible of their duty, and to engage them to swear an inviolable fidelity to the Lord. “Cease not to serve the Lord, for he is a holy God, he is a jealous God, he will not forgive your rebellion, (Copessicos, Job xxxiv. 27,) nor your sins; if you forsake the Lord, and serve strange gods, then he will turn and consume you.” Ken. Diss. 2.—If we were to read with an interrogation, “Will you not be able?” &c., it might answer the same end. Josue may be considered as starting an objection, which is but too common in the mouth of the slothful, and of many of the pretended reformers, Luther, &c., who endeavour to persuade the world that they are not able to comply with the rigour of God’s law, and even make his severity an encouragement for their despair. Josue replies that these pretences are groundless, and that God, who has already done so much for them, (ver. 20,) will not abandon them in their wants, if they cry unto him; and that, instead of being dejected by the thought of his judgments, they ought to strive with the utmost fervour to comply with his Divine will. H.

VER. 25. Covenant. He renewed the one that had been formerly made, stipulating, on the part of God, that the people should serve Him alone, ver. 23. H.—Then the people swore that they would observe the law, the customary sacrifices were offered, and a record of the whole was subjoined by Josue to that of Moses, in order that it might be deposited in or near the ark. Deut. xxxi. 26. C.—This renewal of the covenant prefigured the law of grace. S. Aug. q. 30. W.

VER. 26. Lord, particularly what related to the ratification of the covenant, which was the last public act of this great man. He placed it in its proper order in the continuation of the sacred history which Moses had commenced. H.—Stone, unpolished, except where there was an inscription, relating what had taken place. M.—This monument of religion was not forbidden. Deut. xvi. 22. C.—Oak. Heb. ale, is translated a turpentine tree, Gen. xxxv. 4, (H.) and by the Sept. here. But most people translate the oak. Chal. Aquila, &c. Under it Jacob buried the idols of Laban, and Abimelech was chosen king (Judg. ix. 6); as Abraham had entertained the angels under the same tree, Gen. xviii. 1, (C.) and had sat under it when he first came into Sichem, Gen. xii. 6. On which supposition it must have subsisted about 500 years. M.—Sanctuary, or tent, where the ark was placed on this occasion under the oak. C. Bouffere.—Some think it was at Silo. M. ver. 1.—Kennicott denies that the ark was present, and supposes that they offered sacrifice upon the very altar which Josue had erected on Garizim, between twenty and thirty years before; and that this mountain is here called the sanctuary, or “holy place.”

VER. 27. It hath heard. This is a figure of speech, by which sensation is attributed to inanimate things; and they are called upon, as it were, to bear witness in favour of the great Creator, whom they on their part constantly obey, (Ch.) which is the best manner of hearing. They rise up to our confusion. Theod. q. 19. W.—The oriental writers delight in these strong figurative expressions, 27 And he said to all the people: Behold this stone shall be a testimony unto you, that it hath heard all the words of the Lord, which he hath spoken to you: lest perhaps hereafter you will deny it, and lie to the Lord your God.

28 And he sent the people away, every one to their own possession.

29 And after these things Josue, the son of Nun, the servant of the Lord, died, being a hundred and ten years old:

30 And they buried him in the border of his possession, in Thamnathsare, which is situate in Mount Ephraim, on the north side of Mount Gaas.

31 And Israel served the Lord all the days of Josue, and of the ancients that lived a long time after Josue, and that had known all the works of the Lord, which he had done in Israel.

32 *And the bones of Joseph, which the children of Israel had taken out of Egypt, they buried in Sichem, in that part of the field^b which Jacob had bought of the sons of Hemor, the father of Sichem, for a hundred young ewes, and it was in the possession of the sons of Joseph.

33 Eleazar also, the son of Aaron, died: and they buried him in Gabaath, that belongeth to Phinees, his son, which was given him in Mount Ephraim.

which are not confined to poetry. Jesus Christ says, that if the children were silent, the stones would cry out. Luke xix. 40. See Num. xlii. 33; Gen. iv. 10. C.—Lest. VER. 29. And after, &c. If Josue wrote this book, as is commonly believed, these last verses were added by Samuel, or some other prophet. Ch.—Scholastic Hist. W.—Josue had governed Israel seventeen years with the greatest prudence and fidelity. C.—Some extend his administration to a longer period, 11.—He paid the debt of nature probably not long after the ratification of the covenant. It does not appear that he was ever married. S. Jerom c. Jov. i. S. Chrys.—His greatest honour is to have been so striking a figure of Jesus, whose name he bore, (C.) and whose sacred office in administering a second circumcision after he had caused the people to cross the Jordan, he so well described. Like him, he introduces the faithful into the land of promise, overthrows their enemies, and establishes them in peace, taking care, both at the beginning and at the end of his administration, to set before their eyes the will of the heavenly Father, the God who is both holy and jealous, ver. 19. Under Josue the Israelites are invincible only as long as they continue faithful. Chap. vii. But Josue secures his Church both from infidelity and from the attacks of all her enemies, by his all-powerful grace. H.—The Roman martyrology honours his memory on the 1st of Sept. Salien, A. C. 1453.

VER. 30. Thamnathsare. Judg. ii. 9. The last word is written harcas, (eros,) the first and last letters being transposed in one of these places. It may probably be in this verse, as we read of Mount Harcas, Judg. i. 35. Kennicott rather thinks that Sare is the proper reading, as it is found in the Syr., Arab., and Vulg. versions of the Book of Judges. H.—Gaas. This was another name for Mount Sare, or Hares, a part of Mount Ephraim; where S. Jerom tells us S. Paula visited the tomb of Josue. It was shown near Thamna in the days of Eusebius. C.

VER. 31. Long time; perhaps fifteen years. These ancients kept the people in order by their authority (C.) and good example, so great an influence have the manners of superiors upon those of the subjects. M.—See 2 Par. xxiv. 2, 16. After the death of these virtuous rulers, who had been formed in the school of Moses and of Josue, and had beheld the wonders of God, (H.) the people began to embrace the worship of Baalim. Heb. Kesita may denote also some species of money, though not perhaps marked with any figure of a lamb, &c. C.—Prot. “pieces of silver.” H.—The mausoleum of Joseph at Sichem was to be seen in S. Jerom’s time. q. Heb. in Gen. W.

VER. 33. Eleazar, the second high priest, was succeeded by his son Phinees. They were both of a very unexceptionable character. The Holy Ghost says, (Eccli. xlv. 28,) Phinees, the son of Eleazar, is the third in glory, by imitating him (his father or grandfather) in the fear of the Lord, &c. H.—In consideration of his extraordinary merit, the city of Gabaath was given to him, though it was not properly a sacerdotal city, and priests could not regularly possess any land as their inheritance. Grotius supposes that he obtained this city along with his wife, as she was an heiress of the tribe of Ephraim. But if that had been the case, must she not have married some of the same tribe? Num. xxxvi. 8. C.—Sept. (Grabe) add, "In that day the children of Israel taking the ark of the covenant of God, carried it about among themselves, and Phinees was priest instead of his father till he died, and he was buried in Gabaath, his own city. But the Israelites went each to his own place and city; and the children of Israel worshipped Astarte and Astaroth, and the gods of the surrounding nations, and the Lord delivered them into the hands of Eglon, the king of Moab, and he held them in subjection eighteen years." See Judg. iii. 12–14. Why this is recorded in this place does not appear, unless it be to insinuate that the servitude under Eglon did not commence till after the death of Phinees, who had been high priest forty years. Abisue, his son, entered upon the pontificate in the first year of the administration of Aod. 1 Par. vi. 4, 50. Salien, A. M. 2641, A. C. 1412. Josue and Elcazar had reigned nearly during the same period of time, and finished their course together. They had assisted each other in keeping the people of God under due restraint. Their successors in office acted with the like zeal and concord, though they were not quite so successful. It is probable that Phinees would have the chief sway in "the aristocracy" of the ancients, which Josephus says took place between Josue and Othoniel. Their government is acknowledged by most authors, though Salien supposes that their authority, as distinct from the Sanhedrim, consisted in giving good example. Many assert that Phinees ruled the people twenty-three years. H.

THE BOOK OF JUDGES.

This Book is called JUDGES, because it contains the history of what passed under the government of the judges, who ruled Israel before they had kings. The writer of it, according to the more general opinion, was the prophet Samuel. Ch.—Some are of opinion that the judges might have each left records of their respective administrations, (M.) which might be put in order by Samuel. The author of this book seems to have lived under the reign of Saul, before David had expelled the Jebusites. Chap. xviii. 31. D.—The captivity, which is mentioned ver. 30, must be understood of that when the ark of God, as well as the idol Michah, and many of the people were taken by the Philistines. Huet.—Many passages of the Psalms, &c., are taken from this book, which show its antiquity. Psal. lxxvii. 8; 2 Kings xi. 21. The Divine providence is here displayed in a very striking manner. D.—The theocracy still subsisted; and God generally chose these judges to be his ministers, and to deliver the people, on their repentance, from some dreadful calamity. II.—They exercised a supreme power, yet without bearing the insignia of regal authority, or imposing taxes, or making any alteration in the established laws. D.—When God did not raise up judges in an extraordinary manner, a kind of anarchy prevailed. H.—Each of the tribes regarded only their own affairs, and the republic was dissolved. Grotius.—Prosperous and unfortunate days succeeded each other in proportion as the people gave themselves up to repentance or to dissolution. Sicut se habebant peccata populi et misericordia Dei, atternaverunt prospera et adversa bellorum. S. Aug. C. D. xviii. 23. S. Jerom (ep. ad Eust. et ad Paulin.) exhorts us to penetrate the spiritual sense of the historical books, and he regards "the judges as so many figures" of the apostles, who established the church of Christ. Though some of them had been noted for their misconduct, they were reclaimed by the grace of God. Then all the judges, every one by name, whose heart was not corrupted, who turned not away from the Lord, that their memory might be blessed, &c. Eccli. xlv. 13, 14. W.—S. Paul mentions four of them, though the conduct of Jephthe and of Samson might have been regarded as more exceptionable than that of Othoniel, who is said to have been filled with the spirit of the Lord. Chap. iii. 10. Salien (A. 2640) supposes that the transactions recorded in the five last chapters took place before this fortieth year from the death of Josue, which was the last of Othoniel. With respect to the chronology of these times there are many opinions. Houbigant endeavours to show that the system of Usher is inadmissible, as well as that of Petau. Marsham maintains that many of the captivities, and of the judges, related only to some tribes, so that the different years which are specified must be referred to the same period of time. Thus while Jephthe ruled over those on the east side of the Jordan, and fought against the Ammonites, other judges endeavoured to repel the armies of the Philistines on the west. See 3 Kings vi. 1; Judg. xi. 16. By this expedient he finds no difficulty in showing, that four hundred and eighty years elapsed from the departure out of Egypt till the building of the temple, and that the Israelites had occupied the country of the Ammonites during the space of three hundred years. H.—Houbigant seems to adopt this system in some respects, and he thinks that errors have crept into some of the numbers, so that Aod procured a peace of only twenty, instead of eighty, years, &c. He observes that the name of judge here designates, 1. a warrior, like Samson; 2. a person who passes sentence according to the law, which was the office of Heli; 3. one Divinely commissioned to exercise the sovereign authority, as Samuel did, even after Saul had been elected king. Proleg. Chronol.—They were properly God's lieutenants. Their revenue seems to have been very precarious, and their exterior deportment modest and unassuming. They were guided by the declarations of the high priests, when arrayed with the Urim and Thummim; and their business was to promote the observance of the true religion, and to defend the people of God. This book concludes with the history of Samson, describing the transactions of three hundred and seventeen years, (C.) according to the calculation of Usher, which has met with the approbation of many of the learned, and is therefore chiefly inserted in this edition. We shall only subjoin the chronological table of Houbigant, which is not very common, that the reader may perceive where they are chiefly at variance. Moses governed 40 years, Josue 20, the Ancients 20, king of Mesopotamia 8, Othoniel 40, Moabites 18, Aod 20, Samgar 0, the Chanaanites 20, Deborah and Barac 40, Madianites 7, Gedeon 40, Abimelech 3, Thola 23, Ammonites 0, Jair 22, Jephthe 6, Abesan 7, Ahiaton 10, Abdon 8, Philistines 0, Samson 20, and with Heli 20, Heli and Samuel 25, Samuel and Saul 20, David 40, Solomon 3. In the fourth year of his reign the temple was begun, four hundred and eighty years after the liberation from Egypt. Those to whom no years are assigned lived at the same time with others whose years enter into the calculation. Thus Samgar gained a victory over the Philistines, while the Chanaanites held the Israelites in subjection. Chap. iii. 31. For other particulars we must refer to the author. Chron. sacra. II.

CHAPTER I.

The expedition and victory of Juda against the Chanaanites: who are tolerated in many places.

AFTER* the death of Josue, the children of Israel consulted the Lord, saying: Who shall go up before us against the Chanaanite, and shall be the leader of the war?

2 And the Lord said: Juda shall go up: behold I have delivered the land into his hands.

* A. M. 2570, A. C. 1434.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. After. Heb. "And after," as if this consultation had taken place immediately after the decease of their late victorious general, who had not pointed out his successor. But it is probable that the ancients, who governed in their respective tribes, (C.) were only roused to this act of vigour some time after, on seeing the preparations of the Chanaanites, particularly of Adonibezec, whose power became very alarming. H.—Indeed it is wonderful how he had escaped the vigilance of Josue, if he had been king during the life-time (C.) of that enterprising leader. It is therefore more likely that he took advantage of the lethargy of the Israelites after his death, and rose to a degree of eminence which made the people of God consult the high priest how they were to resist his efforts, (H.) who was to be their generalissimo, (C.) or which of the tribes was to make head against him. M.

VER. 2. Said, by the mouth of Phinees, (Josephus v. 2,) who had succeeded Elcazar in the pontificate. The latter survived Josue some little time, so that

3 And Juda said to Simeon, his brother: Come up with me into my lot, and fight against the Chanaanite, that I also may go along with thee into thy lot. And Simeon went with him.

4 And Juda went up, and the Lord delivered the Chanaanite and the Pherezite into their hands: and they slew of them in Bezec ten thousand men.

5 And they found Adonibezec in Bezec, and fought against him, and they defeated the Chanaanite and the Pherezite.

this must have happened some time later.—Juda. Some suppose that this is the name of the leader; but most people conclude from the sequel, that it designated the tribe. C.—The first judge was of this tribe, but not all of them. The manner of consulting the Lord was by the high priest praying before the tabernacle. Exod. xxix. W.

VER. 3. Brother. They had the same mother, Lia, and were intermixed in the same country. The two tribes unite both for the public and their own private advantage.

VER. 4. Pherezite. This name denotes "a countryman," as the former does "a merchant." None of the children of Chanaan were of this appellation. Gen. x. 15. The people of the country assembled therefore at Bezec, where Saul called a rendezvous when he was going to attack Jabes, and which seems to have been near the Jordan, seventeen miles from Sichem. Eus. S. Jer.—It signifies "lightning." A place of this name lies to the west of Bethlehem. M.

6 And Adonibezec fled: and they pursued after him and took him, and cut off his fingers and toes.

7 And Adonibezec said: Seventy kings, having their fingers and toes cut off, gathered up the leavings of the meat under my table: as I have done, so hath God requited me. And they brought him to Jerusalem, and he died there.

8 And the children of Juda besieging Jerusalem, took it, and put it to the sword, and set the whole city on fire.

9 And afterwards they went down and fought against the Chanaanite, who dwelt in the mountains, and in the south, and in the plains.

10 *And Juda going forward against the Chanaanite, that dwelt in Hebron, (the name whereof was in former times Cariatharbe,) slew Sesai, and Ahiman, and Tholmai:

11 And departing from thence, he went to the inhabitants of Dabir, the ancient name of which was Cariath-sepher; that is, the city of letters.

12 And Caleb said: He that shall take Cariath-sepher, and lay it waste, to him will I give my daughter Axa to wife.

13 And Othoniel, the son of Cenez, the younger brother of Caleb, having taken it, he gave him Axa his daughter to wife.

14 And as she was going on her way, her husband admonished her to ask a field of her father. And as she sighed sitting on her ass, Caleb said to her: What aileth thee?

15 But she answered: Give me a blessing, for thou hast given me a dry land: give me also a watery land. So Caleb gave her the upper and the nether watery ground.

16 And the children of the Cinite, the kinsman of Moses, went up from the city of palms, with the children of Juda, into the wilderness of his lot, which is at the south side of Arad, and they dwelt with him.

* Jos. xv. 14.

VER. 5. Adonibezec, "Lord of Beze." The cruelty of this tyrant, and the oppression which he probably made some of the Israelites suffer, roused their attention, and they treated him as he had treated others.

VER. 7. Table, at different times. H.—These were probably princes of some cities of Chanaan, who had been conquered by the tyrant. He obliged them to feed, like dogs, of what he threw down from his splendid table. M.

VER. 8. Jerusalem. This city was divided into two; one part was called Jebus, the other Salem: the one was in the tribe of Juda, the other in the tribe of Benjamin. After it was taken and burnt by the men of Juda, it was quickly rebuilt again by the Jebusites, as we may gather from ver. 21, and continued in their possession till it was taken by king David. Ch.—Fire. They treated it with such severity, because it seems to have revolted, (See Scerarius.) though the text of Josue (x. 25) only says that the king was slain. But (chap. xv. 63, and here, ver. 21) it is said that the children of Juda and of Benjamin dwelt along with the Jebusites.

VER. 10. Hebron. This expedition against Hebron, &c., is the same as is related Jos. xv. 24. It is here repeated, to give the reader at once a short sketch of all the achievements of the tribe of Juda against the Chanaanites. Ch.—Josue had taken Hebron before (Jos. x. 37); and Caleb retakes it. C.

VER. 11. The city of letters. Perhaps so called from some famous school or library kept there. Ch.—The explanation, that is, &c., is added by the Vulg. H.

VER. 13. Brother, or near relation, but much younger. See Jos. xv. 17. C.

VER. 16. The Cinite. Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, was called Cinæus, or the Cinite: and his children, who came along with the children of Israel, settled themselves among them in the land of Chanaan, embracing their worship and religion. From these the Rechabites sprang, of whom see Jer. xxxv.—The city of palms. Engaddi, which is sometimes called Hazazon-Thamar on that account. It lies nearer to the Dead Sea.—Arad was one of the most southern towns of Juda, near the country of the Amalecites. Saul ordered the descendants of Jethro to depart from among them. 1 Kings xv. 6. The Israelites had defeated the king of Arad long before. Num. xxi. 1. C.—With him. Heb. "the people" of Israel, (M.) or of Arad. C.

VER. 17. Sephaath, near Maresa, where Asa defeated the king of Arabia. 2 Par. xiv. 9. It was also called Sephata, and afterwards Horma. C.—Sept. 250

17 And Juda went with Simeon, his brother, and they together defeated the Chanaanites that dwelt in Sephaath, and slew them. And the name of the city was called Horma, that is, Anathema.

18 And Juda took Gaza, with its confines, and Ascalon, and Accaron, with their confines.

19 And the Lord was with Juda, and he possessed the hill country: but was not able to destroy the inhabitants of the valley, because they had many chariots armed with scythes.

20 And they gave Hebron to Caleb, ^{as} Moses had said, who destroyed out of it the three sons of Enac.

21 But the sons of Benjamin did not destroy the Jebusites that inhabited Jerusalem: and the Jebusite hath dwelt with the sons of Benjamin in Jerusalem until this present day.

22 The house of Joseph also went up against Bethel, and the Lord was with them.

23 For when they were besieging the city, which before was called Luza, 24 They saw a man coming out of the city, and they said to him: Show us the entrance into the city, and we will show thee mercy.

25 And when he had showed them, they smote the city with the edge of the sword: but that man, and all his kindred, they let go:

26 Who being sent away, went into the land of Hethim, and built there a city, and called it Luza: which is so called until this day.

27 Manasses also did not destroy Bethsan, and Thanac, with their villages; nor the inhabitants of Dor, and Jeb-laam, and Mageddo, with their villages. And the Chanaanite began to dwell with them.

28 But after Israel was grown strong, he made them tributaries, and would not destroy them.

29 Ephraim also did not slay the Chanaanite that dwelt in Gazer, but dwelt with him.

† Num. xiv. 24; Jos. xv. 14.

"they anathematized it, and utterly destroyed it, and they called the city Ereth-threusis, "utter ruin." H.

VER. 18. Gaza, &c. These were three of the principal cities of the Philistines, famous both in sacred and profane history. They were taken at this time by the Israelites; but as they took no care to put garrisons in them, the Philistines soon recovered them again, (Ch.) or perhaps the villages and territory were only seized by Juda; the cities being too well defended. Josue had not attacked them. Jos. xii. 3. Josephus says that only Ascalon and Azotus, in the plain, fell into the hands of the Israelites; and the Roman Sept. reads with a negation, (C.) which is inserted by Grabe in his edition as an interpolation, or as a peculiarity of the Alex. MSS., "and Juda did [not] possess Gaza with its dependencies, and Ascalon . . . and Accaron . . . and Azotus, with its fields around." H.—The situation of Gaza, Ascalon, and Accaron in the plain, would seem to secure them from being captured, ver. 19. S. Aug. and Procopius admit the negation. But the original and all the versions reject it, so that the children of Juda must have had possession of these cities at least for a short time. C. See chap. xv. and xvi.: 1 Kings vi. 17. M.

VER. 19. Was not able, &c. Through a cowardly fear of their chariots armed with hooks and scythes, and for want of confidence in God. Ch.—Scythes. Heb. rocob borzol, "chariots of iron." C.—The Rom. and Alex. Sept. have, "Rechab was opposed to them." H.—The edit. of Basil adds, "and they had chariots of iron," as S. Aug. (q. 5) reads. A double translation is thus given. C.

VER. 20. Enac, mentioned ver. 10. Sept. add, that "he took the three cities . . . and destroyed," &c. See Jos. xv. 14. H.

VER. 21. Day, before the reign of David. See Jos. xv. 63. The Jebusite occupied the citadel, &c. C.

VER. 22. Of Joseph, on the west side of the Jordan, attacked Bethel, which it does not appear that Josue molested. H.

VER. 23. Besieging. Heb. "sent to desery," or they came upon it like spies.

VER. 24. Mercy. The city belonged of right to them, so that they might use this means, as they were not bound to inquire by what motives the man was actuated thus to betray his country. C.

VER. 26. Hethim. The Hethite lived towards the south of Chanaan. M.

VER. 27. Bethsan, &c. See Jos. xvii. 11.—Began. Heb. "would dwell"

30 Zabolon destroyed not the inhabitants of Cetron, and Naalol: but the Chanaanite dwelt among them, and became their tributary.

31 Aser also destroyed not the inhabitants of Accho, and of Sidon, of Ahalab, and of Achazib, and of Helba, and of Aphec, and of Rohob:

32 And he dwelt in the midst of the Chanaanites, the inhabitants of that land, and did not slay them.

33 Nephtali also destroyed not the inhabitants of Bethsames, and of Bethanath: and he dwelt in the midst of the Chanaanites, the inhabitants of the land, and the Bethsamites and Bethanites were tributaries to him.

34 And the Amorrhite straitened the children of Dan in the mountain, and gave them not place to go down to the plain:

35 And he dwelt in the mountain Hares, that is, of potsherds, in Aialon and Salebim. And the hand of the house of Joseph was heavy upon him, and he became tributary to him.

36 And the border of the Amorrhite was from the ascent of the scorpion, the rock, and the higher places.

CHAP. II.

An angel reproveth Israel. They weep for their sins. After the death of Josue they often fall, and repenting, are delivered from their afflictions; but still fall worse and worse.

AND an angel of the Lord went up from Galgal to the place of weepers, and said: I made you go out of Egypt, and have brought you into the land for which I swore to your fathers: and I promised that I would not make void my covenant with you for ever:

2 On condition that you should not make a league with the inhabitants of this land, but should throw down their altars: and you would not hear my voice: why have you done this?

3 Wherefore I would not destroy them from before your face; that you may have enemies, and their gods may be your ruin.

4 And when the angel of the Lord spoke these words

H.—The Israelites sinfully acquiesced, partly through slothfulness and the dislike of war, and partly that they might receive tribute from the Chanaanites. M.

VER. 35. He dwelt. That is, the Amorrhite. Ch.—Heb. "But the Amorrhites would dwell in Mount Hares, in Aialon, and in Salebim." Some copies of the Sept. seem to give the meaning of these proper names, though inaccurately. H.—Solomon had one of his twelve officers at Salebim, in the tribe of Dan. 3 Kings iv. 9.

VER. 36. Rock, Petra, the capital of Arabia, which Josephus (iii. 2) assigns to Amalec. The Amorrhites dwelt in many parts of the land of promise, (C.) particularly in the higher places about the Dead Sea. H.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. An angel. Taking the shape of a man, (Ch.) such as had appeared to Josue, (chap. v. 13. M.) the guardian angel of Israel. H.—The Jews commonly suppose that it was Phinees, the high priest. Mal. ii. 8. Drusius. But he might be dead, with the rest of the ancients, when this took place, as the Israelites seem to have experienced many difficulties in consequence of their repeated prevarications, before this messenger was sent to them. He might very probably be some prophet, who speaks in the name of God, (Agg. i. 13.) as he is said to come not from heaven, but from Galgal to the place of weepers. Heb. at Habboeim, "the mulberry trees." Sept. Klauthmon. This place, the valley of tears, (Psal. lxxxiii. 7,) perhaps received this name afterwards, from what happened, ver. 4. Some suppose it designates Silo, where the people might be assembled on some great festival, and where sacrifice was offered, ver. 5. Bonifre collects from the Sept., and Josephus, (vii. 4,) that it lay beyond the vale of the Raphaim, on the south side of Jerusalem. M.—I made. If he was an angel, his authority could not be called in question; and if he was the high priest, or a prophet known to the people, they would hear him with attention and respect. C.—He appeared at least in human form, and spoke in the name of God. W. Jos. v.

VER. 2. League. None of a public nature had been perhaps made by the whole nation, to sanction the idolatry of the Chanaanites. But so many individuals had entered into marriages with them, and imitated their perverse manners, so many tribes had spared the cities, &c. that the Israelites in general merited the reprimand. C.

to all the children of Israel: they lifted up their voice, and wept.

5 And the name of that place was called the place of weepers, or of tears: and there they offered sacrifices to the Lord.

6 And Josue sent away the people, and the children of Israel went every one to his own possession to hold it:

7 And they served the Lord all his days, and the days of the ancients, that lived a long time after him, and who knew all the works of the Lord, which he had done for Israel.

8 And Josue, the son of Nun, the servant of the Lord, died, being a hundred and ten years old;

9 And they buried him in the borders of his possession in Thamnathsare, in Mount Ephraim, on the north side of Mount Gaas.

10 And all that generation was gathered to their fathers: and there arose others that knew not the Lord, and the works which he had done for Israel.

11 And the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the Lord, and they served Baalim.

12 And they left the Lord, the God of their fathers, who had brought them out of the land of Egypt: and they followed strange gods, and the gods of the people that dwelt round about them, and they adored them: and they provoked the Lord to anger, 13 Forsaking him, and serving Baal and Astaroth.

14 And the Lord being angry against Israel, delivered them into the hands of plunderers: who took them and sold them to their enemies, that dwelt round about: neither could they stand against their enemies:

15 But whithersoever they meant to go, the hand of the Lord was upon them, as he had said, and as he had sworn to them: and they were greatly distressed.

16 And the Lord raised up judges, to deliver them from the hands of those that oppressed them: but they would not hearken to them,

17 Committing fornication with strange gods, and

• Jos. xxiv. 28.

VER. 3. Ruin. Sept. "stumbling-block," the occasion of ruin. M.

VER. 5. Lord: holocausts to acknowledge his dominion, and sacrifices of expiation for the transgressions of the people. Only the tabernacle and temple were appointed for such sacrifices, though they might be offered elsewhere by dispensation. S. Aug. q. 36. W.

VER. 6. And Josue, &c. This is here inserted out of Josue (xxiv.) by way of recapitulation of what had happened before, and by way of an introduction to that which follows. Ch.—The sacred penman gives a short description of the general conduct of the Israelites, showing how they abandoned their former fidelity after Josue and the elders were no more, and in consequence were severely punished. Salien and some others have hence inferred that Josue was living when the angel made this reproof. C.—But that is contradicted by many passages in the Book of Josue, where the fidelity of the people is commended, as well as here, ver. 7; and chap. i., we read of the death of Josue, so that S. Aug. (q. 14) says, "there can be no doubt but this is a recapitulation." M.—As little had been said before to enable us to see the grounds of the accusation, these few remarks are subjoined to justify the words of the angel, who appeared while the people were groaning under the afflictions which their sins had deserved. C.

VER. 12. They followed strange gods. What is here said of the children of Israel, as to their falling so often into idolatry, is to be understood of a great part of them; but not so universally as if the true worship of God was ever quite abolished among them: for the succession of the true church and religion was kept up all this time by the priests and Levites, at least in the house of God in Silo. Ch.—At different times God raised up deliverers, who were taken from among his people, and no doubt abhorred the impiety of the multitude.

VER. 13. Baal, "Lord," a title given to many of the idols, (H.) both male and female. M.—They are often distinguished by some additional name, as Belzebub, "fly," and berith, "covenant," gods adored at Accaron and Sichem. M.

VER. 14. Who took. Heb. "that spoiled them, and he sold" or abandoned them, &c. C.

VER. 17. Quickly. They had persevered in virtue under the government of Josue and of the elders for the space of forty years, according to Marsham and adoring them. They quickly forsook the way, in which their fathers had walked : and hearing the commandments of the Lord, they did all things contrary.

18 And when the Lord raised them up judges, in their days, he was moved to mercy, and heard the groanings of the afflicted, and delivered them from the slaughter of the oppressors.

19 But after the judge was dead, they returned, and did much worse things than their fathers had done, following strange gods, serving them, and adoring them. They left not their own inventions, and the stubborn way, by which they were accustomed to walk.

20 And the wrath of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he said : Behold this nation hath made void my covenant, which I had made with their fathers, and hath despised to hearken to my voice :

21 I also will not destroy the nations which Josue left when he died :

22 That through them I may try Israel, whether they will keep the way of the Lord, and walk in it, as their fathers kept it, or not.

23 The Lord therefore left all these nations, and would not quickly destroy them, neither did he deliver them into the hands of Josue.

CHAP. III.

The people falling into idolatry, are oppressed by their enemies ; but repenting, are delivered by Othniel, Aod, and Samgar.

THESE are the nations which the Lord left, that by them he might instruct Israel, and all that had not known the wars of the Chanaanites ;

Houbigant. The former places the first state of anarchy and of idolatry thirty-four years after Josue, allowing fifteen years for the administration of the surviving ancients, and the remainder to bring the nation to such a pitch of wickedness as to force God to abandon it to the dominion of Chusan, for eight years.—Walked. Heb. and Sept. "walked, obeying the commands of the Lord : they did not so."

VER. 18. Moved, &c. Heb. and Sept. "and the Lord was with the judge, and delivered them out of the hands of their enemies all the days of the judge (for it repented the Lord (Sept. he was moved to compassion) on account of their groans, &c.). H.—The repentance of God denotes a change of conduct in our regard. C.—Delivered. Hence the judges have the title of Saviour. Chap. iii. 9 ; 2 Esd. ix. 27. M.

VER. 19. And did. Heb. "and corrupted themselves." Sept. "were more depraved than," &c.—By which, &c. is put instead of the Heb. "their stubborn" (or hard), (H.) Chal. "corrupt" way.

VER. 21. Nations. Heb. "any." Sept. "a man of those nations," which must be understood, unless the Israelites return to a proper sense of their duty. For then he destroyed not only individuals, but whole armies, by the hand of the judges. H.

VER. 22. Or not. The secrets of hearts cannot be hidden from the omniscience of God. C.—But he would have an experimental knowledge of the fidelity of his people, by leaving these nations in the midst of them. It was partly on this account that he withheld the sword of Josue, who would otherwise have easily followed up his victories, and exterminated all the inhabitants. The cowardice and secret indispositions of the people was another obstacle. H.—God acted like a person who distrusted the fidelity of his servant, and left something in his way to see if he would steal it. C.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Instruct. The original is translated try, ver. 4, and chap. ii. 22.—And all. Heb. "as many of Israel as had not," &c. H.—Those who had served under Josue were so strongly impressed with a sense of the Divine power and severity, that they never forgot them : but there was danger lest their children should grow careless, if they were suffered to enjoy a constant state of prosperity. Virtue, or power, is made perfect in infirmity, 2 Cor. xii. 9. C.

VER. 2. And be. Heb. "at least, such as before knew nothing thereof." Though war be in itself an evil, the passions of men render it necessary, and God makes use of it as of a scourge, to punish the wicked, and at the same time to keep all under due restraint. H.

VER. 3. Princes, (sutrapas), a Persian word. M.—These heads of the five great cities of the Philistines are called Sornim, (H.) but never kings, whether they were governors of so many petty states, united in the same form of republican or aristocratical government, or independent on each other. See Jos. xiii. Three of these cities are said to have been taken by Juda, (chap. i. 18,) unless the Sept. be more accurate, as this passage would seem to insinuate. C.—These five cities were Gaza, Geth, Ascalon, Azotus, and Accaron. H.—All but Geth were on the Mediterranean Sea. C.—All the Chanaanites, &c., who dwell in Libanus, with

2 That afterwards their children might learn to fight with their enemies, and to be trained up to war :

3 The five princes of the Philistines, and all the Chanaanites, and the Sidonians, and the Hevites that dwelt in Mount Libanus, from Mount Baal Hermon to the entering into Emath.

4 And he left them, that he might try Israel by them, whether they would hear the commandments of the Lord, which he had commanded their fathers, by the hand of Moses, or not.

5 So the children of Israel dwelt in the midst of the Chanaanite, and the Hethite, and the Amorrhite, and the Pherezite, and the Hevite, and the Jebusite :

6 And they took their daughters to wives, and they gave their own daughters to their sons, and they served their gods.

7 And they did evil in the sight of the Lord, and they forgot their God, and served Baalim and Astaroth.

8 And the Lord being angry with Israel, delivered them into the hands of Chusan Rasathaim, king of Mesopotamia, and they served him eight years.

9 And they cried to the Lord, who raised them up a saviour, and delivered them ; to wit, Othniel, the son of Cenez, the younger brother of Caleb :

10 And the spirit of the Lord was in him, and he judged Israel. And he went out to fight, and the Lord delivered Chusan Rasathaim, king of Syria, and he overthrew him :

11 And the land rested forty years, and Othniel, the son of Cenez, died.

some others, who were dispersed through the country, ver. 5. H.—These chiefly inhabited the environs of Sidon.—Baal Hermon. The idol of Baal might probably be adored on this mountain. M.—We find Baal-gad in the same neighbourhood, and both may mean the same city. C.

VER. 6. Gods. This was the fatal consequence which God had foretold. Deut. vii. 4. H.

VER. 7. Astaroth. Heb. Aseroth. Sept. "the groves," (M.) of which Astaroth was the goddess, (C.) like Diana. Chap. ii. 11. Various trees were sacred to idols. M.

VER. 8. Chusan. This name leads us to conclude that this prince was of Scythian extraction, a descendant of Chus (C.) ; it signifies "black, or an Ethiopian." M.—Rasathaim was perhaps the place of his nativity. As it means "of two sorts of malice," Arias thinks that the Syrian kings took this title to show that they would punish or repress all crimes against the civil or criminal law, (M.) those which affected the property as well as the lives of their subjects. H.—Mesopotamia. In Hebrew Aramnaharaim, Syria of the two rivers ; so called because it lies between the Euphrates and the Tigris. It is absolutely called Syria, ver. 10. Ch.

VER. 9. Saviour. "We must remark, that the man by whom God grants us safety, is styled a saviour," (S. Aug. q. 18,) though Christ is the proper and principal Saviour. W.—Caleb. Sept. "the younger son of Cenez, who was the brother of Caleb." H.—Othniel was one of the ancients. If he could not prevent the people from falling into idolatry, he rescued them from it. C.

VER. 10. In him, to instruct and enable him both to rout the enemy, and to govern the people with prudence. H.—Chal. "the spirit of prophecy." The oracle excited him to attack Chusan. Joseph. v. 3. He was intrusted with an extraordinary authority, in a wonderful manner, and God gave him all those virtues which were requisite for his exalted station. C.—Him. Heb. "his hand was strong upon Chusan Rasathaim." He gained a complete victory over him. C.

VER. 11. Died, "forty years after Josue, according to the chronology of Usher, which we follow," (C.) or rather Usher translates, the land began to rest "in the fortieth year" from the peace of Josue. He places the death of that leader A. 2570, and the end of Chusan's dominion 2599 ; so that, if we deduct forty years from this last date, we shall come to the year 2559, the sixth of Josue's administration, when he began to divide the conquered lands. He supposes that the peace of Othniel lasted about sixty-two years, when Eglon disturbed it for eighteen years. "Aod delivered Israel. After him Samgar appeared, and the land rested till the 80th year from the peace of Othniel." Houbigant censures this indiscriminate use of cardinal and of ordinal numbers, and the blending the times of servitude with those of peace (H.) ; and "surely this method of reckoning is very harsh, and contrary to the usual acceptance of words." C.—The epoch from which Usher dates is no where so distinctly specified as that we should suppose that the author of the Book of Judges had it in view. Moreover, by this method, we are left to guess how long each of the judges reigned, or how long the 12 And the children of Israel did evil again in the sight of the Lord: who strengthened against them Eglon, king of Moab: because they did evil in his sight.

13 And he joined to him the children of Ammon, and Amalec: and he went and overthrew Israel, and possessed the city of palm-trees.

14 And the children of Israel served Eglon, king of Moab, eighteen years.

15 And afterwards they cried to the Lord, who raised them up a saviour, called Aod, the son of Gera, the son of Jemini, who used the left hand as well as the right. And the children of Israel sent presents to Eglon, king of Moab, by him.

16 And he made himself a two-edged sword, with a haft in the midst, of the length of the palm of the hand, and was girded therewith, under his garment, on the right thigh.

17 And he presented the gifts to Eglon, king of Moab. Now Eglon was exceeding fat.

18 And when he had presented the gifts unto him, he followed his companions that came along with him.

19 Then returning from Galgal, where the idols were, he said to the king: I have a secret message to thee, O king. And he commanded silence: and all being gone out that were about him, 20 Aod went in to him: now he was sitting in a summer parlour alone, and he said: I have a word from God to thee. And he forthwith rose up from his throne.

21 And Aod put forth his left hand, and took the dagger from his right thigh, and thrust it into his belly, peace which they had procured subsisted. Usher admits that the years of servitude are specified; and why not also the years of peace, since they are expressed exactly in the same manner? If the ordinal numbers 40th, 80th, &c., were intended, b would be prefixed, as Deut. i. 3; and this grammatical observation alone suffices to overturn the calculation of Usher. Houbig. Proleg.—Salien dates from the death of Josue in 2600, and allows that forty years elapsed from that period till the decease of Othoniel; including the years which some attribute to the ancients, and to the anarchy (chap. xvii., &c., to the end); and also the eight years of servitude; so that instead of a rest of forty years we shall find that all was in confusion the greatest part of the time. The idolatry of Israel, which shortly brought on the servitude under Eglon, commenced immediately after the conclusion of these forty years, when Salien begins to enumerate the years of Aod's government. Thus he does from one judge to another. This system does not indeed make the text bend to uphold it, but it supposes that the sacred writer includes anarchy and servitude under the name of rest. H.

VER. 12. Eglon signifies "a calf." C.—God made use of this prince to scourge his people, with the assistance of the neighbouring nations. He took Engaddi, in the plains of Jericho, and was thus enabled to keep an eye both upon his own subjects and the conquered Israelites. C.

VER. 15. Aod signifies "praise," whence perhaps Josephus calls him Judes, which has the same import. M.—He was a descendant of Jemini, or Benjamin, by his son Gera. Gen. xlii. 1.—Right. Sept. and many interpreters agree that Aod was "ambidexter," a quality which Plato exhorted those who were designed for war to strive to acquire. The Jews explain ator very absurdly; Aod "had his right hand maimed or tied" (C.): and Prot. render "a man left-handed." H.—This would be a very awkward recommendation for a warrior, though it is pretended that such are more resolute, and more difficult to encounter than others. The number of the men at Gabaa who are praised for their skill, as well as the brave men of David, (1 Par. xii. 2,) shows sufficiently that the term does not mean left-handed. But the Scripture here takes notice that Aod could use his left hand so well because he placed his dagger, contrary to custom, on his right side, and the motions of his left hand would not be so narrowly watched. C.

VER. 16. He made, or procured, though it was formerly honourable for a person to do such things himself. C.—Hand. Heb. gumod, is translated by the Prot. "of a cubit length," (H.) though the term is never used elsewhere for that measure. Sept. have spithamē, a measure of twelve fingers.—Garment. The segum, as well as the Sept. mandua, from the Heb. modi, denote a military garment. H.—Thigh. The Jews wore the sword there (Psal. xlii. 4); and it would be more convenient on the left thigh, as the nations of Gaul and Germany had it, while the Roman cavalry wore the sword on the right; and the infantry had two swords, the long one on the left, and a shorter, about a hand's length, on the right. Joseph. Bel. iii. 3. Lipsius.

VER. 18. Him; or, according to the Heb., Sept., and Chal., "he sent away the men who had brought the presents." C.—But it seems he followed after them

22 With such force that the haft went in after the blade into the wound, and was closed up with the abundance of fat. So that he did not draw out the dagger, but left it in the body as he had struck it in: and forthwith, by the secret parts of nature, the excrements of the belly came out.

23 But Aod carefully shutting the doors of the parlour, and locking them,

24 Went out by a postern door. And the king's servants going in, saw the doors of the parlour shut, and they said: Perhaps he is easing nature in his summer parlour,

25 And waiting a long time, till they were ashamed, and seeing that no man opened the door, they took a key: and opening, they found their lord lying dead on the ground.

26 But Aod, while they were in confusion, escaped, and passed by the place of the idols, from whence he had returned. And he came to Seirath:

27 And forthwith he sounded the trumpet in Mount Ephraim: and the children of Israel went down with him, he himself going in the front.

28 And he said to them: Follow me: for the Lord hath delivered our enemies, the Moabites, into our hands. And they went down after him, and seized upon the fords of the Jordan, which are in the way to Moab: and they suffered no man to pass over:

29 But they slew of the Moabites at that time, about ten thousand, all strong and valiant men: none of them could escape.

as far as Galgal, (H.) whence he returned, as if he had been consulting the oracle, and had orders to communicate something of importance to the king, unless we translate, "He dismissed, &c., (19) and as he was returned from the idols at Galgal, he said," &c., at the same interview. C.—He would not expose his companions to danger. M.

VER. 19. Idols. Heb. postlim. Some take these to be only heaps of stones. Prot. "quarries." H.—But the Sept., &c. represent them as "carved" idols. The same expression is used, Exod. xx. 4, &c.—Silence to Aod, (C.) that none of the people might be able to divulge the secret. Heb. "be thou silent." M.

VER. 20. Alone. Heb. "Aod approached unto him, and he was sitting in a summer parlour, which he had for himself, alone." H.—A word. What Aod, who was judge and chief magistrate of Israel, did on this occasion, was by a special inspiration of God: but such things are not to be imitated by private men. Ch. S. Aug. q. 20. Num. xxv. W.—Heb. "a thing (message, &c.) from God, (Aleim,) or the gods." Though God permitted this king to attack his people, and to scourge them for a time, he did not approve of his injustice, and now authorized the chief magistrate of Israel to revenge their wrongs. H.—God is the arbiter of our lives, and may order whomsoever he pleases to put us to death. But the doctrine of T. Huss, who preached, "It is lawful for every subject to kill any tyrant," was condemned in the Council of Constance. David severely punished the man who pretended that he had slain Saul. The first Christians never entered into any revolt against those cruel and impious emperors who oppressed them, and whose title to the throne was evidently unjust. See Rom. xiii. 1. Under what government are all satisfied, or of the same religion with the sovereign? Even if any should pretend that they have an order from God to kill a tyrant, they must give proof of their commission to the lawful superiors, or they must expect to be treated as fanatical impostors. C.—Throne; or Heb. "seat." The throne of state would not probably be placed in a retired chamber. H.

VER. 22. With, &c. Heb., Prot., "And the haft also went in after the blade, and the fat closed upon the blade, so that he could not draw the dagger out of his belly, and the dirt came out." By the word belly, the Jews mean all the vital parts. C.—The wound was so deep that Aod did not think proper to strive long to extract his sword; and indeed, being all bloody, it would have only tended to excite suspicion. H.

VER. 24. Door. Lyranus would prefer porticum, "the porch," as the Chal. explains the Heb. by exedra, a portico highly ornamented with pillars and seats, where the princes formerly used to administer justice. H.—The Rom. Sept. adde after proetada, what may perhaps be a second version, "and he went through those who were drawn up," or the guards. He showed no signs of fear. H.

VER. 26. Seirath seems to have been on the road from Galgal to Mount Ephraim. Some conjecture that Josephus speaks of it under the name of Syriad, (C.) where he saw the inscriptions, which he asserts were left by the children of Seth before the deluge. H.—They might perhaps be the idols which are mentioned here.

30 And Moab was humbled that day under the hand of Israel: and the land rested eighty years.

31 After him was Samgar, the son of Anath, who slew of the Philistines six hundred men with a plough-share: and he also defended Israel.

CHAP. IV.

Debbora and Barac deliver Israel from Jabin and Sisara. Jahel killeth Sisara.

AND the children of Israel again did evil in the sight of the Lord after the death of Aod:

2 *And the Lord delivered them up into the hands of Jabin, king of Chanaan, who reigned in Asor: and he had a general of his army named Sisara, and he dwelt in Haroseth of the Gentiles.

3 And the children of Israel cried to the Lord: for he had nine hundred chariots set with scythes, and for twenty years had grievously oppressed them.

4 And there was at that time Debbora, a prophetess, the wife of Lapidoth, who judged the people.

5 And she sat under a palm-tree, which was called by her name, between Rama and Bethel, in Mount Ephraim: and the children of Israel came up to her for all judgment.

6 And she sent and called Barac, the son of Abinoem, out of Cedes, in Nephtali: and she said to him: The Lord God of Israel hath commanded thee: Go, and lead an army to Mount Thabor, and thou shalt take with thee ten thousand fighting men of the children of Nephtali, and of the children of Zabulon:

7 And I will bring unto thee in the place of the torrent Cison, Sisara, the general of Jabin's army, and his chariots, and all his multitude, and will deliver them into thy hand.

8 And Barac said to her: If thou wilt come with me, I will go: if thou wilt not come with me, I will not go.

9 She said to him: I will go, indeed, with thee, but at this time the victory shall not be attributed to thee, because Sisara shall be delivered into the hand of a woman. Debbora therefore arose, and went with Barac to Cedes.

10 And he called unto him Zabulon and Nephtali, and went up with ten thousand fighting men, having Debbora in his company.

11 Now Haber, the Cinite, had some time before departed from the rest of the Cinites, his brethren, the sons of Hobab, the kinsman of Moses: and had pitched his tents unto the valley, which is called Sennim, and was near Cedes.

12 And it was told Sisara, that Barac, the son of Abinoem, was gone up to Mount Thabor:

13 And he gathered together his nine hundred chariots armed with scythes, and all his army, from Haroseth of the Gentiles, to the torrent Cison.

14 And Debbora said to Barac: Arise, for this is the

* 1 Kings xii. 9.

VER. 29. Strong. Heb. lit. "the fatness," denoting what is most excellent. Psal. xx. 30, and lxxvii. 31. C.—Eglon would have his chief nobility and most valiant soldiers round his person. H.

VER. 30. Eighty. The Hebrews use the letter p to express this number; and, as l is very like their c, which stands for twenty, Houbigant suspects that the first number is a mistake of the transcribers. Usher confesses that it is "extremely improbable" that Aod should have governed so long after he had slain Eglon, as he must have been, at that time, about forty years old; and the Israelites were not often so constant for such a length of time. Houbig. Proleg.—But his difficulty does not affect Usher, as he brings Aod forward only in the eightieth year from the peace of Othoniel; and instead of allowing him eighty years of peaceful sway, he says Samgar appeared after him; but, it seems, both together did not reign a year, since in that eightieth year he commences the servitude which Jabin brought upon Israel, from A. 2679 till 2690, and peace was not restored by Barac for other twenty years! H.

VER. 31. Samgar. His reign seems to have been short, and only perhaps extended over the tribes of Juda, Simeon, and Dan, while Debbora governed in another part. Some exclude him from the list of judges. But Josephus, Origen, &c., allow his title, with most of the moderns. C.—The Alex. Chronicle gives him a reign of twenty-four years, which Salien would understand as if he had acted under the orders of Aod, when the latter was grown too old, if the author had not said that, "after the death of Aod, Samgar, his son, judged Israel twenty-four years," which he subtracts from the eighty years allotted to Aod. He makes Bocci succeed Aod in the pontificate at the same time, which Salien admits, A. 2696.—Hundred. Sept. "as far as 600," which might be at different times, when the Philistines were dispersed through the country in order to plunder.—Plough-share. Sept. aratropodi. H.—Some translate the Heb. "an ox-goad." Maundrell describes those which are used in Palestine, as eight feet long; and at the thick end ten inches round, with a kind of spade, to clean the plough, while the other end is very sharp. Samgar might probably use such an instrument. From its being mentioned, we may gather that he did not engage the enemy in a pitched battle, (C.) but as he could find an opportunity. H.—Defended. Heb. and Sept. "saved," which shows that he was a proper judge. M.—It is true, he did not rescue the Israelites entirely, but he stood up in their defence. C.—The duration of his government is not specified, nor is it said that the land rested, because he ruled for a short time only: Josephus says not quite a year; and the roads were continually infested with the incursions of the Philistines on the south, and of the Chanaanites on the north. Chap. v. 6. Samgar seems to have been a ploughman, and he seized the first weapon that came to hand. H.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Aod. Samgar is passed over, either because he was only a private man, who performed a feat of valour like Jahel, (chap. v. 6. Salien,) or because his government was so short and limited.

VER. 2. Asor. Josue defeated the king of this country. Jos. xi. 8. But some of his successors had contrived to raise themselves again to power. His dominion probably extended only over the tribes of Nephtali, Zabulon, and Issachar, while Debbora judged in Mount Ephraim, and Samgar in Juda.—He dwelt. It is not clear whether Jabin or Sisara dwelt in Haroseth, but most probably it was the latter, ver. 13.

VER. 3. Scythes. Heb. "chariots of iron." C.

VER. 4. Lapidoth signifies "lamps," and Barac, "thunder;" which has given rise to various conjectures, as if they were the same person. S. Ambrose thinks that Debbora was a widow at this time, and the mother of Barac. But S. Jerom says there is no proof of either.—Judged. Many deny that this word is taken in the same latitude here as when it is applied to men. But the text, as it is explained by the Fathers in general, will not permit us to refuse the prerogatives of a judge to Debbora. Her authority was not merely voluntary, in consequence of the people's high opinion of her, as many would believe, with Salien, W., &c., (H.) but she gave decisions which were binding on the Israelites; and she seems to have continued in the exercise of her functions along with Barac, after the victory which they gained over Sisara. The government of the latter was perhaps limited to the tribes which he had rescued from slavery. C.

VER. 5. Name. Heb. "she dwelt (or sat to judge) under the palm-tree of Debbora." "The oak of weeping," allon Bachuth, under which Debbora, the nurse of Rebecca, was interred, was also near Bethel. Gen. xxxv. 8. H.—This city was on the confines of the tribes of Ephraim and of Benjamin, over which Debbora chiefly exercised her authority; and here she was consulted by the people. C.

VER. 6. Cedes. There was another city of this name in Juda. H.—Barac was of the tribe of Nephtali. C.—The Lord, &c. Prot. translate, "hath not the Lord?" &c., as if the will of God had been notified to him before. We find that he makes some demur, ver. 8. H.—Thabor. A city of this name was also built at the foot or on the top of the mountain, and belonged to Zabulon. It is attributed to the Levites, 1 Par. vi. 77. The mountain rises in the midst of a vast plain, to the height of thirty stadia, (Joseph. Bel. iv. 2. S. Jer. in Osce v. 1,) or above 3000 paces, "which make a league, or an hour's walk." It is commonly supposed that Jesus Christ was transfigured on this once delightful mountain, which is now a desert. C.

VER. 7. Hand. Cison flows through a luxuriant vale or champaign country, on the south of Mount Thabor, whence Barac came rushing down the rocks and precipices upon the army of Sisara. Chap. v. 15. C.—This general was delivered into the hand of Barac, to be routed, though he was afterwards slain by the hand of Jahel, ver. 9, and 21. H.

VER. 8. Not go. Sept. and S. Aug. (q. 26) add, "because I know not whether the Lord will send his angel to grant me success." S. Paul (Heb. xi. 32) praises the faith of Barac, so that he spoke thus out of prudence, that the people, seeing (C.) their revered prophetess in his company, (H.) might not condemn the undertaking as too rash and perilous. He therefore entreats her, in this earnest manner, to come with him, and point out the time when he must attack the enemy.

VER. 9. Thee. Prot. "the journey that thou takest shall not be for thine honour, for the Lord shall sell Sisara," &c. It is certain, however, that Barac acquired great commendation on this occasion: but if he had not been accompanied by Debbora, he would not have shared the glory of the victory with her and another woman. H.—Some suppose that Debbora speaks of herself; others explain her words of Jahel. They may both be right. M.

VER. 11. Valley. Heb. atum, may denote also (Sept.) "a wood of oaks." (C.) or a plain. H.—Haber probably left the first settlement of the Cinites near Engaddi when his brethren went (C.) into the southern parts of the tribe of Juda. Chap. i. 16. This is mentioned that we might know how his wife came to be in those parts, ver. 17, &c. H.

VER. 13. Cison. Part of this torrent falls into the Mediterranean, and part day wherein the Lord hath delivered Sisara into thy hands: behold, he is thy leader. And Barac went down from Mount Thabor, and ten thousand fighting men with him.

15 *And the Lord struck a terror into Sisara, and all his chariots, and all his multitude, with the edge of the sword, at the sight of Barac; insomuch, that Sisara leaping down from off his chariot, fled away on foot, 16 And Barac pursued after the fleeing chariots, and the army, unto Haroseth of the Gentiles; and all the multitude of the enemies was utterly destroyed.

17 But Sisara fleeing, came to the tent of Jahel, the wife of Haber, the Cinite, for there was peace between Jabin, the king of Asor, and the house of Haber, the Cinite.

18 And Jahel went forth to meet Sisara, and said to him: Come in to me, my lord; come in, fear not. He went into her tent, and being covered by her with a cloak, 19 Said to her: Give me, I beseech thee, a little water, for I am very thirsty. She opened a bottle of milk, and gave him to drink, and covered him.

20 And Sisara said to her: Stand before the door of the tent, and when any shall come and inquire of thee, saying: Is there any man here? thou shalt say: There is none.

21 So Jahel, Haber's wife, took a nail of the tent, and taking also a hammer: and going in softly, and with silence, she put the nail upon the temples of his head, and striking it with the hammer, drove it through his brain fast into the ground: and so passing from deep sleep to death, he fainted away and died.

* Psal. lxxxii. 10.

into the sea of Tiberias. It rises from Mount Thabor (which is about two hours' walk, south-west of Nazareth) and from Gelboe, &c. M.

VER. 15. Terror. The most dreadful storms of thunder, lightning, &c., (chap. v. 20.) discomfited the enemy, while the sword of Barac (C.) dealt death around, so that Sisara and all his army presently turned their back, (H.) and the general himself, being stricken with a panic, leaped from his chariot, as if he thought his horses did not run fast enough.

VER. 17. Tent. The women had separate tents from their husbands. Haber, it seems, was from home, and was not molested by the Chanaanites. He continued neuter during this war. What then must we think of the conduct of his wife? Commentators generally justify her, as the Scripture gives her great commendations, and as the family of the Cinites enjoyed the religion and privileges of the Israelites. Hence this portion of it could not make a league with the enemy of God's people, to the detriment of the latter; and if they did they were bound to break it as soon, at least, as God manifested his will that the enemy should be destroyed. Jahel might however deserve the praise of fortitude, which the Scripture gives her, and yet mingle some human imperfection in her manner of acting. She seems to speak with fraud, and to betray the sacred rights of hospitality; and it is doubtful whether Haber himself could renounce the alliance with Jabin (particularly if they had taken mutual oaths to observe it, as was then customary) without informing him of his resolution. Fides, quando promittitur, etiam hosti servanda est. S. Aug. ep. 1 ad Bonif. See Grot. Jur. iii. 19. C.—Yet, if she told a lie, it was only an officious one, (M.) such as Sisara desired should be told for his safety, ver. 20. H.—It is lawful to use stratagems against an enemy. Salien, A. 2741. See Jos. ii., and viii. 4. Debbora pronounces the name of Jahel to be most blessed, (chap. v. 24,) which shows that she was inspired by God to kill Sisara. If we consider her action in any other light, it will certainly appear very shocking, as Rahab could not escape the accusation of treason towards her country by any other means. Aod, Judith, &c., who washed their hands in the blood of sinners, (Psal. lvii. 11,) would undoubtedly have been condemned at any merely human tribunal, which would not admit the plea of inspiration. H.—Besides this secret impulse, Jahel might be acquainted with the prediction of Debbora, (ver. 9,) and with the miraculous victory which encouraged her to destroy the common enemy, (Abulensis, Josephus, &c. T.) the only remnant of an immense army. H.—The pence which subsisted between her family and the Chanaanites was a forced one, (T.) and perhaps consisted only in the former being allowed to live quietly (D.) in the midst of these idolaters, whose manners they abhorred (H.); while the Israelites, though at a greater distance, were so severely treated even when they were so weak as to adore the idols (T.) of their oppressors. Thus the Divine providence was pleased to reward virtue, and to punish infidelity. H.

22 And behold, Barac came pursuing after Sisara: and Jahel went out to meet him, and said to him: Come, and I will show thee the man whom thou seekest. And when he came into her tent, he saw Sisara lying dead, and the nail fastened in his temples.

23 So God that day humbled Jabin, the king of Chanaan, before the children of Israel:

24 Who grew daily stronger, and with a mighty hand overpowered Jabin, king of Chanaan, till they quite destroyed him.

CHAP. V.

The canticle of Debbora and Barac, after their victory.

IN that day Debbora and Barac, son of Abinoem, sung, and said:

2 O you of Israel, that have willingly offered your lives to danger, bless the Lord.

3 Hear, O ye kings, give ear, O ye princes: It is I, it is I, that will sing to the Lord, I will sing to the Lord, the God of Israel.

4 O Lord, when thou wentest out of Seir, and passedst by the regions of Edom, the earth trembled, and the heavens dropped water.

5 The mountains melted before the face of the Lord, and Sinai before the face of the Lord the God of Israel.

6 In the days of Samgar, the son of Anath, in the days of Jahel, the paths rested: and they that went by them, walked through by-ways.

7 The valiant men ceased, and rested in Israel: until Debbora arose, a mother arose in Israel.

8 The Lord chose new wars, and he himself overthrew the gates of the enemies: a shield and spear was not seen among forty thousand of Israel.

VER. 18. Cloak, or rough, hairy bed coverlid. Heb. Ssmice, occurs no where else. C.

VER. 21. Tent. Such nails were used to fasten down the skins of which the tent was composed. C.—This resembled a stake, though Josephus says it was made of iron. M.—And died. Thus he met a more ignoble fate, which would be more hateful to a warrior. Abimelech ordered his armour-bearer to kill him, that it might not be said that he had fallen by the hand of a woman. Chap. ix. 54. H.

VER. 23. Humbled Jabin, though he was not present in this battle. H.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Debbora probably composed this most flowery and animated canticle, ver. 3—7. C.

VER. 2. Lord. Heb. may have different senses: "bless the Lord for having avenged Israel, the people willingly exposing themselves, or showing their concurrence." Roman Sept. "What was hidden has been disclosed in Israel, when the people showed their good-will, bless the Lord." This verse is repeated as a kind of chorus, ver. 9. The zeal and concord of the little troop, which had met the formidable army of Sisara, deserved the highest applause. H.

VER. 3. Kings. She invites all who have authority, whether in or out of Israel, to attend unto the dispensations of Providence. God alternately cherishes and corrects his people. David makes a similar appeal to all kings and judges, Psal. ii. 10. H.

VER. 4. Edom. Sinai, where God gave his law amid thunder and lightning, was situated in Idumea. C.—God displayed his glory on this mountain, and also on Mount Seir. Deut. xxxiii. 2. Some believe that Debbora compares the wonders which attended the late victory with those which God wrought when he led his victorious bands through the desert, and conquered the countries of Sehon, &c. H.—He provided for the wants of his people, even in the most desolate regions, giving them water out of the hard (C.) rock of Horeb or Sinai, (H.) and causing all nature to change her appearance at his approach. Psal. lxvii. 8; Exod. xix. 18. C.

VER. 6. The paths rested. The ways to the sanctuary of God were unfrequented; and men walked in the by-ways of error and sin. Ch.—Though Samgar and Jahel were so remarkable for their valour, as they have manifested on a late occasion, yet they did not prevent the incursions of the enemy both on the south and north. H.—The merchants durst not travel, as usual, through the country. Drusius.—God had threatened the faithless Israel with this punishment, Lev. xxvi. 22; Lament. i. 4; Isa. xxiii. 8. C.—They that went by them formerly without apprehension, are now forced to seek out by-ways. H.—Thus was justly punished the negligence of those who observed not the festivals of the Lord, nor frequented his tabernacle. M.

VER. 7. Valiant. Heb. is also translated, "the villages ceased," as no one thought himself in safety out of the strong cities.—Until. Heb. "until I, Deb-

9 My heart loveth the princes of Israel: O you, that of your own good will offered yourselves to danger, bless the Lord.

10 Speak, you that ride upon fair asses, and you that sit in judgment, and walk in the way.

11 Where the chariots were dashed together, and the army of the enemies was choaked, there let the justices of the Lord be rehearsed, and his clemency towards the brave men of Israel: then the people of the Lord went down to the gates, and obtained the sovereignty.

12 Arise, arise, O Debbora, arise, arise, and utter a canticle. Arise, Barac, and take hold of thy captives, O son of Abinoem.

13 The remnants of the people are saved, the Lord hath fought among the valiant ones.

14 Out of Ephraim he destroyed them into Amalec, and after him out of Benjamin into thy people, O Amalec: out of Machir there came down princes, and out of Zabulon they that led the army to fight.

15 The captains of Issachar were with Debbora, and followed the steps of Barac, who exposed himself to danger, as one going headlong, and into a pit. Ruben being divided against himself, there was found a strife of courageous men.

16 Why dwellest thou between two borders, that thou mayst hear the bleatings of the flocks? Ruben being divided against himself, there was found a strife of courageous men.

17 Galaad rested beyond the Jordan, and Dan applied himself to ships: Aser dwelt on the sea shore, and abode in the havens.

18 But Zabulon and Nephtali offered their lives to death in the region of Merome.

19 The kings came and fought, the kings of Chanaan fought in Thanac, by the waters of Mageddo, and yet they took no spoils.

20 There was war made against them from heaven: the stars, remaining in their order and courses, fought against Sisara.

21 The torrent of Cison dragged their carcasses, the torrent of Cadumim, the torrent of Cison: tread thou, my soul, upon the strong ones.

bora, arose, that I arose, a mother," &c. The Holy Ghost obliges her to declare her own praises. She deserved the glorious title of "mother of her country."—Mother denotes an authority, mixed with sweetness: such had been exercised by Debbora, in deciding the controversies of the people, (C.) and in directing them to follow the right path. H.

VER. 9. Princes. Heb. "legislators," governors, judges. I cannot refuse them due praise, and I invite them earnestly to bless the Lord, ver. 2.

VER. 10. Fair asses. Heb. "shining," white, or of divers colours, particularly red and white, with which the people were accustomed to paint their asses. Bochart.—Asses and mules were formerly much more in use than horses. Num. xxii. 21; Matt. xxi. 25; 3 Kings i. 33. C.

VER. 11. Choaked in the waters of the Cison, and of Mageddo, ver. 19, 21. Heb. is very obscure: "from the noise of archers, in the places of drawing water, there shall they relate the justices of the Lord, the righteous acts of his villages, (or brave men,) then shall the people of the Lord go down to the gates," where the courts of judicature are held. H.—Sept. You shall make your voices heard, playing on instruments, C. (anacroumenon, pulsantium).—Among those who rejoice, there shall they give righteous deeds to the Lord: they have wrought justice in Israel, &c. H.—If we neglect the points, we may render the Heb. more agreeably to the Vulgate. "At the voice of those who are pierced with arrows in the midst of those who draw water, (or are drowned,) there they shall publish," &c. C.—H.

VER. 12. Captives. Heb. "Take thy captivity prisoner." Hold those in subjection who so lately domineered over you. C.

VER. 13. Remnants. Many of the Israelites had been slain by Jabin, but the Lord enabled the valiant Barac to requite him. Heb. "Then he made him that remaineth have dominion over the nobles among the people. The Lord made me rule over the mighty." Barac and Debbora were raised from an humble state to govern Israel; while the nobles were passed over. H.—The people of God, which was reduced to such abjection and misery, is now become formidable to the greatest princes, who look upon themselves as something great, and are called beneficent. Luke xxii. 25. Sept. "Then his (Barac's) force was magnified: Lord, humble before me those who exceed me in strength." Chal. "Then one of the army of Israel (Barac) crushed the power of these mighty nations," &c. C.

VER. 14. Out of Ephraim, &c. The enemies, straggling in their flight, were destroyed as they were running through the land of Ephraim, and of Benjamin, which lies after, that is, beyond Ephraim; and so on to the very confines of Amalec. Or, it alludes to former victories of the people of God, particularly that which was freshest in memory, when the men of Ephraim and Benjamin, with Aod at their head, overthrew their enemies, the Moabites, with the Amalecites their allies. See chap. iii. Ch.—Fight. Debbora insinuates that the late victory had rendered Nephtali and Issachar as famous as these tribes, which had formerly sent forth the greatest generals; Josue, who conquered Amalec, (Exod. xvii. 10.) and Aod, of the tribe of Benjamin, (C.) who had so greatly signalized himself, and sounded the alarm in Mount Ephraim with success. Chap. iii. 13—27. H.—Heb. "out of Ephraim he has torn them (Prot. was there a root of them against, or) into Amalec, and after thee Benjamin among thy people." There was a mountain called Amalec in the tribe of Ephraim, (chap. xii. 15,) where some victory may have been obtained, though we know not the particulars of it. C.—They and the neighbouring tribes might have encountered Amalec coming to assist Jabin. D.—It is thought that the Moabites fell upon their territory only after most of the inhabitants were cut off. Chap. xix. and xx. The Sept. and Theodotion take no notice of Amalec, as they have read, Amok, a valley: "the people of Ephraim chastised them in the valley, and thy brother Benjamin, in his people." The Chaldee understands the whole verse of the wars against Amalec, who had been routed by Josue, and would fall a prey to the arms of Saul, who was of the tribe of Benjamin. Many commentators follow this explanation. It does not appear that Barac received any aid from these tribes, nor from Machir, or any of those who lived at a distance. C.—As for Zabulon, the Vulgate intimates that great generals were found among them; but the Heb. rather gives them the praise of learning: "They that handle the pen of the writer." H.—Yet amor is applied not only to writers, and to those who are learned in the law, as the scribes, Esdras, Baruch, &c., were, but also to commissaries, secretaries of state, and officers who were employed both in peace and war. 2 Par. xxvi. 11. Hence the Sept. translate, "out of Zabulon, the powerful in the sceptre of learning;" (C.) (Grabe) "of instruction." H.

VER. 15. Exposed. Heb. "he was sent on foot into the vale," to contend with the nine hundred chariots of Sisara. Issachar boldly followed him to battle. They came down with such fury and speed, as if they were falling headlong down a precipice. H.—Sisara presently turned his back, being affrighted with the apparition of angels, who probably fought at the head of Barac's troop. Salien.—Only three tribes exposed themselves to danger, while the rest were either engaged in civil broils, or in their usual employments. C.—Divided. By this it seems that the valiant men of the tribe of Ruben were divided in their sentiments with relation to this war; which division kept them at home within their own borders, to hear the bleating of their flocks. Ch.

VER. 17. Galaad was inhabited by the tribes of Gad and Manasses; and took no part in this war. C.—Dan. Heb. "Why did Dan remain in ships?" Debbora now rebukes those who lived on the west side of the Jordan, as well as those on the east. Dan might think himself remote enough from the kingdom of Jabin. But Aser dwelt very near, yet durst not make any attempt to throw off the yoke.—Havens. Heb. "Breaches." He had, perhaps, suffered much already, (H.) and preferred to remain quiet, even in his half-ruined cities, before engaging in the perilous attempt of his brethren. C.—He was too much taken up with commerce to pay any attention to the oracles of the Lord. Grabe's Sept. "Aser . . pitched his tents upon his cavities, or the broken ground of it," the sea-shore, which is commonly intersected with a variety of rivulets amid the cliffs. H.

VER. 18. Merome. Heb. "In the heights of the field, or of Merome." Some take this place to be the lake Semechon, but we have endeavoured to show that it was in the vicinity of Thanac, Jos. xi. 5. C.—Thabor was in the midst of a great field or plain. D.—Barac seems to have been at the head of 10,000 men of the tribe of Issachar, attacking Sisara, at the foot of Thabor, while 40,000 of the tribes of Nephtali and Zabulon, almost without arms, fell upon the kings of Chanaan, who had posted themselves near the waters of Mageddo, to intercept any recruits that might be sent from the southern tribes, ver. 8, 15, 19. C.

VER. 19. Spoils. So far from it, they even lost their lives. M.—Heb. "they took no piece (or gain) of money." If we understand this of the Israelites, we may say that they stopped not to plunder the slain, nor would they suffer any to redeem their life by the promise of a great ransom. Whatever riches they found afterwards they consecrated to the Lord, in testimony of their gratitude. C. Num. xxxi. 54.

VER. 20. Stars, or angels, who are compared to the stars, and often fought for Israel. 2 Mac. x. 29. Vales. Philos. c. 31. C.—Courses. This miracle was of a different kind to that which proved so fatal to the enemies of Josue. Lyran.—Sept. Alex. "They fought with (meta) Israel," for which Grabe puts, against Sisara. H.

VER. 21. Dragged. Prot. "swept them away, that ancient river, the river Kishon."—Cadumim, which the Prot. translate ancient, (H.) means also easterly. The former epithet seems very insignificant. We read (Judith vii. 3) of a place which the Syriac properly calls Cadmon, and the Vulg. Chelmon, in this neighbourhood. Instead of Kodumim, Sym. and Theodotion read Kodssim, which the former translates, "the holy vale." Many of the army (C.) of the kings, and perhaps of Sisara also, (H.) endeavouring to make their escape, were drowned in the Cison. C.

22 The hoofs of the horses were broken whilst the stoutest of the enemies fled amain, and fell headlong down.

23 Curse ye the land of Meroz, said the angel of the Lord: curse the inhabitants thereof, because they came not to the help of the Lord, to help his most valiant men.

24 Blessed among women be Jahel, the wife of Haber the Gite, and blessed be she in her tent.

25 He asked her water, and she gave him milk, and offered him butter in a dish fit for princes.

26 She put her left hand to the nail, and her right hand to the workman's hammer; and she struck Sisara, seeking in his head a place for the wound, and strongly piercing through his temples.

27 Between her feet he fell: he fainted, and he died: he rolled before her feet, and there he lay lifeless and wretched.

28 His mother looked out at a window, and howled: and she spoke from the dining-room: Why is his chariot so long in coming back? Why are the feet of his horses so slow?

29 One that was wiser than the rest of his wives, returned this answer to her mother-in-law:

30 Perhaps he is now dividing the spoils, and the fairest of the women is chosen out for him: garments of divers colours are given to Sisara for his prey, and furniture of different kinds is heaped together to adorn necks.

31 So let all thy enemies perish, O Lord: but let them that love thee shine, as the sun shineth in his rising.

32 And the land rested for forty years.

* A. M. 2719, A. C. 1285.

VER. 22. Broken, (ecciderunt), "fell off," the hoofs being fractured by the hard road, while the riders galloped full speed. H.—Some translate the Heb. the hoofs of the horses made a sound like that of a hammer beating an anvil, on account of the hurry of the strong ones who push them forward." Others, "the hoof was broken by the precipitation (C.) (Prot. prancings, the prancings of the mighty ones. H.) of those who fled."

VER. 23. Meroz. Where this land of Meroz was, which is here laid under a curse, we cannot find: nor is there mention of it any where else in holy writ. In the spiritual sense, they are cursed who refuse to assist the people of God in their warfare against their spiritual enemies. Ch.—Mazzaroth. Job xxxviii. 32.—Angel, Michael; or the high priest, or Barac, Debbora, &c. See chap. ii. 1. C.—Prot. "Curse ye Meroz, (said the angel of the Lord,) curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof"—To help. Prot. "to the help of the Lord against the mighty." Sept. "our helper is the Lord in the mighty warriors." He assists their endeavours, which would otherwise prove unsuccessful. H.

VER. 24. Among. Heb. "above." After cursing those who befriended the enemy, Debbora pronounces a blessing upon Jahel. H.

VER. 25. Dish. Heb. sopol; whence the symple of the Lydians, Tuscans, and Romans was probably derived, denoting a bowl or jug with a handle, designed for libations.

VER. 26. Sisara. Heb. says with the hammer; (Prot.) "she smote off his head, when she had pierced and stricken (the nail) through his temples." But we may rather translate, (H.) "she pierced his head, she struck it, and pierced through his temples." C.—For we cannot suppose that she severed his head from his body with the hammer; but she fastened it to the ground with the nail. Chap. iv. 21.

VER. 27. Wretched. Heb. "he expired where he fell down." H.—Debbora represents Jahel as ready to tread the unhappy Sisara under her feet, if he should offer to stir. She thrice repeats his death.

VER. 28. His mother, &c. This poetical imagination is very natural.—Room. Heb. "through the lattices," assnob, of which the windows then consisted. Prov. vii. 6. C.—Horses. Prot. "why tarry the wheels of his chariots?" H.

VER. 29. Wives. This is not expressed in Heb. "his wise ladies answered her," or joined in her lamentations. Then the mother comforted herself with the hope that they might possibly be employed in dividing the spoils. C.—Heb. "yea, she answered herself, Have they not gained the victory? have they divided the prey? to every man a damsel, yea, two? to Sisara a booty of divers colours," &c. H.

VER. 30. Necks. Heb. "the spoils of various colours, the embroidery of divers colours, on both sides, for the necks (of the captors) of the spoil." H.—Or more simply, "for the neck (general) of the army;" (Vatab.) or "the necks of the soldiers," who will be laden with the abundance of spoils. C.—The ladies dwell with great delight on the thought of possessing rich embroidery or needle-work. How dreadfully would their hopes be blasted when a few hours after they saw Barac at their gates, and their city in flames! H.

CHAP. VI.

The people, for their sins, are oppressed by the Madianites. Gedeon is called to deliver them.

AND the children of Israel again did evil in the sight of the Lord: and he delivered them into the hand of Madian seven years.

2 And they were grievously oppressed by them. And they made themselves dens and caves in the mountains, and strong holds to resist.

3 And when Israel had sown, Madian and Amalec, and the rest of the eastern nations, came up:

4 And pitching their tents among them, wasted all things as they were in the blade, even to the entrance of Gaza: and they left nothing at all in Israel for sustenance of life, nor sheep, nor oxen, nor asses.

5 For they and all their flocks came with their tents, and like locusts filled all places, an innumerable multitude of men, and of camels, wasting whatsoever they touched.

6 And Israel was humbled exceedingly in the sight of Madian.

7 And he cried to the Lord, desiring help against the Madianites.

8 And he sent unto them a prophet, and he spoke: Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: I made you to come up out of Egypt, and brought you out of the house of bondage,

9 And delivered you out of the hands of the Egyptians, and of all the enemies that afflicted you: and I cast them out at your coming in, and gave you their land.

10 And I said: I am the Lord your God, fear not the

VER. 31. Rising. Heb. "when he goeth forth in his might." Let the just advance in virtue, and glory, as the sun becomes more beautiful and hot as he leaves the horizon, on a clear summer day. This comparison is often applied to the servants of God. Eccli. xvii. 16; 2 Kings xxiii. 5; Matt. xiii. 45. C.

VER. 32. Forty. Usher says only twenty from the victory of Barac. Petau and other able chronologers allow the full term of forty years after that event. See chap. iii. 11. H.—Barac was buried at Cedes, where Benjamin (Itin.) saw his tomb. C.—Ozi, the high priest for the last forty years, was succeeded by Zaraias, A. 2760, who reigned an equal length of time, and died with Gedeon. Muraioth took his place, A. 2801, at the commencement of Abimelech's usurpation, and died A. 2841. Salien.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Madian. This nation had formerly been almost extirpated by Moses. Num. xxxi. 7, &c. H.—But they had re-established themselves, and dwelt in the neighbourhood of the Moabites, whom they had assisted. They now made a league with Amalec, and other eastern nations, (C.) in order to revenge themselves upon the Israelites. H.—Madian was a descendant of Abraham by Cetura. Gen. xxv. 2. The shortness of the servitude, which the Israelites had to suffer from them, was compensated by its severity. M.

VER. 2. Resist is not expressed in Heb., neither did Israel dare to encounter the enemy. They retreated into the strongest holds, to rescue their goods and persons from the depredations of the Madianites. H.

VER. 3. Amalec was formerly widely dispersed through Arabia. Some dwelt to the south of the promised land. Exod. xvii.; Num. xiii. 3; 1 Kings xv. 6, and xxxi. 1. But these inhabited the eastern countries, concerning whom Balaam spoke, Num. xxiv. 20. The Amalecites were scattered from Hevila upon the Euphrates, as far as the Red Sea and Sur, which is near Egypt. 1 Kings xv. 7, and xxvii. 8. The other eastern nations denote those who inhabited the desert Arabia, the Moabites, Ammonites, Idumeans, Cedareanians, &c. Isa. xi. 14; Jer. xlix. 28; Eze. viii. 7.

VER. 4. Blade. Heb. "the increase of the earth." They waited till the corn was almost ripe, and what they could not carry off they destroyed. C.—It seems they had allowed Gedeon time to gather in some corn, (ver. 11,) and other Israelites would seize their opportunity, and perhaps cut the corn before it was perfectly ripe, which the Vulg. may insinuate by mentioning the blade.—Gaza. They ravaged the whole country from east to west. H.

VER. 5. Locusts. This comparison shows the rapacity and devastation of the enemy. Locusts in those countries often obscure the air with their numbers, and presently eat up every green thing. They proceed in regular order like a great battalion, and it is reported that they send some before to explore the country. S. Jer. in Joel ii. Bochart. C. Gen. x. 4.

VER. 8. A prophet. The people no sooner repent than God shows them mercy. H.—The name of this prophet is unknown.

VER. 10. Fear not. Idols can do you no hurt, if you continue faithful to gods of the Amorrites, in whose land you dwell. And you would not hear my voice.

11 And an angel of the Lord came,* and sat under an oak that was in Ephra, and belonged to Joas, the father of the family of Ezri. And when Gedeon, his son, was threshing and cleansing wheat by the wine-press, to flee from Madian, 12 The angel of the Lord appeared to him, and said: The Lord is with thee, O most valiant of men.

13 And Gedeon said to him: I beseech thee, my lord, if the Lord be with us, why have these evils fallen upon us? Where are his miracles, which our fathers have told us of, saying: The Lord brought us out of Egypt? but now the Lord hath forsaken us, and delivered us into the hand of Madian.

14 And the Lord looked upon him, and said: ^bGo, in this thy strength, and thou shalt deliver Israel out of the hand of Madian: know that I have sent thee.

15 He answered, and said: I beseech thee, my lord, wherewith shall I deliver Israel? Behold, my family is the meanest in Manasses, and I am the least in my father's house.

16 And the Lord said to him: I will be with thee: and thou shalt cut off Madian as one man.

17 And he said: If I have found grace before thee, give me a sign that it is thou that speakest to me:

18 And depart not hence, till I return to thee, and bring a sacrifice, and offer it to thee. And he answered: I will wait thy coming.

19 So Gedeon went in, and boiled a kid, and made unleavened loaves of a measure of flour: and putting the flesh in a basket, and the broth of the flesh into a pot, he carried all under the oak, and presented to him.

20 And the angel of the Lord said to him: Take the flesh and the unleavened loaves, and lay them upon that rock, and pour out the broth thereon. And when he had done so,

21 The angel of the Lord put forth the tip of the rod, which he held in his hand, and touched the flesh and the unleavened loaves: and there arose a fire from the rock, and consumed the flesh and the unleavened loaves: and the angel of the Lord vanished out of his sight.

22 And Gedeon seeing that it was the angel of the Lord, said: Alas, my Lord God: for I have seen the angel of the Lord face to face.

23 And the Lord said to him: Peace be with thee: fear not, thou shalt not die.

24 And Gedeon built there an altar to the Lord, and called it the Lord's peace, until this present day. And when he was yet in Ephra, which is of the family of Ezri,

25 That night the Lord said to him: Take a bullock of thy father's, and another bullock of seven years, and thou shalt destroy the altar of Baal, which is thy father's and cut down the grove that is about the altar:

26 And thou shalt build an altar to the Lord thy God, in the top of this rock, whereupon thou didst lay the sacrifice before: and thou shalt take the second bullock, and shalt offer a holocaust upon a pile of the wood, which thou shalt cut down out of the grove.

27 Then Gedeon, taking ten men of his servants, did as the Lord had commanded him. But fearing his father's house, and the men of that city, he would not do it by day, but did all by night.

28 And when the men of that town were risen in the morning, they saw the altar of Baal destroyed, and the grove cut down, and the second bullock laid upon the altar, which then was built.

ne. H.—Show them no respect or worship. The fear of Isaac means the God (C.) whom Isaac worshipped, Gen. xxxi. 42. II.

VER. 11. Angel; Michael. M.—Some think it was the prophet who had addressed the people, or Phinees, according to the Rabbin. See S. Aug. q. 31. Others believe it was the Son of God, who takes the name of Jehovah. Broughton and other Protest.—But the most natural opinion is, that a real angel was sent, in the name of God, like that which appeared to Moses, and assumed the incommunicable name as the ambassador of God.—Ephra, a city of the half tribe of Manasses, on the west side of the Jordan, of which Joas was the richest citizen. He was of the family of Ezri, and a descendant of Abiezer. 1 Par. viii. 18. Heb. might be rendered, "Joas, the Abiezerite." Chap. viii. 32, and xiii. 2.—Madian. Not having the convenience of cleansing the wheat in the open field, Gedeon was doing it privately, with a design to carry it off at the approach of the enemy, and to support himself and family in some cavern. Heb. takes no notice of cleaning: "Gedeon threshed wheat, by the wine-press, to hide it, or to flee," &c. He probably used a flail, or some smaller sticks, such as were employed to beat out olives. Isai. xxviii. 27; Ruth ii. 17. C.—The wheat harvest was about Pentecost, that of barley was at Easter. It seems the Madianites had been later than usual this year in making their incursions, ver. 33. H.

VER. 12. Is. We should naturally translate be with thee, if the answer of Gedeon did not show (C.) that it is to be taken as an assertion that the Lord was already reconciled to Israel, and had made choice of this valiant man to rescue his people from slavery, though he was not of the first nobility, ver. 15.

VER. 14. Lord, Jeve. H.—The Chal. and Sept. have, "the angel of the Lord," as the best interpreters understand it. C.—Strength, with which I have ended thee. M.

VER. 15. The meanest in Manasses, &c. Mark how the Lord chooseth the humble (who are mean and little in their own eyes) for the greatest enterprises. Ch.—Heb. and Sept. lit. "My millenary is poor, or lowly," &c. This term means a great family, from which many others spring, or a city inhabited by such. Bethlehem was of this description in Judah. Mic. v. 2. Ephra and the family of Abiezer were not the first in Manasses.

VER. 17. Thou, the Lord, or his angel, capable of fulfilling these great promises; or be pleased, by some sign, to manifest thyself to me. C.

VER. 18. A sacrifice, or some provisions to present unto thee. Heb. monēe, is taken for a present, particularly of flour and wine. It is used to denote those presents which were made by Jacob to Esau and Joseph, and by Aod to the king of Moab. Chap. iii. 15; Gen. xliii. 14. C.—To sacrifice, often means to kill things for a feast. Matt. xxii. 4. What Gedeon brought was afterwards turned into a sacrifice by the angel, ver. 21. M.—Gedeon was not a priest, nor was there any altar prepared for a sacrifice. If Gedeon had intended to offer one, he would not have boiled nor baked the food which he presented before his guest. C.

VER. 19. Measure. Heb. "epha," containing ten gomors, each of which was sufficient for the daily maintenance of a man; so that Gedeon brought as much as would have sufficed for ten men. Abraham presented no more before the three angels, Gen. x"iii. 6.

VER. 20. Thereon. Thus he would show Gedeon that he had no need of food. He would exercise his obedience, and manifest a greater miracle, as the flesh and bread would be less apt to take fire when the angel touched them, even though some might imagine that he caused a spark to come from the rock. For the like purpose Elias ordered thrice four buckets of water to be poured on the bullock, which fire from heaven would miraculously consume. 3 Kings xviii. 34. H.

VER. 22. Alas. He makes this exclamation, concluding that he should soon die. Exod. xxxiii. 20.—This opinion was groundless; and it is wonderful that it should prevail among the Israelites, (H.) since so many had seen angels without receiving any harm. M.

VER. 25. And another, or "the second." Only one seems to have been sacrificed (ver. 28, Cajetan); though others think that the second bullock was designed for a peace-offering. Bonfrere.—Some infer that it had been fattened for Baal. Sept. observe, that the first bullock or "calf was fattened:" but it does not appear for what purpose. C.—Seven years, in memory of the duration of the slavery. M.—Altar. We may render the Heb. "Cut down the idol which is upon the altar; or, Break in pieces the assre," &c. This is the title of the idol of the grove, Astarte or Asteroth. Syr. and Arab. The Sept. is favourable to this explanation. C.—But the groves themselves were to be cut down where an altar of God was to be erected. It seems this altar and the grove belonged to Joas, who is hence supposed to have joined in the worship of Baal. If he did formerly, his eyes were now opened, and he boldly approved of the conduct of his son, (ver. 31. H.) who had probably never been infected. M.

VER. 26. Top. Heb. "on the top of this fortress, (Mawz, Dan. xi. 38. Sept.) on the platform, (C.) or place appointed." H.—Offer. Though Gedeon was not a priest he was authorized to offer sacrifice. M.—God can dispense with his own laws. H.

VER. 27. House, his relations and fellow citizens, (C.) who were addicted to idolatry.

29 And they said one to another: Who hath done this? And when they inquired for the author of the fact, it was said: Gedeon, the son of Joas, did all this.

30 And they said to Joas: Bring out thy son hither, that he may die: because he hath destroyed the altar of Baal, and hath cut down his grove.

31 He answered them: Are you the avengers of Baal, that you fight for him? he that is his adversary, let him die before to-morrow light appear: if he be a god, let him revenge himself on him that hath cast down his altar.

32 From that day Gedeon was called Jerobaal, because Joas had said: Let Baal revenge himself on him that hath cast down his altar.

33 Now all Madian, and Amalec, and the eastern people, were gathered together, and passing over the Jordan, camped in the valley of Jezrael.

34 But the spirit of the Lord came upon Gedeon, and he sounded the trumpet, and called together the house of Abiezer, to follow him.

35 And he sent messengers into all Manasses, and they also followed him: and other messengers into Aser, and Zabulon, and Nephtali, and they came to meet him.

36 And Gedeon said to God: If thou wilt save Israel by my hand, as thou hast said, 37 I will put this fleece of wool on the floor: if there be dew in the fleece only, and it be dry on all the ground beside, I shall know that by my hand, as thou hast said, thou wilt deliver Israel.

38 And it was so. And rising before day, wringing the fleece, he filled a vessel with the dew.

39 And he said again to God: Let not thy wrath be kindled against me, if I try once more, seeking a sign in the fleece. I pray that the fleece only may be dry, and all the ground wet with dew.

* A. M. 2759.

VER. 30. Bring. Parents took cognizance of the evil actions done in their family. The citizens require Joas to punish his son, or to deliver him up to them. On the same principle the Israelites insisted that the tribe of Benjamin should not neglect to punish the citizens of Gabaa; and the Philistines demand Samson. Chap. xv. 12, and xx. 13. C.

VER. 31. His, Baal's, or rather my son's, adversary (C.); let him die before this morning be spent, as the Heb. insinuates. Joas represents to the men of the city, who looked upon him with a degree of respect, (H.) as the first in power and riches among them, (C.) how ill it became the Israelites to vindicate an idol. If Baal were truly so powerful as they seemed to imagine, (H.) and so eager to revenge himself, he could never be restrained from bringing his adversary to condign punishment. "Let the gods punish those who injure them," said Tacitus, Ann. 1. "They would take care that their sacred things were not abused." Livy, x. This argumentation would suit the idolaters, who supposed that their gods were animated with the same sentiments and eagerness for revenge as themselves. But the true God, who can feel no such impressions, bears for a long time with the impiety of men, though he requires that those who are in power should punish notorious offenders. The magistrate is the instrument of God's justice, and must stop, as much as possible, the growth of vice and irreligion. C.

VER. 32. Altar. Prot. "Therefore on that day he called him Jerubbaal, saying, Let Baal plead against him, because he hath thrown down his altar." Sept. Alex. says that he then styled it (auto, the altar) "the judgment-seat of Baal," Dikasterion Baal. But the Vat. copy leaves Terobaal; and this title rather belonged to Gedeon. H.—David, out of horror for the name of Baal, calls him Jeruboseth, 2 Kings xi. 21, "Let confusion plead," &c. For the same reason Esbaal and Meribaal are called Isboseth and Miphboseth in Scripture. C.

VER. 34. Him. He first calls his relations, and then the neighbouring tribes, to march against the enemy. He had before declared God's orders, and was recognised as judge and deliverer of Israel; so that no one objects to his exercising this act of sovereignty.

VER. 35. Him. Heb. "them." M.—The people readily obey the summons, though many of them had not got the better of their fears. Chap. vii. 3. H.

VER. 38. So. Gedeon besought the Lord to confirm his mission, in order to raise the drooping spirits of his soldiers. If he had not believed that he was chosen for the purpose of rescuing Israel, he would never have exposed himself, by destroying the idol and grove of Baal, and by calling the people to arms. The

CHAP. VII.

Gedeon with three hundred men, by stratagem, defeats the Madianites.

THEN *Jerobaal, who is the same as Gedeon, rising up early, and all the people with him, came to the fountain that is called Harad. Now the camp of Madian was in the valley, on the north side of the high hill.

2 And the Lord said to Gedeon: The people that are with thee are many, and Madian shall not be delivered into their hands: lest Israel should glory against me, and say: I was delivered by my own strength.

3 Speak to the people, and proclaim in the hearing of all: ^bWhosoever is fearful and timorous, let him return. So two and twenty thousand men went away from Mount Galaad and returned home, and only ten thousand remained.

4 And the Lord said to Gedeon: The people are still too many, bring them to the waters, and there I will try them: and of whom I shall say to thee, This shall go with thee, let him go: whom I shall forbid to go, let him return.

5 And when the people were come down to the waters, the Lord said to Gedeon: They that shall lap the water with their tongues, as dogs are wont to lap, thou shalt set apart by themselves: but they that shall drink bowing down their knees, shall be on the other side.

6 And the number of them that had lapped water, casting it with the hand to their mouth, was three hundred men: and all the rest of the multitude had drunk kneeling.

7 And the Lord said to Gedeon: By the three hundred men, that lapped water, I will save you, and deliver readiness with which God grants his requests shows that he was inspired to act as he did, and his faith is greatly commended. Heb. xi. 32. C.

VER. 40. Ground. In these two miracles the Fathers observe that the fleece represented the Jewish nation, favoured with so many graces, while the rest of the world was dry and barren; and that, when the latter was watered with dew from heaven, by the coming of Jesus Christ, the Synagogue was deprived of those favours. Orig. hom. 8. Theod. q. 14. S. Jer. ad Paulin. S. Aug. &c.—In the first miracle we may also contemplate the incarnation of our Saviour in the womb of the most pure Virgin. Psal. lxxi. 6. S. Bern. Serm. S. Jer. epit. Paulæ. C.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Fountain. The same is also called Areth, as the copies of the Sept. and of S. Jeron vary. Bonf.—Harad, or "of trouble," either because the Madianites were filled with terror at the approach of Gedeon, or because so many of his soldiers returned home through fear. M.—Perhaps it may be the same which is called the fountain of Jezrael, near which Saul encamped, 1 Kings xxix. 1. C.—Adrichomius places it on the south of Gelboe, which is called the high hill. M.—Heb. "on the north side of them, by the hill of More in the vale." H.—Jezrael was between Gelboe to the south, and Hermon to the north. C.

VER. 2. Lest Israel, &c. By this we see that God will not choose for his instruments in great achievements, which depend purely on his grace, such as through pride and self-conceit will take the glory to themselves. Ch.—Yet Gedeon had only 32,000 to encounter 135,000 fighting men; so that if all had remained with him they would have each had to engage above four men, ver. 3; chap. viii. 10. M.

VER. 3. Return, agreeably to the law of Moses. Deut. xx. 8. If God had not enforced this order it would perhaps have been neglected in the hurry, particularly as all seemed to have joined the army with such alacrity. M.—Galaad perhaps may have been substituted for Gelboe, as there seem to have been none from the Galaad on the other side of the Jordan in the army of Gedeon. C.

VER. 5. Tongues. Some Latin copies add, "and hand," as it is expressed in Heb., &c., in the following verse. They resembled dogs more in the hurry than in the method of taking water. An old proverb says, "the dog drinks and flees away," (C.) alluding to the dogs in Egypt, who, through fear of the crocodiles which infest the banks of the Nile, lap the water with all expedition: "like a dog from the Nile." Erasmus. H. Macrob. ii. 2.

VER. 7. That lapped water. These were preferred that took the water up Madian into thy hand: but let all the rest of the people return to their place.

8 So taking victuals and trumpets according to their number, he ordered all the rest of the multitude to depart to their tents: and he with the three hundred gave himself to the battle. Now the camp of Midian was beneath him in the valley.

9 The same night the Lord said to him: Arise, and go down into the camp: because I have delivered them into thy hand.

10 But if thou be afraid to go alone, let Phara, thy servant, go down with thee.

11 And when thou shalt hear what they are saying, then shall thy hands be strengthened, and thou shalt go down more secure to the enemies' camp. And he went down with Phara, his servant, into part of the camp, where was the watch of men in arms.

12 But Midian and Amalec, and all the eastern people, lay scattered in the valley, as a multitude of locusts: their camels also were innumerable, as the sand that lieth on the sea shore.

13 And when Gedeon was come, one told his neighbour a dream: and in this manner related what he had seen: I dreamt a dream, and it seemed to me as if a hearth-cake of barley bread rolled and came down into the camp of Midian: and when it was come to a tent, it struck it, and beat it down flat to the ground.

14 He to whom he spoke, answered: This is nothing else but the sword of Gedeon, the son of Joas, a man of Israel. For the Lord hath delivered Midian, and all their camp into his hand.

15 And when Gedeon had heard the dream, and the interpretation thereof, he adored: and returned to the camp of Israel, and said: Arise, for the Lord hath delivered the camp of Midian into our hands.

16 And he divided the three hundred men into three parts, and gave them trumpets in their hands, and empty pitchers, and lamps within the pitchers.

• Psal. lxxxii. 10.

17 And he said to them: What you shall see me do, do you the same: I will go into one part of the camp, and do you as I shall do.

18 When the trumpet shall sound in my hand, do you also blow the trumpets on every side of the camp, and shout together to the Lord and to Gedeon.

19 And Gedeon, and the three hundred men that were with him, went into part of the camp, at the beginning of the midnight watch, and the watchmen being alarmed, they began to sound their trumpets, and to clap the pitchers one against another.

20 And when they sounded their trumpets in three places round about the camp, and had broken their pitchers, they held their lamps in their left hands, and with their right hands the trumpets which they blew, and they cried out: The sword of the Lord and of Gedeon:

21 Standing every man in his place round about the enemies' camp. So all the camp was troubled, and crying out and howling, they fled away:

22 And the three hundred men nevertheless persisted sounding the trumpets. And the Lord sent the sword into all the camp, and they killed one another,

23 Fleeing as far as Bethsetta, and the border of Abel-mehula, in Tebbath. But the men of Israel, shouting from Nephtali, and Aser, and from all Manasses, pursued after Midian.

24 And Gedeon sent messengers into all Mount Ephraim, saying: Come down to meet Midian, and take the waters before them to Bethbera and the Jordan. And all Ephraim shouted, and took the waters before them and the Jordan as far as Bethbera.

25 And having taken two men of Midian, Oreb and Zeb: Oreb they slew in the rock of Oreb, and Zeb in the wine-press of Zeb. And they pursued Midian, in their hands, and so lapped it, before those who laid themselves quite down to the waters to drink: which argued a more eager and sensual disposition. Ch.—It is thought that the former would be more capable of supporting the fatigues of war. M.

VER. 8. Victuals. It appears that they did not take sufficient, (C.) not expecting that they would have to pursue the enemy so far. Chap. viii. 5—8.

VER. 11. Servant. Thus he confessed that he was not entirely free from fear himself, ver. 5, 10. H.—Arms. The greatest part of this immense crowd of people, who came to plunder, neglected the laws of war; as the Israelites had not dared for a long time to oppose them. A select number of 135,000 men in arms were destined to keep them in order, and to protect them. Among these Gedeon insinuated himself, to know how they were encamped, and what sentiments they entertained. C.

VER. 13. A dream. Observation of dreams is commonly superstitious, and as such is condemned in the word of God; but in some extraordinary cases, as we here see, God is pleased by dreams to foretell what he is about to do. Ch. See Gen. xl.; Lev. xix. 26; Deut. xviii. 10. W.

VER. 14. Sword and loaf are both derived from the same Hebrew word, which signifies "to make war." See Num. xiv. 9. But if there had been no connexion or reason in the discourse of the soldier, (which was not the case, as Providence put it into his mouth,) the end would be equally obtained, which was to encourage Gedeon, and to inform him that the enemy was not without some apprehensions. C.

VER. 15. Interpretation. Heb. "the breaking," in allusion to a loaf or nut which must be broken. C.—Adored God in thanksgiving. M.

VER. 16. Lamps, or flambeaux, (C.) made of wood full of turpentine. H.—The soldiers held one end in their hand, and when they had thrown down their pitchers, the sudden light, the sound of trumpets and of men on three sides of the camp, threw the various nations into the utmost consternation, as they very naturally supposed that they were surrounded with a great army. God also sent among them the spirit of confusion, so that they knew not one another.

VER. 17. Camp. The three divisions stopped at the entrance, ver. 21. C.

VER. 18. Camp, and shout together to the Lord and to Gedeon; or rather

"the sword of, &c. ver. 20. The war is the Lord's, victory to or by the hand of Gedeon." Chald. He is the minister of God's justice to punish Midian. M.—It is no derogation to God (C.) that honour is given to his servants. W.—Prot. supply the word which seems to be wanting. The sword of the Lord, &c. H.

VER. 19. Watch. This was the second of the three watches known to the ancient Hebrews: in the New Testament they followed the Roman discipline, and admitted four. Matt. xiv. 25. C.—Menoch thinks they did the same at this time. H.—Alarmed. They were not asleep. M.—We read of similar stratagems in the Roman history. The Falisci threw the Romans into consternation, by appearing among them in mourning weeds (C.); others read in priestly attire, (H.) with flambeaux and serpents; as those of Veii did by means of burning torches. Grot. Frontin. Strat. ii. 4, &c. C.—Trumpets. In a mystical sense, the preachers of the gospel, in order to spiritual conquests, must not only sound with the trumpet of the word of God, but must also break their earthen pitchers, by the mortification of the flesh and its passions, and carry lamps in their hands by the light of their virtues. Ch.—These lamps denote the virtues and miracles of the martyrs. V. Bede, c. 5. The things which would seem ridiculous fill the enemy with terror and dismay. Ibid. W.

VER. 21. Camp. Hence the Midianites made no doubt but a great army was in the midst of the camp, and began to cut in pieces all whom they met. C.

VER. 23. Bethsetta. These cities seem to have been near Bethsan.—And the border. Heb. "in Zererath," (H.) which Junius takes to be Sarthan.—Abel-mehula gave birth to Eliseus, and was twelve miles from Scythopolis. S. Jer.—Tebbath occurs no where else. But we read of Thebes, three miles from the last-mentioned city, famous for the death of Abimelech. Chap. xi. 50.

VER. 24. Bethbera, "the house of corn." Serarius.—Many take it to be Bethabera, "the house of passage," or the ford of the Jordan. The river was fordable on camels at any time. But in summer people might cross the Jordan in many places on foot. C.

VER. 25. Two men. That is, two of their chiefs. Ch.—Press. Heb. thok, denotes a cistern fit to contain wine. Isa. v. 2; Prov. iii. 10.—Zeb had concealed himself in it.—Jordan. They afterwards took occasion from this exploit to extol their own valour, and to quarrel with Gedeon. C.

CHAP. VIII.

Gedeon appeaseth the Ephraimites. Taketh Zebee and Salmana. Destroyeth Soccoth and Phanuel. Refuseth to be king. Maketh an ephod of the gold of the prey, and dieth in a good old age. The people return to idolatry.

AND *the men of Ephraim said to him: What is this that thou meanest to do, that thou wouldst not call us, when thou wentest to fight against Madian? And they chid him sharply, and almost offered violence.

2 And he answered them: What could I have done like to that which you have done? Is not one bunch of grapes of Ephraim better than the vintages of Abiezer?

3 The Lord hath delivered into your hands the princes of Madian, Oreb and Zeb: what could I have done like to what you have done? And when he had said this, their spirit was appeased, with which they swelled against him.

4 And when Gedeon was come to the Jordan, he passed over it with the three hundred men that were with him: who were so weary that they could not pursue after them that fled.

5 And he said to the men of Soccoth: Give, I beseech you, bread to the people that is with me, for they are faint: that we may pursue Zebee, and Salmana, the kings of Madian.

6 The princes of Soccoth answered: Peradventure the palms of the hands of Zebee and Salmana are in thy hand, and therefore thou demandest that we should give bread to thy army.

7 And he said to them: When the Lord therefore shall have delivered Zebee and Salmana into my hands, I will thresh your flesh with the thorns and briers of the desert.

8 And going up from thence, he came to Phanuel: and he spoke the like things to the men of that place. And they also answered him, as the men of Soccoth had answered.

9 He said, therefore, to them also: When I shall return a conqueror in peace, I will destroy this tower.

10 But Zebee and Salmana were resting with all their army. For fifteen thousand men were left of all the troops of the eastern people, and one hundred and twenty thousand warriors that drew the sword were slain.

11 *And Gedeon went up by the way of them that dwelt in tents, on the east of Nobe, and Jegbaa, and smote the camp of the enemies, who were secure, and suspected no hurt.

12 And Zebee and Salmana fled, and Gedeon pursued and took them, all their host being put in confusion.

13 And returning from the battle before the sun-rising,

14 He took a boy of the men of Soccoth: and he asked him the names of the princes and ancients of Soccoth, and he described unto him seventy-seven men.

15 And he came to Soccoth, and said to them: Behold Zebee, and Salmana, concerning whom you upbraided me, saying: Peradventure the hands of Zebee and Salmana are in thy hands, and therefore thou demandest that we should give bread to the men that are weary and faint.

16 So he took the ancients of the city, and thorns and briers of the desert, and tore them with the same, and cut in pieces the men of Soccoth.

17 And he demolished the tower of Phanuel, and slew the men of the city.

18 And he said to Zebee and Salmana: What manner of men were they, whom you slew in Thabor? They answered: They were like thee, and one of them as the son of a king.

19 He answered them. They were my brethren, the sons of my mother. As the Lord liveth, if you had saved them, I would not kill you.

20 And he said to Jether, his eldest son: Arise, and slay them. But he drew not his sword: for he was afraid, being but yet a boy.

21 And Zebee and Salmana said: Do thou rise and run upon us: because the strength of a man is according to his age: *Gedeon rose up, and slew Zebee and Salmana: and he took the ornaments and bosses, with which the necks of the camels of kings are wont to be adorned.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Ephraim. The valour and insolence of these men are placed together. Afterwards we have an account of the transactions of Gedeon in the pursuit, ver. 4. H.

VER. 2. What could I, &c. A meek and humble answer appeased them; who otherwise might have come to extremities. So great is the power of humility both with God and man. Ch. Prov. xv. 1.—Could. Heb. and Sept. "What have I yet done like you? M.—Is not the gleaner?" &c. I only commenced the war; you have brought it to a happy termination, by killing the princes of the enemy. Debrío adag. 157.

VER. 4. Jordan. Notwithstanding the precautions of Gedeon, some had got over the river, whom he resolves to follow at Bethsan. This city was about fifteen miles from Mount Thabor. H.

VER. 5. Soccoth. "The tents," where Jacob had encamped. Gen. xxxiii. It belonged to the tribe of Dan. M.—The people of this town, as well as the ancients of Phanuel, return an insolent reply to the just request of Gedeon. In cases of such extremity all are bound to assist the defenders of their country; and the refusal is punished as a sort of rebellion, 2 Kings xxv. 10. C.

VER. 7. Desert. A usual mode of punishment, (2 Kings xii.; 1 Par. xx. 3. C.) which the cruel irrision of Gedeon and his army, who were fighting in the cause of God and of the nation, richly called for.

VER. 9. Tower; on the strength of which they ventured to treat him with insolence. Phanuel, "the face of God," (Gen. xxxii. 33,) was near the Jaboe. M.

VER. 11. Tents. The Scenitæ, (M.) who inhabited part of the desert Arabia. C.—Hurt. They had probably been mounted on camels, &c., (H.) and did not suspect that Gedeon would be so soon after them across the Jordan. M.

VER. 12. Sun-rising. It would seem as if all these exploits had been performed between midnight and sun-rising in the month of May, which is quite incredible; and hence many translate, "the sun being up." Sept. and Theodotion, "from the height or ascent of flares," (the situation of which we know not,) or "of the mountains" (Aquila), or "woods" (Symmachus), or perhaps "from the eastward." C.—The Scripture does not, however, specify that all this took place in the space of six or seven hours, or of one night, but only that Gedeon came to Soccoth so early as to take the magistrates unawares, being informed by a young man where they lived. This might probably happen on the second morning, after he had surprised the camp of the Madianites, at Jezrael. Prot. and Chal. agree with the Vulg. "before the sun was up." The other translations explain eros, as if it denoted the place or situation from which Gedeon was returning. H.

VER. 18. Thabor. Some of the relations or brothers of Gedeon had retired thither as to a place of safety; and the latter wished to know what was become of them, that he might redeem them, if alive. C.—King. They answer with flattery, insinuating that Gedeon had the air of a king. M.

VER. 19. Kill you. They were not included in the number of the seven devoted nations, (W.) and the precept for destroying the Madianites no longer subsisted. Num. xxxi. 17. M.—The laws of war permitted the Hebrews to kill their prisoners, if they thought proper. No public executioner was necessary. Samuel killed Agag, 1 Kings xv. 32. See 3 Kings ii. 25; 2 Kings i. 15. C.

VER. 21. Age. They beg that they may die in a more speedy and noble manner.—Ornaments. Most interpreters understand "crescents." The veneration of the Arabs for the moon, the celestial Venus, or Alilat, is well known. The Turks still make use of this sign, as Christians employ the cross on their standards, temples, &c.

22 And all the men of Israel said to Gedeon: Rule thou over us, and thy son, and thy son's son: because thou hast delivered us from the hand of Madian.

23 And he said to them: I will not rule over you, neither shall my son rule over you, but the Lord shall rule over you.

24 And he said to them: I desire one request of you: Give me the earlets of your spoils. For the Ismaelites were accustomed to wear golden earlets.

25 They answered: We will give them most willingly. And spreading a mantle on the ground, they cast upon it the earlets of the spoils.

26 And the weight of the earlets that he requested, was a thousand seven hundred sicles of gold, besides the ornaments, and jewels, and purple raiment, which the kings of Madian were wont to use, and besides the golden chains that were about the camels' necks.

27 And Gedeon made an ephod thereof, and put it in his city Ephra. And all Israel committed fornication with it, and it became a ruin to Gedeon, and to all his house.

28 But Madian was humbled before the children of Israel, neither could they any more lift up their heads: but the land rested for forty years, while Gedeon presided.

29 So Jerobaal, the son of Joas, went and dwelt in his own house:

30 And he had seventy sons, who came out of his thigh, for he had many wives.

31 And his concubine, that he had in Sichem, bore him a son, whose name was Abimelech.

32 And Gedeon, the son of Joas, died in a good old

VER. 22. Israel, who were in his army, and of whom he receives the earlets for his share of the spoil. C.—But as those who staid at home received a share of the booty, and no doubt would come to congratulate Gedeon on his victory, it seems equally probable that this offer of the regal dignity was made to him in a full assembly of the people, (H.) which is greatly to the honour of this valiant man. M.—Rule thou. They wish to confer upon him a dignity which he did not now possess, and which he absolutely refused, being, as he thought, incompatible with the theocracy. This shows that it was not the dignity of judge, which he retained till his death, but that of king, which was so displeasing to God, when the Israelites resolved to establish it among them. 1 Kings viii. 7. M. T. Grot. C.—Josephus (v. 8) thinks that Gedeon wished to resign the former dignity, but was forced to retain it forty years. The judges were chosen by God, and acted as his lieutenants, so that the people having no part in their election, the Lord alone was considered as the King of Israel. Some are of opinion that the people wished, on this occasion, to make the dignity hereditary. C.—Serarius thinks that they made an offer of the regal power to Gedeon, to his son, and grandson, only. But it seems rather that they meant to make the sovereign authority over entirely to his family, (M.) so great a sense had they of his courage, moderation, and just severity, of which he had given such striking proofs. H.

VER. 24. Request. It was not then thought dishonourable to ask nor to receive presents. The most precious part of the booty had been already presented to the general, according to the custom of the heroic times. But, as the people wished to make Gedeon king, he consents to receive the earlets, as a memorial of their affection.—Earlets. Heb. and Sept. (M.) may also signify, "each an earlet," as if he would only accept of one from each soldier. H.—Ismaelites. By this title various nations are designated. It seems almost as general as the word Arab among us.

VER. 26. And jewels. Some translate, "crescents (Sept. 'little moons') and boxes" (notpith, M.) of perfumes. H.

VER. 27. An ephod. A priestly garment; which Gedeon made with a good design: but the Israelites, after his death, abused it by making it an instrument of the idolatrous worship, (Ch.) and perhaps consulting their idols with it. No law forbade the making of such a garment. M.—It was not peculiar to the high priest, since we find that Samuel and David occasionally wore the ephod, (2 Kings vi. 4.) and probably Gedeon would on public occasions do the like with this most costly one, which would serve to remind the people of the victory which they had gained over Madian. Many think that Gedeon was guilty of an indiscretion in making it. S. Aug. q. 41. Lyran. E.—But the thing was in itself indifferent. He did not intend to arrogate to himself the privileges of the Levitical tribe. The Scripture no where condemns him, but speaks of his faith and of his death with honour, ver. 32; Heb. xi. 3.—With it. Heb. "after it or him," which may either signify that this superstition took place after the death of Gedeon, (Sept. Pagnin. M.) or in consequence of the making of the ephod.

age, and was buried in the sepulchre of his father, in Ephra, of the family of Ezri.

33 But after Gedeon was dead, the children of Israel turned again, and committed fornication with Baalim. And they made a covenant with Baal, that he should be their god:

34 And they remembered not the Lord their God, who delivered them out of the hands of all their enemies round about:

35 Neither did they show mercy to the house of Jerobaal Gedeon, according to all the good things he had done to Israel

CHAP. IX.

Abimelech killeth his brethren. Joatham's parable. Gaal conspireth with the Sichemites against Abimelech, but is overcome. Abimelech destroyeth Sichem; but is killed at Thebes.

AND Abimelech,* the son of Jerobaal, went to Sichem, to his mother's brethren, and spoke to them, and to all the kindred of his mother's father, saying:

2 Speak to all the men of Sichem: whether is better for you that seventy men, all the sons of Jerobaal, should rule over you, or that one man should rule over you? And withal, consider that I am your bone, and your flesh.

3 And his mother's brethren spoke of him to all the men of Sichem, all these words, and they inclined their hearts after Abimelech, saying: He is our brother:

4 And they gave him seventy weight of silver out of the temple of Baalberith: wherewith he hired to himself men that were needy, and vagabonds, and they followed him.

* A. M. 2768, A. C. 1236.

Jonath., Drus., Prot., &c. versions. C.—And to. This explains how it affected Gedeon, who was probably dead. He suffered in the ruin of his family, (H.) as it is explained in the following chapter. M.

VER. 31. His concubine. She was his servant, but not his harlot; and is called his concubine, as wives of an inferior degree are commonly called in the Old Testament, though otherwise lawfully married. Ch.—They had not all the privileges of wives, (Gen. xxv. 6,) and their children could not claim the inheritance. C.

VER. 33. After. This is the most solid proof of Gedeon's piety, since he kept the people in awe and faithful to the Lord during his life.—God. Heb. "and appointed Baal Berith their god," or goddess; for Berith, "of the covenant," is feminine. In the temple of this idol the citizens of Sichem kept money. Chap. ix. 4.

VER. 35. Mercy is here put for many virtues; gratitude, justice, kindness, &c. M.—The Israelites did not take care to provide for (C.) the family of one who had rendered them such essential services. H.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. Abimelech was encouraged to contend with his brethren, as he saw the indifference which the people showed for them, and as he was of a bold, enterprising temper. C.

VER. 2. Men, particularly to those who have the greatest influence. Heb. Balim. M.—The argumentation of Abimelech tended to prove that monarchy was the most perfect and eligible form of government, and that it would be hard upon the people, and greatly weaken the state, if seventy princes were to be supported in all the dignity of kings. But it was easy to discern the fallacy of his reasons. The dignity of judge was not hereditary, and it does not appear that the sons of Gedeon claimed it. If it had belonged to his family, the eldest would have been entitled to it, or any of the children, in preference to this son of the servant, ver. 18. He was, indeed, born at Sichem; but the others were by no means strangers (C.): and what right had the men of this town to give a ruler to Israel? H.—Flesh, a usual expression in Scripture to denote kindred. Ver. 8; Gen. ii. 23; 2 Kings xix. 13. C.

VER. 4. Weight. Heb., Chal., and Sept. do not express what quantity of silver was given. M.—But sicle on such occasions is generally supplied. C.—Hence this sum would amount to little more than £8 sterling. H.—As this appears too insignificant a sum to maintain an army, (C.) some would supply pounds, each consisting of twenty-four sicles, or talents, which were equivalent to 3000 sicles. M.—But this is without example, and the army of Abimelech was, probably, a company of banditti, or villains, who went with him to Ephra to murder his brethren, and afterwards kept near his person. When he had got possession of his father's estate, and of the sovereign power, he found means to supply his wants. C.—Baalberith. That is, Baal of the covenant, so called from the covenant they had made with Baal, chap. viii. 33. Ch.—Vagabonds. Heb. "empty and inconstant" (C.) people, who had nothing to lose, and who would

5 And he came to his father's house in Ephra, and slew his brethren, the sons of Jerobaal, seventy men, upon one stone: and there remained only Joatham, the youngest son of Jerobaal, who was hidden.

6 And all the men of Sichem were gathered together, and all the families of the city of Mello: and they went and made Abimelech king, by the oak that stood in Sichem.

7 This being told to Joatham, he went, and stood on the top of Mount Garizim: and lifting up his voice, he cried, and said: Hear me, ye men of Sichem, so may God hear you.

8 The trees went to anoint a king over them: and they said to the olive-tree: Reign thou over us.

9 And it answered: Can I leave my fatness, which both gods and men make use of, to come to be promoted among the trees?

10 And the trees said to the fig-tree: Come thou and reign over us.

11 And it answered them: Can I leave my sweetness, and my delicious fruits, and go to be promoted among the other trees?

12 And the trees said to the vine: Come thou and reign over us.

13 And it answered them: Can I forsake my wine, that cheereth God and men, and be promoted among the other trees?

not embrace any proper method of getting a livelihood. H.—Chal. “seekers.” Sept. “stupid.” Sym. “idle and of desperate fortunes, or frantic.” C.—Such people are generally at the head of every revolution, or, at least, are ready to follow the directions of some powerful and designing man; as but too many instances both in ancient and modern times evince; which ought to be a caution for all to watch their motions. H.

VER. 5. Stone where criminals were, perhaps, commonly executed, that he might seem to act with justice, (Tostat,) or he might slaughter his brethren on the very altar which had been erected to God by Gedeon, after he had thrown down that of Baal. By doing so he would seem to vindicate the idol, and gratify the people of Sichem, who were zealous idolaters, ver. 46. Joatham escaped his fury, yet he also uses a round number, 70, when he says, you have killed 70 men, ver. 18. C.—Abimelech himself must also be deducted from the number. Thus we say the seventy interpreters, (M.) though the Greek interpreters of the Bible are supposed (H.) to have been seventy-two. M.

VER. 6. Mello. We know of no such city in the vicinity of Sichem. Heb. “all the house of Mello:” which some take to be the town-house of Sichem, full of the chief citizens, as Mello signifies “filled up” (Vatable); or it might designate some part of the city which had been levelled, like the deep valley at Jerusalem, (3 Kings ix. 15. H.) C.—Oak. Heb. “the plain, or oak of the statue” (alluding to the monument which was left here by Josue, ver. 37; Jos. xxiv. 26,) or Sept. “of the station,” as those of Sichem might assemble here to deliberate on public affairs, (C.) in memory of the solemn covenant between God and the people. H.

VER. 7. Stood on. As Abimelech was a figure of Antichrist, who will reign for a time, so Joatham denotes the pastors of the church, who shall stand up for the truth. W.—Garizim. At the foot of this mountain Sichem was built. Joatham addressed the people of the city probably during the absence of Abimelech, (C.) when, Josephus (v. 9) says, a great festival was celebrated.

VER. 8. Us. By this parable Joatham expostulates with the men of Sichem, who had so basely requited the labours of Gedeon, and had given the preference to the son of a servant, who was of the most savage temper. H.—In a spiritual sense, which the Fathers chiefly regard, heretics and schismatics act in this manner, and choose rather to be governed by those who will allow them to follow their passions, than by such governors as God has appointed, though the latter be endued with the grace of the Holy Ghost, and with all virtues, signified by the olive and other fruit trees. W.—In the application of these parables, Maimonides justly remarks, that we must consider their general scope, and not pretend to explain every circumstance (More. Neboc.); a remark which Origen had already made. Many things are only added for the sake of ornament. H.—Thus we need not imagine that the people of Sichem offered the sovereign authority to many, who refused to accept of it, and at last only prevailed upon Abimelech. C.

VER. 9. Leave. But would this advancement prove any disadvantage? The king is bound to give himself up wholly for the good of the public, so that he must frequently be full of anxiety and care. C.—Use of. The olive-tree is introduced speaking in this manner, because oil was used both in the worship of the 14 And all the trees said to the bramble: Come thou and reign over us.

15 And it answered them: If, indeed, you mean to make me king, come ye, and rest under my shadow: but if you mean it not, let fire come out from the bramble, and devour the cedars of Libanus.

16 Now, therefore, if you have done well, and without sin, in appointing Abimelech king over you, and have dealt well with Jerobaal, and with his house, and have made a suitable return for the benefits of him who fought for you,

17 And exposed his life to dangers, to deliver you from the hand of Madian,

18 And you are now risen up against my father's house, and have killed his sons, seventy men, upon one stone, and have made Abimelech, the son of his handmaid, king over the inhabitants of Sichem, because he is your brother:

19 If therefore you have dealt well, and without fault, with Jerobaal and his house, rejoice ye, this day, in Abimelech, and may he rejoice in you.

20 But if unjustly: let fire come out from him, and consume the inhabitants of Sichem, and the town of Mello: and let fire come out from the men of Sichem, and from the town of Mello, and devour Abimelech.

21 And when he had said thus, he fled, and went into Bera: and dwelt there for fear of Abimelech, his brother.

22 So Abimelech reigned over Israel three years.

23 And the Lord sent a very evil spirit between true God, and in that of the false gods, whom the Schemites served. Ch.—It spiritually denotes the grace of God, which establishes the peace of the soul, as the fig-tree signifies the sweetness of God's law, producing good works, and the vine shows forth those noble actions, which are performed without the affectation of outward show; and which are, therefore, most agreeable both to God and to men. W.—Promoted. Some translate the Heb. “to put myself in motion for.” Syr. &c. We might also render, “which honoureth the gods (or the judges) and men to come to be promoted among (or disquieted on account of) the trees.”

VER. 11. Sweetness. The fig is the sweetest of fruits, and is regarded as the symbol of sweetness. Aristop. Bonfire.

VER. 13. Cheereth God and men. Wine is here represented as agreeable to God, because he had appointed it to be offered up with his sacrifices. But we are not obliged to take these words, spoken by the trees in Joatham's parable, according to the strict rigour of divinity; but only in a sense accommodated to the design of the parable expressed in the conclusion of it. Ch.—The same word, Aleim, which is translated God, may also signify any powerful man, as in ver. 9. H.—Yet wine may be said to cheer God, in the same figurative sense, as the odour of victims is sweet and delightful to him. C.—He is pleased with the devotion of men, and requires these things as a testimony of their love and fidelity. H.

VER. 14. Bramble. Sept. rhamnos, “the white or haw thorn.” Some suppose that atod means “a wild rose, (Vatab.) thistle,” &c. C.—It is here put for any base and ambitious man. W.

VER. 15. Shadow, or protection, Psal. xvi. 8; Baruch i. 12. C.—Joatham hints at the insolence of Abimelech, (H.) and foretells that he and his foolish subjects will soon be at variance, and destroy each other.—Fire is often put for war. The people of Sichem began soon to despise their new king, and he made war upon them, and destroyed their city; though the people afterwards took ample revenge, ver. 20. C.—Tyrants promise much, but their rage soon falls upon the more wealthy and powerful citizens, (H.) here signified by the cedars. M.

VER. 18. You are. People are answerable for the injuries which they do not prevent when they have it in their power. C.—Many of the chief citizens of Sichem had assisted Abimelech, ver. 4.—Brother. The ties of kindred could not hide their ingratitude and cruelty. H.

VER. 20. Town of. Heb. “the house of Mello,” ver. 6. C.—The imprecation of Joatham was prophetic. He had not the smallest doubt but the people had done wrong (H.); and the three different fruit-trees, which rejected the offer of promotion, represented all the virtuous Israelites, who knew that they could not lawfully assume the regal or judicial authority without the Divine call. Ezechiel (xvii. 24) attributes knowledge to trees by the same figure of speech as Joatham does here. M.

VER. 21. Bera. Heb. Bar or Beer, “the well.” There was a place of this name in the tribe of Ruben, where the Israelites encamped, Num. xxi. 16. Bersabee, in the tribe of Juda, was another famous well, and it is probable that Joatham would retire to some distant place. H.

VER. 23. Spirit. God permitted the spirit of discord to arise, like an executioner, (C.) to punish the sins both of the ruler and of his subjects. H.—S. Aug

Abimelech and the inhabitants of Sichem; who began to detest him,

24 And to lay the crime of the murder of the seventy sons of Jerobaal, and the shedding of their blood, upon Abimelech, their brother, and upon the rest of the princes of the Sichemites, who aided him.

25 And they set an ambush against him on the top of the mountains: and while they waited for his coming, they committed robberies, taking spoils of all that passed by: and it was told Abimelech.

26 And Gaal, the son of Obed, came with his brethren, and went over to Sichem. And the inhabitants of Sichem, taking courage at his coming, 27 Went out into the fields, wasting the vineyards, and treading down the grapes: and singing and dancing, they went into the temple of their god, and in their banquets and cups they cursed Abimelech.

28 And Gaal, the son of Obed, cried: Who is Abimelech, and what is Sichem, that we should serve him? Is he not the son of Jerobaal, and hath made Zebul, his servant, ruler over the men of Emor, the father of Sichem? Why then shall we serve him?

29 Would to God that some man would put this people under my hand, that I might remove Abimelech out of the way. And it was said to Abimelech: Gather together the multitude of an army, and come.

30 For Zebul, the ruler of the city, hearing the words of Gaal, the son of Obed, was very angry, 31 And sent messengers privately to Abimelech, saying: Behold, Gaal, the son of Obed, is come into Sichem with his brethren, and endeavoureth to set the city against thee.

32 Arise, therefore, in the night, with the people that is with thee, and lie hid in the field:

33 And betimes in the morning, at sun-rising, set upon the city, and when he shall come out against thee, with his people, do to him what thou shalt be able.

34 Abimelech, therefore, arose with all his army, by night, and laid ambushes near Sichem in four places.

35 And Gaal, the son of Obed, went out, and stood in the entrance of the gate of the city. And Abimelech rose up, and all his army with him, from the places of the ambushes.

36 And when Gaal saw the people, he said to Zebul: Behold, a multitude cometh down from the mountains. And he answered him: Thou seest the shadows of the mountains as if they were the heads of men, and this is thy mistake.

37 Again Gaal said: Behold, there cometh people down from the midst of the land, and one troop cometh by the way that looketh towards the oak.

38 And Zebul said to him: Where is now thy mouth, wherewith thou saidst: Who is Abimelech, that we should serve him? Is not this the people which thou didst despise? Go out, and fight against him.

39 So Gaal went out, in the sight of the people of Sichem, and fought against Abimelech,

40 Who chased and put him to flight, and drove him to the city: and many were slain of his people, even to the gate of the city:

41 And Abimelech sat down in Ruma: but Zebul drove Gaal, and his companions, out of the city, and would not suffer them to abide in it.

42 So the day following the people went out into the field. And it was told to Abimelech,

43 And he took his army, and divided it into three companies, and laid ambushes in the fields. And seeing that the people came out of the city, he arose, and set upon them

44 With his own company, assaulting and besieging the city: whilst the two other companies chased the enemies that were scattered about the field.

45 And Abimelech assaulted the city all that day: and took it, and killed the inhabitants thereof, and demolished it, so that he sowed salt in it.

46 And when they who dwelt in the tower of Sichem, had heard this, they went into the temple of their god Berith, where they had made a covenant with him, and from thence the place had taken its name, and it was exceeding strong.

(q. 45) observes, that God caused the people to be sorry for what they had done: but they afterwards proceeded to acts of violence and enmity, at the instigation of the devil, to whose advice they gave ear, in consequence of their former transgression. W.—The common people began to open their eyes, and beheld the cruelty of Abimelech, and of some of the principal citizens who had espoused his cause, with abhorrence. M.—They reflected on the justice of Joatham's parable, which tended to rouse them not to suffer the tyrant to remain unpunished any longer. H.—Derest him. Heb. "revolted against (or dealt treacherously with) Abimelech, (24) that the crime (or punishment of the murder) of the, &c., might come, and their blood he laid upon," &c. H.—God permitted that Abimelech should be punished by those very men who had been the occasion of his sin. To obtain the sceptre over them he had committed the most horrible cruelty. C.

VER. 28. Sichem. Why should this ancient city be thus degraded? This son of Jerobaal deigns not to reside among us, but sets one of his servants over us! H.—He mentions Jerobaal instead of Gedeon, to remind the people of the indignity formerly offered to their great idol by the father of their present ruler. M.—Heb. may have another sense. "Who is Abimelech? . . . Is he not the son of Jerobaal, and Zebul his officer? Serve the men of Emor," &c. It seems that Gaal was of the race of Chanaan, by the manner in which he speaks of Emor, whose history is given, Gen. xxiv.

VER. 31. Thee. Heb. "they besiege (C.) or fortify the city." H.—The partisans of Gaal attacked those who were still favourable to Abimelech, and fortified themselves as much as possible, in those parts which they had already seized. Vat. Drusius. C.

VER. 34. Places. Heb. "companies, (H.) or heads." He divided his army into four parts, over each of which he appointed a commander. C.

VER. 36. To Zebul. It seems the latter had acted with such dissimulation that Gaal supposed he had come over to his party. Zebul laughs at him, as if he were disturbed with groundless fears, (H.) in order that Abimelech may take him unawares. M.

VER. 37. Midst. Heb. Tabur here signifies "a little hill, or the navel," which title is given to places which are elevated and in the centre of the country, Ezec. xxxviii. 12. Joseph. Bel. iii. 2. C.—Oak, which is probably mentioned, ver. 6. M.—Heb. "another company comes by the oak or plain of Meonenim," which may signify, "of the augurs." Sept. "of those who make observations," apoblepontou. C.

VER. 41. Ruma may be the same place as Arimathea, between Joppe and Lidda. S. Jer. M.—But this seems to be too remote from Sichem, (H. Bonfrere,) in the neighbourhood of which Abimelech halted, to give the citizens time to enter in themselves, (C.) and to open their gates to him without further resistance. Gaal entered the city after his defeat; but was forced the next day to leave it by Zebul. Whereupon he was met by two divisions of Abimelech's army, which routed him, and pursued the fugitives, while the king marched straight to the city; and though he had a party within the walls, headed by Zebul, (H.) unless he was slain, (C.) the rest of the inhabitants made such a stout resistance, that the tyrant resolved to demolish the city, when he took it, at night. H.

VER. 45. Sowed salt. To make the ground barren, and fit for nothing; (Ch.) and to testify his eternal hatred towards the place, as salt is the symbol of duration. See Deut. xxix. 23; Sophon. ii. 9; Jer. xvii. 6. Notwithstanding the fury of Abimelech, Sichem was afterwards rebuilt, and became as fertile as before. C.—See on this custom Bochart, Animal. iii. 16.

VER. 46. Tower. Serarius thinks it was the house of Mello, out of the city, ver. 6. M.—It was the citadel, large enough to contain 1000 soldiers. They durst not, however, stop here to encounter Abimelech, but retired to the temple, either because it was still stronger and higher, or in hopes that they would be secure, on account of the veneration (C.) to which the place was entitled among the idolaters.—Berith. Prot. "they entered into an hold of the house of the god Berith." Sept. "of the covenant." H.—Where, &c., is added by way of explanation, (C.) except the word strong, which the Sept. render ochurōma, "a fortress." H.

47 Abimelech also hearing that the men of the tower of Sichem were gathered together, 48 Went up into Mount Selmon, he and all his people with him: and taking an ax, he cut down the bough of a tree, and laying it on his shoulder, and carrying it, he said to his companions: What you see me do, do ye out of hand.

49 So they cut down boughs from the trees, every man as fast as he could, and followed their leader. And surrounding the fort, they set it on fire: and so it came to pass, that with the smoke and with the fire a thousand persons were killed, men and women together, of the inhabitants of the town of Sichem.

50 Then Abimelech, departing from thence, came to the town of Thebes, which he surrounded and besieged with his army.

51 And there was in the midst of the city a high tower, to which both the men and the women were fled together, and all the princes of the city, and having shut and strongly barred the gate, they stood upon the battlements of the tower to defend themselves.

52 And Abimelech, coming near the tower, fought stoutly: and, approaching to the gate, endeavoured to set fire to it:

53 *And behold, a certain woman casting a piece of a millstone from above, dashed against the head of Abimelech, and broke his skull.

54 ^bAnd he called hastily to his armour-bearer, and said to him: Draw thy sword, and kill me: lest it should be said that I was slain by a woman. He did as he was commanded, and slew him.

• 2 Kings xi. 21.—^b 1 Kings xxxi. 4;

VER. 48. Selmon. This mountain lay towards the Jordan, and was covered with trees and snow. Psal. lxxvii. 16. M.—Bough. Sept. "a burden or faggot of sticks." Josephus observes that they were dry. C.

VER. 49. And so. Heb. and Sept. "upon them, so that all the men of the tower of Sichem died also, about a thousand men and women." H.

VER. 50. Thebes, about thirteen miles from Sichem, towards Scythopolis. Euseb.—Besieged. Heb., &c. "took," as the sequel shows, (ver. 52,) since Abimelech was killed, as he was attacking the tower or citadel, in the midst of the city. C.

VER. 51. Battlements, or roof of the tower, which was flat. Hence the defendants hurled down stones, &c. upon the enemy.

VER. 53. Above, or "of the upper millstone," according to the Heb. and Sept. C.

VER. 54. Slew him. The ancient heroes were always attended by their armour-bearers. C.—Marius ordered his servant to run him through, that he might not be exposed to the insults of his enemies; and V. Maximus (vi. 8) greatly commends the servant for doing so. Nihil eorum pietati cedit, a quibus salus Dominorum protecta est. David was not of the same opinion, since he punished the Amalecite who pretended that he had rendered this service to Saul, 2 Kings i. 16. The Christian religion condemns both those who engage others to take away their life, and those who comply with the impious request. C.—Notwithstanding the wicked precaution of Abimelech, what he so much feared took place; for Joab said, Did not a woman cast a piece of a millstone upon him from the wall, and slay him in Thebes? 2 Kings xi. 21. His skull was so much fractured that he had received a mortal wound: the sword only hastened his death. Thus was he justly punished with a stone, who had slaughtered sixty-eight or sixty-nine of his brethren upon one stone. H.—He can only be considered as an usurper or tyrant, since he was neither chosen by God nor by the Israelites in general. Hence he is only said to have reigned at Sichem. A. Lapide. H.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. Uncle of Abimelech, i. e. half-brother to Gedeon, as being born of the same mother, but by a different father, and of a different tribe. Ch. H.—Thola was cousin-german of Abimelech. S. Aug. q. 47, &c. The Israelites elected Thola for their judge, (Abulensis,) out of respect to Gedeon, (A. Lapide,) that he might put an end to the commotions which had been excited by the tyrant. M.—Joatham might be passed over on account of his youth. The Sept. and Chal. have "Thola, the son of Phua, the son of his uncle by the father's side," which may be true, if the brother of Gedeon adopted him; or this uncle might refer to Abimelech. The uncertainty arises from the Heb. Dudu, which may be taken as a proper name. The Heb., Sept., &c. assert that Thola "arose to defend or to save Israel." He seems to have kept all quiet during the twenty-three years of his administration.—Samir. Sept. Alex. reads "Samaria;" but the city was 55 And when he was dead, all the men of Israel that were with him, returned to their homes.

56 And God repaid the evil that Abimelech had done against his father, killing his seventy brethren.

57 The Sichemites also were rewarded for what they had done, and the curse of Joatham, the son of Jerobaal, came upon them.

CHAP. X.

Thola ruled Israel twenty-three years: and Jair twenty-two. The people fell again into idolatry, and are afflicted by the Philistines and Ammonites. They cry to God for help, who, upon their repentance, hath compassion on them.

AFTER Abimelech, there arose a ruler in Israel, Thola, son of Phua, the uncle of Abimelech, a man of Issachar, who dwelt in Samir of Mount Ephraim:

2 And he judged Israel three and twenty years, and he died, and was buried in Samir.

3 To him succeeded Jair, the Galaadite, who judged Israel for two and twenty years,

4 Having thirty sons, that rode on thirty ass-colts, and were princes of thirty cities, which from his name were called Havoth Jair, that is, the towns of Jair, until this present day, in the land of Galaad.

5 And Jair died, and was buried in the place which is called Camon.

6 But the children of Israel, adding new sins to their old ones, did evil in the sight of the Lord, and served idols, Baalim and Astaroth, and the gods of Syria, and of Sidon, and of Moab, and of the children of Ammon, and of the Philistines: and they left the Lord, and did not serve him.

7 And the Lord being angry with them, delivered them not built till the reign of Amri. There was a city on a mountain, (H.) called Samir, in the tribe of Juda, (Jos. xv. 48,) different from this. M.—People were at liberty to dwell where they pleased out of their own tribe. C.—This judge was buried among the Ephraimites. H.—But we know not the exact place where Samir stood. C.

VER. 2. Years. S. Severus says twenty-two, making the reign of Jair of equal length. Cum æque viginti et duos annos principatum obtinisset. But this is contrary to all the best chronologers. The fidelity of the Israelites seems to have been of no longer continuance at this period than usual, as we find that they relapsed into idolatry again, at least after the death of Jair, within forty-five years after they had been scourged by the tyrant Abimelech, ver. 6. H.

VER. 4. Havoth Jair. This name was now confirmed to these towns, which they had formerly received from another Jair. Num. xxxii. 41. Ch.—Sixty are there specified, and only thirty here, which might either be the same, or different from those villages to which the former Jair had left his name. Grotius thinks that judge Jair was the son of Segub, who left twenty-three cities to him. These, with seven belonging to his grandfather, Hesron, make up the number here specified. 1 Par. ii. 22.—The Heb. does not say that these thirty cities were called after the judge: "they had thirty cities, which are called Havoth Jair," &c. C.—Some copies of the Sept. add "two" to the number of sons, asses, and cities, as if there had been thirty-two of each. In other respects they agree with the original. It was formerly a mark of distinction to ride on fair asses. Chap. v. 10. H.—We know not by what means Jair was raised to the chief command, nor what he did for the benefit of the people. He is supposed to be the same who is called Bedan, 1 Kings xii. 11; Scrar, Usher, &c.; though others think that Bedan is a title of Samson. He was of the tribe of Manasses in Galaad. Having kept the people under due restraint during his administration, they burst forth, like a torrent, at his death, and, on all sides, abandoned themselves to a multiplicity of idols, so that God made some difficulty in restoring them again to favour. H.

VER. 5. Camon is placed in Galaad by Adrichomius, though S. Jerom mentions another, six miles from Legion, where he supposes that Jair was buried. It seems more natural to say that he was interred in his own country, on the east side of the Jordan. Bonfrere.—It is, probably, the same city as Hamon (1 Par. vi. 16) and Hammothdor, Jos. xxxi. 32. C.

VER. 6. Gods. The sun and moon were principally adored among these nations, under different names.

VER. 7. Ammon. While these infested the eastern parts, the Philistines made incursions into the territories of their neighbours. H.—This servitude resembled that of Midian. Jephthe attacked the Ammonites, and Abesani, with other judges, made head against the Philistines (C.) on the west. H.

into the hands of the Philistines, and of the children of Ammon.

8 And they were afflicted, and grievously oppressed for eighteen years, all they that dwelt beyond the Jordan in the land of the Amorrhite, who is in Galaad :

9 Insomuch that the children of Ammon, passing over the Jordan, wasted Juda, and Benjamin, and Ephraim : and Israel was distressed exceedingly.

10 And they cried to the Lord, and said, We have sinned against thee, because we have forsaken the Lord our God, and have served Baalim.

11 And the Lord said to them : Did not the Egyptians, and the Amorrhites, and the children of Ammon, and the Philistines, 12 The Sidonians also, and Amalec, and Chanaan, oppress you, and you cried to me, and I delivered you out of their hand ?

13 And yet you have forsaken me, and have worshipped strange gods : therefore I will deliver you no more :

14 Go, and call upon the gods which you have chosen : let them deliver you in the time of distress.

15 And the children of Israel said to the Lord : We have sinned, do thou unto us whatsoever pleaseth thee : only deliver us this time.

16 And saying these things, they cast away out of their coats all the idols of strange gods, and served the Lord their God : and he was touched with their miseries.

17 And the children of Ammon shouting together, pitched their tents in Galaad : against whom the children of Israel assembled themselves together, and camped in Maspha.

18 And the princes of Galaad said one to another : Whosoever of us shall first begin to fight against the children of Ammon, he shall be the leader of the people of Galaad.

CHAP. XI.

Jephthe is made ruler of the people of Galaad : he first pleads their cause

* Gen. xxvi. 27.

VER. 8. Years by the Ammonites, whose dominion was suppressed by the victory of Jephthe. When the servitude commenced is uncertain, ver. 4. Heb. "And that year they vexed," &c. C.—Roman Sept. "at that time." Grabe's copy has "in that year;" and though the former expression appear to be more indefinite, yet it must refer to some period (11.) either prior to the death of Aar, (Salien,) or subsequent to that event. Euseb. Genebrard.

VER. 9. Exceedingly. Not only those who lived in Galaad, but also three tribes on the west of the Jordan, were treated as the half tribe of Manasses had been, (C.) when Gedeon delivered them. H.

VER. 12. Chanaan. Heb. "Maon." Sept., Rom. and Alex., "Madian." The Maonites are styled Mincans by the Sept., (1 Par. iv. 40,) and these inhabited Arabia, (Diod. iii. 42,) and might join themselves to Madian and Amalec, in their attacks upon the Israelites. As for Chanaan, which other editions of the Sept. retain, we know that they were domestic enemies, like thorns in the sides of Israel. Jos. xxiii. 13. All the persecutions which the Hebrews had to undergo are not particularized in this book. C.

VER. 14. Go. This is not a command, but an ironical expression, as Deut. xxxii. 38.

VER. 17. Together, as people sure of victory.—Galaad, the capital of the country of the same name. It belonged to Gad.—Maspha, near the springs of the Jaboc. Jos. xi. 3, and xiii. 26. C.—It signifies "a watch-tower." M.

VER. 18. Galaad. It seems none of them durst accept the offer, as the first onset was the most hazardous. Hence they invited Jephthe to take upon him the command. The Israelites consulted the Lord, on a former occasion, who should begin the attack upon the Chanaanites. Chap. i. 1. In these wars much depended on one battle. C.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Harlot. Heb. Zuneh. Jos. ii. 1. It is uncertain whether she was properly a concubine, or a wife of inferior dignity. She lived with her son in the house of Galaad (C.); at least the latter was in his father's house. 11.—Hence Jephthe complains that he had been expelled, not that he was debarred from enjoying his father's inheritance, and consequently the law was not observed in his regard. Moses makes no provision for illegitimate children, but he excludes against the Ammonites; then making a vow, obtains a signal victory: he performs his vow.

THERE was at that time Jephthe, the Galaadite, a most valiant man, and a warrior, the son of a woman that was a harlot, and his father was Galaad.

2 Now Galaad had a wife of whom he had sons. who, after they were grown up, thrust out Jephthe, saying, Thou canst not inherit in the house of our father, because thou art born of another mother.

3 Then he fled and avoided them, and dwelt in the land of Tob: and there were gathered to him needy men, and robbers, and they followed him as their prince.

4 In those days the children of Ammon made war against Israel.

5 And as they pressed hard upon them, the ancients of Galaad went to fetch Jephthe out of the land of Tob to help them:

6 And they said to him: Come thou, and be our prince, and fight against the children of Ammon.

7 And he answered them: "Are not you the men that hated me, and cast me out of my father's house, and now you are come to me, constrained by necessity?"

8 And the princes of Galaad said to Jephthe: For this cause we are now come to thee, that thou mayst go with us, and fight against the children of Ammon, and be head over all the inhabitants of Galaad.

9 Jephthe also said to them: If you be come to me sincerely, that I should fight for you against the children of Ammon, and the Lord shall deliver them into my hand, shall I be your prince?

10 They answered him: The Lord, who heareth these things, he himself is mediator and witness that we will do as we have promised.

11 Jephthe therefore went with the princes of Galaad, and all the people made him their prince. And Jephthe spoke all his words before the Lord in Maspha.

12 And he sent messengers to the king of the children the son of a mamzer from the church of God. Deut. xxiii. 2. Some think that the mother of Jephthe was of a nation with whom it was not lawful to marry. Josephus v. 9. Said. Grot.

VER. 2. Sons. Grabe's Sept. determines the number to be "two." H.—They caused the magistrates to declare that Jephthe should not partake in the inheritance, ver. 7. M.

VER. 3. Tob, to the north of Galaad, of which it is a part. Joseph.—It is called Tubim, 1 Mac. v. 13. See 2 Kings x. 6.—And robbers. This is a further explication of rikim, poor, vain fellows. Chap. ix. 4. They did not infect the Israelites, but made war on their enemies around: latro, in Latin, often signifies a soldier, particularly such as lived on plunder, as we read in Plautus. Mil. glorios. Latrocinatus annos decem mercedem accipio. Some have imagined that Jephthe was at the head of some banditti, q. 43, inter. op. S. Aug.—But David's followers were of the same description (1 Kings xxii. 2) as those of Jephthe, men of determined resolution and valour. C.—Such a man as Jephthe was therefore a valuable acquisition to the dispirited Israelites; and Providence had insured him to labour, and endured him with extraordinary prudence, notwithstanding his want of education, ver. 12.—Prince. Heb. and Sept. "and there were gathered unto Jephthe vain men, and they went out with him." H.

VER. 8. Cause, to make some reparation for our offence, though we must acknowledge that our present distress caused us to think of doing so. H.—Heb. "therefore we turn again to thee," &c. C.—Galaad. They only engage that the tribes of Gad and Manasses, who inhabited that country, should submit to his authority. M.—But as they were the most in danger, they first make head against the enemy, not doubting but their brethren in other parts would come to their assistance. Chap. xii. 1. God ratifies their choice, ver. 11—29 (H.); and he was acknowledged, after his victory, judge of all Israel. M.

VER. 11. Prince. Heb. "head or captain," (H.) to carry on the war, with a promise that he should be the judge of all the people if he succeeded. C.—Words. Plans, explaining how he would first send a message to the king of Ammon, and if he would not accede to reasonable terms, he would collect all the forces of Galaad, and invite all their brethren on the other side of the river to of Ammon, to say in his name: What hast thou to do with me, that thou art come against me, to waste my land?

13 And he answered them:^a Because Israel took away my land, when he came up out of Egypt, from the confines of the Arnon unto the Jaboc and the Jordan: now, therefore, restore the same peaceably to me.

14 And Jephthe again sent word by them, and commanded them to say to the king of Ammon:

15 Thus saith Jephthe: Israel did not take away the land of Moab, nor the land of the children of Ammon:

16 But when they came up out of Egypt, he walked through the desert to the Red Sea, and came into Cades.

17 ^bAnd he sent messengers to the king of Edom, saying: Suffer me to pass through thy land. But he would not condescend to his request. He sent also to the king of Moab, who, likewise, refused to give him passage. He abode, therefore, in Cades,

18 And went round the land of Edom at the side, and the land of Moab: and came over against the east coast of the land of Moab, and camped on the other side of the Arnon: and he would not enter the bounds of Moab.

19 So Israel sent messengers to Sehon, king of the Amorrites, who dwelt in Hesebon, and they said to him: Suffer me to pass through thy land to the river.

20 But he, also despising the words of Israel, suffered him not to pass through his borders: but gathering an infinite multitude, went out against him to Jasa, and made strong opposition.

21 And the Lord delivered him, with all his army, into the hands of Israel, and he slew him, and possessed all the land of the Amorrite, the inhabitant of that country, make a joint attack upon him. H.—The Lord was considered as present in their public assemblies. Deut. vi., and xx. M.—He had also been taken by the people to witness their engagement; and Jephthe promises, in like manner, to perform his part with fidelity. H.—They promise on oath to be constant to each other. C.

VER. 12. Land. Jephthe acts with a prudence and moderation which could not have been expected from one who had been brought up amid the noise of arms. C.

VER. 13. To me. The king falsely asserts that all the country between the Arnon and the Jaboc belonged to him when Moses took it. The Amorrites had possession when the Israelites arrived, and it had formerly been occupied by Moab, and not by Ammon, Deut. ii. 19, and xxxvii. (M.); unless both might claim different parts. C.

VER. 15. Moab. After the death of Eglon the Ammonites had probably seized upon his dominions, (ver. 25,) as we find no further mention of the Moabites among the enemies of Israel, nor any king of that nation till the reign of David. Hence, as the king of Ammon laid claim to all the country, and had many of the Moabites in his army, Jephthe answers at once, that the land under dispute belonged to neither of these nations. C.—They had entirely lost it when Israel attacked Sehon, and took it from him, as was plain from the history both of Moses and of the Amorrites. Num. xxi. 27. H.—Jephthe refers to facts universally known. C.

VER. 16. Red Sea, at Asiongaber, many years after they left Egypt.

VER. 17. Moab. This is not specified by Moses, but he sufficiently insinuates that he had done it. Deut. ii. 8, 9. C.

VER. 23. His land, which the Amorrite had first conquered, and which God took from him to give to Israel. It was clear that this country was not then considered as the property of the sons of Lot, since God expressly forbid his people to molest them. H.—Jephthe produces the right of conquest, the grant of God, and the possession of 300 years, to prove that the country belonged to the Israelites.—The second argument of Jephthe is unanswerable, since God may undoubtedly transfer the property of one to another. But as the Ammonites might reply that they did not admit the God of Israel, he observes that the latter might at least have the same privilege as their Chamos, ver. 24. Prescription of so long a time, with good faith, was the third argument, as the Amorrites being destroyed, and the Moabites disheartened, could not pretend to reclaim the conquered country. There would never be an end of disputes among men if the undisturbed possession of a country for such a length of time did not confirm their right to it. These principles establish the tranquillity of families and of states. C. Grot. Jur. ii. 4.

22 And all the coasts thereof from the Arnon to the Jaboc, and from the wilderness to the Jordan.

23 So the Lord, the God of Israel, destroyed the Amorrite, his people of Israel fighting against him, and wilt thou now possess his land?

24 Are not those things which thy god Chamos possesseth, due to thee by right? But what the Lord our God hath obtained by conquest, shall be our possession:

25 ^cUnless, perhaps, thou art better than Balac, the son of Sephor, king of Moab: or canst show that he strove against Israel, and fought against him,

26 Whereas he hath dwelt in Hesebon, and the villages thereof, and in Aroer, and its villages, and in all the cities near the Jordan, for three hundred years. Why have you for so long a time attempted nothing about this claim?

27 Therefore I do not trespass against thee, but thou wrongest me by declaring an unjust war against me. The Lord be judge, and decide this day, between Israel and the children of Ammon.

28 And the king of the children of Ammon would not hearken to the words of Jephthe, which he sent him by the messengers.

29 Therefore the spirit of the Lord came upon Jephthe, and going round Galaad, and Manasses, and Maspha of Galaad, and passing over from thence to the children of Ammon,

30 He made a vow to the Lord, saying: If thou wilt deliver the children of Ammon into my hands, 31 Whosoever shall first come forth out of the doors of my house, and shall meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, the same will I offer a holocaust to the Lord.

^c Num. xxi. 13.—^d Num. xxii. 2.

VER. 24. Chamos. The idol of the Moabites and Ammonites. He argues from their opinion, who thought they had a just title to the countries which they imagined they had conquered by the help of their gods: how much more then had Israel an indisputable title to the countries which God, by visible miracles, had conquered for them. Ch.—Heb. "And shall not we possess those (countries occupied by the people whom) the Lord our God has driven out from before us?" H.

VER. 25. Him. Josue (xxiv. 9) says that Balac fought against Israel. But it was not in a pitched battle, (C.) at least of which we have the particulars, (H.) nor to recover the territory which the Israelites had taken from Sehon, but only to defend his own dominions. He collected an army, and called the soothsayer to curse Israel. Num. xxii. 4, &c. C.

VER. 26. He. Heb. "While Israel," &c.—Years. He makes use of a round number. H.—Chronologists generally suppose that either more or fewer years had elapsed (M.); and the Scripture only relates what Jephthe said. Sa.—The Jews reckon 394. Some date from the coming out of Egypt 305. C.—Petau has 365. Houbigant comes rather nearer to the number of Jephthe, and reckons 281, which the ambassadors might represent, in a round number, as 300. Proleg.

VER. 27. And decide. Lit. "the arbiter of this day." Jephthe is so well convinced of the justice of his cause, that he is willing to abide by God's decision, (H.) to be manifested by the issue of the battle. M.—At the same time he threatens the Ammonites with God's judgments, if by their fault blood be shed unjustly, as he, like a good prince, had tried every means to prevent that misfortune, and to bring things to an amicable conclusion. C.

VER. 29. Therefore. Heb. "then." Sept. "and." The refusal of the king of Ammon was not precisely the reason why God endued Jephthe with such wisdom and courage, though we may say that it was the occasion. H.—Jephthe summoned the troops in Galaad, and in the two tribes of Manasses, to attend his standard. He also invited Ephraim, (chap. xii. 2, C.) and we may reasonably suppose the other tribes also, who were near enough to be ready for the day of battle. Having collected what force he could in so short a time, he returned to Maspha, and thence proceeded to attack the enemy. H.

VER. 30. He. Heb. and Sept. "And he vowed." A new sentence commences (Cajet.); so that it is not clear that Jephthe was moved to make this vow by the spirit of the Lord; else it could not be blamed. H.

VER. 31. Whosoever, &c. Some are of opinion that the meaning of this vow of Jephthe was to consecrate to God whatsoever should first meet him, according to the condition of the thing; so as to offer it up as a holocaust, if it were such a thing as might be so offered by the law; or to devote it otherwise to God, 32 And Jephthe passed over to the children of Ammon to fight against them: and the Lord delivered them into his hands.

33 And he smote them from Aroer till you come to Mennith, twenty cities, and as far as Abel, which is set with vineyards, with a very great slaughter: and the children of Ammon were humbled by the children of Israel.

34 And when Jephthe returned into Maspha, to his house, his only daughter met him with timbrels and with dances: for he had no other children.

35 And when he saw her, he rent his garments, and said: Alas! my daughter, thou hast deceived me, and thou thyself art deceived: for I have opened my mouth to the Lord, and I can do no other thing.

36 And she answered him: My father, if thou hast opened thy mouth to the Lord, do unto me whatsoever thou hast promised, since the victory hath been granted to thee, and revenge of thy enemies.

37 And she said to her father: Grant me only this, which I desire: Let me go, that I may go about the mountains for two months, and may bewail my virginity with my companions.

38 And he answered her: Go. And he sent her away for two months. And when she was gone with her comrades and companions, she mourned her virginity in the mountains.

39 And the two months being expired, she returned to her father, and he did to her as he had vowed, and she knew no man. From thence came a fashion in Israel, and a custom has been kept:

40 That, from year to year, the daughters of Israel assemble together, and lament the daughter of Jephthe, the Galaadite, for four days.

if it were not such as the law allowed to be offered in sacrifice. And therefore they think the daughter of Jephthe was not slain by her father, but only consecrated to perpetual virginity. But the common opinion followed by the generality of the holy Fathers and divines is, that she was offered as a holocaust, in consequence of her father's vow: and that Jephthe did not sin, at least not mortally, neither in making nor in keeping his vow, since he is in no ways blamed for it in Scripture; and was even inspired by God himself to make the vow, (as appears from ver. 29, 30,) in consequence of which he obtained the victory; and therefore he reasonably concluded that God, who is the master of life and death, was pleased, on this occasion, to dispense with his own law; and that it was the Divine will he should fulfil his vow. Ch.—S. Thomas (2. 2. q. 88. a. 2) acknowledges that Jephthe was inspired to make a vow, and his devotion herein is praised by the apostle, 1 Heb. xi. 32. But he afterwards followed his own spirit, in delivering himself without mature deliberation, and in executing what he had so ill engaged himself to perform. This decision seems to be the most agreeable to the Scripture, and to the holy Fathers. S. Jerom (in Jer. vii.) says, non sacrificium placet, sed animus offerentis. "If Jephthe offered his virgin daughter, it was not the sacrifice, but the good-will of the offerer, which deserves applause." Almost all the ancients seem to agree that the virgin was really burnt to death; and the versions have whosoever, which intimates that Jephthe intended to offer a human victim; particularly as he could not expect that a beast, fit for such a purpose, would come out of the doors of his house to meet him. C.—Yet many of the moderns, considering how much such things are forbidden by God, cannot persuade themselves that Jephthe should be so ignorant of the law, or that the priests and people of Israel should suffer him to transgress it. The original may be rendered as well, "whatsoever proceedeth . . . shall surely be the Lord's, and, (Prot.) or, I will offer it up for a holocaust." Pagnin., &c.—The version of Houbigant is very favourable to this opinion. See Hook's Principia.—The daughter of Jephthe, whom the false Philo calls Seila, was consecrated to the Lord, and shut up (H.) to lead a kind of monastic life. Although (H.) forced chastity be not a virtue, (C.) yet Jephthe had no reason to believe that his daughter would not enter into the spirit of his vow, and embrace that state for God's honour and service. We know that she gave her entire consent to whatever might be the nature of his vow; and surely she would be as ready to refrain from marriage, however desirable at that time, as to be burnt alive, which would effectually prevent her from becoming a mother, ver. 37. To require this of her was not, at least, more cruel in her father than to offer her in sacrifice. The Chaldee paraphrast says, "Jephthe did not consult Phinees, the priest, or he might have redeemed her."—We need not herein labour to defend the conduct of Jephthe. The Scripture does not canonize him on this account. If he did wrong, his repentance, and other heroic acts of virtue, might justly entitle him to be ranked among the saints of the old law. S. Aug. q. 49.—"Show me the man who has not fallen into sin . . . Jephthe returned victorious from the enemy, but in the midst of his triumph he was overcome by his own vow, so that he thought it proper to requite the piety of his daughter, who came out to meet him, by parricide. In the first place, what need was there of making a vow so hastily, to promise things uncertain, the event of which he knew not, instead of what was certain? Then why did he perform so sorrowful a vow to the Lord God, by shedding blood?" S. Amb. Apol. Dav. i. 4.—This saint adopts the common opinion, that Jephthe really immolated his daughter. But he is far from thinking that he was influenced by the Holy Spirit to make the vow, otherwise he would never represent it in such odious colours. If God had required the life of Jephthe's daughter, as he did formerly command Abraham to sacrifice his son, the obedience and faith of the former would have been equally applauded, as the good-will of the latter. But most of those who embrace the opinion that Jephthe sacrificed his daughter, are forced to excuse or to condemn the action. They suppose that he was permitted to fulfil his vow that others might be deterred from making similar promises, without the Divine authority. S. Chrys. hom. 14, ad Pop. Ant. S. Jer. c. Jov. 1. "I shall never," says S. Amb. (Off. iii. 12), "be induced to believe that Jephthe, the prince, did not promise incautiously that he would immolate whosoever should meet him, . . . since he repented of his vow," &c. We may observe that this great Doctor supposes that Jephthe promised to sacrifice the first thing that should meet him "at the door of his house," whence he seems to take whosoever in the same latitude as we have given to the Hebrew. He concludes, "I cannot accuse the man who was obliged to fulfil his vow," &c. W.—If Jephthe was under the immediate influence of the Holy Ghost in what he did, as Salien believes, and the context by no means disproves, we ought to admire the faith of this victorious judge, though he gave way to the feelings of human nature, ver. 35. We should praise his fidelity either in sacrificing or in consecrating his daughter to God's service in perpetual virginity: but if he followed his own spirit, we cannot think that he was so ill-informed or so barbarous as to murder his daughter, nor that she would consent to an impiety which so often disgraced the pagan superstition, though she might very well agree to embrace that better part, which her father and God himself, by a glorious victory, seemed to have marked out for her.—Peace, with victory.—Same. Heb. "it shall be the Lord's, and (or) I will make it ascend a whole burnt-offering." H.

VER. 33. Aroer, upon the Arnon, belonged to the tribe of Gad.—Mennith was four miles from Hesebon, towards Rabbath.—Abel was noted for its vineyards, twelve miles east of Gadara, so that Jephthe pursued the enemy, as they fled towards the north, for about sixty miles, and during the course of the war destroyed twenty of their cities, (C.) to punish them for their unjust ravages and usurpation of another's property. H.

VER. 34. Daughter. It seems the vow had been kept secret, as no precautions were taken to prevent the affliction of the general (C.); and, indeed, to have done so would have been injurious to God's providence, and childish in Jephthe, as he meant to offer whatever should come to meet him. H.—Dancees, as it was customary on such occasions. 1 Kings xviii. 6.

VER. 35. Alas. These indications of grief are the effects of nature. Salien.—S. Amb. considers them as the marks of repentance (ver. 31); and we might hence infer that the vow was not dictated by the Holy Spirit, who would have endued Jephthe with fortitude, as he did Abraham, though all may not possess the virtue of that great father of believers. Gen. xxii. 11.—Deceived. We mutually expected comfort from each other's presence: but we must both experience the reverse. Heb. may signify, "depressed, terrified," &c.—Thing. Heb. "I cannot recede." H.

VER. 37. Bewail my virginity. The bearing of children was much coveted under the Old Testament, when women might hope that from some child of theirs the Saviour of the world might one day spring. But under the New Testament virginity is preferred. 1 Cor. vii. 35.

VER. 38. Mountains. Such places were frequented in times of mourning. Jer. xxxi. 15; Isa. xv. 2. C.

VER. 39. Father. Her fortitude is commended by S. Ambrose (Off. iii. 12). H.—Whatever we may think of Jephthe, "we cannot sufficiently admire the dutiful behaviour and amiable simplicity of the daughter, who voluntarily submitted to her parent's will, and exhorted him to do as he had vowed."—No man. It is remarked by those who believe that she was not slain, that this observation would be very unnecessary in the contrary opinion. No mention of death is made. The virgin only deploras, with pious resignation, that she cannot be the happy mother of the Messiah.

VER. 40. Lament. Heb. Lothnuth. On this term the solution of this question greatly depends. H.—Kimchi translates, "to talk with," or "to comfort the daughter of Jephthe," as he supposes that the custom subsisted during her life, while she was shut up either near the tabernacle, or in her father's house. C.—Montanus renders, "to speak to." Junius and the Tigurin version, "to discourse with."—Thonon certainly is used for "he related," &c., Judg. v. 11, ithu narrentur, or rather narrent; and the construction here seems to require this sense. Amama.—If this be admitted, the bloody sacrifice is at an end, since the daughters of Israel could not meet to comfort the virgin every year, if she was immolated at the expiration of two months. But if we follow the translation of the Vulg., Sept., and Chal., as the Protestants have done, the lamentation might still be viewed in the same light, as tending to condole with the lady, rather than bewail her untimely death, (H.) as, for the latter purpose, it would not have been necessary for them to assemble together. Amama.—They might well enter into her sentiments, when she mourned her virginity, (ver. 38,) and strive to yield her some comfort in her secluded state, by coming in such numbers, and with the permission of the priests of God, continuing with her four days. H.—Some translate, "to publish," or sound forth the praises (C.) of this heroic virgin, which may be true, whether she was slain, or only consecrated to the Lord.

CHAP. XII.

The Ephraimites quarrel with Jephthe: forty-two thousand of them are slain: Abiesan, Ahialon, and Abdon, are judges.

BUT behold there arose a sedition in Ephraim. And passing towards the north, they said to Jephthe: When thou wentest to fight against the children of Ammon, why wouldst thou not call us, that we might go with thee? Therefore we will burn thy house.

2 And he answered them: I and my people were at great strife with the children of Ammon: and I called you to assist me, and you would not do it.

3 And when I saw this, I put my life in my own hands, and passed over against the children of Ammon, and the Lord delivered them into my hands. What have I deserved, that you should rise up to fight against me?

4 Then calling to him all the men of Galaad, he fought against Ephraim: and the men of Galaad defeated Ephraim, because he had said: Galaad is a fugitive of Ephraim, and dwelleth in the midst of Ephraim and Manasses.

5 And the Galaadites secured the fords of the Jordan, by which Ephraim was to return. And when any one of the number of Ephraim came thither in the flight, and said: I beseech you let me pass: the Galaadites said to him: Art thou not an Ephraimite? If he said: I am not:

6 They asked him: Say then, Shibboleth, which is interpreted, An ear of corn. But he answered, Sibboleth, not being able to express an ear of corn by the same letter. Then presently they took him and killed him in the very passage of the Jordan. And there fell at that time of Ephraim, two and forty thousand.

^a Supra, x. 6.—^b A. M. 2848.

H.—S. Epiphanius (Hær. 55 and 78) informs us, that "at Sichem an annual sacrifice was still offered up in the name of the virgin, and that she was revered as a goddess by the people in the vicinity."

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Sedition. Heb. "the men of Ephraim shouted together" to arms.—North. Sept. "Sephena." The Heb. may either signify the north, or some city. Mont.—It is probable that Ephraim went to quarrel with Jephthe at Abel, before he had returned to Maspha. C.—House. Heb. and Sept. add, "with or upon thee." M.

VER. 2. Strife, to defend our property.—I called. Drusus doubts whether he sent an express invitation to Ephraim, otherwise how durst they assert that they had not been summoned? C.—But we may rather give credit to Jephthe. The condition of the nation was a sufficient invitation, as they knew that the greatest preparations were making for war on both sides, and it was their duty to come forward. H.

VER. 3. Hands, exposed to all sorts of danger. I resolved to defend myself to the utmost, 1 Kings xix. 6; Eccles. x. 2. C.

VER. 4. Fugitive. Vile and timid, so that his brethren around him might destroy him at any time. M.—Galaad dwelt in the midst of the descendants of Joseph. H.—But Ephraim, in despite, had represented him as an outcast. Their envy deserved to be severely punished. C.—The same passion had nearly excited them to make war upon Gedeon. Chap. viii. M.

VER. 6. Letter. Prot. "Say now Shibboleth, and he said Sibboleth, for he could not frame to pronounce it right." The interpretation of the first word is added by S. Jerom. (H.) and lezotes also "a running water" (M.); whereas the Ephraimites pronounced a word which signifies "a burden," not being able to utter properly ss, or schin, for which they substituted s, or samec, sobloth. H.—In the same nation a variety of pronunciation frequently distinguishes the inhabitants of the different provinces. The Galileans were thus known from the rest of the Jews. Matt. xxvi. 23.

VER. 7. His city. Maspha, in the country of Galaad. Chap. xi. 34. C.—Heb. "in the cities;" whence the Rabbins have idly conjectured that parts of his body were interred in different cities out of respect, or that they rotted off, in punishment of the sacrifice of his daughter. Munster.

VER. 8. Bethlehem of Juda, where Booz also was born. C.—The Rabbins make him the same person with Abiesan. Serar. q. 5.—Maldonat (in Matt. ii. 1) believes that this judge was of a city in Zabulon. Jos. xix. 15. M.—In the sixth year of Abiesan the Philistines compelled the Israelites to pay tribute, (chap. xiii. 1,) and Samson was born A. 2860. Salien.

VER. 9. House, or family, though perhaps not under the same roof. M.

VER. 11. Ahialon. Eusebius calls him Adon, and his successor Labdon. C.

7 And Jephthe, the Galaadite, judged Israel six years: and he died, and was buried in his city of Galaad.

8 After him Abiesan of Bethlehem judged Israel:

9 He had thirty sons, and as many daughters, whom he sent abroad, and gave to husbands, and took wives for his sons, of the same number, bringing them into his house. And he judged Israel seven years:

10 And he died, and was buried in Bethlehem.

11 To him succeeded Ahialon, a Zabulonite: and he judged Israel ten years:

12 And he died, and was buried in Zabulon.

13 After him, Abdon, the son of Illel, a Pharathonite, judged Israel:

14 And he had forty sons, and of them thirty grandsons, mounted upon seventy ass-colts, and he judged Israel eight years:

15 And he died, and was buried in Pharathon, in the land of Ephraim, in the mount of Amalech.

CHAP. XIII.

The people fall again into idolatry, and are afflicted by the Philistines. An angel foretelleth the birth of Samson.

AND the children of Israel did evil again in the sight of the Lord: and he delivered them into the hands of the Philistines forty years.

2 Now there was a certain man of Saraa, and of the race of Dan, whose name was Manue, and his wife was barren.

3 And an angel of the Lord appeared to her, and said: Thou art barren and without children: but thou shalt conceive and bear a son.

4 Now therefore beware, and drink no wine nor strong drink, and eat not any unclean thing.

^c Gen. xvi. 11; 1 Kings i. 20; Luke i. 31.—^d Num. vi. 34.

—Salien says that he entirely omits the ten years of Ahialon's administration, though his name occurs in the body of the Chronicle, as being in the Heb. and not in the Sept. H.

VER. 13. Illel. Josephus reads "the son or servant of Helon," whom some have confounded with Ahialon, though contrary to the Hebrew. C.—That author supposes that Abdon reigned in peace. But it seems that he and the two others preceding him in the government of the people, were forced to purchase rest by paying tribute. Salien, A. C. 1193.

VER. 14. Colts. This was as great a distinction as to keep one's coach among us. Chap. x. 4. C.—This judge succeeded Ahialon, A. 2872, A. C. 1182, the year after Troy was taken.

VER. 15. Amalech. The situation of this mountain, as well as of the town of Pharathon, is unknown. Some have supposed that Amalec had formerly had possession of this country. Chap. v. 14. Sept. Alex. reads "Mount Lanak." But this place occurs no where else, and other copies agree with the Vulgate. H.—Amarias, who entered upon the pontificate the same year that Heli was born, died after a reign of thirty-nine years, A. 2879, and left the care of the people to Achitob and Samson for twenty years. Salien.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Years. It is not clear whence this sixth and longest servitude is to be dated. If it terminated at the death of Samson, when the Philistines lost their chief nobility, &c., we must allow that the Israelites began to be obliged to pay tribute in the sixth year of Abiesan. A. C. 1193. Salien. Chap. xii. 8. H.—Marshan dates from the third month after the death of Jair, to the third year of Samueel, during which period Illel governed in one part, and Jephthe, Abiesan, Ahialon, and Abdon in other provinces of Palestine. It is not very material which of these systems be adopted, as they do not contradict the text. C.—The servitude had scarcely commenced when God provided Samson a deliverer for his people. Salien, A. 2860. H.

VER. 2. Saraa, in the confines of Juda and of Dan, ten miles north of Eleutheropolis. Euseb.—Manue seems to have resided in the country, near this town, ver. 25. M.

VER. 3. Angel, in human form. Some Protestants pretend that he was "the Son of God," and yet (ver. 16) they say, "he sought not his own honour, but God's, whose messenger he was," (Bible, 1603,) in which they plainly contradict themselves, or else teach Arianism, as if the Son were not true God, and equal to his Father. W.—The title of God, (Jere,) which is given to this angel, (ver. 15, 21,) is no proof that he was the Supreme Being. Chap. vi. 11.

VER. 4. Thing. Exhortations to observe the law are not unnecessary. S. Aug. q. 50. Besides, the things which common people might take, such as wine, grapes, &c., were unclean for the Nazarites. C.—This was a preparation for the 5 Because thou shalt conceive, and bear a son, and no razor shall touch his head: for he shall be a Nazarite of God, from his infancy, and from his mother's womb, and he shall begin to deliver Israel from the hands of the Philistines.

6 And when she was come to her husband, she said to him: A man of God came to me, having the countenance of an angel, very awful. And when I asked him whence he came, and by what name he was called, he would not tell me:

7 But he answered thus: Behold thou shalt conceive and bear a son: beware thou drink no wine, nor strong drink, nor eat any unclean thing: for the child shall be a Nazarite of God from his infancy, from his mother's womb until the day of his death.

8 Then Manue prayed to the Lord, and said: I beseech thee, O Lord, that the man of God, whom thou didst send, may come again, and teach us what we ought to do concerning the child, that shall be born.

9 And the Lord heard the prayer of Manue, and the angel of the Lord appeared again to his wife, as she was sitting in the field. But Manue her husband was not with her. And when she saw the angel,

10 She made haste, and ran to her husband: and told him, saying: Behold the man hath appeared to me, whom I saw before.

11 He rose up, and followed his wife: and coming to the man, said to him: Art thou he that spoke to the woman? And he answered: I am.

12 And Manue said to him: When thy word shall come to pass, what wilt thou that the child should do? or from what shall he keep himself?

13 And the angel of the Lord said to Manue: From all the things I have spoken of to thy wife, let her refrain herself:

14 And let her eat nothing that cometh of the vine, neither let her drink wine or strong drink, nor eat any unclean thing: and whatsoever I have commanded her, let her fulfil and observe.

15 And Manue said to the angel of the Lord: I beseech thee to consent to my request, and let us dress a kid for thee.

16 And the angel answered him: If thou press me, I will not eat of thy bread: but if thou wilt offer a holocaust, offer it to the Lord. And Manue knew not it was the angel of the Lord.

17 And he said to him: What is thy name, that, if thy word shall come to pass, we may honour thee?

18 And he answered him: "Why askest thou my name, which is wonderful?"

19 Then Manue took a kid of the flocks, and the libations, and put them upon a rock, offering to the Lord, who doth wonderful things: and he and his wife looked on.

20 And when the flame from the altar went up towards heaven, the angel of the Lord ascended also in the flame. And when Manue and his wife saw this, they fell flat on the ground;

21 And the angel of the Lord appeared to them no more. And forthwith Manue understood that it was an angel of the Lord, 22 And he said to his wife: We shall certainly die, because we have seen God.

23 And his wife answered him: If the Lord had a mind to kill us, he would not have received a holocaust and libations at our hands; neither would he have showed us all these things, nor have told us the things that are to come.

24 And she bore a son, and called his name Samson. And the child grew, and the Lord blessed him.

25 And the Spirit of the Lord began to be with him in the camp of Dan, between Sarai and Eshtaul.

CHAP. XIV.

Samson desireth a wife of the Philistines. He killeth a lion: in whose mouth he afterwards findeth honey. His marriage feast and riddle, which is discovered by his wife. He killeth and strippeth thirty Philistines. His wife taketh another man.

THEN Samson went down to Thamnatha, and seeing there a woman of the daughters of the Philistines,

2 He came up, and told his father and his mother,

* A. M. 2867, A. C. 1137.

child who should abstain from all unclean things, not only for a time, (Num. vi.) but during his whole life, that he might be a more perfect figure of Christ. W.

VER. 5. Begin. The power of the Philistines was greatly broken by Samson. Chap. xvi. 13. M.—But Samuel, Saul, and David had still to contend with them. 1 Kings vii. 13. II.

VER. 6. And when, &c. Heb., Chal., Syr., Arab., and the Vatican Sept., read a negation, "And I did not ask him whence he came; neither did he tell me his name." The other copies of the Sept., S. Aug., (q. 51,) &c., agree with the Vulg., though S. Aug. suspected that the negation was wanting. C.

VER. 12. Himself. Heb. and Sept. "What shall be the judgment (education, C.) of the boy, and what his works? (or Prot.) how shall we do unto him?" II.

VER. 13. Let her refrain, &c. By the Latin text it is not clear whether this abstinence was prescribed to the mother or to the child: but the Heb. (in which the verbs relating thereto are of the feminine gender) determineth it to the mother. But then the child also was to refrain from the like things, because he was to be from his infancy a Nazarite of God, (ver. 5,) that is, one set aside in a particular manner, and consecrated to God; now the Nazarites, by the law, were to abstain from all these things.

VER. 15. Dress. Heb. and Sept. "let us make." Vulg. faciamus, is used either for a common feast or for a sacrifice. Exod. xxix. 36. Manue did not yet know who the angel was. He only designed to give him something to eat. A kid was then esteemed the most delicious food, and physicians esteem it very wholesome. C.

VER. 17. Honour thee with a suitable reward. 1 Tim. v. 17.

VER. 18. Wonderful. Heb. Plai. Some have concluded that this was the proper name of the angel, as it is one of the titles of the Messias. Isa. ix. 6. But it is more probable that the angel did not reveal his name. Chal. Others divide this sentence thus, "and he (the angel, or rather God) was wonderful." He was the author of all miracles, to whom sacrifice was immediately offered. C.

VER. 19. On. Manue was convinced that the person who had authorized him to offer sacrifice had power to dispense with him. W.—The angel "did wonderful things," as the Heb. may be explained, causing a flame to proceed from the rock and to consume the victim, as Josephus assures us, (C.) and as the angel who had appeared to Gedeon had done. Chap. vi. 21. M.

VER. 22. Seen God: not in his own person, but in the person of his messenger. The Israelites, in those days, imagined they should die if they saw an angel, taking occasion perhaps from those words spoken by the Lord to Moses, (Exod. xxxiii. 20,) No man shall see me and live. But the event demonstrated that it was but a groundless imagination. Ch.—Alein is applied to angels and men, as well as to God. C.

VER. 23. Come. The wife of Manue allays his fears with great prudence, as she observes that God had just promised them a son. H.

VER. 24. Samson signifies, "His sun, or joy;" or Syr. "service." C.—"His, or a little sun." M.—Blessed him with graces and strength suitable for his office. C.

VER. 25. To be. Sept. "to walk along." Jonathan, "to sanctify." Samson began to manifest an eager desire to deliver his brethren. C.—Dan, as it was called from those 600 men who encamped here, when they were going to take Laish. Chap. xviii. 12. H.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Thamnatha, in the confines of the tribes of Juda and Gad, and of the Philistines, who often took it from the latter. It is called Thamna, Gen. xxxviii. 12, (Bonfrere,) and lies near Lidla. Euseb saying: I saw a woman in Thamnatha of the daughters of the Philistines: I beseech you, take her for me to wife.

3 And his father and mother said to him: Is there no woman among the daughters of thy brethren, or among all my people, that thou wilt take a wife of the Philistines, who are uncircumcised? And Samson said to his father: Take this woman for me; for she hath pleased my eyes.

4 Now his parents knew not that the thing was done by the Lord, and that he sought an occasion against the Philistines: for at that time the Philistines had dominion over Israel.

5 Then Samson went down with his father and mother to Thamnatha. And when they were come to the vineyards of the town, behold a young lion met him, raging and roaring.

6 And the Spirit of the Lord came upon Samson, and he tore the lion as he would have torn a kid in pieces, having nothing at all in his hand: and he would not tell this to his father and mother.

7 And he went down, and spoke to the woman that had pleased his eyes.

8 And after some days, returning to take her, he went aside to see the carcass of the lion, and behold there was a swarm of bees in the mouth of the lion, and a honeycomb.

9 And when he had taken it in his hands, he went on eating: and coming to his father and mother, he gave them of it, and they ate: but he would not tell them that he had taken the honey from the body of the lion.

10 So his father went down to the woman, and made a feast for his son Samson: for so the young men used to do.

11 And when the citizens of that place saw him, they brought him thirty companions to be with him.

12 And Samson said to them: I will propose to you a riddle, which if you declare unto me within the seven days of the feast, I will give you thirty shirts, and as many coats:

13 But if you shall not be able to declare it, you shall give me thirty shirts and the same number of coats. They answered him: Put forth the riddle, that we may hear it.

14 And he said to them: Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness. And they could not for three days expound the riddle.

15 And when the seventh day came, they said to the wife of Samson: Soothe thy husband, and persuade him to tell thee what the riddle meaneth. But if thou wilt not do it, we will burn thee, and thy father's house. Have you called us to the wedding on purpose to strip us?

16 So she wept before Samson and complained, saying: Thou hatest me, and dost not love me: therefore thou wilt not expound to me the riddle, which thou hast proposed to the sons of my people. But he answered: I would not tell it to my father and mother: and how can I tell it to thee.

17 So she wept before him the seven days of the feast: and, at length, on the seventh day, as she was troublesome to him, he expounded it. And she immediately told her countrymen.

18 And they, on the seventh day before the sun went down, said to him: What is sweeter than honey? and what is stronger than a lion? And he said to them: If you had not ploughed with my heifer, you had not found out my riddle.

19 And the Spirit of the Lord came upon him, and

VER. 3. Eyes. He probably informed his parents (H.) that he was inspired by the Lord, ver. 4. W.—The Jews say that he had first converted this woman; and interpreters generally excuse his conduct. C.—If the conversion of this woman were well attested, there would be no difficulty about his marrying her, as Salmon did Rahab. S. Matt. i. 5. See Lyran, A. Lapide, &c. H.—Heb. "She is right in my eyes." His parents were at length convinced that he was directed by God. T.

VER. 4. He sought. This may be understood either of the Lord, or rather of Samson. C.—Sept. "because he himself sought to retaliate upon the Philistines." Heb. "that it was of the Lord that, or because he sought an occasion to take," &c. H.

VER. 5. Young lion, not quite so strong as an old one, but in its vigour. Rabbin. C.—Met him. Heb. "roared against him." H.—His parents were at some distance. M.

VER. 6. Spirit, increasing his courage and strength. M.—This shows that the strength of Samson was miraculous, attached to the keeping of his hair, and the observance of the duties of the Nazarites. C. Chap. xvi. 19.—Mother. The modesty which he displays is more wonderful than the feat of valour. H.—Brave men are never boasters. M.

VER. 7. Spoke. Sept. "they spoke;" both Samson and his parents (M.) asked the young woman in marriage, Gen. xxiv. 57; Cant. vii. 8. C.—That had. Prot. "and she pleased Samson well," as at first, ver. 3. H.

VER. 8. A honeycomb. There was a very remarkable providence in this particular of the history of Samson. From which also in the mystical sense we may learn what spiritual sweetness and nourishment our souls will acquire from slaying the lions of our passions and vices. Ch.—Samson waited some time before he went to celebrate his marriage. The Rabbin say a full year was the usual term after the espousals (Est. ii. 12); and many have translated "after a year." Chal., Arab., &c. During this space the flesh of the lion would be consumed, and bees might make honey in its skeleton. C.

VER. 10. Father. Before the nuptials, the young man was not accustomed to go to the house of his future bride. Montanus.—Samson's mother also accompanied him. Abul.—Do. Sept. "Samson made there a feast for seven days, because young men do so." H.

VER. 11. With him. Some imagine that these were placed to watch his motions. But he had surely invited them, ver. 15. During the time that the nuptials were celebrated these men (who are called the friends of the bridegroom, Matt. ix. 15) are said to have been exempted from all public charges. Mont. C.

VER. 12. Riddle. Such obscure and ingenious questions were much liked in the East, 3 Kings x. 1. The Egyptians concealed the mysteries of their religion, and Pythagoras his choicest maxims, under them. S. Clem. Strom. 5. The Greeks proposed these γρίφοις at feasts, determining some reward or punishment to those who succeeded or failed to explain them.—Shirts. Heb. sodinim, "sindons," the garment which was worn next the skin. Mark xiv. 51. It was used also by women, (Isa. iii. 23,) and is probably the same which is called a tunic. C.—Coats. Heb. "change of garments." Some understand new and splendid garments. But Samson complied with his promise, by giving such as he found upon the thirty men whom he slew, ver. 19. H.—The custom of making presents of garments has long prevailed in the East. The Turkish emperor still receives and makes such presents to ambassadors. C.—Their long robes may easily be made to fit any person. H.

VER. 14. Sweetness. The explication of the ancient riddles frequently depended on the knowledge of something that had taken place. In a spiritual sense, the Philistines might be considered as those strong ones who had domineered over Israel, but would shortly afford them the spoils of a glorious victory. Jesus rises triumphant from the grave, and, after he has been persecuted and torn in pieces, becomes the food of Christians. S. Aug., &c. C.

VER. 15. Seventh day of the week, (Salien,) which was the fourth of the feast; and the Syr., Arab., and some editions of the Sept. read, "the fourth." The young men tried their skill for three days; when, despairing of success, they solicited Samson's wife to draw the secret from him. She tried; but the seventh day being come, or at hand, (M.) the men began to threaten her, so that she became more importunate, and obtained her request. She had been weeping during a great part of the seven days, (ver. 17, C.) or perhaps she had begun to tease him from the beginning. M.—Strip us. Sept. "to impoverish us." Homer (Odys. Z.) insinuates that it was customary for the bride to furnish her attendants with white linen garments. These companions of Samson fear that they are going to be losers by the honour which they do him. C.—They compel his wife by threats to betray his secret, and still destroy her afterwards: thus persecutors frequently treat those who comply with their demands, and deny the faith. W.

VER. 18. Down, at which time the day ended among the Jews.—Heifer. This proverbial expression means that another's property had been used against himself. H.

VER. 19. Riddle. Samson must no longer be considered as a private man. He was authorized by the Spirit of the Lord thus to punish the oppressors of Israel. C.—Though these thirty men had done him no injury in person, (H.) they had sinned against God, and deserved to die. Salien.—He slew them publicly in the city, (M.) though others believe that he did it in the neighbouring country as it does not appear that the people knew of their death. C.

he went down to Ascalon, and slew there thirty men, whose garments he took away, and gave to them that had declared the riddle. And being exceeding angry, he went up to his father's house:

20 But his wife took one of his friends and bridal companions for her husband.

CHAP. XV.

Samson is denied his wife: he burns the corn of the Philistines, and kills many of them.

AND ^a while after, when the days of the wheat harvest were at hand, Samson came, meaning to visit his wife, and he brought her a kid of the flock. And when he would have gone into her chamber, as usual, her father would not suffer him, saying:

2 I thought thou hadst hated her, and therefore I gave her to thy friend: but she hath a sister, who is younger and fairer than she, take her to wife instead of her.

3 And Samson answered him: From this day I shall be blameless in what I do against the Philistines: for I will do you evils.

4 And he went and caught three hundred foxes, and coupled them tail to tail, and fastened torches between the tails:

5 And setting them on fire he let the foxes go, that they might run about hither and thither. And they presently went into the standing corn of the Philistines. Which being set on fire, both the corn that was already carried together, and that which was yet standing, was all burnt, insomuch that the flame consumed also the vineyards and the oliveyards.

6 Then the Philistines said: Who hath done this thing? And it was answered: Samson, the son-in-law of the Thamnathite, because he took away his wife, and gave her to another, hath done these things. And the Philistines went up and burnt both the woman and her father.

7 But Samson said to them: Although you have done this, yet will I be revenged of you, and then I will be quiet.

• A. M. 2868, A. C. 1136.

VER. 20. Companions, the chief friend of the bridegroom, (John iii. 29,) the paronymph. S. Amb. C.—Prot. "But Samson's wife was given to his companion, whom he had used as his friend." It seems her father had supposed, from Samson's keeping away for a long time, that he had abandoned her. H.—But, though he offered some sort of recompence, (M.) he justly fell a victim to the people's rage, who abhorred adultery, (C.) and were irritated at the persecution which he had brought upon them. Chap. xv. 2—6. H.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. After. The same term is used in the original as chap. xiv. 8, which may be rendered "a year after," as it is not probable that the wife of Samson should be married to another, nor that he should lay aside his resentment, much sooner. C.

VER. 3. Evils. This is a declaration of war, made by Samson in person, against a whole nation. H.—He does not wish to engage his countrymen in the quarrel, that they may not be more oppressed. God chose that he should weaken the Philistines by degrees. They had been apprized of the injustice done to Samson, and did not strive to hinder it, so that they all deserved to suffer. Grot. E. C.

VER. 4. Foxes. Being judge of the people, he might have many to assist him to catch with nets or otherwise a number of these animals; of which there were great numbers in that country, (Ch.) as we may gather from Cant. ii. 15; Lam. v. 15. M.—Hence many places received the name of Sual. Jos. xv. 28, and xix. 42.—Torches. Heb. and Sept. "a torch or firebrand," (H.) made of resinous wood, such as the pine, olive, &c., which easily catch fire, and are extinguished with difficulty. C.

VER. 6. Father. Thus they met with the fate which the woman had endeavoured to avoid, by an infidelity to her husband. Salien.—The princes of the Philistines acknowledged the wrong which had been done to Samson, and thus testify their abhorrence of adultery. C.—Some Heb. MSS. confirm the Sept., Ar., and Syr. versions; and instead of "her father with her," read, "and her father's house," (Kennicott,) or all his family.

VER. 7. Of you. He intimates that they should answer for the injustices which they ought to have prevented, or punished sooner. H.—Heb. "If you had done like this," and slain the father and daughter, I should be quiet. D.

8 And he made a great slaughter of them, so that in astonishment they laid the calf of the leg upon the thigh. And going down he dwelt in a cavern of the rock Etam.

9 Then the Philistines going up into the land of Juda, camped in the place which afterwards was called Lechi, that is, the Jaw-bone, where their army was spread abroad.

10 And the men of the tribe of Juda said to them. Why are you come up against us? They answered: We are come to bind Samson, and to pay him for what he hath done against us.

11 Wherefore three thousand men of Juda went down to the cave of the rock Etam, and said to Samson: Knowest thou not that the Philistines rule over us? Why wouldst thou do thus? And he said to them: As they did to me, so have I done to them.

12 And they said to him: We are come to bind thee, and to deliver thee into the hands of the Philistines. And Samson said to them: Swear to me, and promise me that you will not kill me.

13 They said: We will not kill thee: but we will deliver thee up bound. And they bound him with two new cords, and brought him from the rock Etam.

14 Now when he was come to the place of the Jaw-bone, and the Philistines shouting went to meet him, the Spirit of the Lord came strongly upon him: and as flax is wont to be consumed at the approach of fire, so the bands with which he was bound were broken and loosed.

15 And finding a jaw-bone, even the jaw-bone of an ass, which lay there, catching it up, he slew therewith a thousand men.

16 And he said: With the jaw-bone of an ass, with the jaw of the colt of asses, I have destroyed them, and have slain a thousand men.

17 And when he had ended these words, singing, he threw the jaw-bone out of his hand, and called the name of that place Ramathlechi, which is interpreted the lifting up of the jaw-bone.

VER. 8. Thigh. Striking this part is often mentioned as a mark of consternation. Jer. xxxi. 19. M.—Heb. "and he smote them thigh and leg, with a great slaughter." H.—Vatable supposes this means an entire destruction. Chaldee, "he smote both horse and foot." He rendered them incapable of fleeing, or of making resistance. Nah. ii. 5. C.—Cavern. Heb. sāip, signifies "the top, branch," &c. The rock might be covered with wood, (C.) and was situated in the confines of the tribes of Simeon, Juda, and Dan. 1 Par. iv. 32. M.

VER. 9. Spread. Heb. "encamped in Juda, and spread themselves in Lechi." H.

VER. 12. Kill me, in a treacherous manner. He was not afraid of them. C.

VER. 13. Cords. Heb. ānuth, Sept. καλωδιος, denote strong ropes or cables. M.—Etam is not in Heb. or the Sept. H.

VER. 14. Bone. Heb. "Lechi," as it was called after the slaughter made by Samson, ver. 15. It is about twenty miles to the east of Ascalon. C.—Approach: lit. "the smell." This expression is often used to denote burning. Sept. Chap. xvi. 9; Dan. iii. 94.

VER. 16. Asses. He insists on this particular, as such an unusual weapon rendered his victory more astonishing, and he would not leave any room for doubt. Heb. is variously translated, "with the jaw-bone of an ass, I have made a heap, yea, two heaps; with the jaw-bone of an ass I have defeated a thousand men." Syr., &c. Castalion and Bonfrere defend the Vulg. The Sept. have, "with the jaw-bone of an ass I have entirely taken them off, (H. defeating them) with," &c. C.—This verse formed the chorus of Samson's song. H.—He did not take the glory to himself, as Josephus (v. 10) would insinuate, but attributed the victory to God, ver. 18. Salien, A. C. 1172. This miracle of strength can no more be accounted for by reason than many others. W.

VER. 17. Which is, &c. This is added by the Vulg., being the interpretation of the Sept. Αναρρηος (C.); though it also signify, "the slaughter." S. Amb. ep. 19. H.—The Syr. and Arab. have read domoth, "the blood," instead of romoth Leī, "the lifting up;" or as others would have it, "the throwing down of the jaw-bone." C.—Samson had snatched it from the ground, slew the thousand Philistines, and left it as a monument of his victory. H.

18 And being very thirsty, he cried to the Lord, and said: Thou hast given this very great deliverance and victory into the hand of thy servant: and behold I die for thirst, and shall fall into the hands of the uncircumcised.

19 Then the Lord opened a great tooth in the jaw of the ass, and waters issued out of it. And when he had drunk them, he refreshed his spirit, and recovered his strength. Therefore the name of that place was called The Spring of him that invoked from the jaw-bone, until this present day.

CHAP. XVI.

Samson is deluded by Dalila: and falls into the hands of the Philistines. His death.

HE^b went also into Gaza, and saw there a woman, a harlot, and went in unto her.

2 And when the Philistines had heard this, and it was noised about among them, that Samson was come into the city, they surrounded him, setting guards at the gate of the city, and watching there all the night in silence, that in the morning they might kill him as he went out.

3 But Samson slept till midnight, and then rising, he took both the doors of the gate, with the post thereof and the bolt, and laying them on his shoulders, carried them up to the top of the hill, which looketh towards Hebron.

4 After this he loved a woman, who dwelt in the valley of Sorec, and she was called Dalila.

5 And the princes of the Philistines came to her, and said: Deceive him, and learn of him wherein his great strength lieth, and how we may be able to overcome him, to bind and afflict him: which if thou shalt do, we will give thee every one of us eleven hundred pieces of silver.

6 And Dalila said to Samson: Tell me, I beseech thee,

^a Infra, xvi. 31.—^b A. M. circiter 2880.

VER. 18. Thirsty. S. Ambrose (ep. 19 or 70) follows Josephus, (M.) in supposing that the arrogance of Samson, in attributing the victory to his own strength, was thus punished. But others are more favourable to the hero, (C.) and suppose that his thirst was occasioned by the extraordinary fatigue. He sufficiently testifies that he had received all from God, (M.) and he is immediately favoured with another miracle. H.—God is able to grant victory by the most feeble instruments, and he is never wanting when his presence is requisite. S. Aug. Doct. iv. 15. T.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. A harlot, or an innkeeper; for the Heb. word signifies either. Ch.—We have already noticed the ambiguity of the word zune, which occurs Jos. ii. 1, and is applied to Rahab. This woman seems to have been of the same profession. Gaza was one of the strongest towns of the Philistines, on the south of the country.

VER. 2. Setting. Heb. "they laid wait for him all night in the gate, . . . and were quiet all night, saying, In the morning, when it is day, we shall kill him." They hoped to seize him unawares, (H.) as they were afraid to rouse this lion, and hence probably refrained from setting fire to the house (C.); though they might be deterred from doing this by the fear of the conflagration spreading to other parts of the city, (H.) and by an over-ruling Providence. Salien.

VER. 3. Bolt, (será,) which many translate, "lock." H.—The doors of the Hebrews were fastened with bars tied in a curious manner, so as to require a sort of a key, and not to be opened but on the inside. Hebron was above thirty miles distant: but travellers mention a small hill, where they say the doors were left in the vicinity of Gaza (C.); and the text does not assert that Samson carried them as far as Hebron. H.—He went out by that gate, contrary to the expectations of the Philistines, who supposed that he would go towards Thamnatha. If any saw him, none durst encounter the hero, as they had not yet forgotten the thousand slain with the jaw-bone. Salien. W.

VER. 4. After this. The lamentable fall of Samson took place in the last year of his administration, when Heli, of the house of Thamar, succeeded Achitob I. in the high priesthood. A. C. 1154. Salien.—Sorec was not far from Saraa, where Samson was born. It probably belonged to the Philistines, as Dalila is generally supposed to have been of that nation, and most people believe, a harlot. C.—Dalila. Some are of opinion she was married to Samson; others, that she was his harlot. If the latter opinion be true, we cannot wonder that, in punish-wherein thy greatest strength lieth, and what it is, where-with if thou wert bound, thou couldst not break loose.

7 And Samson answered her: If I shall be bound with seven cords, made of sinews not yet dry, but still moist, I shall be weak like other men.

8 And the princes of the Philistines brought unto her seven cords, such as he spoke of, with which she bound him;

9 Men lying privately in wait with her, and in the chamber, expecting the event of the thing, and she cried out to him: The Philistines are upon thee, Samson. And he broke the bands, as a man would break a thread of tow, when it smelleth the fire: so it was not known wherein his strength lay.

10 And Dalila said to him: Behold thou hast mocked me, and hast told me a false thing: but now at least tell me wherewith thou mayest be bound.

11 And he answered her: If I shall be bound with new ropes, that were never in work, I shall be weak and like other men.

12 Dalila bound him again with these, and cried out: The Philistines are upon thee, Samson, there being an ambush prepared for him in the chamber. But he broke the bands like threads of webs.

13 And Dalila said to him again: How long dost thou deceive me, and tell me lies? Show me wherewith thou mayest be bound. And Samson answered her: if thou plattest the seven locks of my head with a lace, and tying them round about a nail, fastenest it in the ground, I shall be weak.

14 And when Dalila had done this, she said to him: The Philistines are upon thee, Samson. And awaking out of his sleep, he drew out the nail with the hairs and the lace.

ment of his lust, the Lord delivered him up by her means into the hands of his enemies. However, if he was guilty, it is not to be doubted, but that under his afflictions he heartily repented and returned to God, and so obtained forgiveness of his sins. Ch.

VER. 7. Her, in jest. H.—Sinews; such were frequently used for strength. H.—Moist. Heb. "seven bands, green and moist;" as if he were speaking of willow twigs or bands made of the rind of trees, &c. But we need not abandon the Sept. and Vulg. to follow the moderns in this place, as ithor unquestionably means cords of sinews, and the epithet, green, is applied to the eyes of Moses, (Deut. xxiv. 7,) to denote their shining vigour and strength; so here it may signify that the sinews were to be fresh and in full perfection. C.

VER. 9. Fire. Prot. "and he brake the withs, as a thread of tow is broken when it toucheth the fire." H.—Thus he played with her, never suspecting that the enemy was concealed so near. C.

VER. 13. Lace, (licio,) "the woof about the beam," &c. Heb. "the web, (14) and she fastened it," &c. The original text is here imperfect. H.—The Sept. have preserved eighteen words, which have been omitted in Heb. "the web, [and fasten them with a pin unto the wall, then shall I be weak, and be as another man. (14) And it came to pass, when he slept, that Dalila took seven locks of his head, and wove them with a web,] and fastened them with a pin [unto the wall,] and said," &c. Kennicott, Diss. 2.—The Vulg. expresses the whole idea in fewer words: but the Heb. leaves the proposal of Samson imperfect. It is observable that Grabe's edition of the Alex. Sept. has no mark of any thing being redundant; whence we might suppose, that in the days of Origen, (whose marks he endeavours to exhibit,) the Hebrew agreed with the Greek version: but the 14th verse is rather different from the Vatican copy, which has been given above.—"And Dalila (so the Sept. always style her) lulled him asleep (εκοιμισεν, as ver. 19, H.); and she wove the seven curls of his head with the woof, (εκρασεως), and she fastened them with the pins of wood into the wall," &c. H.—The Heb. text is liable to many difficulties, says Calmet: "If thou shalt make a tissue of seven locks of my head with the veil, which thou weavest, and shalt fasten it to a nail, I shall become weak as another man; or, If thou weave together my hair and thy thread," &c. The ancients were accustomed to weave standing. Samson was probably lying on the ground while Dalila was acting this farce. C.

15 And Dalila said to him: How dost thou say thou lovest me, when thy mind is not with me? Thou hast told me lies these three times, and wouldst not tell me wherein thy greatest strength lieth.

16 And when she pressed him much, and continually hung upon him for many days, giving him no time to rest, his soul fainted away, and was wearied even unto death.

17 Then opening the truth of the thing, he said to her: The razor hath never come upon my head, for I am a Nazarite, that is to say, consecrated to God from my mother's womb: If my head be shaven, my strength shall depart from me, and I shall become weak, and shall be like other men.

18 Then seeing that he had discovered to her all his mind, she sent to the princes of the Philistines, saying: Come up this once more, for now he hath opened his heart to me. And they went up, taking with them the money which they had promised.

19 But she made him sleep upon her knees, and lay his head in her bosom. And she called a barber and shaved his seven locks, and began to drive him away, and thrust him from her: for immediately his strength departed from him.

20 And she said: The Philistines are upon thee, Samson. And awaking from sleep, he said in his mind: I will go out as I did before, and shake myself, not knowing that the Lord was departed from him.

21 Then the Philistines seized upon him, and forthwith pulled out his eyes, and led him bound in chains to Gaza, and shutting him up in prison made him grind.

22 And now his hair began to grow again,

23 And the princes of the Philistines assembled together, to offer great sacrifices to Dagon their god, and to make merry, saying: Our god hath delivered our enemy Samson into our hands.

24 And the people also seeing this, praised their god, and said the same: Our god hath delivered our adversary into our hands, him that destroyed our country, and killed very many.

25 And rejoicing in their feasts, when they had now taken their good cheer, they commanded that Samson should be called, and should play before them. And being brought out of prison, he played before them; and they made him stand between two pillars.

26 And he said to the lad that guided his steps: Suffer me to touch the pillars which support the whole house, and let me lean upon them, and rest a little.

27 Now the house was full of men and women, and all the princes of the Philistines were there. Moreover about three thousand persons of both sexes, from the roof and the higher part of the house, were beholding Samson's play.

28 But he called upon the Lord, saying: O Lord God, remember me, and restore to me now my former strength. O my God, that I may revenge myself on my enemies, and for the loss of my two eyes I may take one revenge.

29 And laying hold on both the pillars on which the

VER. 16. Death. Heb. "and pressed him so, that his soul was straitened unto death." It would be well if Christians would always make as stout a resistance against manifest temptations to sin, as Samson did on this occasion, when he might consider the revealing of the truth rather as an indiscretion than as a crime. It is difficult to determine in what precisely the fault consisted, which was followed by so severe a punishment. Perhaps he may have been placed as a pattern of patience, like holy Job, without incurring the Divine displeasure. Yet most people suppose that he fell by the love of women, and by disclosing the secret of his strength. But where do we read that he had received a precept from God not to mention it even to his wife? For in this light SS. Ephrem and Chrys., Sulp. Severus, Pererius, and others represent Dalila, which removes the greatest objection to his character. We have seen (ver. 1) that the harlot of Gaza might be only an innkeeper; and the first object of his love was proposed to him by the Holy Spirit. Chap. xiv. 4. But even allowing that Dalila was a harlot, though the Scripture does not assert it, what harm was there in Samson's endeavouring to reclaim her, and to make her his wife, as Osee (i. 2) was commanded to do? Without the strongest proofs, it seems unjust to pass sentence of condemnation upon a great character, the number of the perfect being already too small.

VER. 17. Thing. Heb. and Sept. "He told her all his heart."—That is to say, consecrated, is added by the Vulg. H.—Men. Was the hair the physical, or only the moral, cause of his wonderful strength? It is generally believed that it was only a moral, cause, or a token appointed by God, that as long as Samson retained his hair he should be endued with such force. C.

VER. 18. To me. Heb. "to her." Le instead of li, perhaps in all the printed editions except the Complutensian, which has corrected the mistake, and is authorized by some MSS. Kennicott.

VER. 19. Knees, by some saporiferous draught, as on the other occasions. M.—Barber. He only produced the razor, or rather a pair of scissors, such as were used to shear sheep. Barbers were unknown at Rome for 454 years; and the ancient Greeks looked with indignation upon those who introduced the custom of shaving among them. Plin. vii. 59. The Hebrews did not cut all their beard, and generally let the hair of their head grow long. Samson wore his curled, which is still the fashion among some people.—And began. Sept. "he began to be humbled, (C.) or rendered abject, and his strength," &c. Heb. "she began to render him contemptible." H.

VER. 20. Myself. This might insinuate that he was bound, though it may only mean that he will extricate himself from the hands of the Philistines. C.—We read of no bands on this occasion. But the loss of the sign of his being a Nazarite was Samson's greatest misfortune, and rendered him less formidable than if he had been bound with chains of adamant.

VER. 21. Chains. Heb. and Sept. add, "of brass," which were more ancient than those of iron or of steel. Brass was generally used instead of the latter, for knives, &c. C.—Gaza, the place where he had lately given such an instance of strength, ver. 3. H.—Grind. Before the invention of wind or of water-mills, the ancients forced their meanest slaves to grind with a hand-mill, consisting of two large stones

VER. 22. Again. Heb. adds, "as when he was slaven." H.—He was in prison three or four months. M.—As his hair grew his strength returned, because he entered into himself and did penance, so that he was restored to the rank and privileges of a Nazarite. C. M.

VER. 23. Dagon. Probably the deere, whom Diodorus (3) represents with the head of a woman, and the rest of the body like a fish, the chief object of adoration at Asealon. C.—Dagon may signify "wheat;" and hence Eusebius (Præp. 1) styles him "the ploughing Jupiter," or "a fish."—Hands. For this purpose they were offering sacrifices of thanksgiving, (M.) which they did not only when they first took Samson, but probably on all their great festivals, till the hero's death. This could not but excite the indignation and zeal of this great judge, and God resented the indignity offered to himself. They cursed Samson, (H.) as the Sicheemites had done Abimelec on a similar occasion. Chap. ix. 27. M.

VER. 25. Played. Dancing in a ridiculous manner, (Montanus,) running against the walls, or falling down, so as to make the people laugh, (Lyran,) or rather, (H.) Serarius gathers from the Sept. that "they buffeted him," and made a sport of him. M.—It is not at all probable that Samson would act the ape before the Philistines; but in attempting to keep off the rabble with many a fruitless blow, against his will he might make them merry. C.—He appeared before them in the garb of a slave, covered with the dust of the mill, (Salien,) like our Saviour in the fool's garment. H.—Two pillars. The temples of Hercules, at Tyre and in Africa, had the same number. Porphy. Abst. 2.—The temple of Dagon was supported on wooden pillars standing near each other. People might see down from the roof. Serar.—The roofs of the Philistine temples were flat, and galleries all round them, so that an immense crowd might be collected (M.) to gaze on this terror of their country, now their prey. They had forgotten how he had formerly carried off their gates, or they concluded that his amazing strength was gone for ever. H.

VER. 27. Play. It is not clear from the text whether the 3000 were distinct from those who were below. It seems this is the number of all the slain, (C.) as Josephus asserts. But the Prot. insert, "the lords of the Philistines were there: and there were upon the roof," &c., which shows that they understand it in the same sense as the Vulg. and the Sept., which distinguish these outside spectators from those who filled the house, and were in company with the princes. H.

VER. 28. Revenge myself. This desire of revenge was out of zeal for justice against the enemies of God and his people; and not out of private rancour and malice of heart. Ch.—He was judge of his people, and concerned for their wrongs. God, by a miracle, testified that he approved of his sentiments. C.—Sept. insinuate that the cry of Samson was accompanied with tears (eklausè). It was the cry of the heart, which is most eloquent with God. Heb. and Sept. "strengthen me yet this once, O God, and I will repay," &c. H.

VER. 29. Both the. Heb. adds "middle" pillars, so that they all occasioned that of the whole temple.

VER. 30. Let me die. Literally, let my soul die, Samson did not sin on this occasion, though he was indirectly the cause of his own death. Because he house rested, and holding the one with his right hand, and the other with his left, 30 He said: Let me die with the Philistines. And when he had strongly shook the pillars, the house fell upon all the princes, and the rest of the multitude that was there: and he killed many more at his death, than he had killed before in his life.

31 And his brethren and all his kindred, going down took his body, and buried it between Saraa and Esthaol, in the burying-place of his father Manue: and he judged Israel twenty years.

CHAP. XVII.

The history of the idol of Michas, and the young Levite.

THERE was at that time a man of Mount Ephraim, whose name was Michas.

2 Who said to his mother: The eleven hundred pieces of silver, which thou hadst put aside for thyself, and concerning which thou didst swear in my hearing, behold I have, and they are with me. And she said to him: Blessed be my son by the Lord.

3 So he restored them to his mother, who said to him: I have consecrated and vowed this silver to the Lord, that my son may receive it at my hand, and make a graven and a molten god; so now I deliver it to thee.

4 And he restored them to his mother: and she took two hundred pieces of silver and gave them to the silver-smith, to make of them a graven and a molten god, which was in the house of Michas.

was moved to what he did by a particular inspiration of God, who also concurred with him by a miracle, in restoring his strength upon the spot, in consequence of his prayer. Samson, by dying in this manner, was a figure of Christ, who by his death overcame all his enemies. Ch. W.—S. Aug. says, “he was not under a human delusion, but divinely inspired. Who will accuse his obedience?” De C. i. 21, and 26, &c. And S. Bern. (de Præc. 3) observes, that he would have sinned if he had not received a particular inspiration. But many think that he might have acted as he did without it, in quality of judge, as he might intend primarily to avenge his people and the glory of God. He was willing to sacrifice his life for this purpose, though he would have preserved it if it had been in his power. Cajet. Lessius, &c.—S. Paul ranks Samson among the saints. Heb. xi. 32.—Life. Express mention is made of 1030 slain by Samson, besides the great numbers which excited the astonishment of the Philistines. Chap. xv. 8. But on this occasion he destroyed 3000 at once, and the death of all the princes made the slaughter more terrible, (C.) inasmuch that the people, being without a head, were glad to let Samson’s brethren take away his body without molestation, as they had every reason to fear that the Israelites would now fall upon them. Salien.—If 3000 perished on the outside of the temple, (H.) Serarius concludes that not less than 20,000 were destroyed in all.

VER. 31. Twenty. “Why then,” says the Talmud of Jerusalem, “does the Scripture allow him forty? That thou mightest understand the Philistines were kept in awe, by the fear of him, for twenty years after his decease.” The Hebrew copies seem to have varied. Drusius.—Some refuse Samson the title of judge, (Masius,) as they suppose (H.) that Heli filled that office at the same time. But there might be several in different parts of the country, and Heli might administer sacred things, while Samson acted in the character of a warrior. C.—Salien believes that Heli only commenced high priest and judge at the death of Samson, and continued for forty years, though he was fifty-eight years old when he entered upon office, A. 2900, A. C. 1153.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. At that time, is not in the Heb. or Sept. It only means that the event which is recorded took place at some time, which the sacred writer does not determine. We should conclude that the histories which fill up the remainder of this book, ought to be placed after the death of Samson, (Serarius, &c.) if some passages did not determine us to allow that their proper order must be soon after the death of Josue and of the ancients. The grandson of Moses must, on the former supposition, have been extremely old, whereas he is said to have been a young man, ver. 7. The tribe of Dan was still straitened for room. Chap. xviii. 1, &c. C.—Josephus, (v. 2,) who passes over the history of Michas. Salien, A. 2622, the twenty-second year of Othniel and Phinees. H.—Anarchy at that time prevailed, (ver. 6,) so that we need not wonder to behold such confusion among the Israelites. M.—Ephraim. The country was mountainous for nine miles. Adrichomius.

VER. 2. Mother. A rich (C.) old widow, since she had grandchildren, one of whom was appointed to serve her domestic chapel. M.—She had lost a sum of money, and was venting imprecations against the thief, when her son came and informed her that he had it safe, upon which she changed her curses into blessings. —Sworn, may have another meaning, as if she had made a vow of this money.

5 And he separated also therein a little temple for the god, and made an ephod, and theraphim, that is to say, a priestly garment, and idols: and he filled the hand of one of his sons, and he became his priest.

6 In those days there was no king in Israel, but every one did that which seemed right to himself.

7 There was also another young man of Bethlehem Juda, of the kindred thereof: and he was a Levite, and dwelt there.

8 Now he went out from the city of Bethlehem, and desired to sojourn wheresoever he should find it convenient for him. And when he was come to Mount Ephraim, as he was on his journey, and had turned aside a little into the house of Michas, 9 He was asked by him whence he came. And he answered: I am a Levite of Bethlehem Juda, and I am going to dwell where I can, and where I shall find a place to my advantage.

10 And Michas said: Stay with me, and be unto me a father and a priest, and I will give thee every year ten pieces of silver, and a double suit of apparel, and thy victuals.

11 He was content, and abode with the man, and was unto him as one of his sons.

12 And Michas filled his hand, and had the young man with him for his priest, saying:

13 Now I know God will do me good, since I have a priest of the race of the Levites.

C. M.—Almost all interpreters condemn Michas and his mother of superstition, and of acting contrary to the express orders of God, in appointing a priest who was not of the family of Aaron, &c. C.—Their graven image was an idol. But this is no proof against the sacred images of Catholics. W.

VER. 3. God. Heb. psol umsoce. The word thing would perhaps be as well substituted, as (H.) all are not convinced that the woman was guilty of idolatry. Cajetan.—The same figure might be both graven and molten. The image was first carved, and then covered with plates of gold, &c., in the more ancient times. C.—There might be two figures made by Michas. Salien.—The theraphim denote “images which foretell what is to happen.” Rabbin. T.—But this is not always the case. H.

VER. 5. That . . . idols is added by the Vulg. S. Jerom supposes that the ephod denotes all the sacerdotal vestments, and the theraphim whatever else was requisite for priestly functions, ep. ad Marcel. Grotius is of opinion that these theraphim, or cherubim, are styled elohim, gods, (v. 5,) and that the altar, candlesticks, &c., are designated above by whatever was to be graven or molten. Michas had a mind to represent the tabernacle, with its ornaments, in miniature. By the theraphim he might imitate the urim, &c., at the expense of 200 sicles, while 900 might be set apart for the other ornaments. C.—Many think that he wished to have domestic gods, like the Lares or Penates.—Hand. That is, appointed and consecrated him to the priestly office. Ch.—He put in his hand the offerings which he had to make, as was customary. Exod. xxviii. 41. C.—Priest, contrary to all order. M. Num. iii. 10; Heb. v. 4. C.—The anointing of his hands with oil, as prescribed, (Lev. viii.) could give him no authority. W.

VER. 6. Himself. Serarius thinks this took place before Heli was appointed to succeed Samson. But the opinion of Salien (M.) is more probable. For though he places this history in the twenty-second year of Othniel, yet we must remember that he attributes to him all the years of anarchy, so that this liberty was taken by an individual, when none had power or zeal enough to restrain it. H.

VER. 7. Another is not in Heb. or the Sept., but it refers to the former young priest, the son of Michas, whose place he took.—Thereof. It is uncertain whether this be spoken of the city or of the man. Some think that this Levite’s mother was of Juda, though his father was the son of Moses. Chap. xviii. 30. VER. 13. Good. He was in hopes that the people would come and make their offerings with more zeal, so that he would derive greater advantage: the true character of superstitious misers. 1 Tim. vi. 5. C.—He foolishly flattered himself that God would be pleased with his devotion; though he had done so many things contrary to the law. CHAP. XVIII.

The expedition of the men of Dan against Lais: in their way they rob Michas of his priest and his gods.

IN those days there was no king in Israel, and the tribe of Dan sought them an inheritance to dwell in: for unto that day they had not received their lot among the other tribes.

2 So the children of Dan sent five most valiant men, of their stock and family, from Saraa and Esthaol, to spy out the land, and to view it diligently: and they said to them: Go, and view the land. They went on their way, and when they came to Mount Ephraim, they went into the house of Michas, and rested there:

3 And knowing the voice of the young man the Levite, and lodging with him, they said to him: Who brought thee hither? what dost thou here? why wouldst thou come hither?

4 He answered them: Michas hath done such and such things for me, and hath hired me to be his priest.

5 Then they desired him to consult the Lord, that they might know whether their journey should be prosperous, and the thing should have effect.

6 He answered them: Go in peace: the Lord looketh on your way, and the journey that you go.

7 So the five men going on came to Lais: and they saw how the people dwelt therein without any fear, according to the custom of the Sidonians, secure and easy, having no man at all to oppose them, being very rich, and living separated, at a distance from Sidon and from all men.

8 And they returned to their brethren in Saraa and Esthaol, who asked them what they had done: to whom they answered:

9 Arise, and let us go up to them: for we have seen the land which is exceeding rich and fruitful: neglect not, lose no time: let us go and possess it, there will be no difficulty.

10 We shall come to a people that is secure, into a spacious country, and the Lord will deliver the place to us, in which there is no want of any thing that groweth on the earth.

11 There went therefore of the kindred of Dan, to wit, from Saraa and Esthaol, six hundred men, furnished with arms for war.

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 1. Days, after the death of Josue and the ancients. Debora speaks of the tribe of Dan as addicted to navigation. Chap. v. 17. C.—It had now conquered most of the enemies who had formerly forced some to seek fresh settlements, (H.) as it is hinted at, Jos. xix. The particulars are here given in detail. C.—Received, &c. They had their portions assigned them, Jos. xix. 40. But, through their own sloth, possessed as yet but a small part of it. See Judg. i. 34. Ch. W.—Prot. supply, "all their inheritance had not fallen unto them among the tribes of Israel." H.

VER. 2. Family. Heb. "From their extremity." Which may denote such as came to hand, (C.) or princes, (de Dieu,) or people of mean appearance, (Castellan,) unless we explain it "from their coasts," with Montanus, Prot., &c. II.

VER. 3. Voice. His pronunciation was different from that of the Ephraimites. Chap. xii. 6.

VER. 5. Lord (Alein). A title sometimes given to false gods. The Levite answered in the name of Jeve; whence it is inferred that they all adored the true God, though their worship was not clear of superstition. C.

VER. 6. Looketh with approbation. H.—It is uncertain whether this prediction proceeded from God, from the devil, or from the crafty Levite, (C.) who might answer as he thought the messengers wished him to do. M.—Their under-12 And going up they lodged in Cariathiarim of Juda, which place from that time is called the camp of Dan, and is behind Cariathiarim.

13 From thence they passed into Mount Ephraim. And when they were come to the house of Michas, 14 The five men, that before had been sent to view the land of Lais, said to the rest of their brethren: You know that in these houses there is an ephod and theraphim, and a graven and a molten god: see what you are pleased to do.

15 And when they had turned a little aside, they went into the house of the young man the Levite, who was in the house of Michas: and they saluted him with words of peace.

16 And the six hundred men stood before the door, appointed with their arms.

17 But they that were gone into the house of the young man, went about to take away the graven god, and the ephod, and the theraphim, and the molten god, and the priest stood before the door, the six hundred valiant men waiting not far off.

18 So they that were gone in took away the graven thing, the ephod, and the idols, and the molten god. And the priest said to them: What are you doing?

19 And they said to him: Hold thy peace, and put thy finger on thy mouth, and come with us, that we may have thee for a father, and a priest. Whether is better for thee, to be a priest in the house of one man, or in a tribe and family in Israel?

20 When he heard this, he agreed to their words, and took the ephod, and the idols, and the graven god, and departed with them.

21 And when they were going forward, and had put before them the children and the cattle, and all that was valuable,

22 And were now at a distance from the house of Michas, the men that dwelt in the houses of Michas gathering together followed them,

23 And began to shout out after them. They looked back, and said to Michas: What aileth thee? Why dost thou cry?

24 And he answered: You have taken away my gods which I have made me, and the priest, and all that I have, and do you say: What aileth thee?

taking proved successful. But the devil, who knew the valour of the Danites, and the security of the citizens of Lais, or even a man of moderate prudence and sagacity, might have told what would be the probable event of an attack in such circumstances. C.

VER. 7. Lais, four miles from Paneas, towards Tyre. It is called Lesem Dan, (Jos. xix. 47,) both the ancient and the new name being joined together.—Rich. Heb. has almost as many different meanings as interpreters. De Dieu. "There was no one to put them to shame, no chief magistrate." C.—Prot. "and there was no magistrate in the land that might put them to shame in any thing." H.

VER. 9. There will, &c. is added to signify that it will be necessary only to go to take possession. H.

VER. 12. Behind, on the west. C.

VER. 14. To do. Whether we must take them by force or by craft. H.—It seems they had a premeditated design to seize them. C.

VER. 17. They. Heb. and Sept. "and the five men that went to spy out the land." H.—Off. The Levite's attention was drawn off for a while by the 600 men, till the five, who had formerly become acquainted with him, had ransacked his little temple. C.—Perceiving them as they came out, he began to complain, but was soon persuaded to follow the Danites, and to abandon his former protector. So little dependance can be had on those who are faithless to their God! H.

VER. 19. Mouth; to signify that silence must be observed. Job xxix. 9. Eccli. v. 12.

25 And the children of Dan said to him : See thou say no more to us, lest men enraged come upon thee, and thou perish with all thy house.

26 And so they went on the journey they had begun. But Michas seeing that they were stronger than he, returned to his house.

27 And the six hundred men took the priest, and the things we spoke of before, and came to Lais, to a people that was quiet and secure, and smote them with the edge of the sword : and the city they burnt with fire,

28 There being no man at all who brought them any succour, because they dwelt far from Sidon, and had no society or business with any man. And the city was in the land of Rohob : and they rebuilt it, and dwelt therein, 29 Calling the name of the city Dan, after the name of their father, who was the son of Israel, which before was called Lais.

30 And they set up to themselves the graven idol, and Jonathan the son of Gersam, the son of Moses, he and his sons were priests in the tribe of Dan, until the day of their captivity.

31 And the idol of Michas remained with them all the time, that the house of God was in Silo. In those days there was no king in Israel.

CHAP. XIX.

A Levite bringing home his wife, is lodged by an old man at Gabaa, in the tribe of Benjamin. His wife is there abused by wicked men, and in the morning found dead. Her husband cutteth her body in pieces, and sendeth to every tribe of Israel, requiring them to revenge the wicked fact.

THERE was a certain Levite, who dwelt on the side of Mount Ephraim, who took a wife of Bethlehem Juda :

2 And she left him, and returned to her father's house in Bethlehem, and abode with him four months.

VER. 27. And, &c. Heb. "and they took what Michas had made, and the priest . . . and came." H.—Fire, as they could not make themselves masters of it otherwise. They were forced afterwards to rebuild it. Lais was inhabited by the Channanites; and though it was in the territory of Aser, as the people of Dan had made the conquest, they were suffered to keep quiet possession of it. See Jos. xvii. 10.

VER. 28. Rohob, which stood at the foot of Libanus. The vale belonging to this city extended for about twenty miles.

VER. 29. Lais. Heb. Ulam Lais, as the Sept. express it. C.—But the former term is explained by the Alex. and other copies in the sense of the Vulgate, before. H.—Dan is often placed for the northern boundary of Palestine. C.

VER. 30. Idol. Heb. posol. W.—Grabe's Sept. "the graven thing of Michas, and Jonathan the son of Gersam, of the son of Manasses." The Roman copy omits "of Michas," but retains Manasses, as the present Heb. reads, instead of Moses. H.—It is suspected that the Jews have inserted an n over the word Mose, that it might not be known that a grandson of their lawgiver had been guilty of such impiety. They have not dared, however, to place the letter in the same rank as the others, but have suspended it, (C.) as if it were suspected, says Michaëlis. Abendana relates, that by (or on) the authority of the ancients this nun was added for the honour of Moses, lest his grandson might appear to be the first little sacrificing priest of an idol. The Latin Vulgate reads the name of Moses; and I am convinced that Moses, and not Manasses, ought to be understood: for how could a Levite have Manasses for his ancestor? Got. Comm. 1753. It is surely very absurd to say that he was the son of Manasses, because Manasses acted like him 800 years afterwards; and Sol. Jarchi honestly confesses that "for the honour of Moses nun was written, on purpose to change the name, and it was written suspended, to indicate that it was not Manasses, but Moses." See Talmud Bava. fol. 109. The letter has, however, sometimes been suspended half-way, and sometimes uniformly inserted, so that it has at last supplanted the genuine word. Some copies of the Sept. agree with the Vulg. Brug.—Theodoret reads, "Jonathan, the son of Manasses, of the son (viu) of Gersam, of the son of Moses," retaining both words, in order to be sure of the right one, as the copies varied. Kennicott, Dis. 2. See Deut. xxvii. 4. Here we have a plain proof of the liberties which the Jews have taken with their text. But the providence of God has left us means to detect their fraud, by the Vulg. &c. In other difficulties of a like nature the collation of ancient MSS. and versions will generally remove the uncertainty, and we may pronounce that the word of God has not been adulterated, though perhaps no one copy may now represent it in all its genuine beauty and integrity. See Proleg. in SS. Mariam, chap. xxiii. T. 3. Menoch. &c. Prot. here follow the corrupted Heb.

3 And her husband followed her, willing to be reconciled with her, and to speak kindly to her, and to bring her back with him, having with him a servant and two asses: and she received him, and brought him into her father's house. And when his father-in-law had heard this, and had seen him, he met him with joy,

4 And embraced the man. And the son-in-law tarried in the house of his father-in-law three days, eating with him and drinking familiarly.

5 But on the fourth day, arising early in the morning, he desired to depart. But his father-in-law kept him, and said to him: Taste first a little bread, and strengthen thy stomach, and so thou shalt depart.

6 And they sat down together, and ate and drank. And the father of the young woman said to his son-in-law: I beseech thee to stay here to-day, and let us make merry together.

7 But he rising up, began to be for departing. And nevertheless his father-in-law earnestly pressed him, and made him stay with him.

8 But when morning was come, the Levite prepared to go on his journey. And his father-in-law said to him again: I beseech thee to take a little meat, and strengthening thyself, till the day be further advanced, afterwards thou mayest depart. And they ate together.

9 And the young man arose to set forward with his wife and servant. And his father-in-law spoke to him again: Consider that the day is declining, and draweth toward evening: tarry with me to-day also, and spend the day in mirth, and to-morrow thou shalt depart, that thou mayest go into thy house.

10 His son-in-law would not consent to his words: but forthwith went forward, and came over against Jebus,

E.—Serarius, (q. 7.) or the sacred penman, speaks of a captivity, the particulars of which are not recorded.

VER. 31. In Silo. The ark was taken by the Philistines, (1 Kings iv.) after remaining at Silo 349 years, and 217 from the idolatry of Michas and of Dan. Salien. H.—In those. The Heb. here commences the following chapter, which contains an account of another instance of licentiousness, which probably took place after the two former. Phinees was high priest; but there was no civil head. C.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 1. Ephraim. Some think at Silo, to which place, he says, he was going, (ver. 18,) though it might be only out of devotion. C.—A wife. Heb. "a concubine." Sept. joins both together, "he took a harlot to wife." H.

VER. 2. Left him. Heb. thoznē. Now thozne, (D.) "his concubine, fell into fornication against (Junius improperly translates with) him." Chal. "She despised and went from him." Sept. "She was vexed at or she left him." C.—It is clear that the Sept., Vulg., &c. have read the text in a different manner from what we do at present, and their explanation seems more rational than the Hebrew. For is it probable that a Levite should go to be reconciled to an adulteress, contrary to the intention of the law (Deut. xxiv. 2; Jer. iii. 1; Prov. xviii. 22) and the custom of the Jews, as well as of pagan nations, who looked upon those with contempt who kept a woman of this character? The word concubine, we have often remarked, signifies a wife without a dowry, &c., (C.) such as the Mahometans still maintain as lawful wives. Busbec. 2.—Months. Josephus explains this of the time she had remained with her husband.

VER. 3. With him. Heb. "her husband arose and followed her to speak to her heart, to bring her back." Gen. xxiv. 3.

VER. 8. Advanced. Heb. "and they tarried until the evening." Sept. "rest till the day decline." H.—He wishes them to wait till the heat of the day be over. C.

VER. 9. Depart. Heb. and Sept. add, "early," before the sun was up, to render travelling incommodious. H.

VER. 10. Jebus was about six short miles from Bethlehem, and as many from Gabaa. It had not yet fallen into the hands of Juda (C.) and Benjamin, (H.) or they had been expelled again, so that the old inhabitants held possession of it at this time, (C.) as they did of the citadel till the reign of David. See chap. i. 6, 21. H.—Concubine. She was his lawful wife: but even lawful wives are frequently in Scripture called concubines. See above, chap. xvii. 31. Ch.—Ver 2 which by another name is called Jerusalem, leading with him two asses laden, and his concubine.

11 And now they were come near Jebus, and the day was far spent: and the servant said to his master: Come, I beseech thee, let us turn into the city of the Jebusites, and lodge there.

12 His master answered him: I will not go into the town of another nation, who are not of the children of Israel, but I will pass over to Gabaa:

13 And when I shall come thither, we will lodge there, or at least in the city of Rama.

14 So they passed by Jebus, and went on their journey, and the sun went down upon them when they were by Gabaa, which is in the tribe of Benjamin:

15 And they turned into it to lodge there. And when they were come in, they sat in the street of the city, for no man would receive them to lodge.

16 And behold they saw an old man, returning out of the field and from his work in the evening, and he also was of Mount Ephraim, and dwelt as a stranger in Gabaa; but the men of that country were the children of Jemini.

17 And the old man lifting up his eyes, saw the man sitting with his bundles in the street of the city, and said to him: Whence comest thou? and whither goest thou?

18 He answered him: We came out from Bethlehem Juda, and we are going to our home, which is on the side of Mount Ephraim, from whence we went to Bethlehem: and now we go to the house of God, and none will receive us under his roof:

19 We have straw and hay for provender of the asses, and bread and wine for the use of myself and of thy handmaid, and of the servant that is with me: we want nothing but lodging.

20 And the old man answered him: Peace be with thee: I will furnish all things that are necessary: only I beseech thee, stay not in the street.

21 And he brought him into his house, and gave provender to his asses: and after they had washed their feet, he entertained them with a feast.

22 While they were making merry, and refreshing their bodies with meat and drink, after the labour of the journey, the men of that city, sons of Belial, (that is, without yoke,) came and beset the old man's house, and began to knock at the door, calling to the master of the house, and saying: "Bring forth the man that came into thy house, that we may abuse him.

23 And the old man went out to them, and said: Do not so, my brethren, do not so wickedly: because this man is come into my lodging, and cease I pray you from this folly.

24 I have a maiden daughter, and this man hath a concubine, I will bring them out to you, and you may humble them, and satisfy your lust: only, I beseech you, commit not this crime against nature on the man.

25 They would not be satisfied with his words; which the man seeing, brought out his concubine to them, and abandoned her to their wickedness: And when they had abused her all the night, they let her go in the morning.

26 But the woman, at the dawning of the day, came to the door of the house, where her lord lodged, and there fell down.

27 And in the morning the man arose, and opened the door, that he might end the journey he had begun: and behold his concubine lay before the door with her hands spread on the threshold.

28 He thinking she was taking her rest, said to her: Arise, and let us be going. But as she made no answer, perceiving she was dead, he took her up, and laid her upon his ass, and returned to his house.

29 And when he was come home, he took a sword, and divided the dead body of his wife with her bones into twelve parts, and sent the pieces into all the borders of Israel.

30 And when every one had seen this, they all cried out: There was never such a thing done in Israel, from the day that our fathers came up out of Egypt, until this day: give sentence, and decree in common what ought to be done.

2 And all the chiefs of the people, and all the tribes of Israel, met together in the assembly of the people of God, four hundred thousand foot-men fit for war.

3 (Nor were the children of Benjamin ignorant that the children of Israel were come up to Maspha.) And the Levite, the husband of the woman that was killed, being asked, how so great a wickedness had been committed,

4 Answered: I came into Gabaa, of Benjamin, with my wife, and there I lodged:

5 And behold the men of that city, in the night beset the house wherein I was, intending to kill me, and abused my wife with an incredible fury of lust, so that at last she died.

6 And I took her and cut her in pieces, and sent the parts into all the borders of your possession: because there never was so heinous a crime, and so great an abomination committed in Israel.

7 You are all here, O children of Israel, determine what you ought to do.

8 And all the people standing, answered as by the voice of one man: We will not return to our tents, neither shall any one of us go into his own house:

9 But this we will do in common against Gabaa:

10 We will take ten men of a hundred out of all the tribes of Israel, and a hundred out of a thousand, and a thousand out of ten thousand, to bring victuals for the army, that we may fight against Gabaa of Benjamin, and render to it for its wickedness, what it deserveth.

11 And all Israel were gathered together against the city, as one man, with one mind, and one counsel:

12 And they sent messengers to all the tribe of Benjamin, to say to them: Why hath so great an abomination been found among you?

13 Deliver up the men of Gabaa, that have committed this heinous crime, that they may die, and the evil may be taken away out of Israel. But they would not hearken to the proposition of their brethren the children of Israel:

14 But out of all the cities which were of their lot, they gathered themselves together into Gabaa, to aid them, and to fight against the whole people of Israel.

15 And there were found of Benjamin five and twenty thousand men that drew the sword, besides the inhabitants of Gabaa, 16 Who were seven hundred most valiant men, fighting with the left hand as well as with the right: and slinging stones so sure that they could hit even a hair, and not miss by the stone's going on either side.

17 Of the men of Israel also, beside the children of Benjamin, were found four hundred thousand that drew swords and were prepared to fight.

18 And they arose and came to the house of God, that is, to Silo: and they consulted God, and said: Who shall be in our army the first to go to the battle against the children of Benjamin? And the Lord answered them: Let Juda be your leader.

19 And forthwith the children of Israel rising in the morning, camped by Gabaa:

20 And going out from thence to fight against Benjamin, began to assault the city.

21 And the children of Benjamin coming out of Gabaa, slew of the children of Israel that day two and twenty thousand men.

22 Again Israel, trusting in their strength and their number, set their army in array in the same place, where they had fought before:

23 Yet so that they first went up and wept before the Lord until night: and consulted him and said: Shall I go out any more to fight against the children of Benjamin my brethren or not? And he answered them: Go up against them, and join battle.

VER. 5. Kill me. He expressed an abominable crime, by another less horrible. Salien.

VER. 9. In common. Heb. "by lot." C.—They chose one man out of ten to procure provisions, selecting 40,000 for that purpose, or the tenth part of the forces. H.

VER. 12. Sent. The law of nations requires that satisfaction be demanded (C.) before a war commence. M.—The former resolution (ver. 9) was only conditional, if the Benjamites should prefer defending their brethren of Gabaa, before punishing them, as they deserved. C.—Indeed their absentsing themselves from this general assembly implied as much, and the Israelites were determined, at any rate, to see that the guilty were duly punished. H.—Tribe. Heb. "tribes," denoting the great families of Benjamin. Gen. xlv. 21; Num. xxvi. 38.

VER. 15. Men. This number is verified, ver. 35. The Benjamites had 25,700 in all, of whom they lost 25,100; so that 600 remained. Heb. reads here 26,000; and some pretend (C.) that 1000 fell in the two victories which they obtained. Grot., &c.—But this is without proof, and the Vulg. is confirmed by Josephus, and by most of the copies of the Sept., though the Vat. copy has only 23,000. C.—Gabaa. Heb. and Sept. add, "which were numbered 700 chosen men." Grabe repeats in the following verse with the Heb. "Among all this people, 700 chosen men," which seems to insinuate that these expert archers were selected out of all the army. H.—But the other copies of the Sept. agree with the Vulg. that they were all of Gabaa, (C.) as if they were trained at this city with more particular care, to hit a mark how small soever.

VER. 16. Right. Sept. "ambidextrous."—Side. The inhabitants of Palestine formerly applied themselves very much to this exercise, and by them it was propagated over other parts of the world. Plin. vii. 56.

VER. 17. Thousand. Their numbers had decreased since they came out of Egypt, (Num. i. and xxvi.) when they were 600,000 fighting men. M.—But we must reflect, that some would be left to garrison the cities, &c. H.

VER. 18. Silo. Heb. simply "to Bethel," which the Sept., Syr., Josephus, and others explain of the city: but others generally understand "the house of God," at Silo, for which Bethel is placed. Chap. xxi. 2, 9, and 12. Phinees resided near the tabernacle, and was desired to consult God.—Juda is not the name of a man, but of the tribe. C.—The Israelites do not ask whether they ought to make war on their brethren, &c., but only desire to know which tribe shall begin the attack. Chap. i. 1, and x. 18. They manifest a degree of presumption, which God soon chastised, (C.) as well as the idolatry of Dan, &c., which they had neglected to punish, though they had an express command to do it. Deut. xiii. 12. Salien.

VER. 22. Trusting in their strength. The Lord suffered them to be overthrown, and many of them to be slain, though their cause was just; partly in punishment of the idolatry which they exercised or tolerated in the tribe of Dan, and elsewhere; and partly because they trusted in their own strength: and therefore, though he bid them fight, he would not give them the victory till they were thoroughly humbled, and had learned to trust in him alone. Ch.—God's thoughts are often very different from ours; and he frequently delays to crown with success the most holy enterprises, that man may learn to be more humble, and to trust wholly in his mercy. C.

VER. 23. And join battle. This is an explanation of Heb. "against him." H.—The Israelites still neglected to sue for the Divine protection, trusting in their numbers. God sends them again to battle, and suffers them to be routed. Did he deceive them? By no means. He wished them to learn the important lesson of self-diffidence, and he had not promised them the victory. H.

25 The children of Benjamin sallied forth out of the gates of Gabaa: and meeting them, made so great a slaughter of them, as to kill eighteen thousand men that drew the sword.

26 Wherefore all the children of Israel came to the house of God, and sat and wept before the Lord: and they fasted that day till the evening, and offered to him holocausts, and victims of peace-offerings.

27 And inquired of him concerning their state. At that time the ark of the covenant of the Lord was there, 28 And Phinees, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron, was over the house. So they consulted the Lord, and said: Shall we go out any more to fight against the children of Benjamin, our brethren, or shall we cease? And the Lord said to them: Go up, for to-morrow I will deliver them into your hands.

29 And the children of Israel set ambushes round about the city of Gabaa:

30 And they drew up their army against Benjamin the third time, as they had done the first and second.

31 And the children of Benjamin boldly issued out of the city, and seeing their enemies flee, pursued them a long way, so as to wound and kill some of them, as they had done the first and second day, whilst they fled by two highways, whereof one goeth up to Bethel, and the other to Gabaa, and they slew about thirty men:

32 For they thought to cut them off as they did before. But they artfully feigning a flight, designed to draw them away from the city, and by their seeming to flee, to bring them to the highways aforesaid.

33 Then all the children of Israel rising up out of the places where they were, set their army in battle array, in the place which is called Baalthamar. The ambushes also, which were about the city, began by little and little to come forth, 34 And to march from the west side of the city. And other ten thousand men chosen out of all Israel, attacked the inhabitants of the city. And the battle grew hot against the children of Benjamin: and they understood not that present death threatened them on every side.

35 And the Lord defeated them before the children of Israel, and they slew of them in that day five and twenty thousand, and one hundred, all fighting men, and that drew the sword.

36 But the children of Benjamin, when they saw themselves to be too weak, began to flee. Which the children of Israel seeing, gave them place to flee, that they might come to the ambushes that were prepared, which they had set near the city.

37 And they that were in ambush arose on a sudden out of their coverts, and whilst Benjamin turned their backs to the slayers, went into the city, and smote it with the edge of the sword.

38 Now the children of Israel had given a sign to them, whom they had laid in ambushes, that after they had taken the city, they should make a fire: that by the smoke rising on high, they might show that the city was taken.

39 And when the children of Israel saw this in the battle, (for the children of Benjamin thought they fled, and pursued them vigorously, killing thirty men of their army,)

40 And perceived, as it were, a pillar of smoke rise up from the city; and Benjamin looking back, saw that the city was taken, and that the flames ascended on high:

41 They that before had made as if they fled, turning their faces, stood bravely against them. Which the children of Benjamin seeing, turned their backs, 42 And began to go towards the way of the desert, the enemy pursuing them thither also. And they that fired the city came also out to meet them.

43 And so it was, that they were slain on both sides by the enemies, and there was no rest of their men dying. They fell and were beaten down on the east side of the city of Gabaa.

44 And they that were slain in the same place, were eighteen thousand men, all most valiant soldiers.

45 And when they that remained of Benjamin saw this, they fled into the wilderness, and made towards the rock that is called Remmon. In that flight also, as they were straggling, and going different ways, they slew of them five thousand men. And as they went farther, they still pursued them, and slew also other two thousand.

46 And so it came to pass, that all that were slain of Benjamin, in divers places, were five and twenty thousand fighting men, most valiant for war.

47 And there remained of all the number of Benjamin only six hundred men that were able to escape, and flee to the wilderness: and they abode in the rock Remmon four months.

48 But the children of Israel returning, put all the remains of the city to the sword, both men and beasts,

VER. 25. Sword. In each battle the Benjamites kill almost as many as their whole army, in all 40,000 Israelites, without losing a man, ver. 15. H.

VER. 28. Was over. Heb. "stood before it at that time," (H.) in the camp, (C.) or perhaps at Silo. W.

VER. 31. To Gabaa, from some other city. H.—This body of men consisted of 10,000, who were designed to draw off the Benjamites from the city into the midst of the forces of Israel, at Baalthamar; while another division, in ambush, on the west of Gabaa, had to enter the city, and having set it on fire, were to prevent the inhabitants from re-entering. C.—They used a similar stratagem to that which Josue (chap. viii.) had employed against Hai. Salien.

VER. 33. Baalthamar, the plain of Jericho (Chal.); or rather a village in the vicinity of Gabaa, which Eusebius calls Besthamar.

VER. 34. West side. Heb. māre, "a cavern," (C.) "a plain," (Chal.) "the thickets," Vat., &c. But the Sept. have read mārbe, "the west," with the Vulg. C.—The Vat. copy leaves Maraagabe. M.—Gabaa was situated on a hill, and the ambuscade might be concealed in a cavern, some of which in Palestine are very spacious. C.

VER. 35. The sword. It seems the slingers also used the sword, ver. 16.

VER. 36. Flee; some towards the city, others to the wilderness, and to Remmon. Ver. 45. H.—That. Heb. "because they confided in those, whom they had placed in ambush, near Gabaa." Hence they were not so eager to prevent their flight by surrounding them.

VER. 37. Arose. Heb. "drew along, (advanced or sounded the trumpet a long time,)" perhaps for a signal, (C.) though the firing of the city seems to have been designed for this purpose, ver. 40. H.

VER. 39. Saw. Heb. "retired in the battle, Benjamin began to smite and to kill . . . about thirty men; for they said, Surely they are destroyed before us, (or flee,) as in the first battle."

VER. 43. Rest. Heb. "with ease, or at leisure they crushed them," &c. Others translate, (C.) Monvée, "from Nucha, Noua, (Sept. Rom. H.) Menucha," &c. We read of a place in the tribe of Juda, called Menucha, 1 Par. ii. 52. C.—The same word may be taken as a proper name, or may signify rest. M.

VER. 45. In that. Heb. "and they gleaned of them in the highways 5000 men, and pursued them close to Giddom," of which the Vulg. takes no notice. The Roman Sept. reads, "Gedan;" the rest have "Galaad."

VER. 46. Wrr. The Scripture, and other authors of the greatest exactitude, sometimes use round numbers. C.—An odd hundred (ver. 35, and 15, H.) is here neglected. C.

VER. 47. Escape. Mercy was shown to those, as the tribe had been already and all the cities and villages of Benjamin were consumed with devouring flames.

CHAP. XXI.

The tribe of Benjamin is saved from being utterly extirpated, by providing wives for the six hundred that remained.

NOW the children of Israel had also sworn in Maspha, saying: None of us shall give of his daughters to the children of Benjamin to wife.

2 And they all came to the house of God in Silo, and sitting before him till the evening, lifted up their voices, and began to lament and weep, saying:

3 O Lord God of Israel, why is so great an evil come to pass in thy people, that this day one tribe should be taken away from among us?

4 And rising early the next day, they built an altar: and offered there holocausts, and victims of peace, and they said:

5 Who is there among all the tribes of Israel that came not up with the army of the Lord? for they had bound themselves with a great oath, when they were in Maspha, that whosoever were wanting should be slain.

6 And the children of Israel being moved with repentance for their brother Benjamin, began to say: One tribe is taken away from Israel,

7 Whence shall they take wives? For we have all in general sworn, not to give our daughters to them.

8 Therefore they said: Who is there of all the tribes of Israel, that came not up to the Lord to Maspha? And, behold, the inhabitants of Jabes Galaad were found not to have been in that army.

9 (At that time also when they were in Silo, no one of them was found there,)

10 So they sent ten thousand of the most valiant men, and commanded them, saying: Go and put the inhabitants of Jabes Galaad to the sword, with their wives and their children.

11 And this is what you shall observe: *Every male, and all women that have known men, you shall kill, but the virgins you shall save.

12 And there were found of Jabes Galaad four hundred virgins, that had not known the bed of a man, and they brought them to the camp in Silo, into the land of Chanaan.

13 And they sent messengers to the children of Benjamin, that were in the rock Remmon, and commanded them to receive them in peace.

14 And the children of Benjamin came at that time, and wives were given them of Jabes Galaad: but they found no others, whom they might give in like manner.

15 And all Israel was very sorry, and repented for the destroying of one tribe out of Israel.

16 And the ancients said: What shall we do with the rest, that have not received wives? for all the women in Benjamin are dead.

17 And we must use all care, and provide with great diligence, that one tribe be not destroyed out of Israel.

18 For as to our own daughters we cannot give them, being bound with an oath and a curse, whereby we said: Cursed be he that shall give Benjamin any of his daughters to wife.

19 So they took counsel, and said: Behold, there is a yearly solemnity of the Lord in Silo, which is situate on the north of the city of Bethel, and on the east side of the way, that goeth from Bethel to Sichem, and on the south of the town of Lebona.

20 And they commanded the children of Benjamin, and said: Go and lie hid in the vineyards, treated with sufficient severity. H.—Remmon, near Gabaa. Zac. xiv. 10. Eusebius places it fourteen miles north of Jerusalem. C.

* Num. xxxi. 17, 18.

VER. 48. And villages, is not expressed in Heb., &c. But as both cities and all the inhabitants were destroyed, the villages would share the same fate, (H.) as being under a curse. The Israelites concluded, from the exemplary vengeance which had been taken of Sodom and Gomorra, that they were authorized to treat their brethren in guilt with the utmost severity. C.

CHAP. XXI. VER. 1. Sworn (juraverunt). The mention of Maspha, seems to determine that this oath was taken before the battle; though it would otherwise appear that the Israelites engaged themselves to extirpate the tribe in the heat of their fury, and after they had destroyed the women of Benjamin. If they could lawfully slay their brethren indiscriminately, as connected in the same wicked cause, (H.) they might surely refuse their daughters to any of those (M.) who might chance to make their escape. H.—But they ought first to have consulted the Lord, as this was a matter of as great consequence as to know who was first to go to battle. H.—Serarius, &c. declare that their oath was lawful, as they did not consider the inconveniences which would attend its execution. As soon as they perceived them, the obligation ceased; though, if their erroneous conscience dictated the contrary to them, they were obliged to follow it, (T.) if they could not receive a more certain information. H.—They had no right to punish the innocent with the guilty, as they had received no order from God (Salien); and therefore they ought not to have slain the unoffending females of Benjamin, or of Jabes, ver. 11. It is not necessary for us to defend the rash oaths or the conduct of the Israelites, in exterminating their fellow creatures, who were innocent.

VER. 2. Silo. Heb. simply, "to Bethel," as chap. xx. 18. Sept. Alex. "to Maspha and Bethel." H.

VER. 3. Evil. Thus they style their own cruelty, in destroying the women and children, and in taking an oath to prevent the remaining Benjamites from having any posterity, unless they married with strangers, which the law forbade, (C.) though it would hardly bind in cases of such necessity. H.—Hence the sons of Nomi are excused for entering into such marriages. Ruth i. 4. T.—Heb. and Sept. do not mention so great an evil, but only this. The context, however, shows that the people considered the extermination of a whole tribe as a dreadful misfortune; and, as it was going to take place in consequence of their oath, unless some expedient could be discovered to prevent it, without the guilt of perjury, they were moved with repentance, and endeavoured to appease God's wrath by a multiplicity of victims. H.

VER. 4. Altar, within the tabernacle, to suffice for the number of victims, as Solomon did (3 Kings viii. 64. T.); or out of the court, by God's dispensation, as they were defiled with blood (Num. xxxi. 24. C.); though this is not certain, as four months elapsed between the battle and the reconciliation of the remaining Israelites with their brethren (chap. xx. 47); so that during that interval they might have committed the massacres in the different cities, and still have had time to be purified seven days, as the law required, before they could be allowed to enter the camp or the tabernacle. H.—Some think that one altar was prescribed only during the sojournment in the desert. See Serar. M.

VER. 6. Say. Governors should use great discretion, and correct with justice and mercy. S. Greg. 1 ep. 24. W.

VER. 7. In general. Heb. "by the Lord," with an imprecation. Ver. 18. M.

VER. 8. Jabes was between Pella and Gerasa, upon a mountain, east of the Jordan. It was, after its destruction, rebuilt, (C.) and became very famous, (1 Kings xi. M.) if it was indeed ever demolished. We know not what prevented the inhabitants from joining in the common cause. H.

VER. 10. Ten. Heb., Chal., Sept., and Josephus read, twelve. The refusal to serve in the national army was punished like a sort of rebellion, with death, no less than to desert. Debora curses the inhabitants of Meros on this account Chap. v. 23.

VER. 11. But, &c. This is not expressed in Heb. or the Sept., though it be sufficiently implied, (C.) as the males and married women only are ordered to be slain. H.

VER. 13. Them, the messengers to, &c. Heb. "and to make unto them a proclamation of peace." H.

VER. 15. Sorry, and. Heb. "for Benjamin, because the Lord had made a breach in Israel." C.

VER. 17. And us, &c. Heb. "and they said: an inheritance for those Benjamites who have escaped, that a tribe," &c. They wish to repair the breach as fast as possible, so that each of the six hundred may have a wife.

VER. 19. Counsel, among themselves. H.—Solemnity. It is not known which is meant, as all the three great festivals occurred during the time that the vines were covered with leaves (ver. 20); or this feast might be one peculiar to the city of Silo, in memory of the ark being transported thither. Vatable thinks that the description here given regards the place where the dance was to be, as all must have known the situation of the city. Silo rather lies to the west than to the east, (C.) if we draw a line from Bethel to Sichem, but the road might be circuitous. H.—S. Jerom places Silo ten miles west of Sichem.—Lebona may be Chan Lebna, four miles to the south of it. C.

21 And when you shall see the daughters of Silo come out, as the custom is, to dance, come ye on a sudden out of the vineyards, and catch you every man his wife among them, and go into the land of Benjamin.

22 And when their fathers and their brethren shall come, and shall begin to complain against you, and to chide, we will say to them: Have pity on them: for they took them not away as by the right of war or conquest, but when they asked to have them, you gave them not, and the fault was committed on your part.

VER. 21. To dance; not in a lascivious manner, as a certain heretical interpreter would have it, but out of a religious motive. M.—Such dances were formerly very common among all nations.—Come. Josephus insinuates that the women were to be seized as they came from different parts to the solemnity. But it hence appears that they were coming out of the city (C.); though it is very probable that the virgins did not all belong to it, but came from all Israel: for why should the people of Silo be forced to supply wives for these surviving Benjamites, against whose character they might reasonably entertain such strong objections? But, if all the assembly agreed that the Benjamites should select from among their daughters whomsoever they could lay their hands on, they could not complain that they were treated with peculiar severity. H.—But did not the Israelites offend by giving this counsel, so contrary to the import of their vow? And were not the Benjamites equally guilty in following such advice? It is answered that, in odious matters words must not be taken in all their rigour, and the person who vows not to give, does not engage himself to reclaim if the thing be taken. Those who gave the advice are not perhaps deserving of excuse, on account of the artifice which they employ to get rid of their oath; but the rest, who were not apprized of it till after the execution, were surely without blame; and the Benjamites, who followed 23 And the children of Benjamin did as they had been commanded: and, according to their number, they carried off for themselves every man his wife of them that were dancing: and they went into their possession, and built up their cities, and dwelt in them.

24 The children of Israel also returned by their tribes, and families, to their dwellings. In those days there was no king in Israel: but every one did that which seemed right to himself.

the counsel of respectable men in such circumstances, cannot be considered as guilty of a rape, &c. Grot. Jur. ii. 13. A. Lapide. C.—S. Ambrose (ep. 6) seems to be of this opinion. Tostat and others cannot, however, approve of these arguments. "As they erroneously supposed that they were bound by their oath, they prudently turned aside to advise the rape." T.—So Liran., &c.—But this was only a human prudence. H.—"No doubt they were not without blame. For as they believed that their oath was binding, they ought neither to have done nor to have advised any thing by which it might be violated." Salien, A. 2622. T.

VER. 22. Part. Heb. is variously translated; but the Sept. and Arab. agree with the Vulg. By your refusal, and by your oath, you have constrained them to take what you would not, (C.) or could not grant. Prot. "Be favourable to them for our sakes, because we reserved not to each man his wife, in the war; for ye did not give unto them, at that time, that ye should be guilty." H.

VER. 24. Himself. This remark has been made twice before, respecting the conduct of Michas and of Dan, both which deserved reprehension. It seems to be added here for the same purpose, that we might not be so much startled at the relation of such strange proceedings. Soon after this event the angel came to upbraid the Israelites. Chap. ii. 1. H.

THE BOOK OF RUTH

This Book is called RUTH, from the name of the person whose history is here recorded; who, being a Gentile, became a convert to the true faith, and marrying Booz, the great-grandfather of David, was one of those from whom Christ sprang according to the flesh, and an illustrious figure of the Gentile church. It is thought this book was written by the prophet Samuel. Ch.—The Holy Ghost chose that the genealogy of David, and of the Messias, should be thus more clearly ascertained. Theodore.—Christ proceeded from the Gentiles, as well as from the Jews, and his grace is given to both. W.—Send forth, O Lord, the lamb, the ruler of the earth, from Petra. Isa. xvi. This was the capital city of Arabia Petraea, where Ruth is supposed to have lived, (Tostat.) being, according to the Chal., &c., the daughter of Egion, king of Moab. The Jews also pretend that Booz was the same person as Abesan, the judge. But it is by no means certain to what period this history belongs. Usher places it under Sangar, about 120 years after Josue. C.—Salien believes that the famine, which obliged Elimelech to leave Bethlehem, happened under Abimelech, and that Noemi returned in the seventh year of Thola, A. C. 1243. This event certainly took place under some of the judges; so that we may consider this book as an appendix to the preceding, like the last chapters, (Judg. xvii., &c. H.) and a preface to the history of the kings. C.

CHAPTER I.

Elimelech of Bethlehem going with his wife Noemi, and two sons, into the land of Moab, dieth there. His sons marry wives of that country, and die without issue. Noemi returneth home with her daughter-in-law, Ruth, who refuseth to part with her.

IN the *days of one of the judges, when the judges ruled, there came a famine in the land. And a certain man of Bethlehem Juda, went to sojourn in the land of Moab with his wife and his two sons.

2 He was named Elimelech, and his wife Noemi: and his two sons, the one Mahalon, and the other Chelion, Ephrathites of Bethlehem Juda. And entering into the country of Moab, they abode there.

3 And Elimelech the husband of Noemi died: and she remained with her sons.

* A. M. circiter 2706, A. C. 1298.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Of one. Heb. "And it came to pass in the days when the judges ruled." H.—The and shows the connexion with the former book. C.—Land. Chal. adds, "of Israel," (M.) while the less fertile country of Moab had abundance. God thus punished the idolatry of his people.

VER. 2. Elimelech. Josephus and others read erroneously, Abimelech. He was probably called also Jokim. 1 Par. iv. 22.—Ephrathites. This title often designates people of the tribe of Ephraim (Judg. xii. 5; 1 Kings i. 2);

4 And they took wives of the women of Moab, of which one was called Orpha, and the other Ruth. And they dwelt there ten years,

5 And they both died, to wit, Mahalon and Chelion: and the woman was left alone, having lost both her sons and her husband.

6 And she arose to go from the land of Moab to her own country, with both her daughters-in-law: for she had heard that the Lord had looked upon his people, and had given them food.

7 Wherefore she went forth out of the place of her sojournment, with both her daughters-in-law: and being now in the way to return into the land of Juda,

8 She said to them: Go ye home to your mothers, the Lord deal mercifully with you, as you have dealt with the dead and with me.

but here it means those of Ephrata, which is also called Bethlehem of Juda, about five or six miles south of Jerusalem. Gen. xxxv. 19; Mic. v. 2. C.

VER. 4. Ruth was the wife of Mahalon, (chap. iv. 10.) and signifies, one "well watered, (M.) or inebriated," &c. H.—The sons of Noemi were excused by necessity in marrying idolaters, though they ought to have done their best to convert them. The Chaldee greatly condemns their marriage, and thinks that their death was in punishment of their prevarication. Deut. vii. 3, and xx. 11. C.

9 May he grant you to find rest in the houses of the husbands which you shall take. And she kissed them. And they lifted up their voice, and began to weep,

10 And to say: We will go on with thee to thy people.

11 But she answered them: Return, my daughters, why come ye with me? have I any more sons in my womb, that you may hope for husbands of me?

12 Return again, my daughters, and go your ways: for I am now spent with age, and not fit for wedlock. Although I might conceive this night, and bear children, 13 If you would wait till they were grown up, and come to man's estate, you would be old women before you marry. Do not so, my daughters, I beseech you: for I am grieved the more for your distress, and the hand of the Lord is gone out against me.

14 And they lifted up their voice, and began to weep again: Orpha kissed her mother-in-law, and returned: Ruth stuck close to her mother-in-law.

15 And Noemi said to her: Behold thy kinswoman is returned to her people, and to her gods, go thou with her.

16 She answered: Be not against me, to desire that I should leave thee and depart: for whithersoever thou shalt go, I will go: and where thou shalt dwell, I also will dwell. Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.

17 The land that shall receive thee dying, in the same will I die: and there will I be buried. The Lord do so and so to me, and add more also, if ought but death part me and thee.

18 Then Noemi seeing that Ruth was steadfastly determined to go with her, would not be against it, nor persuade her any more to return to her friends:

19 So they went together, and came to Bethlehem. And when they were come into the city, the report was quickly spread among all: and the women said: This is that Noemi.

20 But she said to them: Call me not Noemi (that is, beautiful), but call me Mara (that is, bitter), for the Almighty hath quite filled me with bitterness.

21 I went out full and the Lord hath brought me back empty. Why then do you call me Noemi, whom the Lord hath humbled, and the Almighty hath afflicted?

22 So Noemi came with Ruth, the Moabite, her daughter-in-law, from the land of her sojournment: and returned into Bethlehem, in the beginning of the barley harvest.

CHAP. II.

Ruth gleaneth in the field of Booz: who sheweth her favour.

NOW her husband Elimelech had a kinsman, a powerful man, and very rich, whose name was Booz.

2 And Ruth, the Moabite, said to her mother-in-law: If thou wilt, I will go into the field, and glean the ears of corn that escape the hands of the reapers, wheresoever I shall find grace with a householder, that will be favourable to me. And she answered her: Go, my daughter.

3 She went, therefore, and gleaned the ears of corn after the reapers. And it happened that the owner of that field was Booz, who was of the kindred of Elimelech.

4 And behold, he came out of Bethlehem, and said to the reapers: The Lord be with you. And they answered him: The Lord bless thee.

5 And Booz said to the young man that was set over the reapers: Whose maid is this?

6 And he answered him: This is the Moabite, who came with Noemi, from the land of Moab,

7 And she desired leave to glean the ears of corn that remain, following the steps of the reapers: and she hath been in the field from morning till now, and hath not gone home for one moment.

8 And Booz said to Ruth: Hear me, daughter, do not go to glean in any other field, and do not depart from this place: but keep with my maids,

9 And follow where they reap. For I have charged my young men, not to molest thee: and if thou art thirsty, go to the vessels, and drink of the waters whereof the servants drink.

10 She fell on her face, and worshipping upon the ground, said to him: Whence cometh this to me, that I should find grace before thy eyes, and that thou shouldst vouchsafe to take notice of me, a woman of another country?

11 And he answered her: All hath been told me, that thou hast done to thy mother-in-law after the death of thy husband: and how thou hast left thy parents, and the

VER. 8. Mothers, who had separate apartments from the men. C.—Me. They had behaved with great respect and love towards their husbands, and towards Noemi, whom they even wished to accompany. M.

VER. 11. Of me. Hence it appears that the Rabbin are under a mistake, when they say that those children who are born after the death of their brothers are not obliged to take their widows.

VER. 13. Marry. Heb. "would you stay for them from having husbands?"

VER. 14. And returned, is not expressed in Heb. But the Sept. have, "and she returned to her people." H.

VER. 15. To her gods, &c. Noemi did not mean to persuade Ruth to return to her false gods she had formerly worshipped; but by this manner of speech insinuated to her, that if she would go with her she must renounce her false gods, and turn to the Lord, the God of Israel. Ch.—She wished to try her constancy. Salien.—Most infer from this passage that Orpha was never converted, or that she relapsed.—Her gods, may indeed be rendered in the singular, "god." But what god was peculiar to her and the Moabites but Chamos? C.

VER. 17. The Lord do so and so, &c. A form of swearing usual in the history of the Old Testament, by which the persons wished such and such evils to fall upon them, if they did not do what they said. Ch.

VER. 19. That Noemi. This exclamation might proceed either from surprise, or from contempt. M.

VER. 20. That is. The explanations are added by S. Jerom. H.—Noemi had formerly a husband and two sons, with great riches, of which she was now deprived. W.

VER. 22. Harvest. About the month of Nisan, or our March (C.) and April. M.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Booz. The Scripture does not specify how nearly they were related.

VER. 2. To me. It was the privilege of the poor and of strangers to glean. Deut. xxiv. 19; Lev. xix. 9. Yet Ruth asks leave, through civility. C.

VER. 4. With you. This blessing the Church still adopts in her service. W.—It was customary to bless one another during harvest. Psal. cxxviii. 5—8. C.

VER. 5. Man. Heb. nār, a man in the prime of life. He had the care of all in the field during the absence of his master; whence Josephus styles him agromos, or agronomos. M.

VER. 7. Moment. Heb. "her tarrying in the house is but small, or till now, that she remains a little in the house." She entered the house with the reapers during the excessive heat of the day, and to avoid the suspicion of taking more than was allowed during their absence. C.—Sept. "she hath not discontinued to work in the field even a little." Her diligence and modesty attracted the notice of Booz. H.

VER. 9. Thce. The men tied the corn after the female reapers, (C.) and Ruth was authorized to follow, close at their heels, without fear. H.—The waters. This is not expressed in Heb., but it is in the Sept. and the Chal. C.—The privilege of having water in those countries was very considerable. M.

VER. 10. Country. S. Elizabeth was impressed with similar sentiments, when she was visited by the blessed Virgin (H.); and so was David, when he considered the wonderful condescension of God. Psal. viii. 5, and cxliii. 3. Job land wherein thou wast born, and art come to a people which thou knewest not heretofore.

12 The Lord render unto thee for thy work, and mayst thou receive a full reward of the Lord the God of Israel, to whom thou art come, and under whose wings thou art fled.

13 And she said: I have found grace in thy eyes, my lord, who hast comforted me, and hast spoken to the heart of thy handmaid, who am not like to one of thy maids.

14 And Booz said to her: At meal-time come thou hither, and eat of the bread, and dip thy morsel in the vinegar. So she sat at the side of the reapers, and she heaped to herself frumenty, and ate and was filled, and took the leavings.

15 And she arose from thence, to glean the ears of corn as before. And Booz commanded his servants, saying: If she would even reap with you, hinder her not:

16 And let fall some of your handfuls of purpose, and leave them, that she may gather them without shame, and let no man rebuke her when she gathereth them.

17 She gleaned therefore in the field till evening: and beating out with a rod, and threshing what she had gleaned, she found about the measure of an ephi of barley, that is, three bushels:

18 Which she took up, and returned into the city, and showed it to her mother-in-law: moreover, she brought out, and gave her of the remains of her meat, wherewith she had been filled,

19 And her mother-in-law said to her: Where hast thou gleaned to-day, and where hast thou wrought? blessed be he that hath had pity on thee. And she told her with whom she had wrought: and she told the man's name, that he was called Booz.

20 And Noemi answered her: Blessed be he of the Lord: because the same kindness which he showed to the living, he hath kept also to the dead. And again she said: The man is our kinsman.

21 And Ruth said: He also charged me, that I should keep close to his reapers, till all the corn should be reaped.

22 And her mother-in-law said to her: It is better for thee, my daughter, to go out to reap with his maids, lest in another man's field some one may resist thee.

23 So she kept close to the maids of Booz: and continued to glean with them, till all the barley and the wheat were laid up in the barns.

CHAP. III.

Ruth, instructed by her mother-in-law, lieth at Booz's feet, claiming him for her husband by the law of affinity: she receiveth a good answer, and six measures of barley.

AFTER she was returned to her mother-in-law, Noemi said to her: My daughter, I will seek rest for thee, and will provide that it may be well with thee.

2 This Booz, with whose maids thou wast joined in the field, is our near kinsman, and behold this night he winnoweth barley in the threshing-floor.

3 Wash thyself therefore and anoint thee, and put on thy best garments, and go down to the barn-floor: but let not the man see thee, till he shall have done eating and drinking.

4 And when he shall go to sleep, mark the place wherein he sleepeth: and thou shalt go in, and lift up the clothes wherewith he is covered towards his feet, and shalt lay thyself down there: and he will tell thee what thou must do.

5 She answered: Whatsoever thou shalt command, I will do.

6 And she went down to the barn-floor, and did all that her mother-in-law had bid her.

7 And when Booz had eaten, and drunk, and was merry, vii. 17. C.—Frequent instances occur in Scripture of people worshipping, or showing their gratitude to their fellow creatures, by this posture of the body. M.—Yet no suspicion of idolatry attaches to them. Gen. xxiii. 7, &c. H.

VER. 12. Work. Booz doubted not but a full and eternal reward was due to good works. W.

VER. 13. Heart. This has the same meaning as the former part of the sentence. C. See Osee ii. 14.—Maids, but more lowly and mean. M.

VER. 14. Vinegar, or small wine, made on purpose for working people. Some think that such was presented to our Saviour. Yet vinegar was very frequently mixed with other things, and was esteemed particularly refreshing. Plin. xxiii. 1. C.—Side. Not in front, that they might not stare at her. M.—And she, &c. Heb. "and he gave her frumenty, or parched corn." A little oil might be poured upon it. See Lev. ii. 14; 2 Kings xxvi. 28. H.—Travellers in Ethiopia only take parched barley with them. C.—The leavings, to Noemi. Sept. "and Booz heaped up food before her, and she eat and was filled, and left a part." H.—But it appears that she afterwards took it home, ver. 18. M.

VER. 15. Reap. Heb. "if she will glean, even among the sheaves, do not cover her with confusion," (H.) or hinder her. Psal. xliii. 10. C.

VER. 17. Rod, as Gedeon had done. Judg. vi. 11.—That is, &c., an explanation of the Vulg. C.—The ephi contained three pecks and three pints. Arbuthnot.—Alcazar and A. Lapide say 960 quences. M.

VER. 20. Dead. He hath not forgotten Elimelech, his friend, for whose sake he treats his daughter-in-law with kindness. H.—Kinsman. Heb. adds, "one of our redeemers, (C.) or next kinsmen." H.—To such the right of avenging the slain, of marrying the widow of the deceased, and entering upon his property, belonged. The best interpreters suppose that Booz was the nephew of Elimelech. C. Lev. xxv. 25; Deut. xxv. 5. M.

VER. 23. And the wheat. Heb., Syr., and Arab. "It is good that thou keep close to the maidens of Booz, and continue to glean with them till," &c. This was the advice of Noemi: but Providence ordered that Ruth should be married to Booz before the commencement of the wheat harvest. C.—The Prot. agree with the Vulg. and Sept. "So she kept fast by, &c. unto the end of the barley harvest, and of wheat harvest, and dwelt with her mother-in-law." These last words are expressed by the Vulg. in the following chapter. H.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. I will. Heb. and Sept. may be read with an interrogation in the same sense. "Shall I not seek rest?" H.—By this expression she means a husband. Chap. i. 9. Marriage fixes the unsettled condition of women. C.—Noemi being apprized of the law, entertained hopes that she could engage Booz to marry Ruth. H.—Thus her penury would cease, and she would perhaps have children, as she earnestly desired. M.

VER. 2. Night. In Palestine, and other maritime countries, a breeze generally arises from the sea in the evening. It was then that Booz seized the opportunity of winnowing his barley; so that, at an early hour, he gave Ruth six measures, and retired to rest, beside some of the remaining sheaves (C.) in an adjoining apartment, erected for the protection of the reapers during the great heats, and to contain the corn in case of a shower. Columella i. 7, and ii. 51.

VER. 4. Sleepeth. People of fortune did not disdain to sleep among the corn.

Non pudor in stipulâ placidam cepisse quietem, Nec fœnum capiti supposuisse suo.—Ovid, Fast. 1. M.

—Fœt. Ruth was conducted on this occasion by a superior Being, who gave success to her undertaking, and disposed the mind of Booz (Theodoret) to grant her just claim. It was according to the law of Moses, that a widow might demand in marriage the next kinsman of her deceased husband, if she had no children by him. Ruth considered Booz in this light. H.—Noemi was well assured of the virtue of both parties, and followed the directions of the Holy Spirit, (C.) as the event showed. W.—"As a person imploring protection, Ruth laid herself down at the foot of an aged kinsman's bed, and she rose up with as much innocence as she laid herself down. She was afterwards married to Booz, and reputed by all her neighbours as a virtuous woman." Watson, Let. 4.—Must do. She trusted to the superior wisdom of Booz, knowing perhaps that he was not absolutely the nearest relation, but being convinced, as the event proved, that the other would not consent to marry Ruth on the conditions specified by the law. Salien, A. 2310.

VER. 7. Merry. Heb. "good," yet by no means intoxicated. D. M.—It was formerly the custom, as it is still in many places, (H.) to conclude the harvest with a feast (C.); on which day, Cato observes, that the men and oxen did not work. De re Rust. c. 131. Hence the vaena of Ovid, Fast. 6. T.—The pagans did this in honour of Jupiter and Ceres. But the true God had enjoined his people (H.) to offer the first-fruits to him, and to feast in his presence. Lev. xxi. 10; Deut. xxvi. 21.—Sheaves, either of corn or of straw. Sept.—The Arabs he went to sleep by the heap of sheaves, and she came softly, and uncovering his feet, laid herself down.

8 And behold, when it was now midnight the man was afraid, and troubled: seeing a woman lying at his feet,

9 And he said to her: Who art thou? And she answered: I am Ruth, thy handmaid: spread thy coverlet over thy servant, for thou art a near kinsman.

10 And he said: Blessed art thou of the Lord, my daughter, and thy latter kindness has surpassed the former: because thou hast not followed young men either poor or rich.

11 Fear not, therefore, but whatsoever thou shalt say to me, I will do to thee. For all the people that dwell within the gates of my city, know that thou art a virtuous woman.

12 Neither do I deny myself to be near of kin, but there is another nearer than I.

13 Rest thou this night: and when morning is come, if he will take thee by the right of kindred, all is well: but if he will not, I will undoubtedly take thee, as the Lord liveth: sleep till the morning.

14 So she slept at his feet till the night was going off. And she arose before men could know one another, and Booz said: Beware lest any man know that thou camest hither.

15 And again he said: Spread thy mantle, wherewith thou art covered, and hold it with both hands. And when she spread it and held it, he measured six measures of barley, and laid it upon her. And she carried it, and went into the city, 16 And came to her mother-in-law. Who said to her: What hast thou done, daughter? And she told her all that the man had done to her.

17 And she said: Behold he hath given me six measures of barley: for he said: I will not have thee return empty to thy mother-in-law.

and neighbouring nations still delight to rest upon the ground, with some clothes thrown over them. C.

VER. 8. Troubled. Heb. may be rendered, "and turned himself, or felt," &c. C.—He perceived something at his feet when he awoke, and was in consternation, particularly when he perceived, through the glimmering light, a woman at his feet. H.

VER. 9. Kinsman. Heb. "a redeemer" (C.); one bound to defend and to espouse a brother's widow, if others more nearly akin refuse. H.—Ruth modestly admonishes him of this duty, and begs that he would take her to wife, (C.) as he might then have done without any other formality. Serar. q. 7.—We find a similar expression, Eze. xvi. 8; Deut. xxii. 30. Some think that she only asked for protection. The custom of the husband stretching a part of his garment over his bride, was perhaps already established among the Hebrews. C.—Heb. and Sept. "stretch thy wing over," &c. Chal. "Let thy name be invoked upon thy handmaid, to take me to wife," M. Isa. iv. 1.

VER. 10. Thy latter kindness; viz. to thy husband deceased, in seeking to keep up his name and family, by marrying his relation according to the law, and not following after young men: for Booz, it seems, was then in years. Ch.

VER. 11. Woman. Virtuous here may denote, "strong, generous," &c. Prov. xxxi. 10. C.—But it includes the assemblage of all virtues. H.

VER. 12. Than I. The Jews think that he was brother of Elimelech, while Booz was only his nephew. But they might be in the same degree; the other being only older. C.

VER. 13. Well. Heb. tob. H.—Hence the Jews would translate, "If Tob will redeem thee, let him." They say that Tob was the paternal uncle of Mahalon; but it is not probable that his proper name should be only here mentioned, and not in chap. iv. The Sept. and Chaldee are conformable to the Vulg., and the opinion of the Jews is abandoned by most interpreters (C.); and by the Prot. "well, let him do the kinsman's part." H.—Liveth. Chal. "Bound by an oath, before the Lord, I say that I will fulfil my promise unto thee."

VER. 14. Hither. Booz consulted his own as well as Ruth's reputation: for the apostle admonishes us to abstain from every appearance of evil. I Thess. v. 22. M.

VER. 15. Mantle. The Syrian and Arab. ladies cover themselves all over with a large white veil, or piece of cloth, which has no holes, so that Ruth might

CHAP. IV.

Upon the refusal of the nearer kinsman, Booz marrieth Ruth, who brings forth Obed, the grandfather of David.

THEN Booz went up to the gate, and sat there. And when he had seen the kinsman going by, of whom he had spoken before, he said to him, calling him by his name: Turn aside for a little while, and sit down here. He turned aside, and sat down.

2 And Booz, taking ten men of the ancients of the city, said to them: Sit ye down here.

3 They sat down, and he spoke to the kinsman: Noemi, who is returned from the country of Moab, will sell a parcel of land that belonged to our brother Elimelech.

4 I would have thee to understand this, and would tell thee before all that sit here, and before the ancients of my people. If thou wilt take possession of it by the right of kindred: buy it, and possess it: But if it please thee not, tell me so, that I may know what I have to do. For there is no near kinsman besides thee, who art first, and me, who am second. But he answered: I will buy the field.

5 And Booz said to him: When thou shalt buy the field at the woman's hand, thou must take also Ruth, the Moabitess, who was the wife of the deceased: to raise up the name of thy kinsman in his inheritance.

6 He answered: I yield up my right of next akin: for I must not cut off the posterity of my own family. Do thou make use of my privilege, which I profess I do willingly forego.

conveniently carry the barley in it.—Measures is not in Heb. or Sept. Most people supply ephi. S. Jeron, who has translated six bushels, (allowing three to the ephi, chap. ii. 17.) has understood that Booz gave Ruth two ephi. If we explain it of six ephi, the burden would be great enough, consisting of one hundred and eighty pints or pounds of barley. Bonfrere would supply six gomors, each of which consisted of only the tenth part of the ephi, or three pints, in all eighteen. But such a present seems too inconsiderable. The Sept. insinuate that Ruth carried the barley in her apron. M.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Gate, where justice was administered.—Calling. Heb. Ploni Almoni. C.—Prot. "Ho! such a one." H.—This form of speech is used concerning a person whose name we know not, or will not mention. 1 Kings xxi. 2. C.—The name of this man is buried in eternal oblivion, perhaps because he was so much concerned about the splendour of his family, that he would not marry the widow of his deceased relation. T.

VER. 4. This. Heb. "I thought to uncover thy ear," or to admonish thee.

VER. 5. When. Heb. again corruptly, "On the day thou buyest the land of the hand of Noemi, I will also buy it of Ruth," &c. It ought to be, conformably to some MSS. and the ancient versions, "thou must also take Ruth," ver. 10 Capel, p. 144, and 362. Kennicott. H.—We see here the observance of two laws, the one preserving the inheritance in the same family, and the other obliging the next of kin to marry the widow of the deceased, if he would enjoy his land. Lev. xxv. 10; Deut. xxv. 5. C.—Such widows as designed to comply with this condition took possession of the land on the death of their husband, and conveyed it to those whom they married till their eldest son became entitled to it. Abulensis, q. 30 to 61.—Inheritance. The son to be born would be esteemed the heir of his legal parent. M.

VER. 6. Family. Heb. "I cannot redeem it for myself, lest I spoil my own inheritance." He was afraid of having too many children, and sensible that the first son that should be born of the proposed marriage would not be counted as his. H.

VER. 7. Israel. Heb. "and this was the testimony in Israel." The ceremony here specified is very different from that which the law prescribed. Deut. xxv. 7. But Josephus says that they complied with all the regulations of the law, and that Ruth was present on this occasion. C.

his shoe, and gave it to his neighbour; this was a testimony of cession of right in Israel.

8 So Booz said to his kinsman: Put off thy shoe. And immediately he took it off from his foot.

9 And he said to the ancients, and to all the people: You are witnesses this day, that I have bought all that was Elimelech's, and Chelion's, and Mahalon's, of the hand of Noemi:

10 And have taken to wife Ruth, the Moabitess, the wife of Mahalon, to raise up the name of the deceased in his inheritance, lest his name be cut off from among his family and his brethren, and his people. You, I say, are witnesses of this thing.

11 Then all the people that were in the gate, and the ancients, answered: We are witnesses: The Lord make this woman who cometh into thy house, like Rachel, and Lia, who built up the house of Israel: that she may be an example of virtue in Ephrata, and may have a famous name in Bethlehem:

12 And that thy house may be, as the house of Phares, whom Tamar bore unto Juda, of the seed which the Lord shall give thee of this young woman.

* Gen. xxxviii. 29.

13 Booz therefore took Ruth, and married her: and went in unto her, and the Lord gave her to conceive, and to bear a son.

14 And the women said to Noemi: Blessed be the Lord, who hath not suffered thy family to want a successor: that his name should be preserved in Israel.

15 And thou shouldst have one to comfort thy soul, and cherish thy old age. For he is born of thy daughter-in-law: who loveth thee: and is much better to thee, than if thou hadst seven sons.

16 And Noemi taking the child, laid it in her bosom, and she carried it, and was a nurse unto it.

17 And the women, her neighbours, congratulating with her, and saying, There is a son born to Noemi, called his name Obed: he is the father of Isai, the father of David.

18 These are the generations of Phares: *Phares begot Esron,

19 Esron begot Aram, Aram begot Aminadab,

20 Aminadab begot Nahasson, Nahasson begot Salmon,

21 Salmon begot Booz, Booz begot Obed,

22 Obed begot Isai, Isai begot David.

b 1 Par. ii. 5, and xi. 15; Matt. i. 3.

VER. 9. Chelion. As Orpha, his widow, took no care to comply with the law, all his possessions devolved on his brother's posterity. M.—It was presumed that she would marry some Moabite. C.

VER. 10. Moabitess. The sons of Elimelech were excused in taking such women to wife, on account of necessity, and to avoid the danger of incontinence, which is a greater evil. Booz was under another sort of necessity, and was bound to comply with the law (C.); so that he was guilty of no sin, as Beza would pretend. T.—People. Heb. "and from the gate of his place." In the assemblies, the legal son of Mahalon would represent him, though he was also considered as the son of Booz, at least if the latter had no other, as was probably the case.

VER. 11. Israel, by a numerous posterity.—That she. Heb. "mayst thou acquire riches," &c. C.—Prot. "do thou (Booz) worthily in," &c. H.—Ephrata: another name of Bethlehem. Ch.

VER. 12. Phares. His family was chief among the five, descended from Juda. M.

VER. 14. Successor. Heb. "redeemer, that his (Booz, or the Lord's) name," &c. C.

VER. 15. Comfort. Heb. "to make thy soul revive."

VER. 17. Obed; "serving," to comfort the old age of Noemi, (ver. 15,) who gave him this name (Serar. q. 14) at the suggestion of her neighbours. M.

VER. 18. These. Hence the design of the sacred writer becomes evident, (C.) to show the genealogy of David, from whom Christ sprang, as it had been foretold. See Gen. xlix.; Matt. i., &c. W.

VER. 19. Aram. He is called Ram in Heb. and 1 Par. ii. 9.

VER. 20. Salmon. Heb. and Chal. Salma, (H.) though we read Salmon in the following verse. C.—This is one argument adduced by Houbigant, to show that this genealogy is now imperfect. He concludes that Salma ought to be admitted as well as Salmon; and, as the reason for calling the first son of Ruth Obed, "serving or ploughing," seems rather harsh, as we should naturally expect some more glorious title, he thinks that the immediate son of Ruth was called Jachin, "he shall establish;" and that Solomon called one of the pillars before the temple by his name, as he did the other Booz, "in strength," in honour of his ancestors. Bāz icin means, "In strength (or solidity) it (he) shall (stand or) establish." As the son of Booz established his father's house, (ver. 10, 11,) so these pillars denoted the stability of the temple. We must thus allow that the hand of time has mutilated the genealogy of David, and that two ought to be admitted among his ancestors, who have been here omitted, as S. Matthew likewise passes them over as well as three others, who were the descendants of Joram. The same omission of Jachin occurs 1 Par. ii. 11, where we find Salma instead of Salmon. Houbigant supposes that the sacred writers, Esdras and S. Matthew, gave the genealogies as they found them, without correcting the mistakes of transcribers. Chronolog. Sacra, p. 81. Salien and many others assert that there were three of the name of Booz, succeeding each other, so that six persons instead of four fill up the space of 440 years, from the taking of Jericho till the building of the temple. Salien, A. 2741, in which year he places the birth of the third Booz, who married Ruth 70 years afterwards. Petau allows 520 years from the coming out of Egypt till the fourth year of Solomon, so that he leaves above 420 years to the three generations of Booz, Obed, and Isai. But he prudently passes over this chronological difficulty. H.

VER. 22. David, the king, whom Samuel crowned, though he did not live to see him in the full enjoyment of his power, (H.) as he died before Saul. C.—Thus the greatest personages have people of mean condition among their ancestors: that none may be too much elated on account of their high birth. H.

THE

FIRST BOOK OF SAMUEL;

OTHERWISE CALLED,

THE FIRST BOOK OF KINGS.

This and the following Book are called by the Hebrews the Books of Samuel, because they contain the history of Samuel, and of the two kings, Saul and David, whom he anointed. They are more commonly named by the Fathers the First and Second Book of Kings. As to the writer of them, it is the common opinion that Samuel composed the First Book, as far as the twenty-fifth chapter; and that the prophets Nathan and Gad finished the First, and wrote the Second Book. See 1 Par., alias 1 Chronicles, xxix. 19. Ch.—The authors of the Third and Fourth Books of Kings were also prophets, but we know not their names. These works have nevertheless been always esteemed authentic (H.) and canonical. W.—The transactions of Heli, Samuel, and Saul, and the persecutions which David sustained from the latter, form the subject of the First Book, (H.) during the space of 100 years. All the four books carry down the sacred history near 600 years from A. 2849, till the transmigration of Juda, A. 3420. C. Usher.

CHAPTER I.

Anna, the wife of Elcana, being barren, by vow and prayer obtaineth a son : whom she calleth Samuel : and presenteth him to the service of God in Silo, according to her vow.

THERE was a man of Ramathaimsophim, of Mount Ephraim, and his name was Elcana, the son of Jeroham, the son of Eliu, the son of Thohu, the son of Suph, an Ephraimite :

2 And he had two wives, the name of one was Anna, and the name of the other Phenenna. Phenenna had children : but Anna had no children.

3 And this man went up out of his city upon the appointed days, to adore and to offer sacrifice to the Lord of hosts in Silo. And the two sons of Heli, Ophni and Phinees, were there priests of the Lord.

4 Now the day came, and Elcana offered sacrifice, and gave to Phenenna, his wife, and to all her sons and daughters, portions :

5 But to Anna he gave one portion with sorrow, because he loved Anna. And the Lord had shut up her womb.

6 Her rival also afflicted her, and troubled her exceedingly, insomuch that she upbraided her, that the Lord had shut up her womb :

7 And thus she did every year, when the time returned, that they went up to the temple of the Lord : and thus she provoked her : but Anna wept, and did not eat.

8 Then Elcana, her husband, said to her : Anna, why weepest thou ? and why dost thou not eat ? and why dost thou afflict thy heart ? Am not I better to thee than ten children ?

9 So Anna arose after she had eaten and drunk in Silo : And Heli, the priest, sitting upon a stool before the door of the temple of the Lord ;

10 As Anna had her heart full of grief, she prayed to the Lord, shedding many tears,

CHAP. I. VER. 1. There. Heb., Sept., &c. "And there," &c. The books of Scripture are thus frequently connected. The birth of Samuel being so miraculous, deserves to be recorded, as he was the last judge of Israel, and had so much to do under the first of their kings, whose election and misconduct brought a great change into the state of the commonwealth. C.—Ramathaimsophim. Rama, or Ramatha, "a height," and the environs were occupied by the family of Suph, a descendant of Core (1 Par. vi. 29) ; though the place did not properly belong to the Levites. It lay probably between Gabaa and Bethel, where Samuel spent much of his time while he was judge, and obliged to be frequently absent from the tabernacle. C.—Ragusinus and Prince Radzivil think it was afterwards called Arimathea, the birth-place of Joseph, and now Ramula. T. Chap. ii. 11.—Ephraimite. He was of the tribe of Levi, (1 Par. vi. 34,) but is called an Ephraimite from dwelling in Mount Ephraim. Ch.

VER. 3. Days, the three great festivals. His family accompanied him, though the law only lays an express injunction upon the males to attend. We find, however, that females did not neglect to come. C.—Hosts. Heb. (Sabaoth, or Tsobauth,) of "armies," both of angels and of Israel. H.—This title has not appeared in the former books. C.—Elcana might go up from the height of Ramatha to Silo, which was the highest mountain round Jerusalem of all in the Holy Land. Adrichom. T.

VER. 5. With sorrow. Heb. apim, "of faces, indignation, (C.) sorrow" (M.) or that was presented before him. Chal. and many others translate, "a chosen" (C.) : Prot. "a worthy portion." H.—The shew-bread is called, "the bread of the face," because it stood before the Lord. Joseph sent to each of his brethren "a portion of his faces," as the Heb. expresses it (Gen. xliii. 33) ; or of such meat as was placed upon his table. In the East the master of a family has all set before him, and he sends to each his portion, to the place where he is sitting. Chardin, Persc.—Thus Elcana sent some more excellent, or "double," part to his beloved Anna, (C.) grieving inwardly that she had no children, to whom he might also send. H.—Womb. Sterility was deemed a curse, and a mark of God's displeasure, with which women were often reproached. Hence Anna prays so earnestly that God would be mindful of her, ver. 11—19. The power of the Almighty, in giving children to the barren, is frequently mentioned. Gen. xxviii. 13—Psal. cxii. 9. C.—Luke i. 25, &c. H.

11 And she made a vow, saying : O Lord of hosts, if thou wilt look down, and wilt be mindful of me, and not forget thy handmaid, and wilt give to thy servant a man-child : I will give him to the Lord all the days of his life, and no razor shall come upon his head.

12 And it came to pass, as she multiplied prayers before the Lord, that Heli observed her mouth.

13 Now Anna spoke in her heart, and only her lips moved, but her voice was not heard at all. Heli therefore thought her to be drunk,

14 And said to her : How long wilt thou be drunk ? digest a little the wine, of which thou hast taken too much.

15 Anna answering, said : Not so, my lord : for I am an exceeding unhappy woman, and have drunk neither wine nor any strong drink, but I have poured out my soul before the Lord.

16 Count not thy handmaid for one of the daughters of Belial : for out of the abundance of my sorrow and grief have I spoken till now.

17 Then Heli said to her : Go in peace : and the God of Israel grant thee thy petition, which thou hast asked of him.

18 And she said : Would to God thy handmaid may find grace in thy eyes. So the woman went on her way, and ate, and her countenance was no more changed.

19 And they rose in the morning, and worshipped before the Lord : and they returned, and came into their house at Ramatha. And Elcana knew Anna his wife. And the Lord remembered her.

20 And it came to pass when the time was come about, Anna conceived and bore a son, and called his name Samuel : because she had asked him of the Lord.

21 And Elcana, her husband, went up, and all his house, to offer to the Lord the solemn sacrifice, and his vow.

b A. M. 2849, A. C. 1155.

VER. 9. Silo ; either in some private house, or in the porch before the tabernacle. She complied with the entreaty of her husband. M.—Stool. Heb. "Heli was sitting upon a throne, near the steps, leading to the palace of the Lord." It is also called the temple, or the house of God, though it was only a tent. Matt. xii. 4, &c. Perhaps women were not allowed to go beyond the porch.

VER. 11. A vow ; rightly trusting that her husband would give his consent. Num. xxx. 7.—Razor. Heb. mure, "scissors." Sept. "iron." Some copies add, "he shall not drink wine, nor any intoxicating drink." In quality of Levite, Samuel was bound to serve the tabernacle from twenty-five or thirty years of age till he was fifty. Num. iv. 2. Anna consecrates him to the Lord for life, and promises that he shall be a Nazarite, like Samson, and S. John Baptist. The law prescribes no rules for these perpetual Nazarites. Num. vi. 3. Many of the ancients believe that Samuel always observed the prescriptions of Moses, and abstained from intoxicating liquors ; though the Heb. and Vulg. are silent on this head. We find that during his administration as judge, he was not able to continue always near the tabernacle. C.—When he came to years of discretion he might depart, if he thought proper, like other Levites. Had he been of any other tribe, he must have been redeemed. W.—Esther, Elcana, or Samuel, might have annulled this vow. Salicn, A. 2900.

VER. 14. Much. Heli's "son or servant," (παῖδας, according to the Sept.,) addressed these words to Anna. Her going to pray immediately after a feast, instead of taking recreation, increased the suspicion. S. Chrys. hom. 1.—Salicn (A. C. 1153) observes the many instances of patience which Anna exhibits on this occasion. H.—She teaches us not to answer the unjust reproaches of our superiors with haughtiness. D.

VER. 16. Belial ; "without restraint ;" abandoned. H.—Sept. "pestiferous."

VER. 18. Eyes : that thou wouldst lay aside thy suspicions against my character, and pray (C.) that I may obtain so great a happiness.—Changed. Heb. "no more," as it had been, sad, and defaced with tears. H.—She was now full of hope and joy. M.—Sept. "her countenance fell not." She was not moved with anger or with jealousy. Gen. iv. 6. C.

VER. 20. Samuel. This name imports, asked of God. Ch.

VER. 21. Vow, in consequence of his son's nativity. The sacrifice might be 22 But Anna went not up: for she said to her husband: I will not go till the child be weaned, and till I may carry him, that he may appear before the Lord, and may abide always there.

23 And Elcana, her husband, said to her: Do what seemeth good to thee, and stay till thou wean him: and I pray that the Lord may fulfil his word. So the woman staid at home, and gave her son suck, till she weaned him.

24 And after she had weaned him, she carried him with her, with three calves, and three bushels of flour, and a bottle of wine, and she brought him to the house of the Lord in Silo. Now the child was as yet very young:

25 And they immolated a calf, and offered the child to Heli.

26 And Anna said: I beseech thee, my lord, as thy soul liveth, my lord: I am that woman, who stood before thee here praying to the Lord.

27 For this child did I pray, and the Lord hath granted me my petition, which I asked of him.

28 Therefore I also have lent him to the Lord all the days of his life, he shall be lent to the Lord. And they adored the Lord there. And Anna prayed, and said:

CHAP. II.

The canticle of Anna. The wickedness of the sons of Heli: for which they are not duly corrected by their father. A prophecy against the house of Heli.

MY heart hath rejoiced in the Lord, and my horn is exalted in my God: my mouth is enlarged over my enemies: because I have joyed in thy salvation.

2 There is none holy as the Lord is: for there is no other beside thee, and there is none strong like our God.

of precept, such as the paschal lamb, or for his wife's purification, and the redemption of his first-born, as they could not attend in person. C.

VER. 22. Weaned. The mother of the Machabees weaned her children when they were three years old (2 Mac. vii. 27); which Gallien asserts is the proper time, though Avicenna fixes upon two years. See Gen. xxi. 8.

VER. 24. Three calves. Sept. "a calf three years old," such as Abraham sacrificed, Gen. xv. 9. We only find one offered up, ver. 25.—Bushels. Heb. ephā, (C.) each of which contained three bushels or measures, Ruth ii. 17. H.—Bottle. Heb. nobol, a large measure containing above eighty-seven pints. C.

VER. 28. Lent. This is equivalent to giving entirely. Anna presents her son to the Lord, to serve in his tabernacle as long as God shall think proper. He dispensed with his personal attendance, when he appointed him judge. Chap. vii. 15. C.—As much as depended on Samuel's mother, he was consecrated for ever. But he was at liberty to ratify the vow if he pleased. M.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Rejoiced. Sept. and Chal. "been strengthened." Anna composed this canticle at the nativity of her son; or rather at his presentation in the tabernacle. She foretells the reign and glory of the Messias, and of his church. S. Aug. de C. xvii. 4.—Horn. The horn in the Scripture signifies strength, power, and glory: so the horn is said to be exalted, when a person receives an increase of strength or glory. Ch.—Enlarged. Chal. "I have opened my mouth, to speak great things against my enemies."

VER. 2. Holy. This is frequently a title of God, the Holy One of Israel. Isa. i. 4, and v. 19. He is essentially holy.—Strong. Heb. "no rock like," &c. The rocks of Palestine were the common fortresses of the nation, having caverns to which the people fled for refuge. Hence God is often called a rock, (C.) as none can afford such protection. H. Psal. xvii. 2; Deut. xxxii. 15.

VER. 3. Old. Heb. athok means also "hard things." D.—"Let arrogance come out of your mouth," to return no more. Yet most people supply the negation from the former member; "Let not arrogance or hard things." Chal. "blasphemy," &c. C.—Cease to praise idols, as you have done. W.—Use not the malevolent language to which you have been accustomed.—Knowledge. The secrets of hearts are open to him.—And to him. Heb. "and by him actions are weighed," as in scales (H.); or, "thoughts (and actions) are not established." Sym.

VER. 4. Overcome. Heb. "broken." Sept. "he has weakened the bow," having deprived it of its elasticity. H.

VER. 5. Many. Heb. "seven," which is often used in the same sense. Anna had never more than six children (C.); whereas Phenenna had perhaps ten. Chap. i. 8 and iii. 21. H.—The blessed Virgin conveys the same idea in other words. Luke i. M.

VER. 6. Hell, (inferos), "the lower regions." God calls us out of this 3 Do not multiply to speak lofty things, boasting: let old matters depart from your mouth: for the Lord is a God of all knowledge, and to him are thoughts prepared.

4 The bow of the mighty is overcome, and the weak are girt with strength.

5 They that were full before, have hired out themselves for bread: and the hungry are filled, so that the barren hath borne many: and she that had many children is weakened.

6 *The Lord killeth and maketh alive, he bringeth down to hell, and bringeth back again.

7 The Lord maketh poor and maketh rich, he humbleth and he exalteth:

8 He raiseth up the needy from the dust, and lifteth up the poor from the dunghill: that he may sit with princes, and hold the throne of glory. For the poles of the earth are the Lord's, and upon them he hath set the world.

9 He will keep the feet of his saints, and the wicked shall be silent in darkness; because no man shall prevail by his own strength.

10 The adversaries of the Lord shall fear him: and upon them shall he thunder in the heavens: The Lord shall judge the ends of the earth, and he shall give empire to his king, and shall exalt the horn of his Christ.

11 And Elcana went to Ramatha, to his house: but the child ministered in the sight of the Lord before the face of Heli the priest.

12 Now the sons of Heli were children of Belial, not knowing the Lord,

13 Nor the office of the priests to the people: but whosoever had offered a sacrifice, the servant of the priest world, or restores the dead to life, as he thinks proper. H.—He easily makes the greatest prosperity succeed extreme distress, which is often denoted by death, hell, &c. C.

VER. 7. Exalteth. The same instances of God's power and providence are related, Psal. cxii. 7; Luke i. 52. M.

VER. 8. World. The Hebrews represented the earth as resting on a firm basis, or on pillars, or turning on poles. Psal. ciii. 5; Prov. viii. 25, &c. The magistrates of the earth may be also thus designated, as the world is intrusted to their care. God compares Jeremias to an iron pillar. Jer. i. 16; Apoc. iii. 12 C.—The last sentence is omitted in the Sept.

VER. 9. Saints. Heb. "kind, merciful, pious ones" (C.); those to whom he shows mercy, and who comply with his will in assisting others. Sept. "Granting their petition to those who ask him, and he has blessed the years of the just, because man is not strong by his own strength." H.—Silent: condemned to death.

VER. 10. Him. Sept. "The Lord will render his adversary weak. The holy Lord. Let not the prudent boast of his prudence," &c. (H, which seems to be added from Jer. ix. 23. C.) "The Lord has mounted the heavens, and thundered. He judges the ends of the earth, and gives power to those who rule, as kings, over us," &c. H.—Heavens. This prediction against the Philistines was exactly verified. Chap. vii. 10. It denotes the protection which God grants to his servants. Psal. xvii. 8, 14.—Christ. Chaldee, and the best interpreters understand this of the Messias: "He will multiply the kingdom of his Messias." Jonathan.—Anna might also have David in view, who was one of his most express figures. C.—But neither he, nor Solomon, ever ruled over all the earth, as Christ will. Psal. ii. 18. W.—Zachary seems to allude to this text. Luke i. 69. C.—The empire of Christ rose from the smallest beginnings. M.

VER. 11. Ramatha. Heb. Rama. Sept. Alex. "and they left him there before the Lord, and went away to Arnathaim." H.

VER. 12. The Lord, whom they denied by their works. Tit. i. 16.

VER. 13. Nor the office. The Vulg. repeats the negation from the preceding sentence. Others translate, "The priests' custom with the people was," &c., or, "the pretended right of the priests," &c. They neither performed their duty towards God, (C.) nor were they content with what the law authorized them to receive from the people. H.—Servant, or son; perhaps Ophni or Phineas.—Boiling. In the heroic times the meat was never boiled, but roasted. Athen. i. 10, and Servius; though Hesiod asserts the contrary, v. 748. C.—Abulensis (q. 8) observes that the person who offered the victim boiled the parts which belonged to himself, as well as the priest's share. But, whereas in the peace-offerings only the breast and the right shoulder fell to the priest, these rapacious men took whatever they pleased. M came, while the flesh was in boiling, with a flesh-hook of three teeth in his hand,

14 And thrust it into the kettle, or into the cauldron, or into the pot, or into the pan : and all that the flesh-hook brought up, the priest took to himself. Thus did they to all Israel that came to Silo.

15 Also before they burnt the fat, the servant of the priest came, and said to the man that sacrificed : Give me flesh to boil for the priest : for I will not take of thee sodden flesh, but raw.

16 And he that sacrificed said to him : Let the fat first be burnt to-day, according to the custom, and then take as much as thy soul desireth. But he answered, and said to him : Not so : but thou shalt give it me now, or else I will take it by force.

17 Wherefore the sin of the young men was exceeding great before the Lord : because they withdrew men from the sacrifice of the Lord.

18 But Samuel ministered before the face of the Lord : being a child girded with a linen ephod.

19 And his mother made him a little coat, which she brought to him on the appointed days, when she went up with her husband, to offer the solemn sacrifice.

20 And Heli blessed Elcana and his wife : and he said to him : The Lord give thee seed of this woman, for the loan thou hast lent to the Lord. And they went to their own home.

21 And the Lord visited Anna, and she conceived, and bore three sons, and two daughters : and the child Samuel became great before the Lord.

22 Now Heli was very old, and he heard all that his sons did to all Israel : and how they lay with the women that waited at the door of the tabernacle :

VER. 14. Pan. Heb. has also four terms, but their precise meaning cannot be determined. The vessels were of different forms, or intended for various uses.

VER. 15. Raw. Here are two other abuses. The fat ought first to have been burnt, in honour of the Lord ; and the meat should have been boiled, in order that the priest might not be taken off from his sacred functions ; as custom, it seems, had determined, though the law be silent on this head.

VER. 17. Lord. People, seeing that the law was not observed, refrained from presenting victims. M.—They are but too apt to follow the bad example of their teachers. H.—Hence God punishes the smallest faults of his ministers with great severity, since they withdraw people from his service by their scandalous behaviour, and are guilty of a more horrid sacrilege than those who laid violent hands on the Lord of majesty. S. Bern. ser. 1. Nothing brings a greater discredit on religion. C.

VER. 18. Ephod. It was not, therefore, peculiar to priests, 2 Kings vi. 14.

VER. 19. Coat. Heb. nâil, the outer garment. Hence it appears that the parents of people consecrated to the Lord furnished them with clothes, till they were able to serve the tabernacle, otherwise they would have been a burden to it. C.

VER. 20. Lent. This was in reply to what Anna had said. Chap. i. 28. H.—God always gives back with interest. M.

VER. 21. Lord. He behaved well in the tabernacle, (C.) notwithstanding the ill example of Heli's own sons. H.

VER. 22. Waited, like an army of guards. Exod. xxxviii. 8. C.—The virgins or widows gave themselves up to work for the tabernacle. M.—The sons of Heli found an opportunity in the sacred practices of religion to gratify their passions.

VER. 23. People. They could not refrain from complaining of the iniquity of his children, how much soever they might revere him. Though he was not a witness himself of their abominations, such an uproar must have convinced him that they were guilty. H.—The Fathers in general blame the lenity of the high priest, who ought not only to have rebuked, but also to have put a stop to the crying sins of his sons, by the utmost severity. C.

VER. 25. Who shall pray for him? By these words Heli would have his sons understand, that by their wicked abuse of sacred things, and of the very sacrifices which were appointed to appease the Lord, they deprived themselves of the ordinary means of reconciliation with God ; which was by sacrifices. The more, because as they were the chief priests, whose business it was to intercede for all others, they had no other to offer sacrifice and to make atonement for them. Ch.—We need not, however, consider the words of Heli as an oracle of God. Sanchez.—In human transactions a person would find more difficulty in obtaining pardon, when the judge himself had received the injury. Sept. instead 23 And he said to them : Why do ye these kinds of things, which I hear, very wicked things, from all the people ?

24 Do not so, my sons : for it is no good report that I hear, that you make the people of the Lord to transgress.

25 If one man shall sin against another, God may be appeased in his behalf : but if a man shall sin against the Lord, who shall pray for him ? And they hearkened not to the voice of their father, because the Lord would slay them.

26 But the child Samuel advanced, and grew on, and pleased both the Lord and men.

27 And there came a man of God to Heli, and said to him : Thus saith the Lord : Did I not plainly appear to thy father's house, when they were in Egypt in the house of Pharaoh ?

28 And I chose him out of all the tribes of Israel to be my priest, to go up to my altar, and burn incense to me, and to wear the ephod before me : and I gave to thy father's house of all the sacrifices of the children of Israel.

29 Why have you kicked away my victims, and my gifts which I commanded to be offered in the temple : and thou hast rather honoured thy sons than me, to eat the first-fruits of every sacrifice of my people Israel ?

30 Wherefore thus saith the Lord the God of Israel : I said indeed that thy house, and the house of thy father, should minister in my sight for ever. But now saith the Lord : Far be this from me : but whosoever shall glorify me, him will I glorify : but they that despise me, shall be despised.

31 Behold the days come : and I will cut off thy arm, of appeased, have "and they shall pray for him." M.—Some may be found to plead his cause, but if he have offended the judge, who will undertake to be his advocate ? What medicines shall be used, when those which God has appointed are trodden under foot ? H.—By persevering in such wickedness, no redress can be expected : and, indeed, the infinite distance between God and man would place an insuperable obstacle to a reconciliation, if Jesus Christ had not undertaken the cause even of the most desperate sinner. C.—Because the Lord would slay them. In consequence of their manifold sacrileges, he would not soften their hearts with his efficacious grace, but was determined to destroy them. Ch.—They had filled up the measure of their crimes ; and, though God wills not the death of a sinner, they had treasured up to themselves wrath, which he will now display. We might also translate ci, "therefore," (Noldius. Osee ix. 15, &c.) or "that." They would not be convinced that the threat of their father would be executed. Schmid. C.—Sins directly against God, and which hinder his service, are remitted with greater difficulty, though to all true penitents pardon is promised. Ezec. xxxiii. God did not take away the free-will of Ophni and Phinees, but left them to their own obstinacy, and justly punished them. See S. Aug. c. Jul. v. 3. W.—They had already rendered themselves unworthy of extraordinary graces. T S. Tho. 1 p. q. 23, n. 3.

VER. 26. And men. Thus he is, in some degree, compared with our Saviour. Luke ii. 52. When one minister prevaricates, God presently raises up another, so that he never abandons his Church. H.

VER. 28. Ephod, and all the pontifical attire. H.—The high priest wore a different sort of ephod from that of other people. C.—All the, &c. Even of the holocausts the priests received the skin. M.

VER. 29. Away, by scandalizing the people, and causing them to neglect offering the appointed victims. H.—To eat. Heli seems to have refrained from divesting his sons of their high office, that the riches of his family might not be impaired. C.

VER. 30. Ever. God had promised the priesthood to Aaron's seed (C.) as long as the Jewish religion should subsist. H.—He had also selected the branch of Eleazar, to recompense the zeal of Phinees (Num. xxv. 13) ; and yet we find that the house of Ithamar had possession for a time of the high priesthood. We know not when or by what means they obtained it. The Scripture insinuates that Heli was appointed by God, and that his descendants would have enjoyed his office, if they had not offended. C.—These promises were of a conditional nature both to Phinees and to Heli, and Sadoc, ver. 35. See Num. xxv. &c. H.

VER. 31. Arm, strength or children. I will slay some ; others I will reduce to extreme want. C.—Old man, to govern. D.—It is often a title of dignity. But and the arm of thy father's house, that there shall not be an old man in thy house.

32 And thou shalt see thy rival in the temple, in all the prosperity of Israel, and there shall not be an old man in thy house for ever.

33 However, I will not altogether take away a man of thee from my altar: but that thy eyes may faint, and thy soul be spent: and a great part of thy house shall die, when they come to man's estate.

34 And this shall be a sign to thee, that shall come upon thy two sons, Ophni and Phinees: In one day they shall both of them die.

35 And I will raise me up a faithful priest, who shall do according to my heart, and my soul: and I will build him a faithful house, and he shall walk all days before my anointed.

36 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall remain in thy house shall come that he may be prayed for, and shall offer a piece of silver, and a roll of bread, and shall say: Put me, I beseech thee, to somewhat of the priestly office, that I may eat a morsel of bread.

CHAP. III.

Samuel is four times called by the Lord: who revealeth to him the evil that shall fall on Heli and his house.

NOW the child Samuel ministered to the Lord before Heli, and the word of the Lord was precious in those days, there was no manifest vision.

2 And it came to pass one day when Heli lay in his place, and his eyes were grown dim, that he could not see:

3 Before the lamp of God went out, Samuel slept in the temple of the Lord, where the ark of God was.

4 And the Lord called Samuel. And he answered: Here am I.

5 And he ran to Heli, and said: Here am I: for thou didst call me. He said: I did not call: go back and sleep. And he went and slept.

6 And the Lord called Samuel again. And Samuel arose and went to Heli, and said: Here am I: for thou calledst me. He answered: I did not call thee, my son: return and sleep.

7 Now Samuel did not yet know the Lord, neither had the word of the Lord been revealed to him.

8 And the Lord called Samuel again the third time. And he arose up and went to Heli,

9 And said: Here am I: for thou didst call me. Then Heli understood that the Lord called the child, and he said to Samuel: Go, and sleep: and if he shall call thee any more, thou shalt say: Speak Lord, for thy servant heareth. So Samuel went, and slept in his place.

10 And the Lord came, and stood, and he called, as he had called the other times, Samuel, Samuel. And Samuel said: Speak Lord, for thy servant heareth.

11 And the Lord said to Samuel: Behold I do a thing in Israel: and whosoever shall hear it, both his ears shall tingle.

12 In that day I will raise up against Heli all the things I have spoken concerning his house: I will begin, and I will make an end.

13 For I have foretold unto him, that I will judge his house for ever, for iniquity, because he knew that his sons did wickedly, and did not chastise them.

14 Therefore have I sworn to the house of Heli, that the iniquity of his house shall not be expiated with victims nor offerings for ever.

15 And Samuel slept till morning, and opened the doors of the house of the Lord. And Samuel feared to tell the vision to Heli.

16 Then Heli called Samuel, and said: Samuel, my son. And he answered: Here am I.

17 And he asked him: What is the word that the Lord hath spoken to thee? I beseech thee hide it not from me. May God do so and so to thee, and add so and so, if thou hide from me one word of all that were said to thee.

18 So Samuel told him all the words, and did not hide them from him. And he answered: It is the Lord: let him do what is good in his sight.

the four succeeding pontiffs did not live long. In the course of little more than one hundred years the last was deposed. C.

VER. 32. Thy rival. A priest of another race. This was partly fulfilled when Abiathar, of the race of Heli, was removed from the priesthood, and Sadoc, who was of another line, was substituted in his place. But it was more fully accomplished in the New Testament, when the priesthood of Aaron gave place to that of Christ. Ch.

VER. 35. Faithful often denotes what shall continue a long time. Isa. xxxiii. 16, and lv. 3. C.—But in the conduct of Sadoc we find nothing reprehensible. M.—This faithful priest pointed out the Christian priesthood, as the sequel shows. C.—All days. He shall perform his office. H.—Anointed, king Solomon. M.—The priests of the new law ought always to have Christ in view. C.

VER. 36. Bread; like the poorest sort of people. M.—Being degraded, they shall ask the other priests to offer sacrifice for them. Heb. “shall bend before him for a piece of silver, and for a morsel of bread.” He shall humbly entreat to be employed as a priest, in order to get a livelihood. The piece of silver, Heb. aguroth, probably denotes the gerah, the smallest coin, or what was given for a day's wages. Agor means to hire, in Chal., Syr., &c. Hence the Greek αγοραζω, “I purchase.”—Office. The priests served in their turns (1 Par. xiv.); so that the descendants of Heli must have been entitled to a subsistence. But whether God punished them, by requiring that they should ask the high priest for this, as for a favour, or this was required of all the inferior priests before they could be employed, or whether, in fine, the descendants of Abiathar were reduced to the condition of the Levites, or wholly degraded, we know not. Sec 4 Kings xxiii. 9; Ezec. xlv. 10. C.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Before. Chal. “in the days of Heli.” The young Levite slept in an adjoining chamber, to wait on the high priest, not far from the sanctuary.—Precious; that is, rare (Ch.): as such things are generally more esteemed, (H.) which are granted to few. W.—Some prophets had appeared under the former judges: but they were not so common as they were from the days of Samuel till a little after the captivity. S. Peter ranks Samuel in the first place. Acts iii. 24. C.—Vision. No prophet was publicly recognised to whom the people might have recourse. M.

VER. 3. Out, towards morning, (C. Exod. xxvii. 20,) when some of the lamps were to be extinguished. W.—Samuel slept. Some would transpose these words to the end of the verse, as they think it improbable that Samuel should be in the place where the high priest himself could enter only once a year. Vatab., &c.—But this change seems harsh and unnecessary, as Heli and Samuel might be in apartments contiguous to the holy place. Sanctius. M. C.—During the night none of the priests would be in the sanctuary, so that Heli might form a judgment that none of them had called Samuel. T.

VER. 11. Tingle, through astonishment and fright. Jer. xix. 3; 4 Kings xxi. 12.

VER. 13. Wickedly. Sept. “were cursing God.” This is one of the places which the Jews have corrected. D.—Judge; or condemn and punish. Prov. xix. 29. C.—Chastise them, not in words only, or in a soft manner, as he had done. It is not sufficient to reprove, when a father can correct. H.

VER. 14. Sicorn. We read not of an express oath (C.): but the denunciation of God was equivalent. H.—Iniquity, or punishment. Nothing could withhold the indignation of the Lord, in correcting the sinner, though he would show mercy eternally to the penitent. C.

VER. 15. Slept. Heb. and Sept. “laid himself down to sleep.” For how could he take any rest after such terrible threats (C.)? particularly as light was beginning to appear, when he was called by God, ver. 3.—Doors. Some walls had probably been built to enclose the curtains of the tabernacle. A priest would have been employed to open the sanctuary. C.

VER. 17. And so. Lit. “May God do these things to thee, and add these also.” It is not certain that he mentioned the particular punishments, (H.) though it is most probable. The Scripture refrains from repeating them. Grot.—Ruth i. 17. C.

VER. 18. Sight. Some of the Fathers think that these words proceeded 19 And Samuel grew, and the Lord was with him, and not one of his words fell to the ground.

20 And all Israel, from Dan to Bersabee, knew that Samuel was a faithful prophet of the Lord.

21 And the Lord again appeared in Silo, for the Lord revealed himself to Samuel in Silo, according to the word of the Lord. And the word of Samuel came to pass to all Israel.

CHAP. IV.

The Israelites being overcome by the Philistines, send for the ark of God: but they are beaten again: the sons of Heli are killed, and the ark taken: upon the hearing of the news Heli falleth backward and dieth.

AND it came to pass in those days,* that the Philistines gathered themselves together to fight: and Israel went out to war against the Philistines, and camped by the Stone of help. And the Philistines came to Aphec,

2 And put their army in array against Israel. And when they had joined battle, Israel turned their backs to the Philistines: and there were slain in that fight, here and there in the fields, about four thousand men.

3 And the people returned to the camp: and the ancients of Israel said: Why hath the Lord defeated us to-day before the Philistines? Let us fetch unto us the ark of the covenant of the Lord from Silo, and let it come in the midst of us, that it may save us from the hand of our enemies.

4 So the people sent to Silo, and they brought from thence the ark of the covenant of the Lord of hosts, sitting upon the cherubims: and the two sons of Heli, Ophni and Phinees, were with the ark of the covenant of God.

5 And when the ark of the covenant of the Lord was come into the camp, all Israel shouted with a great shout, and the earth rang again.

6 And the Philistines heard the noise of the shout, and they said: What is this noise of a great shout in the camp from an habitual indifference, as he was not disposed to molest his sons any further, let the consequences be what they might. S. Greg., S. Ephrem, &c.—But others believe that Heli was actuated by the spirit of humility and resignation, and saved his soul. C. See chap. iv. 18.

VER. 19. Ground, unfulfilled. This may be understood of the words of the Lord, (C.) which Samuel had announced. His other predictions were constantly verified, so that he was justly regarded as a true prophet. H.

VER. 20. Faithful. Heb. Namon, may be a title of dignity, or may signify that Samuel was confirmed and continued to be a prophet. C.

VER. 21. According to, or by. God revealed his will to him by word, and not by visions. Sanctus.—Israel. The whole people suffered along with their leaders. H.—They were concerned in the prediction which was denounced against the house of Heli. M.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. And. Heb. inserts here the conclusion of the last verse, whence some would infer that Samuel told the Israelites to make war upon the Philistines. But as it turned out so ill, this would have tended to discredit him; and we find that the Philistines were the aggressors.—Days. This war took place immediately after the threats denounced to Heli (Serarius); or, according to Usher and the best chronologists, about twenty-seven years after that event. C.—The addition of the Sept. seems to insinuate that the sons of Heli persevered for a long time in their wicked course. Chap. iii. 20. H.—Josephus says that Phinees was his father's coadjutor.—Salien observes that this must be considered as a fresh blot in the character of the latter, since he ought to have delivered the delinquents up to execution. Dent. xxi. 16. Tirin, on the contrary, adduces the power of his sons, and the debilitated state of Heli, to excuse his neglect. H.—Help. In Heb. Eben-ezer; so called from the help which the Lord was pleased afterwards to give to his people Israel, in that place, by the prayers of Samuel. chap. vii. 12, (Ch.) about twenty-one years afterwards.—Aphec, in the tribe of Juda, not far from Maspha.

VER. 3. Ancients; the commanders of the respective tribes.—Enemies. All nations attribute much to the exterior marks of religion. The Israelites had witnessed the victories which had been obtained while the ark was present. Jos. vi. 4. See Num. xiv. 45. But they ought to have considered that their infidelity rendered them unworthy of the Divine protection; and that God was more displeased at their profanations than at the indignity to which the sacred vessels would be exposed.

7 And the Philistines were afraid, saying: God is come into the camp. And sighing, they said:

8 Woe to us: for there was such great joy yesterday, and the day before: Woe to us. Who shall deliver us from the hand of these high Gods? these are the Gods that struck Egypt with all the plagues in the desert.

9 Take courage, and behave like men, ye Philistines: lest you come to be servants to the Hebrews, as they have served you: take courage and fight.

10 So the Philistines fought, and Israel was overthrown, and every man fled to his own dwelling: and there was an exceeding great slaughter; for there fell of Israel thirty thousand footmen.

11 And the ark of God was taken: and the two sons of Heli, Ophni and Phinees, were slain.

12 And there ran a man of Benjamin out of the army, and came to Silo the same day, with his clothes rent, and his head strewed with dust.

13 And when he was come, Heli sat upon a stool over against the way, watching. For his heart was fearful for the ark of God. And when the man was come into the city, he told it: and all the city cried out.

14 And Heli heard the noise of the cry, and he said: What meaneth the noise of this uproar? But he made haste, and came, and told Heli.

15 Now Heli was ninety and eight years old, and his eyes were dim, and he could not see.

16 And he said to Heli: I am he that came from the battle, and have fled out of the field this day. And he said to him: What is there done, my son?

17 And he that brought the news answered, and said: Israel is fled before the Philistines, and there has been a great slaughter of the people: moreover thy two sons, Ophni and Phinees, are dead: and the ark of God is taken.

dered them unworthy of the Divine protection; and that God was more displeased at their profanations than at the indignity to which the sacred vessels would be exposed.

VER. 4. Ark. On this extraordinary emergency they thought it lawful. Abulensis, q. 6.—They easily obtained the consent of Heli; and his sons went to take it down, and to attend it to the army, as he was incapable of doing duty. C.—Cherubim. The Scripture often represents God in this manner. Exod. xxv. 22; Psal. xvii. 10; Eze. x. 1. C.

VER. 7. God: "Aleim." Sept. "these gods." They speak of the true God according to their false ideas. C.—Sighing. Sept. "deliver us, O Lord, this day."

VER. 8. Joy. A few days before the Hebrews were dismayed, now they shout for joy, as they did at the taking of Jericho. Heb. and Sept. "it was not so heretofore." H.—Gods. Heb. may be rendered in the singular, with the Chal. and Arab. But the Sept., and most commentators, explain it in the sense of the Vulg. C.—Sept. σπεῖων, means, "stable, perfect," &c. H.—Plagues, till they were overwhelmed in the Red Sea, which is surrounded with deserts. Some supply, "and (his people) in the desert." Sept., Syr., &c. C.

VER. 9. Fight. To serve those whom they had lately oppressed, would be doubly afflicting. Salien.

VER. 10. Footmen. They had no cavalry, (C.) as God seemed to discourage any. H.—Even after Solomon's time they had not many horsemen. C.—The Israelites had before lost 4000: now when they were full of confidence, and fought with valour, they behold 30,000 fall. The ark proved thus fatal to them. H.

VER. 11. Slain. Abulensis (q. 17) thinks they were fighting in defence of the ark, when they might have saved themselves by flight; so that he does not despair of their salvation. God permitted them to lose their lives in the exercise of a holy ministry, which they had so scandalously profaned. C.

VER. 13. Stool. Heb. casa; "a throne or tribunal," where Heli sat to decide any controversies, and where he had blessed the mother of Samuel. C.

VER. 17. Taken. Every sentence expresses something more distressing to the aged judge and father; the flight and slaughter of his people, the ruin of his children, and the loss of the ark, which must have filled all Israel with a mortal gloom and terror, lest God should have abandoned them. So many dismal cir-

18 And when he had named the ark of God, he fell from his stool backwards by the door, and broke his neck and died. For he was an old man, and far advanced in years: And he judged Israel forty years.

19 And his daughter-in-law, the wife of Phinees, was big with child, and near her time: and hearing the news that the ark of God was taken, and her father-in-law, and her husband, were dead, she bowed herself and fell in labour: for her pains came upon her on a sudden.

20 And when she was upon the point of death, they that stood about her said to her: Fear not, for thou hast borne a son. She answered them not, nor gave heed to them.

21 And she called the child Ichabod, saying: The glory is gone from Israel, because the ark of God was taken, and for her father-in-law, and for her husband:

22 And she said: The glory is departed from Israel, because the ark of God was taken.

CHAP. V.

Dagon twice falleth down before the ark. The Philistines are grievously afflicted, wherever the ark cometh.

AND^a the Philistines took the ark of God, and carried it from the Stone of help into Azotus.

2 And the Philistines took the ark of God, and brought it into the temple of Dagon, and set it by Dagon.

3 And when the Azotians arose early the next day, behold Dagon lay upon his face on the ground before the ark of the Lord: and they took Dagon, and set him again in his place.

4 And the next day again, when they rose in the morning, they found Dagon lying upon his face on the earth before the ark of the Lord: and the head of Dagon, and both the palms of his hands, were cut off upon the threshold:

5 And only the stump of Dagon remained in its place.

^a A. M. 2888.

For this cause neither the priests of Dagon, nor any that go into the temple, tread on the threshold of Dagon in Azotus unto this day.

6 And the hand of the Lord was heavy upon the Azotians, and he destroyed them,^b and afflicted Azotus and the coasts thereof with emerods. And in the villages and fields in the midst of that country, there came forth a multitude of mice, and there was the confusion of a great mortality in the city.

7 And the men of Azotus seeing this kind of plague, said: The ark of the God of Israel shall not stay with us: for his hand is heavy upon us, and upon Dagon, our god.

8 And sending, they gathered together all the lords of the Philistines to them, and said: What shall we do with the ark of the God of Israel? And the Gethites answered: Let the ark of the God of Israel be carried about. And they carried the ark of the God of Israel about.

9 And while they were carrying it about, the hand of the Lord came upon every city with an exceeding great slaughter: and he smote the men of every city, both small and great, and they had emerods in their secret parts. And the Gethites consulted together, and made themselves seats of skins.

10 Therefore they sent the ark of God into Accaron. And when the ark of God was come into Accaron, the Accaronites cried out, saying: They have brought the ark of the God of Israel to us, to kill us and our people.

11 They sent therefore, and gathered together all the lords of the Philistines: and they said: Send away the ark of the God of Israel, and let it return into its own place, and not kill us and our people.

12 For there was the fear of death in every city, and the hand of God was exceeding heavy. The men also that did not die, were afflicted with the emerods: and the cry of every city went up to heaven.

^b Psal. lxxvii. 66.

circumstances oppressing the heart of Heli, he fainted away, and falling backwards, expired. H.

VER. 18. Named the ark, &c. There is great reason, by all these circumstances, to hope that Heli died in the state of grace; and, by his temporal punishments, escaped the eternal. Ch.—But many of the Fathers condemn him, and the Scripture says nothing of his conversion, or of that of his children, so that the matter is doubtful. C.—Years. Heb. “and heavy.”—Forty. Sept. “twenty,” in which they are followed by many Fathers. Euseb., Sulpit., &c.—Some reconcile the two texts, by saying that Heli and Samson judged together for twenty years. But the Sept. is probably corrupted, as the other versions agree with the original. C.

VER. 19. Sudden, through extreme affliction. M.

VER. 21. Ichabod. That is, Where is the glory? or, There is no glory. We see how much the Israelites lamented the loss of the ark, which was but the symbol of God's presence amongst them. How much more ought Christians to lament the loss of God himself, when by sin they have driven him out of their souls? Ch.—The ark is often called the glory of Israel. Isa. lxiv. 21; Psal. xxv. 8.—The Scripture does not mention Ophni's posterity. But besides this posthumous son, Phinees had one elder, who now succeeded Heli in the pontificate, (chap. xiv. 3. Josephus. Salien, A. 2940, A. C. 1113,) while Samuel took possession of the civil administration, and almost totally eclipsed the glory of Achitob. Many of the Fathers have even looked upon him as the high priest. But he was only a Levite, though, by dispensation, he acted sometimes as an extraordinary priest. 3. Jerom c. Jov. 1, and in 1 Cor. H.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Azotus, one of the five principal cities of the Philistines. It is astonishing that God permits these infidels to touch the ark, He who resented the conduct of Oza, and of the Bethsamites, with such severity. But the law regarded the Israelites, and the pagans were ignorant of it. C.—The servant who knows his master's will, and does not obey, shall suffer many stripes; and those who have the happiness of professing the true religion, and dishonour it by their immorality, must expect to feel the heavy hand of the judge much more than ignorant unbelievers. H.

VER. 2. Dagon is the same as Derceto, Atergatis, Venus, and the moon, (C.) and was represented like a woman, (T.) as far as the waist, and a fish below. H.

Judg. xvi. 23.—The ark was placed near the idol, out of respect (C.); or as a trophy of the victory, which they attributed to Dagon. M.—Thus they hung up the arms of Saul in the temple of Asteroth (chap. xxxi. 10); and David placed the sword of Goliath in the tabernacle.

VER. 3. Lord, as if to acknowledge his superiority. C.

VER. 5. The stump of, seems to be wanting in Heb. H.—Only the lower part, which resembled a fish, (Dag,) was left on its pedestal.—Dag. The Philistines themselves established this custom, which was a tacit confession of the imbecility of the idol, which they nevertheless continued to adore. The prophet Sophonias (i. 9) is supposed to accuse the Jews of imitating this superstition.

VER. 6. Emerods. The particular disorder which attacked them (Psal. lxxvii. 66) is very uncertain. Eusebius believes that it was in punishment of their incontinency. It was very painful, and sometimes proved mortal, ver. 12.—And in, &c. The remainder of this verse is not found in Heb., Chal., Syr., Arab., &c., nor in many Greek and Latin copies. But it is conformable to the truth of history, since we read that figures of these animals were placed beside the ark, in memory of this event. Chap. vi. 6.—Mice, or rats. Such vermin have often obliged people to abandon their country. Plin. viii. 28.

VER. 8. Lords, next in dignity to a king, like the Persian sarena. Judg. iii. 3, and xvi. 5.—About. Heb. “and they answered, let the ark . . . be carried unto Geth,” in which sense the Sept. seem to have taken it. But the Vulg. is more natural. Theodoret (q. 10) concludes that the people imagined the mortality proceeded from some natural cause (C.); otherwise it would have been very absurd to give such advice, as the ark would spread the contagion throughout the country, by being removed. From Geth it was sent to Accaron, when the magistrates of the city objected to its being admitted, ver. 10. Josephus says, however, that it visited all the five principal cities, as if to punish them for their impiety. H.

VER. 9. Came upon, to punish, as on other occasions to protect. Ezecl. i. 3, and xiii. 9. M.—Parts. Lit. “Their lower intestines coming out, rotted,” as ver. 6. H.—Heb. “their malady was concealed.” Grot.—The emerods attacked them inwardly, with the most excruciating pains, for which they could find no remedy.—Skins. The ancients knew no greater luxury. Homer, Odys. i. and 8.

VER. 12. Die, at the sight of the ark, as the Bethsamites did afterwards. M.

CHAP. VI.

The ark is sent back to Bethsames: where many are slain for looking, through curiosity, into it.

NOW the ark of God was in the land of the Philistines seven months.

2 And the Philistines called for the priests and the diviners, saying: What shall we do with the ark of the Lord? tell us how we are to send it back to its place. And they said:

3 If you send back the ark of the God of Israel, send it not away empty, but render unto him what you owe for sin, and then you shall be healed: and you shall know why his hand departeth not from you.

4 They answered: What is it we ought to render unto him for sin? and they answered:

5 According to the number of the provinces of the Philistines you shall make five golden emerods, and five golden mice: for the same plague hath been upon you all, and upon your lords. And you shall make the likeness of your emerods, and the likeness of the mice, that have destroyed the land, and you shall give glory to the God of Israel: to see if he will take off his hand from you, and from your gods, and from your land.

6 Why do you harden your hearts, as Egypt and Pharaoh hardened their hearts? did not he, after he was struck, then let them go, and they departed?

7 Now, therefore, take and make a new cart: and two kine that have calved, on which there hath come no yoke, tie to the cart, and shut up their calves at home.

8 And you shall take the ark of the Lord, and lay it on the cart, and the vessels of gold, which you have paid him for sin, you shall put into a little box at the side thereof: and send it away, that it may go.

9 And you shall look: and if it go up by the way of his own coasts, towards Bethsames, then he hath done us this great evil: but if not, we shall know that it is not his hand hath touched us, but it hath happened by chance.

• A. M. 2553.

10 They did therefore in this manner: and taking two kine, that had sucking calves, they yoked them to the cart, and shut up their calves at home.

11 And they laid the ark of God upon the cart, and the little box that had in it the golden mice, and the likeness of the emerods.

12 And the kine took the straight way, that leadeth to Bethsames, and they went along the way, lowing as they went: and turned not aside neither to the right hand nor to the left: and the lords of the Philistines followed them as far as the borders of Bethsames.

13 Now the Bethsamites were reaping wheat in the valley: and lifting up their eyes, they saw the ark, and rejoiced to see it.

14 And the cart came into the field of Josue, a Bethsamite, and stood there. And there was a great stone, and they cut in pieces the wood of the cart, and laid the kine upon it a holocaust to the Lord.

15 And the Levites took down the ark of God, and the little box that was at the side of it, wherein were the vessels of gold, and they put them upon the great stone. The men also of Bethsames offered holocausts, and sacrificed victims that day to the Lord.

16 And the five princes of the Philistines saw, and they returned to Accaron the same day.

17 And these are the golden emerods, which the Philistines returned for sin to the Lord: For Azotus one, for Gaza one, for Ascalon one, for Geth one, for Accaron one:

18 And the golden mice, according to the number of the cities of the Philistines, of the five provinces, from the fenced city to the village that was without wall, and to the great Abel (the stone) whereon they set down the ark of the Lord, which was till that day in the field of Josue the Bethsamite.

19 But he slew of the men of Bethsames, because they had seen the ark of the Lord, and he slew of the people

• Exod. xii. 31.

CHAP. VI. VER. 2. Diviners. The priests generally pretended to a knowledge of magic among the pagans. C.

VER. 3. If, &c. The lords were already determined to send back the ark. But the priests knew that some still would not believe that it was the cause of their affliction. To convince all, they try an experiment, which would decide the matter; and in case the ark went back, some suitable presents must accompany it, as a propitiation (H.) for the sin which they would not (M.) then doubt had been incurred. H.

VER. 5. Provinces. Heb. seornim, "lords."—Emerods. Theodoret observes that the tombs of the martyrs were adorned with figures of eyes, &c., in gratitude for their having procured redress for the afflicted.—Israel, whose ark you have treated in an improper manner. C.

VER. 6. Hearts. Even these confess that obduracy proceeds from men (W.); though Calvin would make God the author of it. H.

VER. 7. New cart. It would have been deemed irreverent to use one that had been employed for other profane purposes, 2 Kings vi. 3.—Home. All these circumstances tended to prevent the ark from being conveyed home, (C.) unless Providence interfered.

VER. 8. Box. Heb. argoz, (which the Sept. retain, H.) means also "a purse or basket." C.—Josephus (vi. 1) says, "the box was placed upon the ark." H.—We do not read what became of these presents afterwards: but it is supposed that they were kept in the sanctuary till the time of the captivity. C.

VER. 9. Way. Josephus observes that they stationed the kine at three lane ends (H.); and, as we may infer from the Heb., (ver. 12.) rather with their heads turned from Bethsames. But, by this conduct, did they not tempt God? Some believe that He inspired them on this occasion, (E.) that even his enemies might be convinced, (H.) the grace of prophecy being frequently granted to wicked men, like Balaam: others believe that He gave success to their plan, though it was dictated by superstition. C.

VER. 13. Wheat, about Pentecost, in May: so that the ark must have been taken in November. M.

VER. 14. Bethsamite, not the renowned general. C.—Stone, which served instead of an altar. M.—Lord. Some pretend that the lords of the Philistines followed so far, and offered this holocaust, as the cart belonged to them: but the Bethsamites might suppose that they had abandoned their property, as well as the golden figures; and, as the city belonged to the priests, it is most probable that they would perform this office. H.—The kine and cart being consecrated to God, it was thought that they could not be turned to a more suitable purpose. C.—The ark was also present, on account of which sacrifices were offered in the tabernacle. M.

VER. 15. Vessels. Prot. less properly, "jewels of gold." H.

VER. 16. Day. It was distant about eighteen miles. C.

VER. 18. Provinces. Heb. "lords."—Abel. A stone or rock, on which the Jews say Abraham had offered sacrifice (S. Jer. Trad. T.); Heb. "or mourning," was so called afterwards, on account of so many being slain (M.); so the place to which the Egyptians accompanied the remains of Jacob, was styled "Abol." the mourning of Egypt. Gen. i. 11. H.—The Sept. read Abon, "the stone." All the towns belonging to the Philistines, as far as this place, sent each their golden images, or contributed towards those which were presented by the five lords.—Which, ark, according to the Vulg., though some would explain it of the stone. C.—Which, though of the feminine gender, is referred to stone, because Abel is of that description, (M.) and we find several such allusions to the Heb. in our version. Prot. "unto the great stone of Abel, whereon they set down the ark of the Lord, which stone remaineth unto this day," &c. H., Vatab., &c.—Others think that the ark remained there till it was removed to Cariathiarim. Chap. vii. 1. C.—The Roman Sept. omits the words till this day; and reads, "where the ark was placed upon it (the stone) the ark . . . upon the stone in the field," &c. Then with the Alex. copy, and Procopius, &c., it subjoins nineteen. "And the sons of Jechonias did not approve, among the men of Bethsames, that they saw the ark of the Lord, and he slew of them seventy men, and 50,000 of the people." Theodoret suspects that they were more impious than the rest.

VER. 19. Seen; and curiously looked into. It is likely this plague reached to all the neighbouring country, as well as the city of Bethsames. Ch.—For seventy men, and fifty thousand of the common people. And the people lamented, because the Lord had smitten the people with a great slaughter.

20 And the men of Bethsames said: Who shall be able to stand before the Lord this holy God? and to whom shall he go up from us?

21 And they sent messengers to the inhabitants of Cariathiarim, saying: The Philistines have brought back the ark of the Lord, come ye down and fetch it up to you.

CHAP. VII.

The ark is brought to Cariathiarim. By Samuel's exhortation the people cast away their idols and serve God alone. The Lord defeateth the Philistines, while Samuel offereth sacrifice.

AND "the men of Cariathiarim came, and fetched up the ark of the Lord, and carried it into the house of Abinadab, in Gabaa: and they sanctified Eleazar, his son, to keep the ark of the Lord.

2 And it came to pass, that from the day the ark of the Lord abode in Cariathiarim, days were multiplied (for it was now the twentieth year) and all the house of Israel rested, following the Lord.

3 And Samuel spoke to all the house of Israel, saying: "If you turn to the Lord with all your heart, put away the strange gods from among you, Baalim and Astaroth: and prepare your hearts unto the Lord, and serve him only, and he will deliver you out of the hand of the Philistines.

• A. M. 2888.—Deut. vi. 13; need not suppose that all these deaths took place in one day. The ark seems to have continued there for some time, ver. 18. Heb. "because they had looked into, or at the ark." H.—It was unlawful, even for the Levites, to touch or to look at the ark uncovered (T. Num. iv. 15, 20); and the Heb. expression into, is often taken in this sense. Prov. vii. 15, and xi. 4.—Men of rank. S. Greg., &c. "Ancients." Chal.—Bochart translates, "he slew 70 out of 50,000." The Syr. and Arab. read, "5070 men." Josephus only admits 70 who were slain, "because they dared to touch the ark with their profane hands, as they were not priests." Heb. "and he slew of the people 70 men, 50,000 men." C.—Kennicott seems to suspect that a cipher has been added in the Heb. at the end. Prot. "50,000, and threescore and ten men." H.—Some would insert advent in the Vulg., and 50,000 "were present." D.—The Chal., Sept., &c. constantly retain these numbers, and we must not judge of God's severity by our feeble reason. C.—This decision is the most common. M.

VER. 20. Us. These words may denote that they thought God too severe; or else that they judged themselves unworthy of his presence. There is no proportion between an offence of God, and what the creatures can do to make him satisfaction. C.

VER. 21. Up. This is the import of the Heb. The Vulg. reducite, "bring it back," insinuates that the Bethsamites desired the people of Cariathiarim to convey the ark to their city, on the road to Silo, where they probably thought it ought to be placed, in the tabernacle. But it seems God ordered it otherwise, and the ark was never restored to its former splendid station, surrounded with all the vessels and ornaments of the tabernacle. David made something similar, and placed an altar before it, while the Mosaic tabernacle and altar were removed from Silo to Nob, (chap. xxi. 1,) and afterwards to Gabaa. 2 Par. i. 5. Salien (A. 3030) doubts not but they were thence translated to Solomon's temple, during the octave of the dedication, along with those of David, from Mount Zion. 2 Par. v. 2, and viii. 3. Why the ark was not placed in this most magnificent abode, but removed from the stone of Abel to the houses of Abinadab, of Obededom, of David in Zion, till all the original ornaments, prescribed by God to Moses, with a still more splendid apparatus, met to adorn the temple of Solomon, we cannot easily explain. II.—Cariathiarim is the same place as Cariathbaal, and Baala, (Jos. xv. 9, 60,) Baalim Juda, (2 Kings vi. 2,) and Sedeiarim, about ten miles from Jerusalem. Gabaa was "a hill," (C.) belonging to the same city, where the house of Abinadab stood (H.); and Nob was also in the vicinity, while Silo was much farther north. C.—The priests still remained, and offered sacrifice in the tabernacle, though occasionally some of them might come to offer extraordinary victims before the ark, in those private houses which were thus converted, as it were, into the holy of holies. Salien, A. 2941. H.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. In Gabaa. That is, on the hill, for Gabaa signifieth a hill. Ch. 1 Par. xiii. 6.—It was perhaps the citadel, (H.) or an elevated situation, such as were generally chosen for the temples both of the true and of false gods. C.—Abinadab was a Levite of renowned virtue. M.—The people of this city knew that the ark was a source of blessings to those who received it with respect; and that the Bethsamites had been punished only for their irreverence. W.—Sanctified. Chal. "set over," (M.) prepared by suitable purifications, &c. C.—Some think that Eleazar received the priestly or the Levitical consecration, 4 Then the children of Israel put away Baalim and Astaroth, and served the Lord only.

5 And Samuel said: Gather all Israel to Masphath, that I may pray to the Lord for you.

6 And they gathered together to Masphath, and they drew water, and poured it out before the Lord, and they fasted on that day, and they said there: We have sinned against the Lord. And Samuel judged the children of Israel in Masphath.

7 And the Philistines heard that the children of Israel were gathered together to Masphath, and the lords of the Philistines went up against Israel. And when the children of Israel heard this, they were afraid of the Philistines.

8 And they said to Samuel: Cease not to cry to the Lord our God for us, that he may save us out of the hand of the Philistines.

9 And Samuel took a sucking lamb, and offered it whole for a holocaust to the Lord: and Samuel cried to the Lord for Israel, and the Lord heard him.

10 And it came to pass, when Samuel was offering the holocaust, the Philistines began the battle against Israel: "but the Lord thundered with a great thunder on that day upon the Philistines, and terrified them, and they were overthrown before the face of Israel.

11 And the men of Israel going out of Masphath, pursued after the Philistines, and made slaughter of them till they came under Bethchar.

Matt. iv. 10.—Eccl. xlv. 21.

Num. viii. 7. We have no proof that he was of the family of Aaron, nor does his name occur in the genealogies of the Levites, as they are perhaps too short. Josephus (vi. 2) asserts that he was a Levite. C.—But even a laic, like Obededom of Geth, might have been the guardian of the ark, as he would not have to touch it. Salien, A. C. 1112. H.

VER. 2. Year. Some would date all the subsequent events from this period. But is it credible that Samuel should neglect for twenty years to make this exhortation to the people? and how will it be true, that God humbled the Philistines during the whole time (C.) of his administration, which perhaps (H.) only lasted so many years? ver. 13. C.—It is more probable, therefore, that the power of the enemy was broken by the destruction caused by the presence of the ark, which kept them under due restraint for a long time; and when they attempted, once more, to molest the Israelites, they were entirely discomfited by a miraculous storm, at the prayer of Samuel, ver. 10. Salien (A. 2960) allows that this took place in the twentieth year since the ark came to Cariathiarim, in which year Samuel appointed his children judges at Bersabee, though he continued to act, and was judge for twenty-three years, (some say thirty-eight,) and even under the reign of Saul had almost an absolute sway, as the prophet of the Lord. H.—Rested: continued steadfast, (Sanctius,) "cried unto," (Pagnin.) "Looked (H.) or returned." Sept. "Lamented after the Lord." Heb. M.—They were not soon induced to break this solemn covenant. Isa. vii. 2. T.

VER. 3. Prepare. God lays this injunction upon us, to remind us of our liberty, and we beg that he would convert us, acknowledging the necessity of his grace. C.—"God does not require impossibilities, but by his command admonishes thee to do what thou canst, and to pray for what thou art not able to perform, and he assists thee, that thou mayest be able to perform it." C. Trid. vi. 11. S. Aug. &c.

VER. 6. Lord, having purified themselves with it. Exod. xix. 24. Others think that it was a kind of a protestation, that they were willing to perish if they proved faithless (Sa.); or a symbol that they rejected every vestige of idolatry, and every sin, with true repentance. Sanctius. T.

VER. 9. Sucking lamb. Any might be used, when eight days old, except for the paschal lamb, which must be older; a yearling. Exod. xxiii. 9; Lev. xxii. 27.—Offered it, either by the hands of the priests, or by dispensation, which authorized him to sacrifice out of the tabernacle.—Whole, without blemish (Eccl. xlv. 19); or not having time to divide it according to the ritual. Lev. i. 12. He consumed even the skin. Salien.—Sept. "with all the people."

VER. 10. Israel. The princes of the Tyrians had come to the assistance of the enemy (Eccl. xlv. 21, C.); but all in vain. H.—The sacred penman speaks with great modesty of this victory, which is, nevertheless, one of the most important recorded in Scripture. The Philistines could not recover themselves for twenty years; they found it necessary to restore the cities which they had taken, (C.) to relinquish the tribute, and to come to such conditions as Samuel imposed upon them. He suffered them, however, to keep possession of some strongholds, such as Gabaa, from which they were expelled by Jonathan. Salien says, in the twenty-second year of Samuel, and the last of Achitob, the high priest, A. 2961.

VER. 11. Bethchar, "the house of the penetrator." Cor denotes the celestial quid, which the Philistines probably supposed was discharged by the heavens.

12 And Samuel took a stone, and laid it between Masphath and Sen: and he called the place The stone of help. And he said: Thus far the Lord hath helped us.

13 And the Philistines were humbled, and they did not come any more into the borders of Israel. And the hand of the Lord was against the Philistines, all the days of Samuel.

14 And the cities which the Philistines had taken from Israel, were restored to Israel, from Accaron to Geth, and their borders: and he delivered Israel from the hand of the Philistines, and there was peace between Israel and the Amorrites.

15 And Samuel judged Israel all the days of his life:

16 And he went every year about to Bethel and to Galgal and to Masphath, and he judged Israel in the foresaid places.

17 And he returned to Ramatha: for there was his house, and there he judged Israel: he built also there an altar to the Lord.

CHAP. VIII.

Samuel growing old, and his sons not walking in his ways, the people desire a king.

AND^a it came to pass, when Samuel was old, that he appointed his sons to be judges over Israel.

2 Now the name of his first-born son was Joel: and the name of the second was Abia, judges in Bersabee.

^a A. M. 2908, A. C. 1096.

Independently of the great Creator. Hence their punishment was very appropriate. Parahurst.

VER. 12. Sen, "the tooth," a raggy rock of that appearance. Syr. Beth senan. C.—Some take it to be the same with Bethelhar. Malvenda.—It was before ignoble, (Salien,) and the situation not known till this monument was erected, with the inscription, Thus far, &c.—Help; "Aben-ezer," mentioned before, chap. iv. 1. These religious monuments were not prohibited by the law. Lev. xxvi. 1. Samuel would take every precaution that they should not become objects of idolatry, as he was under the immediate influence of the Holy Spirit. C.

VER. 13. Any more, for a long time, (M.) during Samuel's administration; for we find them again attacking Saul. Chap. xiii. This expression is often used to denote a cessation of some continuance. Isa. xxiii. 12, 15; 2 Kings vii. 10.

VER. 14. Geth, which two cities still continued in their possession. Others, which had fallen to the share of Dan, they gave up, which explains Judg. xviii. 1, 31.—Philistines. Here ended the forty years' servitude. C.—Salien (A. 2860) rather thinks that it terminated in the death of Samson, when it was judged expedient to intrust the reins of government into the hands of an old man, Heli, the high priest, as there was no need of an expert general, the heads of the Philistines being all destroyed. Judg. xiii. 1. H.—Amorrites: the dispersed nations of Chanaan were all kept under. C.

VER. 15. Life; as sole judge for twenty years, (Gordon. D.) and conjointly with Saul, till he died, almost one hundred years old, a year or two before the unfortunate king. Saul put him on a level with himself (chap. xi. 7); and he continued to be regarded as the oracle of Israel ever since he was about forty years old (C.): or he did not long survive the election of the new king, (M.) as Tirin, Sanetins, &c. reduce his reign to two years, allowing thirty-eight to Samuel, so that both filled up the space of forty years. Acts xiii. 20. The life of Samuel, on this supposition, will not much exceed sixty, and he must have come into power in early life. Chap. xii. 2. II.

VER. 16. Places. Sept. "in all these holy places." Some take Bethel to mean the city where the ark was, (C.) or the holy of holies, in the tabernacle, at Silo, &c. II.

VER. 17. Ramatha; his native place. His high office would not allow him to remain always near the tabernacle. Chap. i. 11, and 28. C.—Lord, by his direction, (M.) both to satisfy his own devotion, and that he might consult the Lord when the people wanted advice. C.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Old. Houbigant would translate, "when he was growing old," senesceret, as he supposes he was now nearly sixty, having judged about twenty-five years, and living other twenty as partner with Saul. Prol. 62. See chap. vii. 15. H.—Judges, as his delegates in the southern parts of the country. C.—Josephus says one of them was stationed at Bethel. Ant. vi. 3.

VER. 2. In, or "as far as," Bersabee, from Dan; that is, throughout Palestine. C.

VER. 3. Judgment. Samuel was not to blame, and hence he was not punished like Heli. M.—However, the misconduct of the children of these two judges, in succession, (H.) gave occasion to the people to demand a king, who might not be tempted by bribes. W.—It is surprising that most of the great men who are mentioned in history had degenerate children. C.—Such were some of David's sons, as well as Cambyses, the son of Cyrus, &c. H.—Was it because their fathers were

3 And his sons walked not in his ways: but they turned aside after lucre, and took bribes, and perverted judgment.

4 Then all the ancients of Israel being assembled, came to Samuel to Ramatha.

5 And they said to him: Behold thou art old, and thy sons walk not in thy ways: ^bmake us a king, to judge us, as all nations have.

6 And the word was displeasing in the eyes of Samuel, that they should say: Give us a king to judge us. And Samuel prayed to the Lord.

7 And the Lord said to Samuel: Harken to the voice of the people in all that they say to thee. For they have not rejected thee, but me, that I should not reign over them.

8 According to all their works, they have done from the day that I brought them out of Egypt until this day: as they have forsaken me, and served strange gods, so do they also unto thee.

9 Now, therefore, hearken to their voice: but yet testify to them, and foretell them the right of the king, that shall reign over them.

10 Then Samuel told all the words of the Lord to the people that had desired a king of him,

11 And said: This will be the right of the king that shall reign over you: He will take your sons, and put too much taken up with the affairs of state to watch over the education of their children? or rather, because these young men confided too much on the merits of their family, and took no pains to tread in the footsteps of their parents? C.

VER. 5. Judge us, in a different manner from what had been hitherto done. H.—As all, &c. They seem to prefer the dominion of kings who ruled over the surrounding barbarous nations as they thought proper, (H.) before one who should be tied down to observe the laws prescribed by God, (M.) in case the Israelites should wish to have a king. Deut. xvii. H.

VER. 6. Samuel. Nothing could be more disrespectful to him, nor more ungrateful to God, who had distinguished them from all other nations, and had taken the government upon himself, and appointed the judges as his lieutenants. H.

VER. 7. Thee. "God, in anger, grants a person what he desires wrongfully." S. Aug.—He permits the people to follow their own plans; and the Hebrews believe that he gave them Saul to punish them, being well apprized of his proud and cruel nature. Cuneus Rep. C.—Rejected, &c. The government of Israel hitherto had been a theocracy; in which God himself immediately ruled by laws which he had enacted, and by judges extraordinarily raised up by himself: and therefore he complains that his people rejected him, in desiring a change of government, (Ch.) and wishing to appoint their own magistrates. The priests and judges had been commissioned by God. Exod. xix.; Deut. xvii. W.

VER. 8. Thee. He comforts Samuel, by observing that it was not so much any fault of his, as the people's habitual fickle temper, which made them seek for this change. M.

VER. 9. The right. That is, the manner (misphat) after which he shall proceed, having no one to control him when he has the power in his hands. Ch.—He intimates that the kings will frequently act in a tyrannical manner, ver. 11. M.—But the holy Fathers observe, that herein they do what is unjust and contrary to God's law. If kings should be guilty of excesses, "yet they are not to be deposed by the people, . . but must be tolerated with patience, peace, and meekness, till God, by his sovereign authority, may please to dispose of them, which his Divine wisdom and goodness often defer to do, as here he expressly forewarneth, (ver. 18,) because he will punish the sins of the people by suffering evil princes to reign." Job xxxiv. 30. Cone. Later. e. 3, de l'heret. W. See S. Thomas, ii. 2. q. 12. a. 2.—We may here also remark, that the people petitioned for a king, yet God made the choice; and when he proved rebellious, selected another by the hand of Samuel, though he permitted the former to enjoy his dignity till death. Chap. xiii. and xxxi. II.—The misconduct of rulers is one of the most trying inconveniences to which a nation can be exposed. In such circumstances, "bear," says a pagan historian, (H.) "with the luxury and avarice of those who hold dominion, as with other natural evils. There will be vices as long as men subsist, but neither will these continue for ever, and they are compensated by the intervention of better things or men." Meliorum interventu pensantur. Tacit.—Grotius at last seems to conclude (Sup. e. 4. p. 97) that the right of the king here specified is only apparent, inasmuch as it includes "the obligation of making no resistance." H.

VER. 11. Chariots; to be drivers, (M.) or will make them fight from them. —Footmen, or guards. Xenophon places 4000 armed with bucklers before, and 2000 with lances all round the chariot of Cyrus. See chap. xxii. 17.

them in his chariots, and will make them his horsemen, and his running footmen, to run before his chariots, 12 And he will appoint of them to be his tribunes, and his centurions, and to plough his fields, and to reap his corn, and to make him arms and chariots.

13 Your daughters also he will take to make him ointments, and to be his cooks, and bakers.

14 And he will take your fields, and your vineyards, and your best oliveyards, and give them to his servants.

15 Moreover he will take the tenth of your corn, and of the revenues of your vineyards, to give to his eunuchs and servants.

16 Your servants also, and handmaids, and your goodliest young men, and your asses, he will take away, and put them to his work.

17 Your flocks also he will tithe, and you shall be his servants.

18 And you shall cry out in that day from the face of the king, whom you have chosen to yourselves: and the Lord will not hear you in that day, because you desired unto yourselves a king.

19 But the people would not hear the voice of Samuel, and they said, Nay: but there shall be a king over us,

20 And we also will be like all nations: and our king shall judge us, and go out before us, and fight our battles for us.

21 And Samuel heard all the words of the people, and rehearsed them in the ears of the Lord.

22 And the Lord said to Samuel: Hearken to their voice, and make them a king. And Samuel said to the men of Israel: Let every man go to his city.

VER. 12. Centurions, or body-guards. M.—These offices might be honourable, but at the same time disagreeable, when people were forced to accept of them, and to neglect their more pleasing agricultural employment. The multitude of officers increases the expenses of the prince, and falls heavy upon the people. C.

VER. 14. Vineyards, as Achab did, though he first proposed to buy it.

VER. 15. Tenth. God had already claimed one tithe, which he had abandoned to his sacred ministers. We do not read that the kings of the Hebrews ever claimed (C.) a second tithe precisely, (H.) though they might have done it by the example of other kings. Lev. xxvii. 30.—Eunuchs. Heb. saris, denotes an officer of the court.

VER. 16. Goodliest, in strength (C.) and beauty. M.—Solomon made his people work at his buildings, and David employed an officer in the fields, 1 Par. xxvii. 26. Sept. have read in a different manner. "He will tithe . . . your excellent droves of oxen." C.—They also specify, "the tithe of asses for his work." H.

VER. 17. Servants, or slaves. The Hebrews enjoyed greater liberty than any of the nations in the East, yet they are styled slaves. Chap. xvii. 8. They were nearly on the same footing as the ancient Germans. "Each governed in his own place of abode. The Lord requires of them a quantity of corn, cattle, or clothing, and so far the slave obeys;" servus hactenus parat. Tacit. Germ. The Hebrews were also bound to follow the king to battle.

VER. 18. The face, privately; for even groans will not be free. M.—The event justified this prediction, as most of the kings of the Hebrews ruled like tyrants, and what was worse, engaged their subjects in idolatry, and drew down the heaviest judgments upon them. C.—Hear you, so as to deliver you from oppression, though he is always willing to hear those who truly repent. W.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. Abiel, who is also called Ner. 1 Par. viii. 33. Cajetan. —Strong. Heb. "a mighty man of power," either of body, or of riches.

and goodly man, and there was not among the children of Israel a goodlier person than he: from his shoulders and upward he appeared above all the people.

3 And the asses of Cis, Saul's father, were lost: and Cis said to his son Saul: Take one of the servants with thee, and arise, and go, and seek the asses. And when they had passed through Mount Ephraim,

4 And through the land of Salisa, and had not found them, they passed also through the land of Salim, and they were not there: and through the land of Jemini, and found them not.

5 And when they were come to the land of Suph, Saul said to the servant that was with him: Come, let us return, lest perhaps my father forget the asses, and be concerned for us.

6 And he said to him: Behold there is a man of God in this city, a famous man: all that he saith, cometh certainly to pass. Now, therefore, let us go thither, perhaps he may tell us of our way, for which we are come.

7 And Saul said to his servant: Behold we will go: but what shall we carry to the man of God? the bread is spent in our bags: and we have no present to make to the man of God, nor any thing at all.

8 The servant answered Saul again, and said: Behold there is found in my hand the fourth part of a sicle of silver, let us give it to the man of God, that he may tell us our way.

9 Now in time past in Israel, when a man went to consult God, he spoke thus: Come, let us go to the seer. For he that is now called a prophet, in time past was called a seer.

10 And Saul said to his servant: Thy word is very good, come let us go. And they went into the city, where the man of God was.

11 And when they went up the ascent to the city, they found maids coming out to draw water, and they said to them: Is the seer here?

12 They answered and said to them: He is: behold he is before you, make haste now: for he came to-day

VER. 3. Asses. The greatest noblemen rode upon such. Judg. v. 10. A prince of Esau fed asses. Gen. xxx. 24. Agriculture, and keeping sheep, were the employment of men of the first eminence in the heroic ages, as hunting and other equally laborious exercises are now in fashion. C.

VER. 6. Famous. Chal. "honourable." Sept. "covered with glory." The observations of a servant may often claim attention. Saul seemed to be less acquainted with this extraordinary personage than his servant. H.

VER. 7. What. Were they uninformed of the disinterestedness of Samuel? or did they think that he would sell his oracles? By no means. But the manners of the ancients were very different from ours, and people chose to show their respect for God, the king, prophets, &c., by making them some present.—Bread. They would have made a present of some. Saul received two loaves. Chap. x. 4. See chap. xvi. 20. Hence we may form some idea of the beautiful simplicity of those ages. People were then forced to carry their own provisions, as there were no inns which supplied any. C.—Present. Sportula means a little basket. H.—But here it is taken for a present, as meat was commonly given. M.—Heb. "what have we?" Syr. "we have none of our provisions left." C.

VER. 8. Silver. About seven-pence English.—Stater, (H.) is put instead of Heb. "sicle." M.

VER. 9. A seer. Because of his seeing, by Divine light, hidden things, and things to come, (Ch.) by inspiration. W.

VER. 12. A sacrifice. The law did not allow of sacrifices in any other place but at the tabernacle or temple, in which the ark of the covenant was kept; but Samuel, by Divine dispensation, offered sacrifices in other places. For which dispensation this reason may be alleged, that the house of God in Silo, having lost the ark, was now cast off; as a figure of the reprobation of the Jews. Psal. lxxvii.

into the city, for there is a sacrifice of the people to-day in the high place.

13 As soon as you come into the city, you shall immediately find him, before he go up to the high place to eat: for the people will not eat till he come; because he blesseth the victim, and afterwards they eat that are invited. Now, therefore, go up, for to-day you shall find him.

14 And they went up into the city. And when they were walking in the midst of the city, behold Samuel was coming out over against them, to go up to the high place.

15 Now the Lord had revealed to the ear of Samuel the day before Saul came, saying:

16 To-morrow about this same hour I will send thee a man of the land of Benjamin, and thou shalt anoint him to be ruler over my people Israel: and he shall save my people out of the hand of the Philistines: for I have looked down upon my people, because their cry is come to me.

17 And when Samuel saw Saul, the Lord said to him: Behold the man, of whom I spoke to thee, this man shall reign over my people.

18 And Saul came to Samuel in the midst of the gate, and said: Tell me, I pray thee, where is the house of the seer?

19 And Samuel answered Saul, saying: I am the seer; go up before me to the high place, that you may eat with me to-day, and I will let thee go in the morning: and tell thee all that is in thy heart.

20 And as for the asses, which were lost three days ago, be not solicitous, because they are found. And for whom shall be all the best things of Israel? Shall they not be for thee and for all thy father's house?

21 And Saul answering, said: Am not I a son of Jemini of the least tribe of Israel, and my kindred the last among all the families of the tribe of Benjamin? Why then hast thou spoken this word to me?

22 Then Samuel taking Saul, and his servant, brought them into the parlour, and gave them a place at the head of them that were invited. For there were about thirty men.

23 And Samuel said to the cook: Bring the portion which I gave thee, and commanded thee to set it apart by thee.

24 And the cook took up the shoulder, and set it before Saul. And Samuel said: Behold what is left, set it before thee, and eat; because it was kept of purpose for thee, when I invited the people. And Saul ate with Samuel that day.

25 And they went down from the high place into the town, and he spoke with Saul upon the top of the house: and he prepared a bed for Saul on the top of the house, and he slept.

26 And when they were risen in the morning, and it began now to be light, Samuel called Saul on the top of the house, saying: Arise, that I may let thee go. And Saul arose: and they went out both of them: to wit, he and Samuel.

27 And as they were going down in the end of the city, Samuel said to Saul: Speak to the servant to go before us, and pass on: but stand thou still a while, that I may tell thee the word of the Lord.

Excelsum.* The excelsa, or high places, so often mentioned in Scripture, were places of worship, in which were altars for sacrifice. These were sometimes employed in the service of the true God, as in the present case: but more frequently in the service of idols. And were called Excelsa, which is commonly (though perhaps not so accurately) rendered high places; not because they were always upon hills, for the very worst of all, which was that of Topheth or Geonon, (Jer. xix.,) was in a valley; but because of the high altars, and pillars, or monuments erected there, on which were set up the idols or images of their deities (Ch.); so that they might be called "the high things." VER. 18. Gate. Sept. "city." Chal. "within the gate," where business was transacted.

VER. 19. Place, while Samuel retired, for a while, to his own house. He sends Saul to the assembly, (C.) where he would meet him to dine. H.—Hcart, or desirest to know. M.

VER. 20. Best. The regal power, which all desired. Heb. "to or on whom is all the desire of Israel?"

VER. 21. Jemini, or Benjamin, which was always one of the smallest tribes, and since the unfortunate war still more reduced; so that none of the other tribes could well take umbrage, or be filled with jealousy, when they saw a king selected from it.—Last. Though all were equally noble, yet some families were more numerous, possessed greater riches, or had filled the posts of honour more frequently than others. Nothing can be more charming than the modesty of Saul on this occasion. C.—Happy would he have been had he continued always to cherish the like sentiments. H.

VER. 22. At the head. Sept. "among the first of those . . . seventy men," which number Josephus also has, instead of thirty.

VER. 24. Shoulder. It was the left, (M.) as the right shoulder belonged to the priest, and laymen were not allowed to taste of it after it had been offered in sacrifice. Lev. vii. 32. Some suppose that Samuel had this right shoulder for his portion. But he was not a priest. C.—This part was assigned to the most eminent man at table; and Josephus calls it "the royal portion." M.—Heb. "the shoulder, and what was upon it, (or he held it up,) and set it (the whole quarter) before Saul." Aquila, &c. translate "the thigh," left or reserved. Sept. "laid by." It was then the fashion to place large pieces of meat before those who were to be most honoured. Gen. xviii. 6. Homer, &c.—People. Heb. "till now it has been kept for thee, I said, I have invited the people." He insinuates that he knew of his coming, though it seemed so accidental, even when he invited the company. Sept. "eat, for it is placed before thee, as a memorial, by the people, cut it in pieces." H.

VER. 25. House, probably giving him some instructions respecting his future dignity.—And he, &c. This seems to be a second translation of the former sentence, taken from the Sept. It is omitted in several Latin MSS. C.—Sept. "and he went down from the Bama (perhaps "the steps" or high place, where the sacrifice and feast had been celebrated) into the city; and they made a bed for Saul on the house top; and he lay down, (26) and when the day dawned, Samuel," &c. The roofs are flat in those countries, and such an airy situation would be most agreeable in such hot climates. H.

VER. 27. Before us, and. Heb. ("and he passed on,") agreeably to his master's order. H.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. Vial, in the form of a lentil. Plin. xviii. 12.—Oil. This anointing seems to have been peculiar to the kings, priests, and prophets of the Hebrews, who prefigured Jesus, the great anointed of God. S. Aug. in Psal. xlv. The custom was very ancient. Judg. ix. 8. It is thought that those kings who succeeded their fathers by their birthright, and without opposition, did not receive any unction. C.—But the silence of Scripture is no proof on this head, hold, the Lord hath anointed thee to be prince over his inheritance, and thou shalt deliver his people out of the hands of their enemies, that are round about them. And this shall be a sign unto thee, that God hath anointed thee to be prince.

2 When thou shalt depart from me this day, thou shalt find two men by the sepulchre of Rachel in the borders of Benjamin to the south, and they shall say to thee: The asses are found which thou wentest to seek: and thy father, thinking no more of the asses, is concerned for you, and saith: What shall I do for my son?

3 And when thou shalt depart from thence, and go farther on, and shalt come to the oak of Thabor, there shall meet thee three men going up to God to Bethel, one carrying three kids, and another three loaves of bread, and another carrying a bottle of wine.

4 And they will salute thee, and will give thee two loaves, and thou shalt take them at their hand.

5 After that thou shalt come to the hill of God, where the garrison of the Philistines is: and when thou shalt be come there into the city, thou shalt meet a company of prophets coming down from the high place, with a psaltery, and a timbrel, and a pipe, and a harp before them, and they shall be prophesying.

6 And the Spirit of the Lord shall come upon thee, and thou shalt prophesy with them, and shalt be changed into another man.

7 When therefore these signs shall happen to thee, do whatsoever thy hand shall find, for the Lord is with thee.

8 And thou shalt go down before me to Galgal, (for I will come down to thee,) that thou mayest offer an oblation, and sacrifice victims of peace: seven days shalt thou wait, till I come to thee, and I will show thee what thou art to do.

9 So when he had turned his back to go from Samuel, and the Fathers seem to be convinced that the custom subsisted till Christ appeared. S. Just. Dial. &c. H.—The ceremony has been preserved, with respect to Christian kings, who, according to Innocent I., should be anointed on the shoulders and arms, while prelates receive the unction on the head.—Kissed him, out of respect. Psal. ii. 12. C.—Behold. Heb. "Is it not because?" &c. H.—And thou . . . prince. All this is wanting in the Heb. &c. But it is conformable to the Vat. Sept. (C.); the Alex. has, "to be prince over his people, over Israel?" and thou shalt rule over the people of the Lord, and shalt save it from its enemies around;" as we have explained. Chap. ix. 16. H.—Saul was anointed with a small vessel, to signify that his kingdom should not subsist long; and with oil, to remind him of mercy, light, and health to his people. S. Greg. W.

VER. 2. Rachel, near Bethlehem. Gen. xxxv. 16.—South. Sept. or "mid-day." Heb. Tsoltsale, is very obscure. Some take it for a proper name. C.—Prot. "at Zelzah." Others, for some musical instrument, as if these travellers were "dancing," as the Sept. insinuate, and playing on musical instruments, like the prophets, ver. 5. It does not appear how Saul would come near Bethlehem, in his journey from Ramatha to Gabaa, unless Ramatha lay more to the south than it is represented, which it could not do, being in the tribe of Ephraim; so that we might translate the Heb. "Thou wilt find two men of Zelzelach, a place near the tomb of Rachel, on the borders of Benjamin, and thence," &c.

VER. 3. Thabor, very distant from the famous mountain (C.) in Zabulon. M.—Bethel. Where there was at that time an altar of God; it being one of the places where Samuel judged Israel, (Ch.) and which had always been considered as a place of devotion, since Jacob had his vision. Gen. xxviii. 19. It lay to the east of Gabaa, so that Saul might easily meet these pilgrims. C.—Wine, for libations, as the other things were for a sacrifice and feast, as well as for presents to the officiating priests.

VER. 5. The hill of God. Gabaa, in which there was also at that time a high place or altar. Ch.—Prophets. These were men whose office it was to sing hymns and praises to God: for such in holy writ are called prophets, and their singing praises to God is called prophesying. See 1 Par. alias 1 Chron. xv. 22, and xxv. 1. Now there were in those days colleges, or schools for training up these prophets; and it seems there was one of these schools at this hill of God; and another at Naioth in Ramatha. See 1 Sam. xix. 20, 21, &c. Ch.

VER. 6. Spirit of pety. M.—Man. Thou shalt act and entertain senti-

God gave unto him another heart, and all these things came to pass that day.

10 And they came to the foresaid hill, and behold a company of prophets met him: and the Spirit of the Lord came upon him, and he prophesied in the midst of them.

11 And all that had known him yesterday and the day before, seeing that he was with the prophets, and prophesied, said to each other: What is this that hath happened to the son of Cis? is Saul also among the prophets?

12 And one answered another, saying: And who is their father? therefore it became a proverb: 'Is Saul also among the prophets?

13 And when he had made an end of prophesying, he came to the high place.

14 And Saul's uncle said to him, and to his servant. Whither went you? They answered: To seek the asses: and not finding them, we went to Samuel.

15 And his uncle said to him: Tell me what Samuel said to thee.

16 And Saul said to his uncle: He told us that the asses were found. But of the matter of the kingdom of which Samuel had spoken to him, he told him not.

17 And Samuel called together the people to the Lord in Maspha:

18 And he said to the children of Israel: Thus saith the Lord the God of Israel: I brought up Israel out of Egypt, and delivered you from the hand of the Egyptians, and from the hand of all the kings who afflicted you.

19 But you this day have rejected your God, who only hath saved you out of all your evils and your tribulations: and you have said: 'Nay: but set a king over us. Now therefore stand before the Lord by your tribes, and by your families.

20 And Samuel brought to him all the tribes of Israel, and the lot fell on the tribe of Benjamin.

ments worthy of a great prince, (C.) and be no longer employed in rustic works. M.

VER. 8. Galgal. Here also by dispensation was an altar of God. Ch.—To do. Saul went thither after the victory which he had obtained over the Ammonites, when he was confined in his dignity. Chap. xi. 14. But the mention of seven days seems to indicate that Samuel is here speaking of that event, when the war against the Philistines was at hand, and Saul neglected to wait the appointed term before he ventured to offer sacrifice. Chap. xiii. 8. C.—Others translate, "I will be at Galgal with thee, and we will offer sacrifices for seven days." C.—Prot. "I will come down to thee to offer burnt-offerings," &c., which is conformable to the Sept. Indeed Saul was probably blamied for offering the victims himself. H.—Obedience was enjoined him to try his humility. S. Greg. W.

VER. 11. Prophets. This proverb received a fresh confirmation, when Saul was going to seize David, and was forced by the Spirit to join with the college of prophets in singing God's praises. Chap. xix. ult. H.

VER. 12. Their father. That is, their teacher or superior. As much as to say, Who could bring about such a wonderful change as to make Saul a prophet? (Ch.) but the Lord, whose Spirit breatheth where he will. John iii. 8. H.—Sept. "Who is his father? is it not Cis?" The spirit of prophecy is a gift of God, not of parents. M.—But a prophet is not without honour, save in his own country. Matt. xiii. 57. H.

VER. 13. Place. Returning to his father's house, after the Spirit had ceased to inspire him, and the prophets had retired home. His relations, suspecting something more than common had been revealed to Saul by Samuel, began to ask him questions: but he had the prudence to keep (C.) his secret to himself, either in obedience to Samuel's injunction, when he sent the servant before, (H.) or out of humility, (M.) or to prevent the dangers of envy from his own kindred. Josephus.

VER. 17. Lord, who always presided over such assemblies. This was convened to elect a king, whom God pointed out by lots. C.—Adrichomius says Maspha was only three hours' walk from Cariathiarim. M.

VER. 19. Families. Lots were first drawn to determine the tribe, then to find out which of the great families, and which house, was to give a king to Israel. H.—See Jos. vii. 14. M.—God was pleased thus to convince them that the election proceeded from him. S. Greg. W.

21 And he brought the tribe of Benjamin and the kindreds thereof, and the lot fell upon the kindred of Metri, and it came to Saul, the son of Cis. They sought him therefore, and he was not found.

22 And after this they consulted the Lord whether he would come thither. And the Lord answered: Behold he is hidden at home.

23 And they ran and fetched him thence: and he stood in the midst of the people, and he was higher than any of the people from the shoulders and upward.

24 And Samuel said to all the people: Surely you see him whom the Lord hath chosen, that there is none like him among all the people. And all the people cried and said: God save the king.

25 And Samuel told the people the law of the kingdom, and wrote it in a book, and laid it up before the Lord: and Samuel sent away all the people, every one to his own house.

26 Saul also departed to his own house in Gabaa: and there went with him a part of the army, whose hearts God had touched.

27 But the children of Belial said: Shall this fellow be able to save us? And they despised him, and brought him no presents; but he dissembled as though he heard not.

CHAP. XI.

Saul defeateth the Ammonites, and delivereth Jabes Galaad.

AND it came to pass about a month after this, that Naas, the Ammonite, came up, and began to fight against Jabes Galaad. And all the men of Jabes said to Naas: Make a covenant with us, and we will serve thee.

2 And Naas, the Ammonite, answered them: On this condition will I make a covenant with you, that I may

• A. M. 2909.

VER. 21. Metri. We find none of this name, 1 Par. viii. 1. It is probably a title which some of the great patriarchs of Benjamin had acquired by shooting, as Metri means "an archer or bowman." C.

VER. 22. Home. Heb. "he hath hidden himself among the stuff," (H.) instruments, or baggage, at Masphath. He acted thus out of modesty, judging himself unfit for the exalted dignity, (C.) and showed that he did not seek for it. M.

VER. 23. Upward. God condescended to gratify the desires of the people, who chiefly regarded the stature and corporal qualifications of their king.

VER. 25. Before the Lord. It seems that the ark was therefore present. This record of Samuel is lost, so that we cannot determine what laws he prescribed on this occasion. C.—Josephus (vi. 5) says that he wrote and read in the hearing of all, and in the presence of the king, what evils would ensue under the regal government; and deposited the writing in the tabernacle, that the truth of the prediction might be ascertained. But the prophet would also take a copy of the law of the kingdom, prescribed by Moses, (Deut. xvii.) and deliver it to Saul, that he might make it the rule of his conduct, and not imitate the wicked customs of tyrants. H.

VER. 26. Touched; to consider the appointment of Saul as his act. Afterwards they retired home, and the new king returned to his wonted occupations. The army here denotes part of the assembly, as the young men came with their leaders ready, if called, to march to battle. Exod. vi. 26; Deut. xx. 9. C.

VER. 27. Belial; seditious men, perhaps of the tribe of Ephraim, (Judg. xii.) or of Juda, to whom the regal power seemed to belong. Gen. xlix. Salien. —Presents, in testimony of their submission. See Judg. iii. 15; 3 Kings iv. 21. C.—Not. He knew that the throne is established by mercy. Prov. xx. 28. Hence he chose to pardon these discontented people after he had obtained the victory, and was even solicited to make an example of them. Salien, A. 2962. M.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. After this. So far is omitted in the Heb., &c., but we find it in most editions of the Sept. and in Josephus. C.—Fight. He had threatened an invasion before, and had perhaps (H.) attacked some of the tribes on the east side of the Jordan, and treated them with the same cruelty as he intended for those of Jabes, which was a city of the first consequence. Josephus, vi. 5.—Naas, "a serpent." There was a king of this country of the same name in the days of David. The people had been quiet since Jephthah had made such havoc among them, about ninety years before. Judg. xi. C.—Covenant. They were willing to pluck out all your right eyes, and make you a reproach in all Israel.

3 And the ancients of Jabes said to him: Allow us seven days, that we may send messengers to all the coasts of Israel: and if there be no one to defend us, we will come out to thee.

4 The messengers therefore came to Gabaa of Saul: and they spoke these words in the hearing of the people: and all the people lifted up their voices, and wept.

5 And behold Saul came, following oxen out of the field, and he said: What aileth the people that they weep? And they told him the words of the men of Jabes.

6 And the Spirit of the Lord came upon Saul, when he had heard these words, and his anger was exceedingly kindled.

7 And taking both the oxen, he cut them in pieces, and sent them into all the coasts of Israel, by messengers, saying: Whosoever shall not come forth, and follow Saul and Samuel, so shall it be done to his oxen. And the fear of the Lord fell upon the people, and they went out as one man.

8 And he numbered them in Bezek: and there were of the children of Israel three hundred thousand: and of the men of Juda thirty thousand.

9 And they said to the messengers that came: Thus shall you say to the men of Jabes Galaad: To-morrow, when the sun shall be hot, you shall have relief. The messengers therefore came, and told the men of Jabes, and they were glad.

10 And they said: In the morning we will come out to you: and you shall do what you please with us.

11 And it came to pass, when the morrow was come, that Saul put the people in three companies: and he came into the midst of the camp in the morning watch, and he pay him tribute. But it seems they had offered him some insult, which made the king resolve to punish them more severely.

VER. 2. Eyes: strange proposal! He would not render them quite blind, that he might not be deprived of their service. But he wished to render them unfit for war, (C.) as the buckler covers the left eye (Josephus); and people who shoot with bow and arrow keep it closed. C.

VER. 4. Of Saul. Sept. "to Saul," which may remove the surprise of Abulensis, that the king is not mentioned. Salien.—Saul was absent at the time, so that they made known the threatening danger to the people.

VER. 5. Field. So David fed sheep even after he was anointed king. The ancients had very different sentiments of royalty from what we have. Their kings and great men did not esteem it beneath them to cultivate the earth.

VER. 6. Spirit of fortitude, prudence, and zeal. H.

VER. 7. Oxen, with which he had been ploughing.—Pieces. Heb. does not say that he sent them; and Josephus intimates that he only "hamstrung them, and sent messengers," &c. H.—But such actions are far more impressive than words. See Judg. xix. 29; Acts xxi. 10, &c. C.—Samuel. Saul adds the name of the prophet, as the people had still great confidence in him, and he always acted as God's envoy. H.—Oxen. He does not threaten a capital punishment, but insinuates that both duty and interest requires the presence of all. Salien.—Of the Lord; that is, a great fear (C.): or God moved the people to show a ready obedience and reverence to their king's commands.

VER. 8. Bezek, where Adonibezec had reigned, (Judg. i. M.) near the place where they crossed the Jordan, a little below Scythopolis, to go to Jabes, which was about thirty miles distant. C.

VER. 9. Hot. Josephus says, Saul, "being seized with the Divine spirit, ordered them to inform the citizens of Jabes that he would come to their assistance on the third day, and rout the enemy before the sun arose." But the message of which the Scripture hero speaks (H.) was sent from Bezek. Saul, in effect, came upon the Ammonites unawares before it was light, gained a complete victory, (C.) and then pursued the fugitives till noon.

VER. 10. To you, Naas, (H.) which they speak in irony, and that the enemy may be off his guard. C.

VER. 11. Camp. It was not then customary to throw up any fortifications, but only to place sentinels in all the avenues.—Watch, which ended at sunrise. C.

slew the Animonites until the day grew hot, and the rest were scattered, so that two of them were not left together.

12 And the people said to Samuel: "Who is he that said: Shall Saul reign over us? Bring the men, and we will kill them.

13 And Saul said: No man shall be killed this day: because the Lord this day hath wrought salvation in Israel:

14 And Samuel said to the people: Come, and let us go to Galgal, and let us renew the kingdom there.

15 And all the people went to Galgal, and there they made Saul king, before the Lord in Galgal, and they sacrificed there victims of peace before the Lord. And there Saul and all the men of Israel rejoiced exceedingly.

CHAP. XII.

Samuel's integrity is acknowledged. God sheweth, by a sign from heaven, that they had done ill in asking for a king.

AND^b Samuel said to all Israel: Behold I have hearkened to your voice in all that you said to me, and have made a king over you.

2 And now the king goeth before you: but I am old and grey-headed: and my sons are with you: having then conversed with you from my youth until this day, behold here I am.

3 "Speak of me before the Lord, and before his anointed, whether I have taken any man's ox, or ass: if I have wronged any man, if I have oppressed any man, if I have taken a bribe at any man's hand: and I will despise it this day, and will restore it to you.

4 And they said: Thou hast not wronged us, nor oppressed us, nor taken aught at any man's hand.

5 And he said to them: The Lord is witness against you, and his anointed is witness this day, that you have not found any thing in my hand. And they said: He is witness.

6 And Samuel said to the people: It is the Lord, who made Moses and Aaron, and brought our fathers out of the land of Egypt.

7 Now, therefore, stand up, that I may plead in judgment against you before the Lord, concerning all the kindness of the Lord, which he hath shown to you, and to your fathers:

VER. 12. Them. It seems there were but few discontented persons. Salien. —They address themselves to Samuel, who they knew had not regarded their request of a king with approbation, as if to give him a little mortification. But he makes a proposal of confirming the election with still greater solemnity, if they persevered in their resolution, (H.) as he intimated they might still recede, (C.) and be content with the former mode of government, as being far better. H.

VER. 15. They made. Sept. "and there (again the prophet; Josephus) Samuel anointed Saul king."

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. You. He speaks with the authority of a prophet, (C.) and takes this opportunity to draw from the whole people a confession of his integrity, that the kings might follow the pattern which he had set them. H.

VER. 2. Goeth, as your leader, according to your request. I am like a private man, (C.) willing to submit to his and the people's judgment, (H.) though it could not be required. M.—Grey-headed. This he might be at the age of sixty, which most chronologers allow him, (H.) as he had been at the head of affairs from his early years, in most difficult times. T.

VER. 3. Anointed, "Christ," as the anointing of kings prefigured that of the Messias, which, in Hebrew, has the same import as the word χριστος has in Greek. C.—Wronged. Lit. "by calumny," or by any other mode of oppression. H.—Despise. Heb. "hide my eyes," through confusion. C.—Prot. "to blind my eyes therewith." H.—Sept. have read nālim, "shoes," instead of ālim. 8 "How Jacob went into Egypt, and your fathers cried to the Lord: and the Lord sent Moses and Aaron, and brought your fathers out of Egypt, and made them dwell in this place.

9 And they forgot the Lord their God, and he delivered them into the hands of Sisara, captain of the army of Hasor, and into the hands of the Philistines, and into the hand of the king of Moab, and they fought against them.

10 But afterwards they cried to the Lord, and said: We have sinned, because we have forsaken the Lord, and have served Baalim and Astaroth: but now deliver us from the hand of our enemies, and we will serve thee.

11 "And the Lord sent Jerobaal, and Badan, and Jephthe, and Samuel, and delivered you from the hand of your enemies round about, and you dwelt securely.

12 But seeing that Naas, king of the children of Animon, was come against you, you said to me: "Nay, but a king shall reign over us: whereas the Lord your God was your king.

13 Now, therefore, your king is here, whom you have chosen and desired: Behold the Lord hath given you a king.

14 If you will fear the Lord, and serve him, and hearken to his voice, and not provoke the mouth of the Lord: then shall both you, and the king who reigneth over you, be followers of the Lord your God.

15 But if you will not hearken to the voice of the Lord, but will rebel against his words, the hand of the Lord shall be upon you, and upon your fathers.

16 Now then stand, and see this great thing which the Lord will do in your sight.

17 Is it not wheat-harvest to-day? I will call upon the Lord, and he shall send thunder and rain: and you shall know, and see that you yourselves have done a great evil in the sight of the Lord, in desiring a king over you.

18 And Samuel cried unto the Lord, and the Lord sent thunder and rain that day.

19 And all the people greatly feared the Lord and Samuel. And all the people said to Samuel: Pray for thy servants to the Lord thy God, that we may not die.

VER. 7. Stand up, like people cited to the bar. Having undergone his own trial with applause, Samuel shows that the people will not come off so well at the tribunal of God, whom they had treated with greater disrespect, injustice, and ingratitude than they had himself, as he convinced them by an astonishing and terrible storm. H.—Kindness. Sept. "justice," as the same Heb. word implies both. God had treated his people with mercy and with justice (C.) alternately. H.

VER. 11. Jerobaal and Badan. That is, Gedeon and Samson, called here Badan or Bedan, because he was of Dan. Ch., Chald., &c. W.—Others think that Jair, (Judg. x. 3. Junius, Usher,) or, according to the Sept. "Barac," are designated. Jair was a descendant of one Bedan, 1 Par. ii. 21. C.—But we do not read that Jair performed any great exploit. H.—Samuel. He speaks of himself as of any other man: as the interests of God were not to be betrayed by an unreasonable modesty. C.—Josephus only specifies Jephthe and Gedeon. H.

VER. 13. Desired. S. Aug. (in Psal. li.) considers this as a kind of sarcasm. C.—You will see what advantages you will derive from your choice. M.

VER. 14. Of the Lord, causing him to look upon you and treat you with indignation. C.—Sept. "and do not contend with the mouth," or against the orders of the Lord, which cannot fail to excite his displeasure. M.

VER. 17. Wheat-harvest. At which time of the year it never thunders or rains in those countries. Ch.—The wheat-harvest is towards the end of June. The usual seasons for rain are only spring and autumn. S. Jerom in Amos iv. 7, &c.—Thunder. Lit. "voices." Psal. xvii. 14. C.—See. Being fully convinced by the miracle, which declares the will of God in the clearest manner.

VER. 19. And Samuel, at whose prayer the Lord had sent such a storm, lest he should punish them as they deserved. But the prophet alleviates their fears.

for we have added to all our sins this evil, to ask for a king.

20 And Samuel said to the people: Fear not, you have done all this evil: but yet depart not from following the Lord, but serve the Lord with all your heart.

21 And turn not aside after vain things, which shall never profit you, nor deliver you, because they are vain.

22 And the Lord will not forsake his people for his great name's sake: because the Lord hath sworn to make you his people.

23 And far from me be this sin against the Lord, that I should cease to pray for you: and I will teach you the good and right way.

24 Therefore fear the Lord, and serve him in truth, and with your whole heart, for you have seen the great works which he hath done among you.

25 But if you will still do wickedly: both you and your king shall perish together.

The war between Saul and the Philistines. The distress of the Israelites. Saul offereth sacrifice before the coming of Samuel: for which he is reproved.

SAUL^a was a child of one year when he began to reign, and he reigned two years over Israel.

2 And Saul chose him three thousand men of Israel: and two thousand were with Saul in Machmas, and in Mount Bethel: and a thousand with Jonathan in Gabaa of Benjamin: and the rest of the people he sent back every man to their dwellings.

3 And Jonathan smote the garrison of the Philistines which was in Gabaa. And when the Philistines had heard of it, Saul sounded the trumpet over all the land, saying: Let the Hebrews hear.

VER. 21. Vain and wicked idols. Heb. then, full of "confusion" and disorder.

VER. 22. Sake. This motive often proved the salvation of Israel. Exod. xxxii. 12. The Scriptures wholly tend to impress upon our minds a sense of our own weakness, and of God's infinite glory and perfection. C.

VER. 23. The Lord. For a pastor to neglect instruction is not only detrimental to the people, but injurious to God. H.—Way. None contributed more than Samuel to keep the people within due bounds during the reign of Saul. C.

VER. 25. Together. Sept. "shall be rejected." Saul soon experienced the effect of this prophetic menace; and the Jews were, at last, also cast away. H.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Of one year. That is, he was good, and like an innocent child, and for two years continued in that innocency. Ch. S. Greg. W.—Israel. This verse is omitted in some copies of the Sept. It is extremely difficult to explain. Some translate Heb. "Saul was as a son of one year old," &c. Sym. Others, "Saul begot a son the first year of his reign," (Raban,) Isboseth, who was forty years old when his father died, after governing all that while. Serar.—Syr. and Arab. "In the first or second year of the reign of Saul . . . he chose," &c. Hardouin supposes that the people dated their years by his reign only so long. Some think that the Heb. is imperfect; and an ancient interpreter has, "Saul was thirty years old when he began," &c. C.—The Rabbin and many commentators assert that the reign of Saul lasted only two years. T.—But some of them explain this as if he reigned alone only that term before he was rejected, when he could only be regarded as an usurper. Others, that he obtained the whole power for two years after the death of Samuel. C.—Perhaps the first translation, though somewhat mystic, may be the most literal, showing that for one year Saul continued to act with the most engaging affability and moderation. But in the second he threw off the yoke, and was, in his turn, rejected by the Lord, as we shall soon behold. H.

VER. 3. Land. As soon as the next cities had heard the alarm they sounded the trumpet, and so the news was conveyed to the most distant parts in a short time. Judg. iii. 27.—Hebrews. Probably those "on the other side" the Jordan, who presently came to the assistance of their brethren, ver. 7. Oslander.—It might also be the usual beginning of a proclamation. See Dan. iii. 4. M.

VER. 4. Courage. Heb. "and Israel was in abomination (stinking) with the Philistines." See Exod. v. 21. C.—Sept. "despised as nothing the strangers."

4 And all Israel heard this report: Saul hath smitten the garrison of the Philistines: and Israel took courage against the Philistines. And the people were called together after Saul to Galgal.

5 The Philistines also were assembled to fight against Israel, thirty thousand chariots, and six thousand horsemen, and a multitude of people besides, like the sand on the sea-shore for number. And going up they camped in Machmas, at the east of Bethaven.

6 And when the men of Israel saw that they were straitened, (for the people were distressed,) they hid themselves in caves, and in thickets, and in rocks, and in dens, and in pits.

7 And some of the Hebrews passed over the Jordan into the land of Gad and Galaad. And when Saul was yet in Galgal, all the people that followed him were greatly afraid.

8 And he waited seven days, according to the appointment of Samuel, and Samuel came not to Galgal, and the people slipt away from him.

9 Then Saul said: Bring me the holocaust, and the peace-offerings. And he offered the holocaust.

10 And when he had made an end of offering the holocaust, behold Samuel came: and Saul went forth to meet him and salute him.

11 And Samuel said to him: What hast thou done? Saul answered: Because I saw that the people slipt from me, and thou wast not come according to the days appointed, and the Philistines were gathered together in Machmas,

12 I said: Now will the Philistines come down upon me to Galgal, and I have not appeased the face

^b Supra, x. 8.

WERE should be omitted, as the verb is active, clamavit, in the Vulg. and Sept., though the Prot. have "were called," &c. They shouted with alacrity that Saul would lead them on to battle. H.—Oslander thinks that they "exclaimed against him," for engaging them in this new war.

VER. 5. Chariots. This number seems almost incredible, as the Philistines were but a contemptible nation, compared with various others which never brought so many chariots into the field. Hence the Syr. and Arab. read "three thousand;" and it is supposed that the Heb. has im, at the end of ssoss, redundant. Bochart, Capel, &c. The number of horsemen would otherwise bear no proportion with the chariots.—Number. Josephus specifies "three hundred thousand infantry." H.—Bethaven. Many copies of the Sept. read "Bethoron," more probably, as Bethel must have been on the east of Machmas, which lay north of Gabaa, chap. xiv. 5, (C.) "over against Bethoron on the south." Grabe. H.—Heb. also, "having Bethaven on the east."—This is not contrary to chap. vii. 13, as the Philistines had been quiet for a long time. Heb. alom, properly denotes the term of a jubilee, or fifty years. D.

VER. 6. Straitened, the people from the northern provinces, and provisions being cut off, by the immense army of the Philistines. C.—Providence was pleased to convince the people that, though they had been able to muster so large a force against the Ammonites at so short a warning, they must not depend on the efforts of their new king. H.—He suffered many of the army to retire, as he sent away most of Gideon's soldiers, that the whole glory of the victory might be attributed to him. Salien.—Dens. So the Chal. Some explain the Heb. "high places (H.) or towers." C.—Sept. "ditches or holes." M.—Βόθρος. In that country there are many spacious caverns. Chap. xxiv.; Jos. x. H.

VER. 7. Hebrews. Sept. "the people, who came over (the river), crossed the Jordan." H.—Heb. "the Hebrews passed over the Jordan, the land of," &c. C.—Afraid. Sept. in a sort of "ecstasy" of fear.

VER. 8. Of Samuel. Yet the prophet condemns his proceedings, either because he did not wait till the expiration of the seventh day, (C. S. Ignatius, &c. Salien,) or because he ventured to offer sacrifice himself. Lyra, after Sulp. Severus, &c. H. W.—He had, however, the high priest with him (chap. xiv. 3); so that he might have performed this sacred function, at the request of Saul; and we do not find that the latter is accused of sacrilege. Salien.—"With a trembling heart, we must consider how he was rejected for neglecting to wait so short a time," (S. Greg.) when the circumstances seemed to plead so strongly in his favour. How impenetrable are the judgments of God! and how punctually does he require his orders to be obeyed! C.

VER. 12. Lord, by sacrifices.—Holocaust. Heb. "I forced myself therefore," &c. It is asked whether Saul offered sacrifice, or caused it to be offered by of the Lord. Forced by necessity, I offered the holocaust.

13 And Samuel said to Saul: Thou hast done foolishly, and hast not kept the commandments of the Lord thy God, which he commanded thee. And if thou hadst not done thus, the Lord would now have established thy kingdom over Israel for ever:

14 But thy kingdom shall not continue. *The Lord hath sought him a man according to his own heart: and him hath the Lord commanded to be prince over his people, because thou hast not observed that which the Lord commanded.

15 And Samuel arose and went up from Galgal to Gabaa of Benjamin. And the rest of the people went up after Saul, to meet the people who fought against them, going from Galgal to Gabaa, in the hill of Benjamin. And Saul numbered the people, that were found with him, about six hundred men.

16 And Saul, and Jonathan his son, and the people that were present with them, were in Gabaa of Benjamin: But the Philistines encamped in Machmas.

17 And there went out of the camp of the Philistines three companies to plunder. One company went towards the way of Ephra to the land of Sual.

18 And another went by the way of Bethoron, and the third turned to the way of the border, above the valley of Seboim towards the desert.

19 Now there was no smith to be found in all the land of Israel, for the Philistines had taken this precaution, lest the Hebrews should make them swords or spears.

20 So all Israel went down to the Philistines, to sharpen every man his plough-share, and his spade, and his axe, and his rake.

21 So that their shares, and their spades, and their forks, and their axes, were blunt, even to the goad, which was to be mended.

* Acts xiii. 22.

the priests. The text seems to assert that he did it himself. Samuel and David did the like; and we read that Solomon ascended to the brazen altar, at Gabaa, for the same purpose. 2 Par. i. 5. If it was lawful to erect altars out of the tabernacle, notwithstanding the Divine prohibition, why might not individuals also offer sacrifice on certain solemn occasions? The Hebrew kings seem to have exercised some of the sacerdotal functions, particularly before the building of the temple; for afterwards we find one of their kings severely punished for presuming to offer incense. 4 Kings xv. 5. C.—Yet the proofs that they ever lawfully offered sacrifice, are not very satisfactory, as, in the Scripture language, a person is often said to do what he enjoins another to perform on his account; and if some prophets have acted in the character of priests, by Divine dispensation, we need not extend the privilege to all who have dared to assume the like prerogative. H.

VER. 13. Ever. He foresaw this want of obedience, and therefore promised the sceptre to Juda. Gen. xlix. M.—God's foresight of sin, and pre-ordination to punish it, does not take away free-will nor the possibility of a reward. S. Aug. W.

VER. 14. Continue long. This seems to have been a threat which Saul might still have escaped, if he had not proved disobedient again. S. Greg. says, "he might have been loosed from the bonds of his former disobedience:" prioris inobedientiæ nexus enodaret. The second rebellion caused him to be entirely rejected, and the prophet was ordered to go and anoint David. Chap. xv. Salien.

VER. 15. Samuel. Piscator suspects that we ought to read Saul, as no mention is made of the prophet in the sequel of this war, and he is never consulted. C.—Josephus says he returned home. H.—But all the versions are conformable to the text: and Samuel went with the king and his 600 soldiers to Gabaa, (C.) that he might not appear to retain any ill-will towards Saul, and that his followers might not be quite dispirited, as they knew that he had the thunderbolts of heaven in his hand; and if he was with them, they had nothing to fear from the myriads of their opponents. Salien.—And the . . . Benjamin. All this is omitted in Heb., Chal., and in many Greek and Latin copies. C.—It is found in the Alex. and Vat. Sept.—In the hill, is a translation of Gabaa, which alone occurs in those editions. H.

VER. 18. Bethoron, the lower, to the north-west of Gabaa.—Seboim was one of the cities which perished along with Sodom. C.

VER. 19. Smith. The Philistines had taken these precautions before Samuel 22 And when the day of battle was come, there was neither sword nor spear found in the hand of any of the people that were with Saul and Jonathan, except Saul and Jonathan his son.

23 And the army of the Philistines went out in order to advance further in Machmas.

CHAP. XIV.

Jonathan attacketh the Philistines. A miraculous victory. Saul's unadvised oath, by which Jonathan is put in danger of his life, but is delivered by the people.

NOW it came to pass one day that Jonathan, the son of Saul, said to the young man that bore his armour: Come, and let us go over to the garrison of the Philistines, which is on the other side of yonder place. But he told not this to his father.

2 And Saul abode in the uttermost part of Gabaa, under the pomegranate tree, which was in Magron: and the people with him were about six hundred men.

3 And Achias, the son of Achitob, brother of Ichabod, the son of Phinees, ^bthe son of Heli, the priest of the Lord in Silo, wore the ephod. And the people knew not whither Jonathan was gone.

4 Now there were between the ascents, by which Jonathan sought to go over to the garrison of the Philistines, rocks standing up on both sides, and steep cliffs like teeth on the one side, and on the other, the name of the one was Boses, and the name of the other was Sene:

5 One rock stood out toward the north, over against Machmas, and the other to the south, over against Gabaa.

6 And Jonathan said to the young man that bore his armour: Come, let us go over to the garrison of these uncircumcised, it may be the Lord will do for us: because it is easy for the Lord to save either by many, or by few.

7 And his armour-bearer said to him: Do all that gained the victory over them, and he consented that the people should employ the Philistines as before, when he made peace with them (Salien); or they had again begun to get the upper hand at the beginning of Saul's reign, as the Israelites had been long in the enjoyment of peace, and negligent. T.

VER. 20. All Israel, whom the Philistines had conquered, particularly the neighbouring tribes. C.—Share. Sept., Syr., &c., "scythe," or "sickle for corn;" θεριοντιον. H.—The original term, uersoth, may signify all sorts of implements. —Spade. Heb. is supposed to mean, "a coultre." Sept. "instrument," which the prophets often say will be turned into a sword in times of war. Joel iii. 15; Mic. iv. 3.—Rake. The same general term is used in Heb. as was before translated a plough-share. Sept. have "scythe;" δρεπανον. C.

VER. 21. Mended, by the Philistines. H.—The Heb. is variously translated. "Their implements were like saws; or, they had a file to sharpen the," &c. C.—Sept. "and the fruits were ready to be gathered. But the vessels (instruments for labour) were three sieles for a tooth, and the same price (or station, προστασις, a word used ver. 23, in the latter sense) for an axe or a scythe." H.

VER. 23. Further. Heb. "went out to the passage, (H.) or defile, of Machmas," leading to Gabaa. C.—Sept. "and there came out of the station of the strangers, to the other side (or beyond) Machmas," where they had been fixed. Chap. vi. 11, 16. H.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Day, while it was yet dark. Josephus.—This action would seem rash, and contrary to military discipline, which requires that the general should be apprized of any hazardous enterprise. C.—But it is thought that Jonathan was directed by God, who granted him success. A. Lapid.

VER. 2. Magron, a village between Gabaa and Machmas. Isa. x. 28. Heb. reads "Remmon," which means "a pomegranate tree," and denotes a famous impregnable rock, with extensive caverns, where an equal number of men had formerly saved themselves. Judg. xx. 47. C. T. M.

VER. 3. Ephod; or was high priest, ver. 18. Achias is called Achimelech, chap. xxii. 9. C.—He had succeeded his father, Achitob, in the beginning of Saul's reign, after the former had held the dignity twenty-two years. Salien, A. 2962.

VER. 6. It may. Lit. "if perchance." H.—This does not express any doubt. The hero found himself impelled to undertake this work, but he knew not by what means God would crown it with success. He therefore prays to him in this manner, as Abraham's servant had done. Gen. xxiv. 12. C.—Fav. These words pleaseth thy mind: go whither thou wilt, and I will be with thee wheresoever thou hast a mind.

8 And Jonathan said: Behold we will go over to these men. And when we shall be seen by them, 9 If they shall speak thus to us: Stay till we come to you: let us stand still in our place, and not go up to them.

10 But if they shall say: Come up to us: let us go up, because the Lord hath delivered them into our hands, this shall be a sign unto us.

11 So both of them discovered themselves to the garrison of the Philistines: and the Philistines said: Behold the Hebrews come forth out of the holes wherein they were hid.

12 And the men of the garrison spoke to Jonathan, and to his armour-bearer, and said: Come up to us, and we will show you a thing. And Jonathan said to his armour-bearer: Let us go up, follow me: for the Lord hath delivered them into the hands of Israel.

13 And Jonathan went up creeping on his hands and feet, and his armour-bearer after him. And some fell before Jonathan, others his armour-bearer slew as he followed him.

14 And the first slaughter which Jonathan and his armour-bearer made, was of about twenty men, within half an acre of land, which a yoke of oxen is wont to plough in a day.

15 And there was a miracle in the camp, in the fields: and all the people of their garrison, who had gone out to plunder, were amazed, and the earth trembled: and it happened as a miracle from God.

16 And the watchmen of Saul, who were in Gabaa of Benjamin, looked, and behold a multitude overthrown, and fleeing this way and that.

17 And Saul said to the people that were with him: Look, and see who is gone from us. And when they had sought, it was found that Jonathan and his armour-bearer were not there.

18 And Saul said to Achias: Bring the ark of the Lord. (For the ark of God was there that day with the children of Israel.)

are often repeated, (2 Par. xiv. 11; 1 Mac. iii. 18,) and were verified, chap. xvii. 47; Judg. vii. 4. M.

VER. 10. This shall be a sign. It is likely Jonathan was instructed by Divine inspiration to make choice of this sign; otherwise, the observation of omens is superstitious and sinful. Ch. M. W.

VER. 11. Philistines, probably on the northern rock, as they afterwards climbed up that on the south, (C.) where they had not been discovered. Salien.

VER. 14. Day. Louis de Dieu rejects all the other versions, and would translate the Heb. "in almost the half of the length of a furrow, and in the breadth which is between two furrows in a field," so that the enemy would be very close together. Lit. "almost in the half of a furrow of a yoke of the field," which seems rather to be understood of the length, (C.) if indeed it have any meaning. Prot. are forced to help out the text: "within as it were a half acre of land, which a yoke of oxen might plough." H.—But a whole acre was the usual allowance. M.

VER. 15. Miracle. Heb. erde, "consternation or trembling," a panic fear, as the Philistines imagined that all the army of Israel had got into the camp.

VER. 16. Gabaa, where they were stationed to observe the enemies' motions, and to give notice of them to Saul, at Remmon, ver. 2. C.—Overthrown. Heb. "melted down, (without courage,) and they went crushing" one another in the narrow passes, (11.) and turning their arms against all they met. Josephus.

VER. 17. Were not. Heb. "when they had numbered, behold Jonathan, &c. not" in the number. H.

VER. 18. Ark. Sept. "the ephod." Kimchi, &c.—How the oracle was given is uncertain. M.

VER. 19. Hand. He prayed with his hands extended. Saul believed that God had sufficiently intimated his will, by affording such a favourable opportunity.

19 And while Saul spoke to the priest, there arose a great uproar in the camp of the Philistines: and it increased by degrees, and was heard more clearly. And Saul said to the priest: Draw in thy hand.

20 Then Saul, and all the people that were with him, shouted together, and they came to the place of the fight: and behold every man's sword was turned upon his neighbour, and there was a very great slaughter.

21 Moreover, the Hebrews that had been with the Philistines yesterday and the day before, and went up with them into the camp, returned to be with the Israelites, who were with Saul and Jonathan.

22 And all the Israelites that had hid themselves in Mount Ephraim, hearing that the Philistines fled, joined themselves with their countrymen in the fight. And there were with Saul about ten thousand men.

23 And the Lord saved Israel that day. And the fight went on as far as Bethaven.

24 And the men of Israel were joined together that day: and Saul adjured the people, saying: Cursed be the man that shall eat food till evening, till I be revenged of my enemies. So none of the people tasted any food.

25 And all the common people came into a forest, in which there was honey upon the ground.

26 And when the people came into the forest, behold the honey dropped, but no man put his hand to his mouth. For the people feared the oath.

27 But Jonathan had not heard when his father adjured the people: and he put forth the end of the rod, which he had in his hand, and dipt it in a honey-comb: and he carried his hand to his mouth, and his eyes were enlightened.

28 And one of the people answering, said: Thy father hath bound the people with an oath, saying: Cursed be the man that shall eat any food this day. (And the people were faint.)

29 And Jonathan said: My father hath troubled the land: you have seen yourselves that my eyes are enlightened, because I tasted a little of this honey:

30 How much more if the people had eaten of the prey

M.—Saul did not wait for God's answer, and therefore had nearly lost his son by a rash vow, and by too eager zeal. W.

VER. 21. Before; that is, for some time, as slaves. M.—Having retired to their camp, to avoid the plunderers, (C.) they rose upon their oppressors. M.—Camp.—Heb. adds, "round about," as if they guarded the baggage, (Piscator,) or had retreated thither from the environs. C.

VER. 22. And there, &c. This is not found in Heb., &c., nor in many Latin copies. The Sept. specify the number, (ver. 24,) where it is not in the original. C.

VER. 23. Bethaven. They pursued the stragglers thither, as well as to Aialon, ver. 31. H.

VER. 24. Together. Which interpretation is more natural (C.) than the Prot. "were distressed, . . . for Saul had adjured," &c. H.—Sept. "And all the people was with Saul, about 10,000, and the war was spread through all the city in Mount Ephraim, and Saul was guilty of great ignorance that day, and he adjures (H. or cursed) the people," &c. He saw not that he was acting against his own interest. The sequel does not evince that God approved of his conduct. But the people were to be taught not to make light of oaths, nor to neglect the curses which their rulers should denounce. C.—Food. Lit. "bread," which comprises all sorts of food, honey, &c., (ver. 25. H.) but not drink, which might lawfully have been taken, as thirst is more difficult to bear. M.—Salien (A. 2964) defends the conduct of Saul, and condemns Jonathan.

VER. 25. Ground. Even still travellers perceive the smell of honey very frequently in that country. Maundrell.

VER. 27. Enlightened. Extreme hunger and fatigue hurt the eyes. Jer. xiv. 6. H.

VER. 29. Land. Chal. "the people of the land." M.—He speaks his sentiments freely. But we ought not to find fault, in public, with the conduct of the prince. C.

of their enemies, which they found? had there not been made a greater slaughter among the Philistines?

31 So they smote that day the Philistines, from Machmas to Aialon. And the people were wearied exceedingly.

32 And falling upon the spoils, they took sheep, and oxen, and calves, and slew them on the ground: and the people ate them with the blood.

33 And they told Saul that the people had sinned against the Lord, eating with the blood. And he said: You have transgressed: roll here to me now a great stone.

34 And Saul said: Disperse yourselves among the people, and tell them to bring me every man his ox and his ram, and slay them upon this stone, and eat, and you shall not sin against the Lord, in eating with the blood. So all the people brought every man his ox with him till the night: and slew them there.

35 And Saul built an altar to the Lord: and he then first began to build an altar to the Lord.

36 And Saul said: Let us fall upon the Philistines by night, and destroy them till the morning light, and let us not leave a man of them. And the people said: Do all that seemeth good in thy eyes. And the priest said: Let us draw near hither unto God.

37 And Saul consulted the Lord: Shall I pursue after the Philistines? wilt thou deliver them into the hands of Israel? And he answered him not that day.

38 And Saul said: Bring hither all the corners of the people: and know, and see by whom this sin hath happened to-day.

39 As the Lord liveth, who is the Saviour of Israel, if it was done by Jonathan, my son, he shall surely die. In this none of the people gainsayed him.

40 And he said to all Israel: Be you on one side, and I, with Jonathan, my son, will be on the other side. And the people answered Saul: Do what seemeth good in thy eyes.

41 And Saul said to the Lord: O Lord God of Israel, give a sign, by which we may know, what the meaning is, that thou answerest not thy servant to-day: If this iniquity be in me, or in my son Jonathan, give a proof: or if this iniquity be in thy people, give holiness. And Jonathan and Saul were taken, and the people escaped.

VER. 31. Aialon, in the tribe of Dan. It might be about ten miles from Machmas.

VER. 32. Blood, contrary to a two-fold law. Gen. ix. 4; Lev. xvii. 14. The blood ought to have been carefully extracted and buried. C.—This was another bad effect of Saul's rash oath. W.

VER. 34. With the blood, as you have done. M.

VER. 35. First. Saul begins to exercise himself in acts of religion, which only belonged to a prophet, &c. He thought he might do so in quality of king, thus consecrating a monument of his victory to the God of armies. It was perhaps the very stone on which the oxen had been just before killed for the people. C.

VER. 36. God, to consult him, whether the enterprise met with his approbation. Saul is too eager to follow his own prudence. H.—He would not before wait for God's answer (ver. 19); now he can get none. W.

VER. 38. Corners, to the very last; or all the princes. Judg. xviii. 9.

VER. 39. Gainsayed him, out of respect. Saul gives another proof of his precipitation, in swearing; and the people, by this silence, acquiesce, not suspecting that Jonathan could have offended in what he had done. C.—One of them, at least, knew that he had transgressed the order of his father, ver. 28. But extreme necessity might plead his excuse. H.

VER. 42. Jonathan was taken. Though Jonathan was excused from sin, through ignorance of the prohibition, yet God was pleased on this occasion to let 42 And Saul said: Cast lots between me, and Jonathan, my son. And Jonathan was taken.

43 And Saul said to Jonathan: Tell me what thou hast done. And Jonathan told him, and said: I did but taste a little honey with the end of the rod, which was in my hand, and behold I must die.

44 And Saul said: May God do so and so to me, and add still more: for dying thou shalt die, O Jonathan.

45 And the people said to Saul: Shall Jonathan then die, who hath wrought this great salvation in Israel? this must not be: As the Lord liveth, there shall not one hair of his head fall to the ground, for he hath wrought with God this day. So the people delivered Jonathan, that he should not die.

46 And Saul went back, and did not pursue after the Philistines: and the Philistines went to their own places.

47 And Saul having his kingdom established over Israel, fought against all his enemies round about, against Moab, and against the children of Ammon, and Edom, and the kings of Soba, and the Philistines: and whithersoever he turned himself, he overcame.

48 And gathering together an army, he defeated Amalec, and delivered Israel from the hand of them that spoiled them.

49 And the sons of Saul, were Jonathan, and Jessui, and Melchisua: and the names of his two daughters, the name of the first-born was Merob, and the name of the younger Michol.

50 And the name of Saul's wife was Achinoam, the daughter of Achimaas; and the name of the captain of his army was Abner, the son of Ner, the cousin-german of Saul.

51 For Cis was the father of Saul, and Ner, the father of Abner, was son of Abiel.

52 And there was a great war against the Philistines all the days of Saul. For whomsoever Saul saw to be a valiant man, and fit for war, he took him to himself.

Saul is sent to destroy Amalec: he spareth their king and the best of their cattle: for which disobedience he is cast off by the Lord.

the lot fall upon him, to show to all the great obligation of obedience to princes and parents, (Ch.) the sacred nature of an oath, and at the same time to give Saul a warning not to swear rashly. C.

VER. 44. Die. We may here admire the respect which the ancients had for an oath, without seeking for any modification; and the blindness of Saul, who condemns his son with as much haste as he had pronounced the curse, thinking thus to honour God. The thing surely required some deliberation, and he ought to have consulted the Lord about it. The action of Jonathan was not criminal, and the former silence of God did not prove that he deserved death. C.—If it had, the people would never have been able to have rescued him, no more than the unhappy Achan. Jos. vii. H.

VER. 48. Amalec. The particulars of this war will be given chap. xv., as it explains the cause of Saul's rejection, and David's advancement to the throne. Salien.

VER. 49. Sons, who accompanied Saul in his wars. Isboseth was too young. —Jessui is called Abinadab, 1 Par. viii. 33. C.

VER. 50. Achinoam. After he came to the throne he had Rcspba. 2 Kings iii. 7. M.

CHAP. XV VER. 1. Lord, in gratitude for so great an honour. H.

2 Thus saith the Lord of hosts: I have reckoned up all that Amalec hath done to Israel: how he opposed them in the way when they came up out of Egypt.

3 Now therefore go, and smite Amalec, and utterly destroy all that he hath: spare him not, nor covet any thing that is his: but slay both man and woman, child and suckling, ox and sheep, camel and ass.

4 So Saul commanded the people, and numbered them as lambs: two hundred thousand footmen, and ten thousand of the men of Juda.

5 And when Saul was come to the city of Amalec, he laid ambushes in the torrent.

6 And Saul said to the Cinite: Go, depart, and get ye down from Amalec: lest I destroy thee with him. For thou hast shown kindness to all the children of Israel, when they came up out of Egypt. And the Cinite departed from the midst of Amalec.

7 And Saul smote Amalec from Hevila, until thou comest to Sur, which is over against Egypt.

8 And he took Agag, the king of Amalec, alive: but all the common people he slew with the edge of the sword.

9 And Saul and the people spared Agag, and the best of the flocks of sheep, and of the herds, and the garments and the rams, and all that was beautiful, and would not destroy them: but every thing that was vile, and good for nothing, that they destroyed.

10 And the word of the Lord came to Samuel, saying:

11 It repenteth me that I have made Saul king: for he hath forsaken me, and hath not executed my commandments. And Samuel was grieved, and he cried unto the Lord all night.

12 And when Samuel rose early, to go to Saul in the morning, it was told Samuel that Saul was come to Carmel, and had erected for himself a triumphant arch, and returning had passed on, and gone down to Galgal. And Samuel came to Saul, and Saul was offering a holocaust to the Lord, out of the choicest of the spoils, which he had brought from Amalec.

13 And when Samuel was come to Saul, Saul said to him: Blessed be thou of the Lord, I have fulfilled the word of the Lord.

14 And Samuel said: What meaneth then this bleat-ing of the flocks, which soundeth in my ears, and the lowing of the herds, which I hear?

15 And Saul said: They have brought them from Amalec: for the people spared the best of the sheep and of the herds, that they might be sacrificed to the Lord thy God, but the rest we have slain.

16 And Samuel said to Saul: Suffer me, and I will tell thee what the Lord hath said to me this night. And he said to him: Speak.

17 And Samuel said: When thou wast a little one in thy own eyes, wast thou not made the head of the tribes of Israel? And the Lord anointed thee to be king over Israel.

18 And the Lord sent thee on the way, and said: Go, and kill the sinners of Amalec, and thou shalt fight against them until thou hast utterly destroyed them.

19 Why then didst thou not hearken to the voice of the Lord: but hast turned to the prey, and hast done evil in the eyes of the Lord?

20 And Saul said to Samuel: Yea, I have hearkened to the voice of the Lord, and have walked in the way by which the Lord sent me, and have brought Agag, the king of Amalec, and Amalec I have slain.

21 But the people took of the spoils, sheep and oxen, as the first-fruits of those things that were slain, to offer sacrifice to the Lord their God in Galgal.

22 And Samuel said: Doth the Lord desire holocausts and victims, and not rather that the voice of the Lord should be obeyed? For obedience is better than sacrifices: and to hearken rather than to offer the fat of rams.

23 Because it is like the sin of witchcraft, to rebel: and like the crime of idolatry, to refuse to obey. Forasmuch, therefore, as thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, the Lord hath also rejected thee from being king.

24 And Saul said to Samuel: I have sinned, because I have transgressed the commandment of the Lord, and thy words, fearing the people, and obeying their voice.

25 But now bear, I beseech thee, my sin, and return with me, that I may adore the Lord.

26 And Samuel said to Saul: I will not return with thee, because thou hast rejected the word of the Lord,

VER. 2. Reckoned up. God speaks in a human manner, as if he had been reading the history of ancient times. Exod. xvii. 14. M.—The Amalecites had treated Israel with inhumanity, above 400 years before. God's vengeance is often slow, but only so much the more terrible. C.—Heb. pokthi, I have visited, or will punish and remember.

VER. 3. Destroy, as a thing accursed. H.—Child. The great Master of life and death (who cuts off one half of mankind whilst they are children) has been pleased sometimes to ordain that children should be put to the sword, in detestation of the crimes of their parents, and that they might not live to follow the same wicked ways. But without such ordinance of God, it is not allowable in any wars, how just soever, to kill children. Ch.—The Israelites were now to execute God's orders with blind obedience, as he cannot be guilty of injustice.—Nor covet his, is omitted in Heb., &c. C.

VER. 4. As lambs. This comparison is very common. Isa. xl. 11; Ezec. xxxiv. 2. But many translate the Heb. "in Telaim." S. Jerom reads Heb. c, as, instead of b, in, with greater propriety. Sept. and Josephus, "in Galgal," which in effect would have been the most proper place for rendezvous. C.—Footmen. Vat. Sept. "400,000 ranks or standards, (Josephus, men,) and Juda 30,000."

VER. 11. Repenteth. God cannot change: but he often acts exteriorly as one who repents. He alters his conduct when men prove rebellious. S. Justin, p. 22.—Grieved. Heb. "indignant." C.—He was sorry to think that Saul would now lose his temporal, and perhaps his eternal crown. Salien.

VER. 15. Thy God. This was probably a falsehood, like the rest. Salien.

VER. 20. Lord. Sept. "of the people."

VER. 21. First-fruits, or the best.—Slain. Heb. "of the anathema."

VER. 22. Rams. Can God be pleased with victims which he has cursed? H.

VER. 23. Obey. Heb. "Rebellion is the sin of divination or witchcraft, and resistance is iniquity, and the Theraphim." Sym. "the injustice of idols." Theraphim here designate idolatrous representations. Gen. xxxi. 19. By sacrifices we give our goods, or another's flesh is immolated (Mor. xxxiii. 10, D.); by obedience we give ourselves to God. S. VER. 24. Voice: miserable excuse for a king, who ought to prevent the sins of his people! C.—Saul's transgression seems less than David's; but the one repents, and the other proudly defends what he had done. D.

and the Lord hath rejected thee from being king over Israel.

27 And Samuel turned about to go away: but he laid hold upon the skirt of his mantle, and it rent.

28 And Samuel said to him: "The Lord hath rent the kingdom of Israel from thee this day, and hath given it to thy neighbour who is better than thee.

29 But the Triumpher in Israel will not spare, and will not be moved to repentance: for he is not a man that he should repent.

30 Then he said: I have sinned: yet honour me now before the ancients of my people, and before Israel, and return with me, that I may adore the Lord thy God.

31 So Samuel turned again after Saul: and Saul adored the Lord.

32 And Samuel said: Bring hither to me Agag, the king of Amalec. And Agag was presented to him very fat, and trembling. And Agag said: Doth bitter death separate in this manner?

33 And Samuel said: As thy sword hath made women childless, so shall thy mother be childless among women. And Samuel hewed him in pieces before the Lord in Galgal.

34 And Samuel departed to Ramatha: but Saul went up to his house in Gabaa.

35 And Samuel saw Saul no more till the day of his death: nevertheless, Samuel mourned for Saul, because the Lord repented that he had made him king over Israel.

CHAP. XVI.

Samuel is sent to Bethlehem, where he anointeth David: who is taken into Saul's family.

AND ^bthe Lord said to Samuel: How long wilt thou mourn for Saul, whom I have rejected from reigning over Israel? fill thy horn with oil, and come, that I may send thee to Isai, the Bethlehemite: for I have provided me a king among his sons.

VER. 30. Israel. He is wholly solicitous to shun disgrace in this world. H.—His confession was not actuated by such contrition as that he might deserve to hear, the Lord has removed thy sin. He begins by falsehood; continues making idle excuses, and throwing the blame on others, and concludes by showing that he is more concerned for what his subjects may think and do against him than for the displeasure of God. He boldly ventures to offer victims. But Samuel joins not with him in prayer, looking upon him as a person excommunicated; and he only attends that he may see the word of the Lord fulfilled, and Agag treated as he deserved. Salien, A. 2965.

VER. 32. Trembling. Heb. "and Agag came to him delicately." Sept. "trembling," (H.) or walking with a soft step, or "with bands or chains," madnuth. See Pagnin. M.—Manner. Heb. "Surely the bitterness of death is past." I have obtained pardon from Saul. But the sense of the Vulg. seems preferable, as he must have perceived from the looks of the prophet that death was hanging over him. Hence others translate, "is pouring upon me," instead of, is past. Sept. "Is death thus bitter?" Chal. "I pray my Lord: the bitterness of death." H.—O death! how bitter is the remembrance of thee to a man that hath peace in his possessions, &c. Eccli. xli. 1.

VER. 33. Pieces. Josephus says, by the hand of others. M.—But zeal put the sword into his own hand; and he imitated the Levites and Phinees, (Exod. xxxii. 27,) to show Saul how preposterous had been his pity, when the Lord had spoken plainly. C.—Lord, as a sort of victim. Isa. xxxiv. 6. M.

VER. 35. Saw Saul no more till the day of his death. That is, he went no more to see him: he visited him no more. Ch.—He looked upon him as one who had lost the right to the kingdom, though he was suffered for a time to hold the reins of government, as a lieutenant to David. His spirit came to announce destruction to Saul, the night preceding the death of that unfortunate king. Chap. xxxviii. H.—Repented. God is said, improperly, to repent when he alters what he had appointed. S. Amb. de Noe, c. 4. W.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. How long It seems his tears were not soon dried up, hear of it, and he will kill me. And the Lord said: Thou shalt take with thee a calf of the herd, and thou shalt say: I am come to sacrifice to the Lord.

3 And thou shalt call Isai to the sacrifice, and I will show thee what thou art to do, and thou shalt anoint him whom I shall show to thee.

4 Then Samuel did as the Lord had said to him. And he came to Bethlehem, and the ancients of the city wondered, and meeting him, they said: Is thy coming hither peaceable?

5 And he said: It is peaceable: I am come to offer sacrifice to the Lord, be ye sanctified, and come with me to the sacrifice. And he sanctified Isai and his sons, and called them to the sacrifice.

6 And when they were come in, he saw Eliab, and said: Is the Lord's anointed before him?

7 And the Lord said to Samuel: Look not on his countenance, nor on the height of his stature: because I have rejected him, nor do I judge according to the look of man: for man seeth those things that appear, but the Lord beholdeth the heart.

8 And Isai called Abinadab, and brought him before Samuel. And he said: Neither hath the Lord chosen this.

9 And Isai brought Samma, and he said of him: Neither hath the Lord chosen this.

10 Isai therefore brought his seven sons before Samuel: and Samuel said to Isai: The Lord hath not chosen any one of these.

11 And Samuel said to Isai: Are here all thy sons? He answered: There remaineth yet a young one, who keepeth the sheep. And Samuel said to Isai: Send, and fetch him: for we will not sit down till he come hither.

12 He sent therefore and brought him. Now he was ruddy and beautiful to behold, and of a comely face. And the Lord said: Arise, and anoint him, for this is he.

13 Then Samuel took the horn of oil, and anointed him in the midst of his brethren: and the Spirit of the

VER. 3. Sacrifice, to partake of the feast, (M.) which must be consumed in two days, or thrown into the fire. Lev. vii. 16. C.

VER. 4. Wondered. Heb. "trembled," being full of consternation, (H.) as the prophet did not now stir much from home; and fearing lest he had some bad news to impart, or had incurred the king's displeasure, (C.) unless he came to punish some of the people at Bethlehem. M.

VER. 6. Him. Heb. "surely the Lord's anointed is in his presence." This he spoke by his own spirit, judging from the comeliness of Eliab. C.—But the beauty of Saul's body had concealed a deformed soul. H.

VER. 7. Rejected, or not chosen. M.—God had positively rejected this eldest son, as his pride seems to have been the greatest. Chap. xvii. 28. H.—Heart. This is one of God's perfections. Glorified saints see man's heart in his light for their own and our advantage, (S. Greg. Mor. xii. 11, S. Aug.,) as the prophets have sometimes done. 3 Kings xiv. W.

Lord came upon David from that day forward: and Samuel rose up, and went to Ramatha.

14 But the Spirit of the Lord departed from Saul, and an evil spirit from the Lord troubled him.

15 And the servants of Saul said to him: Behold now an evil spirit from God troubleth thee.

16 Let our lord give orders, and thy servants who are before thee, will seek out a man skilful in playing on the harp, that when the evil spirit from the Lord is upon thee, he may play with his hand, and thou mayst bear it more easily.

17 And Saul said to his servants: Provide me then some man that can play well, and bring him to me.

18 And one of the servants answering, said: Behold I have seen a son of Isai, the Bethlehemite, a skilful player, and one of great strength, and a man fit for war, and prudent in his words, and a comely person: and the Lord is with him.

19 Then Saul sent messengers to Isai, saying: Send me David, thy son, who is in the pastures.

20 And Isai took an ass laden with bread, and a bottle of wine, and a kid of the flock, and sent them by the hand of David, his son, to Saul.

21 And David came to Saul, and stood before him: and he loved him exceedingly, and made him his armour-bearer.

22 And Saul sent to Isai, saying: Let David stand before me: for he hath found favour in my sight.

23 So whensoever the evil spirit from the Lord was upon Saul, David took his harp, and played with his hand, and Saul was refreshed, and was better, for the evil spirit departed from him.

necessary precautions to keep it secret, as the whole family would have been in imminent danger if the transaction had come to the ears of Saul, ver. 2. Josephus says that Samuel only informed Isai in private: and David's brothers treat him with no peculiar distinction. Whence it is inferred that they had not been present when he was anointed. Some witnesses seem, however, to have been requisite, as the title of David to the regal dignity depended on this ceremony, and none were more interested than his own family to assert his pretensions. He now had a right to the kingdom, but not the possession; being like a son expecting his father's estate as his future right, of which, as yet, he cannot dispose. C.—Came upon, to make him prosper. M.—Heb. "came with prosperity;" (Sept.) "impetuosity." God endued him with all those graces which might render him fit to command. C.—So David prays himself, "with a princely spirit confirm me" (Psalm 1.14); or, strengthen me with a perfect spirit. H.—David received the spirit of fortitude and of prophecy, of which Saul had formerly had some experience, when he was first elevated to that high dignity. Chap. x. He was changed into a new man, and adorned with all that could render a king most glorious. Though he returned to his wonted occupations, the Spirit of the Lord enabled him to destroy wild beasts, as in play, (Eccl. xlvii. 3,) and to compose and sing many of those Divine canticles which we still admire. Salien, A. 2909. H.

VER. 14. From the Lord. An evil spirit, by Divine permission, and for his punishment, either possessed or obsessed him. Ch.—We no longer behold in Saul any generous sentiments. He falls a prey to melancholy, anger, suspicion, and cruelty. H.—S. Aug. and V. Bede suppose that the evil spirit troubled him by God's permission. W.

VER. 16. Easily. The effects which have been produced by music are truly surprising, if we may believe what the ancients have related. C.—But, in the present case, there was probably some miraculous interference. H.

VER. 18. Him. Some think that this took place before David's victory over Goliath; others believe that David was only made armour-bearer to Saul after that event. We must not disturb the order of the sacred historian without some cogent reason: and the courtiers might already have heard of David's prowess and virtue, of which he gave such evident proofs after he was confirmed by the Holy Spirit, ver. 13. C.

VER. 20. Laden. So Chal. M.—Lit. plenum, "full of." H.—Sept. "a gomor," which they seem to have read instead of the Heb. chamor, "an ass of bread," as Sossibius says, "he eats three asses' panniers of loaves." C.—Prot. supply "laden."

VER. 21. Bearer. This was an honourable office. H.

VER. 22. Sight. He had sent him back, as people of a melancholy temper are often hard to please (M.); and before David married Michol he did not remain with the king, but only came when his presence was deemed necessary. C.

VER. 23. Departed from him. Chased away by David's devotion. Ch.—

CHAP. XVII.

War with the Philistines. Goliath challengeth Israel. He is slain by David.

NOW *the Philistines gathering together their troops to battle, assembled at Socho of Juda: and camped between Socho and Azeca, in the borders of Domim.

2 And Saul and the children of Israel being gathered together, came to the valley of Terebinth, and they set the army in array to fight against the Philistines.

3 And the Philistines stood on a mountain on the one side, and Israel stood on a mountain on the other side: and there was a valley between them.

4 And there went out a man base-born from the camp of the Philistines, named Goliath, of Geth, whose height was six cubits and a span:

5 And he had a helmet of brass upon his head, and he was clothed with a coat of mail with scales, and the weight of his coat of mail was five thousand sicles of brass:

6 And he had greaves of brass on his legs, and a buckler of brass covered his shoulders.

7 And the staff of his spear was like a weaver's beam, and the head of his spear weighed six hundred sicles of iron: and his armour-bearer went before him.

8 And standing, he cried out to the bands of Israel, and said to them: Why are you come out prepared to fight? am not I a Philistine, and you the servants of Saul? Choose out a man of you, and let him come down and fight hand to hand.

9 If he be able to fight with me, and kill me, we will

"The melody of David's harp, as some of the Fathers remark, represents that sweet and engaging demeanour which should distinguish the peaceful ministers of the gospel, . . . whether they strive to allay the rage, or dispel the fears of a troubled mind." Those who call in question the existence of giants, will surely have nothing to object to this formal proof from Scripture. C.—The Vat. be servants to you : but if I prevail against him, and kill him, you shall be servants, and shall serve us.

10 And the Philistine said : I have defied the bands of Israel this day : give me a man, and let him fight with me hand to hand.

11 And Saul and all the Israelites hearing these words of the Philistine, were dismayed, and greatly afraid.

12 Now David was the son of that Ephrathite, of Bethlehem Juda, before-mentioned, "whose name was Isai, who had eight sons, and was an old man in the days of Saul, and of great age among men.

13 And his three eldest sons followed Saul to the battle : and the names of his three sons that went to the battle, were Eliab, the first-born, and the second, Abinadab, and the third Samna :

14 But David was the youngest. So the three eldest having followed Saul, 15 David went, and returned from Saul, to feed his father's flock at Bethlehem.

16 Now the Philistine came out morning and evening, and presented himself forty days.

17 And Isai said to David, his son : Take for thy brethren an ephi of frumenty, and these ten loaves, and run to the camp to thy brethren, 18 And carry these ten little cheeses to the tribune : and go see thy brethren, if they are well : and learn with whom they are placed.

19 But Saul, and they, and all the children of Israel, were in the valley of Terebinth, fighting against the Philistines.

20 David, therefore, arose in the morning, and gave the charge of the flock to the keeper : and went away loaded, as Isai had commanded him. And he came to the place of Magala, and to the army, which was going out to fight, and shouted for the battle.

21 For Israel had put themselves in array, and the Philistines who stood against them were prepared.

22 And David leaving the vessels which he had brought, under the care of the keeper of the baggage, ran to the place of the battle, and asked if all things went well with his brethren.

23 And as he talked with them, that base-born man, whose name was Goliath, the Philistine, of Geth, showed himself coming up from the camp of the Philistines : and he spoke according to the same words, and David heard them.

24 And all the Israelites, when they saw the man, fled from his face, fearing him exceedingly.

25 And some one of Israel said : Have you seen this man that is come up, for he is come up to defy Israel. And the man that shall slay him, the king will enrich with great riches, and will give him his daughter, and will make his father's house free from tribute in Israel.

26 And David spoke to the men that stood by him, saying : What shall be given to the man that shall kill this Philistine, and shall take away the reproach from Israel ? for who is this uncircumcised Philistine, that he should defy the armies of the living God ?

27 And the people answered him the same words, saying : These things shall be given to the man that shall slay him.

28 Now when Eliab, his eldest brother, heard this, when he was speaking with others, he was angry with David, and said : Why comest thou hither ? and why didst thou leave those few sheep in the desert ? I know thy pride, and the wickedness of thy heart : that thou art come down to see the battle.

29 And David said : What have I done ? is there not cause to speak ?

30 And he turned a little aside from him to another, and said the same word. And the people answered him as before.

31 And the words which David spoke were heard, and were rehearsed before Saul.

32 And when he was brought to Saul, he said to him. Let not any man's heart be dismayed in him : I thy servant will go, and will fight against the Philistine.

33 And Saul said to David : Thou art not able to withstand this Philistine, nor to fight against him : for thou art but a boy, but he is a warrior from his youth.

VER. 9. Us. It does not appear that this proposal was accepted or ratified by either party. The Israelites had still to pursue the enemy. E.

VER. 12. Now, &c., to ver. 32. And when, is omitted in the Vatican Sept., which begins the latter verse thus, "And David said," as the Alex. copy does now the twelfth, which leads Kennicott to suspect that the intermediate verses are an interpolation, formerly unknown to the Greek version. Houbigant includes these verses between crotchets, "that it may be understood that these are not of the same author as the rest, and that the sacred writer may not be accused of making useless repetitions." It has been observed, in the last chapter, that David was the son of Isai, &c. "If," says he, "this be omitted, there will be no vacuum in the context," as there is none in the Roman edition : (11) "they were greatly afraid. (32) And David said to Saul," &c. As he had been appointed Saul's armour-bearer, it is very natural to suppose that he would be near the king's person on such an occasion, rather than feeding sheep. We find also that he had a tent of his own, (ver. 34,) which he could not have had, if he had only come to bring provisions to his brethren. The unaccountable conduct of Eliab, the timidity of all Israel for forty days, &c., will thus be avoided.—Mentioned. Heb. "Juda, whose name . . . and the man went among men, an old man in the days of Saul." We have already observed that the Alex. Sept. seems to promise a speech, but defers it till ver. 32, thus, "And David said, the son of an Ephrathite. He was from," &c. H.—Men. Chal. "He was an old man, whom they ranked among the young," as still vigorous. C.

VER. 13. Battle. In these wars, all attended as much as possible. Chap. xvi. 10.

VER. 15. Bethlehem, the king being relieved from his malady. "The greatest men formerly kept sheep." In this profession David found many opportunities of signaling his courage against wild beasts. C.

VER. 17. Loaves. The soldiers at that time, and perhaps always among the Hebrews, lived at their own expense, as the tribute which was paid to the king was not sufficient to support large armies, ver. 25. C.—S. Paul insinuates, however, that soldiers were paid. 1 Cor. ix. 7. H.

VER. 18. Cheeses. Heb. "of milk." Sept. "pieces of soft cheese." Eris is no where else used to denote cheese. This was a present (C.) for (Heb.) "the Chiliarch."—Placed, who is their immediate officer. H.—Heb. "how they are mixed : " their company. Sept., &c., "what they stand in need of." Sym. "Thou shalt receive their pay." Syr. and Arab. VER. 19. Fighting, or ready to engage. H.

VER. 20. Magala signifies, "the circle, or chariots." C.—It may also be a proper name. M.

VER. 23. Up, or proceeding into the vale. M.—Camp. Heb. "ranks, or armies."

VER. 24. Exceedingly, though they had now heard him twice a day for so long a time, (Ken.,) and came purposely to engage him and all the Philistine army. Perhaps he proceeded farther than usual. H.

VER. 25. Tribute, and all public charges which may be burdensome. C.—It does not appear that these words are addressed to any one in particular, nor that the king had authorized such a declaration. H.—Yet the people all persist in the same declaration, so that a promise must have been made. M.—It was never at least fulfilled. H.

VER. 29. Speak. Lit. "is it not a word" (H.) of no further consequence ? May I not speak my sentiments ? (C.) as all others do. M.—Is not the thing enough to excite the indignation even of the coldest person, to hear this monster insulting God's armies ? Prot. "Is there not a cause ?" H.—Have I not an order from my father to come ? M.

VER. 32. Saul. Lit. "to him." But Heb. and Sept. have, "And David said to Saul," which makes the connexion between this and ver. 11 more clear. H.—In him, or on account of Goliath. M.

34 And David said to Saul: "Thy servant kept his father's sheep, and there came a lion,^b or a bear, and took a ram out of the midst of the flock:

35 And I pursued after them, and struck them, and delivered it out of their mouth: and they rose up against me, and I caught them by the throat, and I strangled, and killed them.

36 For I thy servant have killed both a lion and a bear: and this uncircumcised Philistine shall be also as one of them. I will go now, and take away the reproach of the people: for who is this uncircumcised Philistine, who hath dared to curse the army of the living God?

37 And David said: The Lord who delivered me out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine. And Saul said to David: Go, and the Lord be with thee.

38 And Saul clothed David with his garments, and put a helmet of brass upon his head, and armed him with a coat of mail.

39 And David having girded his sword upon his armour, began to try if he could walk in armour: for he was not accustomed to it. And David said to Saul: I cannot go thus, for I am not used to it. And he laid them off.

40 And he took his staff, which he had always in his hands: and chose him five smooth stones out of the brook, and put them into the shepherd's scrip, which he had with him, and he took a sling in his hand, and went forth against the Philistine.

41 And the Philistine came on, and drew nigh against David, and his armour-bearer went before him.

42 And when the Philistine looked, and beheld David, he despised him. For he was a young man, ruddy, and of a comely countenance.

43 And the Philistine said to David: Am I a dog, that thou comest to me with a staff? And the Philistine cursed David by his gods.

44 And he said to David: Come to me, and I will give thy flesh to the birds of the air, and to the beasts of the earth.

45 And David said to the Philistine: Thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield: but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, which thou hast defied

VER. 39. Armour. Heb. "he tried to go." Sym. "he went lame." Sept. "he laboured in walking once and twice." C.

VER. 40. Smooth. Kennicott justly observes that slingers were of great service in the army; and the "vessel of shepherds," the bag or scrip, might well be used to contain the stones; as the staff, mokol, denotes a military weapon. (Taylor. Conc.) Diss. 2, p. 555. David was very expert in using these weapons, and the ordinary armour was encumbering to him. 46 This day, and the Lord will deliver thee into my hand, and I will slay thee, and take away thy head from thee: and I will give the carcasses of the army of the Philistines this day to the birds of the air, and to the beasts of the earth: that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel.

47 And all this assembly shall know, that the Lord saveth not with sword and spear: for it is his battle, and he will deliver you into our hands.

48 And when the Philistine arose, and was coming, and drew nigh to meet David, David made haste, and ran to the fight to meet the Philistine.

49 And he put his hand into his scrip, and took a stone, and cast it with the sling, and fetching it about, struck the Philistine in the forehead, and he fell on his face upon the earth.

50 "And David prevailed over the Philistine, with a sling and a stone, and he struck, and slew the Philistine. And as David had no sword in his hand, 51 He ran, and stood over the Philistine, and took his sword, and drew it out of the sheath, and slew him, and cut off his head. And the Philistines seeing that their champion was dead, fled away.

52 And the men of Israel and Juda rising up shouted, and pursued after the Philistines till they came to the valley and to the gates of Accaron, and there fell many wounded of the Philistines in the way of Saraim, and as far as Geth, and as far as Accaron.

53 And the children of Israel returning, after they had pursued the Philistines, fell upon their camp.

54 And David taking the head of the Philistine, brought it to Jerusalem: but his armour he put in his tent.

55 Now at the time that Saul saw David going out against the Philistines, he said to Abner, the captain of the army: Of what family is this young man descended, Abner? And Abner said: As thy soul liveth, O king, I know not.

56 And the king said: Inquire thou, whose son this young man is.

57 And when David was returned, after the Philistine was slain, Abner took him, and brought him in before Saul, with the head of the Philistine in his hand.

VER. 54. Tent, or the tabernacle of the Lord, which David erected in his honour, at Jerusalem, many years afterwards. Jun., Piscator, &c. The lower part of Jerusalem was already in the hands of the Israelites. He might place the armour for the present in the tent of his brethren. We find that the sword was deposited in the tabernacle, at Nobe. C. See ver. 12. H.—The head was carried about to various cities. It would serve to strike terror into the Jebusites at Jerusalem, and others. M.—The Vat. Sept., &c. immediately subjoin chap. xviii. 6, Now, &c. Lit. "And the women dancing, came to meet David." H.—These five last verses occur only in the Alex. MS., though Theodoret (q. 43) seems to have read them. In some other Greek copies there is a long addition respecting David's combat. See the New Hexapla. These verses are found, however, in Heb., Chal., &c. It is astonishing that Saul should not have known David. He was now more interested to be acquainted with his family, as he had engaged to give him his daughter in marriage. C.—Know not. Lit. "if I know." The different dress in which David now appeared gave rise to this ignorance. M

CHAP. XVIII.

The friendship of Jonathan and David. The enmity of Saul, and his design upon David's life. He marries him to his daughter Michol.

AND 'it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking to Saul, the soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul.

2 And Saul took him that day, and would not let him return to his father's house.

3 And David and Jonathan made a covenant, for he loved him as his own soul.

4 And Jonathan stripped himself of the coat with which he was clothed, and gave it to David, and the rest of his garments, even to his sword, and to his bow, and to his girdle.

5 And David went out to whatsoever business Saul sent him, and he behaved himself prudently: and Saul set him over the soldiers, and he was acceptable in the eyes of all the people, and especially in the eyes of Saul's servants.

6 Now when David returned, after he slew the Philistine, the women came out of all the cities of Israel, singing and dancing, to meet king Saul, with timbrels of joy, and cornets.

7 And the women sung as they played, and they said: ^b Saul slew his thousands, and David his ten thousands.

8 And Saul was exceeding angry, and this word was displeasing in his eyes, and he said: They have given David ten thousands, and to me they have given but a thousand, what can he have more but the kingdom?

9 And Saul did not look on David with a good eye from that day and forward.

10 And the day after, the evil spirit from God came upon Saul, and he prophesied in the midst of his house. And David played with his hand as at other times. And Saul held a spear in his hand, 11 And threw it, thinking to nail David to the wall: and David stept aside out of his presence twice.

12 And Saul feared David, because the Lord was with him, and was departed from Saul himself.

13 Therefore Saul removed him from him, and made him a captain over a thousand men, and he went out and came in before the people.

14 And David behaved wisely in all his ways, and the Lord was with him.

15 And Saul saw that he was exceeding prudent, and began to beware of him.

16 But all Israel and Juda loved David, for he came in and went out before them.

17 And Saul said to David: Behold my elder daughter Merob, her will I give thee to wife: only be a valiant man, and fight the battles of the Lord. Now Saul said within himself: Let not my hand be upon him, but let the hands of the Philistines be upon him.

18 And David said to Saul: Who am I, or what is my life, or my father's family in Israel, that I should be son-in-law of the king?

19 And it came to pass at the time when Merob, the daughter of Saul, should have been given to David, that she was given to Hadriel, the Molathite, to wife.

20 But Michol, the other daughter of Saul, loved David. And it was told Saul, and it pleased him.

21 And Saul said: I will give her to him, that she may be a stumbling-block to him, and that the hand of the Philistines may be upon him. And Saul said to David: In two things thou shalt be my son-in-law this day.

22 And Saul commanded his servants to speak to David privately, saying: Behold, thou pleasest the king, and all his servants love thee. Now, therefore, be the king's son-in-law.

23 And the servants of Saul spoke all these words in the ears of David. And David said: Doth it seem to you a small matter to be the king's son-in-law? But I am a poor man, and of small ability.

24 And the servants of Saul told him, saying: Such words as these hath David spoken.

25 And Saul said: Speak thus to David: The king

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 1. Soul. Pythagoras said, "that friendship is an equality, and one soul, and that the friend is another self." It would be difficult to find two souls more tender and generous than those of David and Jonathan. VER. 15. Began. Sept. "he was filled with awe in his presence." Heb. "he was afraid of him," as he perceived that God protected him in all perils.

VER. 20. Other, is not found in the Heb., Sept., &c. H.—Some Latin copies read, "David loved Michol," (C.) as the Douay Bible translates; the authors living before the Popes had published their authentic editions. H.—Both might be true. Drus.

desireth not any dowry, but only a hundred foreskins of the Philistines, to be avenged of the king's enemies. Now Saul thought to deliver David into the hands of the Philistines.

26 And when his servants had told David the words that Saul had said, the word was pleasing in the eyes of David to be the king's son-in-law.

27 And after a few days David rose up, and went with the men that were under him, and he slew of the Philistines two hundred men, and brought their foreskins and numbered them out to the king, that he might be his son-in-law. Saul therefore gave him Michol, his daughter, to wife.

28 And Saul saw, and understood that the Lord was with David. And Michol, the daughter of Saul, loved him.

29 And Saul began to fear David more: and Saul became David's enemy continually.

30 And the princes of the Philistines went forth: and from the beginning of their going forth, David behaved himself more wisely than all the servants of Saul, and his name became very famous.

CHAP. XIX.

Other attempts of Saul upon David's life. He cometh to Samuel. Saul's messengers, and Saul himself, prophesy.

AND Saul spoke to Jonathan, his son, and to all his servants, that they should kill David. But Jonathan, the son of Saul, loved David exceedingly.

2 And Jonathan told David, saying: Saul, my father, seeketh to kill thee: wherefore look to thyself, I beseech thee, in the morning, and thou shalt abide in a secret place, and shalt be hid.

3 And I will go out and stand beside my father in the field where thou art: and I will speak of thee to my father, and whatsoever I shall see, I will tell thee.

4 And Jonathan spoke good things of David to Saul, his father: and said to him: Sin not, O king, against thy servant, David, because he hath not sinned against thee, and his works are very good towards thee.

5 And he put his life in his hand, and slew the Philistine and the Lord wrought great salvation for all Israel. Thou sawest it and didst rejoice. Why therefore wilt thou sin against innocent blood, by killing David, who is without fault?

6 And when Saul heard this, he was appeased with the words of Jonathan, and swore: As the Lord liveth, he shall not be slain.

7 Then Jonathan called David, and told him all these words: and Jonathan brought in David to Saul, and he was before him, as he had been yesterday and the day before.

8 And the war began again, and David went out, and fought against the Philistines, and defeated them with a great slaughter, and they fled from his face.

9 And the evil spirit from the Lord came upon Saul; and he sat in his house, and held a spear in his hand: and David played with his hand.

10 And Saul endeavoured to nail David to the wall with his spear. And David slipt away out of the presence of Saul: and the spear missed him, and was fastened in the wall, and David fled, and escaped that night.

11 Saul therefore sent his guards to David's house to watch him, that he might be killed in the morning. And when Michol, David's wife, had told him this, saying: Unless thou save thyself this night, to-morrow thou wilt die:

12 She let him down through a window. And he went and fled away, and escaped.

13 And Michol took an image, and laid it on the bed, and put a goat's skin, with the hair at the head of it, and covered it with clothes.

14 And Saul sent officers to seize David; and it was answered that he was sick.

15 And again Saul sent to see David, saying: Bring him to me in the bed, that he may be slain.

16 And when the messengers were come in, they found an image upon the bed, and a goat skin at his head.

17 And Saul said to Michol: Why hast thou deceived me so, and let my enemy go and flee away? And Michol answered Saul: Because he said to me: Let me go, or else I will kill thee.

18 But David fled and escaped, and came to Samuel in Ramatha, and told him all that Saul had done to him: and he and Samuel went and dwelt in Najoth.

19 And it was told Saul by some, saying. Behold David is in Najoth, in Ramatha.

20 So Saul sent officers to take David: and when they saw a company of prophets prophesying, and Samuel

VER. 27. Wife. "thinking it mean to be guilty of an untruth," &c., says Josephus; "yet his disposition was not altered." He resolved, therefore, to take away his life, and wished Jonathan and his most trusty servants to put his designs in execution."

VER. 28. David. Of the subsequent verses, the Rom. Sept. has only the following words. "And all Israel loved him; (29) and Saul still continued to be in awe of him." The Alex. MS. agrees with the Heb., only instead of Michol, &c., it reads, "all Israel." If the contested passages were omitted, the history would be less perplexed. But we must wait for the decision of the Church in matters of this nature, and never decide too peremptorily. H.

VER. 30. Forth, probably to revenge the recent insult. C.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 1. Jonathan. He was most interested, as David might be feared as a competitor (M.); and, under the cloak of friendship, he might more easily destroy him.

VER. 3. Field. Saul would come thither, or Jonathan would sound his father's disposition, and give David information in the place appointed. C.

VER. 6. Slain. His inconstant temper might cause him to be moved with the expostulation of his son; but he presently relapsed, if he were ever sincere. C.—The Scripture seems to insinuate that he was. M.

VER. 11. Morning, fearing lest they might miss him in the night, (Salien,) and perhaps desiring to see his execution, after he had been tried. Joseph.

VER. 13. Image. Heb. Teraphim. Aquila, "figures." Sym. "idols." Some believe that David had idols in his house, as ornaments, or to treat them with ignominy. What Michol took might therefore be some piece of wood, or clothes folded up, so as to make the guards believe that David was in bed. Bochart, Anim. i. 2, 51. See Gen. xxxi. 19. C.

VER. 14. Sick. This is an officious lie. She tells another to excuse herself, ver. 17. The children of Saul strive to prevent their father's cruelty, by taking part with the innocent David. H.—It is thought that David composed the 68th Psalm, Eripe, &c., on this occasion. C.

VER. 19. Najoth. It was probably a school or college of prophets, in or near Ramatha, under the direction of Samuel. Ch.—Chal. "in the house of doctrine." See chap. x. 5. M.

VER. 20. Prophesying. That is, singing praises to God by a Divine impulse. God was pleased on this occasion that both Saul's messengers and himself should experience the like impulse, that he might understand, by this instance of the Divine power, how vain are the designs of man against him whom God protects.

presiding over them, the Spirit of the Lord came also upon them, and they likewise began to prophesy.

21 And when this was told Saul, he sent other messengers: but they also prophesied. And again Saul sent messengers the third time: and they prophesied also. And Saul being exceeding angry, 22 Went also himself to Ramatha, and came as far as the great cistern, which is in Socho, and he asked, and said: In what place are Samuel and David? And it was told him: Behold they are in Najoth, in Ramatha.

23 And he went to Najoth, in Ramatha, and the Spirit of the Lord came upon him also, and he went on, and prophesied till he came to Najoth, in Ramatha.

24 And he stripped himself also of his garments, and prophesied with the rest before Samuel, and lay down naked all that day and night. This gave occasion to a proverb: "What! is Saul too among the prophets?"

CHAP. XX.

Saul being obstinately bent upon killing David, he is sent away by Jonathan.

BUT David fled from Najoth, which is in Ramatha, and came and said to Jonathan: What have I done? what is my iniquity, and what is my sin against thy father, that he seeketh my life?

2 And he said to him: God forbid, thou shalt not die: for my father will do nothing, great or little, without first telling me: bath then my father hid this word only from me? no, this shall not be.

3 And he swore again to David. And David said: Thy father certainly knoweth that I have found grace in thy sight, and he will say: Let not Jonathan know this, lest he be grieved. But truly as the Lord liveth, and thy soul liveth, there is but one step (as I may say) between me and death.

4 And Jonathan said to David: Whatsoever thy soul shall say to me, I will do for thee.

5 And David said to Jonathan: Behold to-morrow is the new moon, and I, according to custom, am wont to sit beside the king to eat: let me go then that I may be hid in the field till the evening of the third day.

6 If thy father look and inquire for me, thou shalt answer him: David asked me that he might run to Bethlehem, his own city: because there are solemn sacrifices there for all of his tribe.

7 If he shall say: It is well: thy servant shall have peace: but if he be angry, know that his malice is come to its height.

8 Deal mercifully then with thy servant: for thou hast brought me, thy servant, into a covenant of the Lord with thee. But if there be any iniquity in me, do thou kill me, and bring me not in to thy father.

9 And Jonathan said: Far be this from thee: for if I should certainly know that evil is determined by my father against thee, I could do no otherwise than tell thee.

10 And David answered Jonathan: Who shall bring me word, if thy father should answer thee harshly concerning me?

11 And Jonathan said to David: Come, and let us go out into the field. And when they were both of them gone out into the field,

12 Jonathan said to David: O Lord God of Israel, if I shall discover my father's mind, to-morrow, or the day after, and there be any thing good for David, and I send not immediately to thee, and make it known to thee,

13 May the Lord do so and so to Jonathan, and add still more. But if my father shall continue in malice against thee, I will discover it to thy ear, and will send thee away, that thou mayst go in peace, and the Lord be with thee, as he hath been with my father.

14 And if I live, thou shalt show me the kindness of the Lord: but if I die, 15 Thou shalt not take away thy kindness from my house for ever, when the Lord shall have rooted out the enemies of David, every one of them from the earth, may he take away Jonathan from his house, and may the Lord require it at the hands of David's enemies.

16 Jonathan therefore made a covenant with the house of David: and the Lord required it at the hands of David's enemies.

sabbath day. Chap. xxi. 6; Lev. xxiv. 8.—Sit. The custom of sitting at table seems to have been more ancient than that of lying. The Persians chiefly introduced the latter.—Day. The second of the month, after the sabbath was ended. C.—Pezron thinks that both the last and first days of the month were festivals. D.

VER. 6. Tribe. It might seem an effect of pride not to accept of such invitations of the king, without some good excuse.

VER. 8. Lord, the most durable and sacred, confirmed by the name of God. C.—Kill. So Moses besought God to take away his life. A friend would put him to as little torture as possible. M.—But David only means strongly to assert his own innocence. H.

VER. 9. Thee. Heb. "then, should I not tell thee?" C.—Sept. "and if it reach not thy cities, I will inform thee."

VER. 12. After. Sept. "The Lord . . . has known that I will sit my father, as opportunity shall serve, thrice," or repeatedly. H.

VER. 13. Father, at the beginning of his reign. Jonathan foresees that David will be his father's successor. C.—Hence he commends himself and family to his protection. M.

VER. 14. Die. Heb. lit. "If I live, thou shalt not show me, &c. . . and if I die, (15) thou shalt not," &c. It seems there is a negation too much. Jonathan requests that David would show mercy to him and to his family; or he is willing that neither should partake of his kindness if he prove a traitor to his friend. C.—Prot. "And thou shalt not only, while yet I live, show me the kindness of the Lord, that I die not: (15) But also thou shalt not cut off thy kindness from my house for ever, no not when the Lord hath cut off," &c. H.

17 And Jonathan swore again to David, because he loved him : for he loved him as his own soul.

18 And Jonathan said to him : To-morrow is the new moon, and thou wilt be missed :

19 For thy seat will be empty till after to-morrow. So thou shalt go down quickly, and come to the place where thou must be hid, on the day when it is lawful to work, and thou shalt remain beside the stone, which is called Ezel.

20 And I will shoot three arrows near it, and will shoot as if I were exercising myself at a mark.

21 And I will send a boy, saying to him : Go and fetch me the arrows.

22 If I shall say to the boy : Behold the arrows are on this side of thee, take them up : come thou to me, because there is peace to thee, and there is no evil, as the Lord liveth. But if I shall speak thus to the boy : Behold the arrows are beyond thee : go in peace, for the Lord hath sent thee away.

23 And concerning the word which I and thou have spoken, the Lord be between thee and me for ever.

24 So David was hid in the field, and the new moon came, and the king sat down to eat bread.

25 And when the king sat down upon his chair, (according to custom,) which was beside the wall, Jonathan arose, and Abner sat by Saul's side, and David's place appeared empty.

26 And Saul said nothing that day, for he thought it might have happened to him, that he was not clean, nor purified.

27 And when the second day after the new moon was come, David's place appeared empty again. And Saul said to Jonathan, his son : Why cometh not the son of Isai to meat neither yesterday, nor to-day ?

28 And Jonathan answered Saul : He asked leave of me earnestly to go to Bethlehem.

29 And he said : Let me go, for there is a solemn sacrifice in the city, one of my brethren hath sent for me : and now if I have found favour in thy eyes, I will go quickly, and see my brethren. For this cause he came not to the king's table.

30 Then Saul being angry against Jonathan, said to him : Thou son of a woman that is the ravisher of a man, do I not know that thou lovest the son of Isai to thy own confusion, and to the confusion of thy shameless mother ?

31 For as long as the son of Isai liveth upon earth, thou shalt not be established, nor thy kingdom. Therefore now presently send, and fetch him to me : for he is the son of death.

32 And Jonathan answering Saul, his father, said : Why shall he die ? what hath he done ?

33 And Saul caught up a spear to strike him. And Jonathan understood that it was determined by his father to kill David.

34 So Jonathan rose from the table in great anger, and did not eat bread on the second day after the new moon. For he was grieved for David, because his father had put him to confusion.

35 And when the morning came, Jonathan went into the field according to the appointment with David, and a little boy with him.

36 And he said to his boy : Go, and fetch me the arrows which I shoot. And when the boy ran, he shot another arrow beyond the boy.

37 The boy therefore came to the place of the arrow which Jonathan had shot : and Jonathan cried after the boy, and said : Behold the arrow is there further beyond thee.

38 And Jonathan cried again after the boy, saying : Make haste speedily, stand not. And Jonathan's boy gathered up the arrows, and brought them to his master :

39 And he knew not at all what was doing : for only Jonathan and David knew the matter.

40 Jonathan therefore gave his arms to the boy, and said to him : Go, and carry them into the city.

41 And when the boy was gone, David rose out of his place, which was toward the south, and falling on his face to the ground, adored thrice : and kissing one another, they wept together ; but David more.

42 And Jonathan said to David : Go in peace : and let all stand that we have sworn both of us in the name of the Lord, saying : The Lord be between me and thee, and between my seed and thy seed for ever.

43 And David arose, and departed : and Jonathan went into the city.

VER. 16. Enemies. This seems to be a second translation of the former sentence, with a small variation.—Required may be expressed in the future, as an imprecation made by the two friends against those who should attempt to break the covenant, or to oppose David's reign. Sept. omit this verse entirely, and translate the following, (17) "and Jonathan continued to swear to David, inasmuch as he loved him, because he loved the soul of the man who loved him." He had such an affection for David that he extended his love to all his friends. Prot. "so Jonathan made a covenant with . . . David, saying : Let the Lord even require it at," &c. H.—He did so in due time, and the covenant between these two had its effect. C.

VER. 19. Morrow. Heb. "and after three days (H. or, on the third day) thou shalt," &c. Syr. and Arab. "Thou wilt be called for at table, at the third hour." C.—Work. Le Clerc translates, "in the day of the business." Prot. "where thou didst hide thyself when the business was in hand, and shalt remain by the stone Ezel." Sept. Alex. "by this affair." Vat. "Ergab," a word which Grabe admits instead of εργον, in his edition. H.

VER. 24. Field, on the third day, having gone in the mean time to Bethlehem, ver. 6.

VER. 25. Arose, out of respect. Sept. "he had the precedence over Jonathan" alone, as the latter sat "on the king's right hand, and Abner on the left." Arab. C.—David's place was after Abner. M.

VER. 26. Purified, having perhaps touched some dead body, &c. Lev. xi. 24.

VER. 27. To-day, which was the sabbath. C.—On the new moons people did not travel far. M.

VER. 29. Sacrifice. Heb. "my family hath a sacrifice," &c., ver. 5. H.

VER. 30. A man. Heb. "of an unjust revolt." Thou hast taken part against thy father. C.—Prot. "son of the perverse rebellious woman." Sept. "of the fugitive, (H.) or of those girls who go in quest of men." We must not suppose that Jonathan's mother was really of this description. Saul, in rage, wishes to affront his son, (C.) as some frantic parents call their children bastards, not reflecting that the reproach would fall upon themselves.—Isai, as he styles him out of contempt, ver. 27.

VER. 31. The son of death. That is, one that deserveth death, and shall surely be put to death. Ch.—So people are often styled sons of perdition, of hell of light, &c., (C.) when they are worthy of such things. H.

VER. 34. Great. Lit. "in the anger of fury." H.—Him, either David or Jonathan. C.—Indeed the crime of rebellion had been imputed to both. H.—Jonathan was grieved on account of the affront and danger (M.) to which he had been publicly exposed, as well as for his friend, upon whose destruction he perceived that his father was now deliberately bent, and not merely during his fits of madness.—Confusion. Sept. "because his father had completed his malice against him" (H.) ; or, "had resolved to make an end of him." C.

VER. 36. Another. The Heb., &c. do not express this distinctly (C.) ; but we find, ver. 38, "the lad gathered up the arrows."

VER. 40. Arms. Prot. "artillery : " but the bow and arrow, &c. are meant. The boy was sent away under this pretext.

VER. 42. Stand. This is not expressed in the text, which is left imperfect (H.) to denote the anguish of the parting friends, (M.) very beautifully. Salis.

CHAP. XXI.

David receiveth holy bread of Achimelech, the priest: and feigneth himself mad before Achis, king of Geth.

AND "David came to Nob, to Achimelech, the priest: and Achimelech was astonished at David's coming. And he said to him: Why art thou alone, and no man with thee?

2 And David said to Achimelech, the priest: The king hath commanded me a business, and said: Let no man know the thing for which thou art sent by me, and what manner of commands I have given thee: and I have appointed my servants to such and such a place.

3 Now therefore if thou have any thing at hand, though it were but five loaves, give me, or whatsoever thou canst find.

4 And the priest answered David, saying: I have no common bread at hand, but only holy bread, if the young men be clean, especially from women?

5 And David answered the priest, and said to him: Truly, as to what concerneth women, we have refrained ourselves from yesterday and the day before, when we came out, and the vessels of the young men were holy. Now this way is defiled, but it shall also be sanctified this day in the vessels.

6 "The priest therefore gave him hallowed bread: for there was no bread there, but only the loaves of proposition, which had been taken away from before the face of the Lord, that hot loaves might be set up.

7 Now a certain man of the servants of Saul was there that day, within the tabernacle of the Lord: and his name was Doeg, an Edomite, the chiefest of Saul's herdsmen.

8 And David said to Achimelech: Hast thou here at hand a spear, or a sword? for I brought not my own sword, nor my own weapons with me, for the king's business required haste.

* A. M. 2944.—^b Matt. xii. 3, 4.

CHAP. XXI. VER. 1. Nob. A city in the tribe of Benjamin, to which the tabernacle of the Lord had been translated from Silo. Ch.—It was about twelve miles south-west of Gabaa. Tudeleusis.—Achimelech, who is perhaps the same with Achia (chap. xiv. 3) and Abiathar, Mark ii. 32.—With thee. He would not expose his men to the resentment of Saul, (C.) though he afterwards gave the priest to understand that he had some attendants, (ver. 2,) as the gospel relates, Matt. xii. 3. He dismissed them before he entered Geth, C.

VER. 2. The king, &c. This was an untruth, which David might think lawful in such an emergency. But it is essentially evil. C.—And such, which he deems it unnecessary to specify.

VER. 4. If the young men be clean, &c. If this cleanness was required of them that were to eat that bread, which was but a figure of the bread of life which we receive in the blessed sacrament; how clean ought Christians to be when they approach to our tremendous mysteries! And what reason hath the Church of God to admit none to be her ministers, to consecrate and daily receive this most pure sacrament, but such as devote themselves to a life of perpetual purity! Ch.—Women. God required this on many occasions. Exod. xix. 15. Urgent necessity determined Achimelech to grant the loaves, as our Saviour intimates, though it is probable that he first consulted the Lord. Chap. xxii. 16. C.

VER. 5. Vessels, i. e. the bodies, have been holy; that is, have been kept from impurity (Ch.): in which sense S. Paul uses the word, 1 Thess. iv. 4. C.—Defiled. Is liable to expose us to dangers of uncleanness, (Ch.) as we shall perhaps have to fight. H.—Sanctified. That is, we shall take care, notwithstanding these dangerous circumstances, to keep our vessels holy; that is, to keep our bodies from every thing that may defile us. Ch.

VER. 7. Within. Heb. natsor, "detained, or assembled before the Lord." Theodoret thinks he was possessed; others believe he had made a vow, &c.—Edomite. Some Greek copies read, a Syrian, as also chap. xxii. 9. C.—He had embraced the Jewish religion. M.

VER. 9. This. Chaldee observes, he gave this sword "after he had consulted the Lord with the ephod." In a just war the ornaments of the temples may be used.

VER. 10. Achis. He is elsewhere called Achimelech. This bold step was taken by God's order, (Salien,) or secret impulse, as the high priest and Doeg

9 And the priest said: Lo here is the sword of Goliath, the Philistine, whom thou slewest in the valley of Terebinth, wrapped up in a cloth behind the ephod: if thou wilt take this, take it, for there is no other but this. And David said: There is none like that, give it me.

10 And David arose and fled that day from the face of Saul: and came to Achis, the king of Geth:

11 And the servants of Achis, when they saw David, said to him: Is not this David, the king of the land? Did they not sing to him in their dances, saying: "Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands?"

12 But David laid up these words in his heart, and was exceedingly afraid at the face of Achis, the king of Geth.

13 And he changed his countenance before them, and slipt down between their hands: and he stumbled against the doors of the gate, and his spittle ran down upon his beard.

14 And Achis said to his servants: You saw the man was mad: why have you brought him to me?

15 Have we need of madmen, that you have brought in this fellow, to play the madman in my presence? shall this fellow come into my house?

Many resort to David. Doeg accuseth Achimelech to Saul. He ordereth him and all the other priests of Nob to be slain. Abiathar escapeth.

DAVID "therefore went from thence, and fled to the cave of Odollam. And when his brethren, and all his father's house, had heard of it, they went down to him thither.

2 And all that were in distress, and oppressed with debt, and under affliction of mind, gathered themselves unto him: and he became their prince, and there were with him about four hundred men.

knew not whither David had directed his course. H.—Sanchez thinks David received no express declaration, as the event was not very prosperous. M.

VER. 11. Land, equal to a king in glory. M.—Perhaps they had heard of the rejection of Saul, and reflected that their own country belonged to him, according to the terms proposed by Goliath. C.

VER. 13. Countenance. Heb. "sentiment, (C.) or, behaviour." H.—Chal. "reason." He no longer acted as a prudent man, but like a fool.—Down; not fainting, (C.) but like one in an epileptic fit. H.—Heb. "he feigned himself mad." Chal. "stupid,"—Stumbled. Heb. "wrote, or made figures upon." Sept. "beat the drum upon the gates of the city, and he was carried about, or acted the fool, in his hands, (παρεφεροτο εν ταυς χειρσιν αυτου: Amama would have, αυτω, their,) and he fell against the doors of the gate." &c. They seem to give a double translation. S. Aug. says, "we cannot understand how David could be carried in his own hands. But we understand how it was verified in Christ. For Christ was carried in his own hands at his last supper, when he gave, or commending, his own body, he said, This, &c., for he then carried his own body in his own hands." In Psal. xxxiii. conc. 1. Ferebat enim illud corpus in manibus suis.

VER. 15. House. David had not rushed into the palace of his own accord, but wished to remain concealed. Some of the people however knew him, and would have him to enlist as one of the soldiers of Achis (M.); or even designed to get him put to death, which made him have recourse to this expedient. Some of the saints have imitated him, to avoid worldly honours and dignities of the Church. H.

CHAP. XXII. VER. 1. Odollam, about two days' journey from Geth, (Salien,) nine miles east of Eleutheropolis, in the tribe of Juda. Euseb. C.—Jos. xii. 15; 2 Mac. xii. 38. M.—Thither, to avoid the fury of Saul, which fell so heavy upon the priests, ver. 16. The most warlike sons of Gad came hither also, to join David. 1 Par. xii. 8. Abul. Salien, A. 2973.

VER. 2. Men. His title to the crown was incontestable, so that he might justly make war, particularly in his own defence, and receive those who flocked to him to screen themselves from the persecution of Saul, and from their debtors, whom they would thus enable themselves to repay in time, by the plunder which they would take from the enemy. David maintained the strictest discipline, and Moab : and he said to the king of Moab : Let my father and my mother tarry with you, I beseech thee, till I know what God will do for me.

4 And he left them under the eyes of the king of Moab, and they abode with him all the days that David was in the hold.

5 And Gad, the prophet, said to David : Abide not in the hold, depart, and go into the land of Juda. And David departed, and came into the forest of Haret.

6 And Saul heard that David was seen, and the men that were with him. Now whilst Saul abode in Gabaa, and was in the wood, which is by Rama, having his spear in his hand, and all his servants were standing about him,

7 He said to his servants that stood about him : Hear me now, ye sons of Jemini : will the son of Isai give every one of you fields, and vineyards, and make you all tribunes, and centurions :

8 That all of you have conspired against me, and there is no one to inform me, especially when even my son hath entered into league with the son of Isai ? There is not one of you that pitieth my case, nor that giveth me any information : because my son hath raised up my servant against me, plotting against me to this day.

9 And Doeg, the Edomite, who stood by, and was the chief among the servants of Saul, answering, said : I saw the son of Isai, in Nobe, with Achimelech, the son of Achitob, the priest.

10 And he consulted the Lord for him, and gave him victuals, and gave him the sword of Goliath, the Philistine.

11 Then the king sent to call for Achimelech, the priest, the son of Achitob, and all his father's house, the priests that were in Nobe, and they came all of them to the king.

12 And Saul said to Achimelech : Hear, thou son of Achitob. He answered : Here I am, my lord.

13 And Saul said to him : Why have you conspired against me, thou, and the son of Isai, and thou hast given him bread and a sword, and hast consulted the Lord for him, that he should rise up against me, continuing a traitor to this day.

14 And Achimelech answering the king, said : And who amongst all thy servants is so faithful as David, who is the king's son-in-law, and goeth forth at thy bidding, and is honourable in thy house ?

15 Did I begin to-day to consult the Lord for him ? far be this from me : let not the king suspect such a thing against his servant, or any one in all my father's house : for thy servant knew nothing of this matter, either little or great.

16 And the king said : Dying thou shalt die, Achimelech, thou and all thy father's house.

17 And the king said to the messengers that stood about him : Turn, and kill the priests of the Lord, for their hand is with David, because they knew that he was fled, and they told it not to me. And the king's servants would not put forth their hands against the priests of the Lord.

18 And the king said to Doeg : Turn thou, and fall upon the priests. And Doeg, the Edomite, turned, and fell upon the priests, and slew in that day eighty-five men that wore the linen ephod.

19 And Nobe, the city of the priests, he smote with the edge of the sword, both men and women, children and sucklings, and ox, and ass, and sheep, with the edge of the sword.

20 But one of the sons of Achimelech, the son of Achitob, whose name was Abiathar, escaped, and fled to David, 21 And told him that Saul had slain the priests of the Lord.

22 And David said to Abiathar : I knew that day when Doeg, the Edomite, was there, that without doubt he would tell Saul : I have been the occasion of the death of all the souls of thy father's house.

23 Abide thou with me, fear not : for he that seeketh my life, seeketh thy life also, and with me thou shalt be saved.

David relieveth Ceila, besieged by the Philistines. He fleeth into the desert of Ziph. Jonathan and he confirm their former covenant. The Ziphites discover him to Saul, who pursuing close after him, is called away by an invasion from the Philistines.

VER. 3. Of Moab, to distinguish it from the city of Benjamin, where Samuel had assembled the people (M.); and perhaps also from the birth-place of Jephthe, unless the Moabites had taken possession again of that part of Galaad. C.—Saul had made war upon this king, so that he was more ready to protect David, who departing soon after, by the admonition of Gad, (ver. 5. C.) left those who could not follow him under his care. In the mean time he lived on plunder taken from the surrounding enemies, (Tostat,) and was joined by two hundred men from the tribes of Benjamin and of Juda, (1 Par. xii. 16,) with Amasai, his nephew by his sister Abigail, at their head. VER. 7. Jemini. Benjamites, my countrymen. Saul reproaches them with being too little concerned about his interests, and falsely accuses his own son, who, it seems, had retired from court, after his father had attempted to kill him. But he showed no signs of disloyalty. C.—The king mentions the league between Jonathan and David on suspicion. Chap. xx. 23. M.

VER. 18. Five. Josephus reads "385." Sept. "305."—Ephod. They all appeared in this dress, as they were priests. C.—It was different from the sacred ephod. Abulensis.—Thus the posterity of Heli was almost entirely cut off, as God had threatened. Chap. ii. D. T.

VER. 22. House. Lit. "I am guilty," &c. H.—"Good people acknowledge a fault where there is none." S. VER. 23. Saved. We will be as one soul. On this occasion David composed the fifty-first Psalm, Quid glorieris, to reprobate the conduct of Doeg Salien.

CHAP. XXIII. VER. 1. Barns. Hither the people of Ceila had gathered their corn, and the enemy came to plunder, or to spoil, according to custom

2 Therefore David consulted the Lord, saying: Shall I go and smite these Philistines? And the Lord said to David: Go, and thou shalt smite the Philistines, and shalt save Ceila.

3 And the men that were with David, said to him: Behold we are in fear here in Judea, how much more if we go to Ceila against the bands of the Philistines?

4 Therefore David consulted the Lord again. And he answered and said to him: Arise, and go to Ceila: for I will deliver the Philistines into thy hand.

5 David, therefore, and his men, went to Ceila, and fought against the Philistines, and brought away their cattle, and made a great slaughter of them: and David saved the inhabitants of Ceila.

6 Now at that time, when Abiathar, the son of Achimelech, fled to David, to Ceila, he came down, having an ephod with him.

7 And it was told Saul that David was come to Ceila: and Saul said: The Lord hath delivered him into my hands, and he is shut up, being come into a city that hath gates and bars.

8 And Saul commanded all the people to go down to fight against Ceila, and to besiege David and his men.

9 Now when David understood that Saul secretly prepared evil against him, he said to Abiathar, the priest: Bring hither the ephod.

10 And David said: O Lord God of Israel, thy servant hath heard a report, that Saul designeth to come to Ceila, to destroy the city for my sake:

11 Will the men of Ceila deliver me into his hands? and will Saul come down, as thy servant hath heard? O Lord God of Israel, tell thy servant. And the Lord said: He will come down.

12 And David said: Will the men of Ceila deliver me and my men into the hands of Saul? And the Lord said: They will deliver thee up.

13 Then David and his men, who were about six hundred, arose, and departing from Ceila, wandered up and down, uncertain where they should stay: and it was told Saul that David was fled from Ceila, and had escaped: wherefore he forbore to go out.

14 But David abode in the desert in strong holds, and he remained in a mountain of the desert of Ziph, in a woody hill. And Saul sought him always: but the Lord delivered him not into his hands.

15 And David saw that Saul was come out to seek his life. And David was in the desert of Ziph, in a wood.

16 And Jonathan, the son of Saul, arose, and went to David, into the wood, and strengthened his hands in God: and he said to him:

17 Fear not: for the hand of my father, Saul, shall not find thee, and thou shalt reign over Israel, and I shall be next to thee; yea, and my father knoweth this.

18 And they two made a covenant before the Lord: and David abode in the wood: but Jonathan returned to his house.

19 "And the Ziphites went up to Saul, in Gabaa, saying: Lo, doth not David lie hid with us in the strong holds of the wood, in Mount Hachila, which is on the right hand of the desert.

20 Now therefore come down, as thy soul hath desired to come down: and it shall be our business to deliver him into the king's hands.

21 And Saul said: Blessed be ye of the Lord, for you have pitied my case.

22 Go, therefore, I pray you, and use all diligence, and curiously inquire, and consider the place where his foot is, and who hath seen him there: for he thinketh of me, that I lie craftily in wait for him.

23 Consider, and see all his lurking holes, wherein he is hid, and return to me with the certainty of the thing, that I may go with you. And if he should even go down into the earth to hide himself, I will search him out in all the thousands of Juda.

24 And they arose, and went to Ziph before Saul: and David and his men were in the desert of Maon, in the plain at the right hand of Jesimon.

25 Then Saul and his men went to seek him: and it was told David, and forthwith he went down to the rock, and abode in the wilderness of Maon: and when Saul had heard of it, he pursued after David in the wilderness of Maon.

26 And Saul went on this side of the mountain: and David and his men were on the other side of the mountain: and David despaired of being able to escape from the face of Saul: and Saul and his men encompassed David and his men round about, to take them.

27 And a messenger came to Saul, saying: Make haste to come, for the Philistines have poured in themselves upon the land.

CHAP. XXIV.

Saul seeketh David in the wilderness of Engaddi: he goeth into a cave, where David hath him in his power.

THEN *David went up from thence, and dwelt in strong holds of Engaddi.

2 And when Saul was returned from following the Philistines, they told him, saying: Behold, David is in the desert of Engaddi.

3 Saul, therefore, took three thousand chosen men out of all Israel, and went out to seek after David and his men, even upon the most craggy rocks, which are accessible only to wild goats.

4 And he came to the sheep-cotes which were in his way. And there was a cave, into which Saul went, to ease nature: now David and his men lay hid in the inner part of the cave.

5 And the servants of David said to him: Behold the day, of which the Lord said to thee: I will deliver thy enemy unto thee, that thou mayest do to him as it shall seem good in thy eyes. Then David arose, and secretly cut off the hem of Saul's robe.

6 After which David's heart struck him, because he had cut off the hem of Saul's robe.

7 And he said to his men: The Lord be merciful unto me, that I may do no such thing to my master, the Lord's anointed, as to lay my hand upon him, because he is the Lord's anointed.

8 And David stopped his men with his words, and suffered them not to rise against Saul: but Saul, rising up out of the cave, went on his way.

9 And David also rose up after him: and going out of the cave, cried after Saul, saying: My lord the king. And Saul looked behind him: and David bowing himself down to the ground, worshipped,

10 And said to Saul: Why dost thou hear the words of men that say: David seeketh thy hurt?

11 Behold this day thy eyes have seen, that the Lord hath delivered thee into my hand, in the cave, and I had a thought to kill thee, but my eye hath spared thee. For I said: I will not put out my hand against my lord, because he is the Lord's anointed.

12 Moreover, see and know, O my father, the hem of thy robe in my hand, that when I cut off the hem of thy robe, I would not put out my hand against thee. Reflect, and see, that there is no evil in my hand, nor iniquity, neither have I sinned against thee: but thou liest in wait for my life, to take it away.

13 The Lord judge between me and thee, and the Lord revenge me of thee: but my hand shall not be upon thee.

14 As also it is said in the old proverb: From the wicked shall wickedness come forth: therefore my hand shall not be upon thee. After whom dost thou come out, O king of Israel?

15 After whom dost thou pursue? After a dead dog, after a flea.

16 Be the Lord judge, and judge between me and thee, and see, and judge my cause, and deliver me out of thy hand.

17 And when David had made an end of speaking these words to Saul, Saul said: Is this thy voice, my son David? And Saul lifted up his voice, and wept:

18 And he said to David: Thou art more just than I: for thou hast done good to me, and I have rewarded thee with evil.

19 And thou hast showed this day what good things thou hast done to me: how the Lord delivered me into thy hand, and thou hast not killed me.

20 For who when he hath found his enemy, will let him go well away? But the Lord reward thee for this good turn, for what thou hast done to me this day.

21 And now as I know that thou shalt surely be king, and have the kingdom of Israel in thy hand:

22 Swear to me by the Lord, that thou wilt not destroy my seed after me, nor take away my name from the house of my father.

23 And David swore to Saul. So Saul went home: and David and his men went up into safer places.

The death of Samuel. David, provoked by Nabal, threateneth to destroy him but is appeased by Abigail.

VER. 13. Revenge me of thee; or, as it is in the Hebrew, will revenge me. The meaning is, that he refers his whole cause to God, to judge and punish according to his justice; yet so as to keep himself, in the mean time, from all personal hatred to Saul, or desire of gratifying his own passion by seeking revenge. So far from it, that when Saul was afterwards slain, we find that, instead of rejoicing at his death, he mourned most bitterly for him. Ch.

VER. 22. Father. David complied with this request as far as he was able: but, as God was resolved to punish the posterity of Saul for the injury done to the Gabaonites, he was forced to give them all up, except Miphiboseth, the son of Jonathan. C.—He could not promise to defend them if they proved guilty.

CHAP. XXV. VER. 1. Samuel died. The Rabbin say four months before

2 Now there was a certain man in the wilderness of Maon, and his possessions were in Carmel, and the man was very great: and he had three thousand sheep, and a thousand goats: and it happened that he was shearing his sheep in Carmel.

3 Now the name of the man was Nabal: and the name of his wife was Abigail. And she was a prudent and very comely woman: but her husband was churlish, and very bad and ill-natured: and he was of the house of Caleb.

4 And when David heard in the wilderness, that Nabal was shearing his sheep,

5 He sent ten young men, and said to them: Go up to Carmel, and go to Nabal, and salute him in my name with peace.

6 And you shall say: Peace be to my brethren, and to thee, and peace to thy house, and peace to all that thou hast.

7 I have heard that thy shepherds that were with us in the desert were shearing: we never molested them, neither was there aught missing to them of the flock at any time, all the while they were with us in Carmel.

8 Ask thy servants, and they will tell thee. Now therefore let thy servants find favour in thy eyes: for we are come in a good day, whatsoever thy hand shall find give to thy servants, and to thy son David.

9 And when David's servants came, they spoke to Nabal all these words in David's name: and then held their peace.

10 But Nabal answering the servants of David, said: Who is David? and what is the son of Isai? servants are multiplied now a days who flee from their masters.

11 Shall I then take my bread, and my water, and the flesh of my cattle, which I have killed for my shearers, and give to men whom I know not whence they are?

12 So the servants of David went back their way, and returning came and told him all the words that he said.

13 Then David said to his young men: Let every man gird on his sword. And they girded on every man his sword. And David also girded on his sword: and there followed David about four hundred men, and two hundred remained with the baggage.

14 But one of the servants told Abigail, the wife of Nabal, saying: Behold, David sent messengers out of the wilderness, to salute our master: and he rejected them.

15 These men were very good to us, and gave us no trouble: neither did we ever lose any thing all the time that we conversed with them in the desert.

16 They were a wall unto us, both by night and day, all the while we were with them keeping the sheep.

17 Wherefore consider, and think what thou hast to do: for evil is determined against thy husband, and against thy house, and he is a son of Belial, so that no man can speak to him.

18 Then Abigail made haste and took two hundred loaves, and two vessels of wine, and five sheep ready dressed, and five measures of parched corn, and a hundred clusters of raisins, and two hundred cakes of dry figs, and laid them upon asses:

19 And she said to her servants: Go before me: behold, I will follow after you: but she told not her husband, Nabal.

20 And when she had gotten upon an ass, and was coming down to the foot of the mountain, David and his men came down over against her, and she met them.

21 And David said: Truly in vain have I kept all that belonged to this fellow in the wilderness, and nothing was lost of all that pertained unto him: and he hath returned me evil for good.

22 May God do so and so, and add more to the foes of David, if I leave of all that belong to him till the morning, any that pisseth against the wall.

23 And when Abigail saw David, she made haste and lighted off the ass, and fell before David, on her face, and adored upon the ground.

24 And she fell at his feet, and said: Upon me let this iniquity be, my lord: let thy handmaid speak, I beseech thee, in thy ears, and hear the words of thy servant.

25 Let not my lord the king, I pray thee, regard this

Saul. Seder, olam 13, T.—Others believe about two years; and suppose that he was ninety-eight years old, twenty of which he had been judge (C.): Salien says thirty-eight, and that he lived seventy-seven years. M.—On all these points the learned are divided. Chap. vii. 15. They are more unanimous in praising (H.) the conduct of this most holy statesman. Many of the ancients have looked upon Samuel as the high priest; but the generality have acknowledged that he was only a Levite, (C.) or an extraordinary priest, like Moses. H.—All Israel, or many from every tribe, assembled to attend his funeral (T.); and all mourned for him, as they had done for Moses and Aaron. Salien.—House, or among his kindred, (T.) in a place which he had chosen for his tomb. H.

VER. 2. Maon. Vat. Sept. has the same word in the preceding verse, instead of Pharan. H.—Possessions. Heb. "work." Cattle then formed the chief source of riches. Carmel and Maon were not far from Pharan, in Arabia. C.

VER. 3. Caleb, the famous companion of Josue. His name means "a dog;" whence the Sept. "he was a Cynic." Josephus, "he followed the manners of the Cynics," who were remarkable for their impudence, like dogs. Nabal was of the same tribe as David, and ought to have been more favourable to him on that account, ver. 6. H.

VER. 7. Molested them. This deserved some acknowledgment, as they might have done it with impunity. But David had also been of service to Nabal's men, as one of them told Abigail, ver. 16—21.

Heb. is imperfect, two hundred . . of figs. We must supply (C.) cakes, with the Prot., &c., or pounds, with the Chaldee, (H.) as each of the cakes perhaps weighed so much. M.

VER. 19. Nabal. Knowing his churlish temper, and that he was drunk at this time, (ver. 36. H.) she might be well excused from the ordinary laws which forbid a wife to dispose of her husband's property without his consent. The emergency left no time for consultation. She gave a part to save the whole. C.

VER. 20. Foot. Heb. "in the obscurity," or road covered with trees. Sept. "in the shade." Chal. "on the side." David was descending from the mountains of Pharan at the same time.

VER. 22. Leave. David certainly sinned in his designs against Nabal and his family, as he himself was afterwards sensible, when he blessed God for hindering him from executing the revenge he had proposed. Ch.—All. Chal. "any one who is come to the use of reason." Syr. and Arab. "the least thing hanging upon the wall." I will destroy the guilty, and plunder all the valuable effects. C.—But the Heb., Sept., &c., agree with the Vulg., and the meaning is, either that every man, or that every dog, and even the meanest things, should be enveloped in the general ruin. H.

VER. 24. Iniquity, or the punishment of this fault, ver. 28. C.—She wished to divest the mind of David from the consideration of her husband's incivility, and, after condemning it herself, insinuates that it would be unbecoming for a great king to mind so insignificant an enemy, ver. 28. H.

VER. 25. The king, is not in Heb., Sept., &c. David's title was not yet publicly acknowledged. C.—But Abigail plainly alludes to it, ver. 28. H.—Name Nabal, in Hebrew, signifies a fool. Ch.—Thus she extenuates his fault, by attributing it to a deficiency in understanding.

naughty man, Nabal: for according to his name, he is a fool, and folly is with him: but I, thy handmaid, did not see thy servants, my lord, whom thou sentest.

26 Now therefore, my lord, the Lord liveth, and thy soul liveth, who hath withholden thee from coming to blood, and hath saved thy hand to thee: and now let thy enemies be as Nabal, and all they that seek evil to my lord.

27 Wherefore receive this blessing, which thy handmaid hath brought to thee, my lord: and give it to the young men that follow thee, my lord.

28 Forgive the iniquity of thy handmaid: for the Lord will surely make for my lord a faithful house, "because thou, my lord, fightest the battles of the Lord: let not evil therefore be found in thee all the days of thy life.

29 For if a man at any time shall rise, and persecute thee, and seek thy life, the soul of my lord shall be kept, as in the bundle of the living, with the Lord thy God: but the souls of thy enemies shall be whirled, as with the violence and whirling of a sling.

30 And when the Lord shall have done to thee, my lord, all the good that he hath spoken concerning thee, and shall have made thee prince over Israel,

31 This shall not be an occasion of grief to thee, and a scruple of heart to my lord, that thou hast shed innocent blood, or hast revenged thyself: and when the Lord shall have done well by my lord, thou shalt remember thy handmaid.

32 And David said to Abigail: Blessed be the Lord the God of Israel, who sent thee this day to meet me, and blessed be thy speech:

33 And blessed be thou, who hast kept me to-day from coming to blood, and revenging me with my own hand.

34 Otherwise, as the Lord liveth, the God of Israel, who hath withholden me from doing thee any evil, if thou hadst not quickly come to meet me, there had not been left to Nabal by the morning light, any that pisseth against the wall.

35 And David received at her hand all that she had brought him, and said to her: Go in peace into thy house, behold I have heard thy voice, and honoured thy face.

36 And Abigail came to Nabal: and behold he had a feast in his house, like the feast of a king: and Nabal's heart was merry, for he was very drunk: and she told him nothing less or more until morning.

37 But early in the morning, when Nabal had digested his wine, his wife told him these words, and his heart died within him, and he became as a stone.

38 And after ten days had passed, the Lord struck Nabal, and he died.

39 And when David had heard that Nabal was dead, he said: Blessed be the Lord, who hath judged the cause of my reproach, at the hand of Nabal, and hath kept his servant from evil, and the Lord hath returned the wickedness of Nabal upon his head. Then David sent and treated with Abigail, that he might take her to himself for a wife.

40 And David's servants came to Abigail, to Carmel, and spoke to her, saying: David hath sent us to thee, to take thee to himself for a wife.

41 And she arose, and bowed herself down with her face to the earth, and said: Behold, let thy servant be a handmaid, to wash the feet of the servants of my lord.

42 And Abigail arose, and made haste, and got upon an ass, and five damsels went with her, her waiting maids, and she followed the messengers of David, and became his wife.

43 Moreover David took also Achinoam of Jezrahel: and they were both of them his wives.

44 But Saul gave Michol, his daughter, David's wife to Phalti, the son of Lais, who was of Gallim.

4 He sent spies, and learned that he was most certainly come thither.

5 And David arose secretly, and came to the place where Saul was: and when he had beheld the place, wherein Saul slept, and Abner, the son of Ner, the captain of his army, and Saul sleeping in a tent, and the rest of the multitude round about him,

6 David spoke to Achimelech, the Hethite, and Abisai, the son of Sarvia, the brother of Joab, saying: Who will go down with me to Saul into the camp? And Abisai said: I will go with thee.

7 So David and Abisai came to the people by night, and found Saul lying and sleeping in the tent, and his spear fixed in the ground at his head: and Abner and the people sleeping round about him.

8 And Abisai said to David: God hath shut up thy enemy this day into thy hands: now then I will run him through with my spear, even to the earth at once, and there shall be no need of a second time.

9 And David said to Abisai: Kill him not: for who shall put forth his hand against the Lord's anointed, and shall be guiltless?

10 And David said: As the Lord liveth, unless the Lord shall strike him, or his day shall come to die, or he shall go down to battle, and perish:

11 The Lord be merciful unto me, and keep me that I never put forth my hand against the Lord's anointed. But now take the spear which is at his head, and the cup of water, and let us go.

12 So David took the spear, and the cup of water which was at Saul's head, and they went away: and no man saw it, or knew it, or awaked, but they were all asleep, for a deep sleep from the Lord was fallen upon them.

13 And when David was gone over to the other side, and stood on the top of the hill afar off, and a good space was between them,

14 David cried to the people, and to Abner, the son of Ner, saying: Wilt thou not answer, Abner? And Abner answering, said: Who art thou, that criest, and disturbest the king?

15 And David said to Abner: Art not thou a man? and who is like unto thee in Israel? why then hast thou not kept thy lord the king? for there came one of the people in to kill the king thy lord.

16 This thing is not good, that thou hast done: as the Lord liveth, you are the sons of death, who have not kept your master, the Lord's anointed. And now where is the king's spear, and the cup of water, which was at his head?

17 And Saul knew David's voice, and said: Is this thy voice, my son David? And David said: It is my voice, my lord the king.

18 And he said: Wherefore doth my lord persecute his servant? What have I done? or what evil is there in my hand?

19 Now therefore hear, I pray thee, my lord the king, the words of thy servant: If the Lord stir thee up against me, let him accept of sacrifice: but if the sons of men, they are cursed in the sight of the Lord, who have cast me out this day, that I should not dwell in the inheritance of the Lord, saying: Go, serve strange gods.

20 And now let not my blood be shed upon the earth before the Lord: for the king of Israel is come out to seek a flea, as the partridge is hunted in the mountains.

21 And Saul said: I have sinned; return, my son David, for I will no more do thee harm, because my life hath been precious in thy eyes this day: for it appeareth that I have done foolishly, and have been ignorant in very many things.

22 And David answering, said: Behold the king's spear: let one of the king's servants come over and fetch it.

23 And the Lord will reward every one according to his justice, and his faithfulness: for the Lord hath delivered thee this day into my hand, and I would not put forth my hand against the Lord's anointed.

24 And as thy life hath been much set by this day in my eyes, so let my life be much set by in the eyes of the Lord, and let him deliver me from all distress.

25 Then Saul said to David: Blessed art thou, my son David: and truly doing thou shalt do, and prevailing thou shalt prevail. And David went on his way, and Saul returned to his place.

CHAP. XXVII.

David goeth again to Achis, king of Geth, and obtaineth of him the city of Siceleg.

AND *David said in his heart: I shall one day or other fall into the hands of Saul: is it not better for me to flee, and to be saved in the land of the Philistines, that Saul may despair of me, and cease to seek me in all the coasts of Israel? I will flee then out of his hands.

* A. M. 2947.

VER. 4. Certainly, or in a place strongly secured by nature. Sept. "well armed."

VER. 5. Tent, or covered chariot, such as the Scythians use in their marches. Justin. 1, or in a "royal tent." Sept. λαμπήνη, (Pollux. M.) "richly ornamented," (Lucifer of Cagliari,) "in the midst" (Aquila) of his troops. C.—David might see all was quiet from an eminence, or he might be informed by his spies. M.

VER. 6. Hethite. He had probably embraced the Jewish religion.—Abisai was the son of Sarvia, David's sister, and made a great figure at court. C.—David was directed by God to manifest his clemency (M.) and reverence for Saul in this perilous attempt. H.

VER. 8. My. Heb. "the spear," which was fixed in the ground at Saul's pillow. Prot. "let me smite him, I pray thee, with the spear, even to the earth, at once, and I will not smite him the second time." H.

VER. 9. Guiltless. Saul was still his king, how wicked soever, and this title rendered his person inviolable. C.—He will not permit any one to destroy the life of the king, though he was already anointed to succeed him. W.

VER. 10. To die a natural death. Thus those who are slain are said to die before their day. Psal. liv. 28. C.—He will not ascend the throne before the time appointed, and he will not kill Saul, except it be in battle, in his own defence. H.

VER. 19. Sacrifice, that he may be appeased (Jonathan. Vatab.); or rather I am willing to fall a victim, (M.) and pray that thy sacrifice may be acceptable, and all thy designs against me succeed. Psal. xix. 4.—They are. The opposition of this sentence to the preceding seems to require "let them be," &c. What if effect did not those deserve who wished to make David adore false gods? C.—Lord in the land of Israel.—Gods. They said so at least by their actions. M.

VER. 20. Before, and contrary to the decrees of the Lord, (H.) who will be my avenger.—Hunted, (persequitur), is here used in a passive sense (C.); or it may be rendered, "as a partridge pursues" what it feeds upon. H.

VER. 21. Precious, and treated as such, with care and respect. See 4 Kings i. 14; Psal. xlviii. 9; Isa. xliii. 4.—Ignorant. Yet Saul was inexcusable. 2 Kings xxiv. 10, &c.

VER. 22. It. He would not keep the spear, lest it might seem disrespectful.

VER. 24. Set by. Lit. "magnified," or deemed very precious. H.—Distress. These were the last words which David addressed to Saul; and they seem to have made a deep impression upon him. But as no dependence could be placed on Saul's most solemn promises, David resolved, by God's advice, to retire to the country of Geth. Salien. A. 2978.

VER. 25. Prevail, and mount the throne.—Place, Gabaa. M.

2 And David arose, and went away, both he and the six hundred men that were with him, to Achis, the son of Maach, king of Geth.

3 And David dwelt with Achis at Geth, he and his men; every man with his household, and David with his two wives, Achinoam, the Jezrahelitess, and Abigail, the wife of Nabal of Carmel.

4 And it was told Saul that David was fled to Geth, and he sought no more after him.

5 And David said to Achis: If I have found favour in thy sight, let a place be given me in one of the cities of this country, that I may dwell there: for why should thy servant dwell in the royal city with thee?

6 Then Achis gave him Siceleg that day: for which reason Siceleg belongeth to the kings of Juda unto this day.

7 And the time that David dwelt in the country of the Philistines, was four months.

8 And David and his men went up, and pillaged Gessuri, and Gerzi, and the Amalecites: for these were of old the inhabitants of the countries, as men go to Sur, even to the land of Egypt.

9 And David wasted all the land, and left neither man nor woman alive: and took away the sheep, and the oxen, and the asses, and the camels, and the apparel, and returned and came to Achis.

10 And Achis said to him: Whom hast thou gone against to-day? David answered: Against the south of Juda, and against the south of Jerameel, and against the south of Ceni.

11 And David saved neither man nor woman, neither brought he any of them to Geth, saying: Lest they should speak against us. So did David, and such was his proceeding all the days that he dwelt in the country of the Philistines.

* A. M. 2949, A. C. 1055.—b Supra, xxv. 1; Eccli. xlv. 23.

CHAP. XXVII. VER. 2. Maach, or Maacha. 3 Kings ii. 29. This king had perhaps seen David when he counterfeited madness. But now he was convinced that, by granting him protection, he would greatly annoy Saul, and draw many brave men out of his dominions.

VER. 5. Country, less peopled, and more remote from the sea.—With thee. David was attended like a king, so that he wished to avoid giving umbrage to Achis, and at the same time kept his own men at a greater distance from the contagious morals of the idolaters.

VER. 6. Day. This was written some time after the death of Samuel.—Siceleg belonged at first to Juda, and was afterwards given to the tribe of Simeon, till it fell into the hands of the Philistines, and being restored by them to David, was considered afterwards as the property of the kings of Juda. It lay not far from Horma. Jos. xix. 4.

VER. 7. Months. Heb. "days and four months." The former expression denotes a year; though some would have it that David remained "four months and a few days" in the country. C.—Sept. have "days, four months;" and Salien adopts that term. H. See chap. xxix. 3. D.

VER. 8. Pillaged Gessuri, &c. These probably were enemies of the people of God: and some, if not all of them, were of the number of those whom God had ordered to be destroyed; which justifies David's proceedings in their regard. Though it is to be observed here, that we are not under an obligation of justifying every thing that he did: for the Scripture, in relating what was done, doth not say that it was well done. And even such as are true servants of God, are not to be imitated in all they do. Ch.—The nations of Chanaan, who inhabited as far as Egypt, and the Amalecites, who had escaped the arms of Saul, were devoted to destruction. Exod. xvii. &c. In such cases any man might fall upon them, without any other formal declaration of war. C.—Salien concludes that he did not attack the other nations (except the Amalecites, who were sufficiently marked out for destruction, Dent. xxv. 19) without consulting the Lord, by the high priest, as he was accustomed to do in every difficulty. A. 2979. M.

VER. 10. Jerameel, the son of Esron, inhabited the most southern parts of Juda.—Ceni, or the Cenites, descendants of Jethro, (C.) who dwelt at Arad and the environs. The words of David might signify that he attacked these people of Israel, as Achis understood him; or that he made inroads upon those who dwelt 12 And Achis believed David, saying: He hath done much harm to his people Israel: Therefore he shall be my servant for ever.

CHAP. XXVIII.

The Philistines go out to war against Israel. Saul being forsaken by God, hath recourse to a witch. Samuel appeareth to him.

AND *it came to pass in those days, that the Philistines gathered together their armies, to be prepared for war against Israel: And Achis said to David: Know thou now assuredly, that thou shalt go out with me to the war, thou, and thy men.

2 And David said to Achis: Now thou shalt know what thy servant will do. And Achis said to David: And I will appoint thee to guard my life for ever.

3 *Now Samuel was dead, and all Israel mourned for him, and buried him in Ramatha, his city. And Saul had put away all the magicians and soothsayers out of the land.

4 And the Philistines were gathered together, and came and encamped in Sunam: and Saul also gathered together all Israel, and came to Gelboe.

5 And Saul saw the army of the Philistines, and was afraid, and his heart was very much dismayed.

6 And he consulted the Lord, and he answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by priests, nor by prophets.

7 And Saul said to his servants: Seek me a woman that hath a 'divining spirit, and I will go to her, and inquire by her. And his servants said to him: There is a woman that hath a divining spirit at Endor.

8 Then he disguised himself: and put on other clothes, and he went, and two men with him, and they came to the woman by night, and he said to her: Divine to me by thy divining spirit, and bring me up him whom I shall tell thee.

9 And the woman said to him: Behold thou knowest to the south of them, which was really the case. H.—At his return he passed by Siceleg, where he left the spoil, carrying some of the choicest things, as a present, to Achis. M.—But he suffered none of the human race to be carried away captive, lest any of them might disclose the true state of affairs to the king, who might have apprehended that the injured nations would make an attack upon his dominions. Salien.

VER. 12. Horm. Achis supposed that David had thus forfeited all his pretensions to dwell among, much less to reign over, Israel; so that he might keep him always in his service. H.—In the mean time Saul was exterminating the people of Gabaon, which brought a pestilence on Israel forty years after. Theodoret.

CHAP. XXVIII. VER. 1. Israel. God made use of the ill-will of the Philistines to punish Saul, and to make way for David to the throne. Salien.—Each of the five lords brought their armies into the field, where they were united Achis, placing the greatest confidence in David, requires his attendance. C.

VER. 2. Do; or "can do." Thou wilt be convinced of my valour and fidelity. H.—But could David lawfully fight against his brethren? or could he desert Achis in the heat of the engagement? His answer is ambiguous. C.—He prudently committed his cause into the hands of Providence, resolved to do nothing contrary to his duty, and to abide by God's decision in this critical juncture, so that Cajetan blames him unjustly. Salien. M. T.—Guard. Sept. "captain of my body-guard."

VER. 3. Samuel. His death is here recorded, as well as the abolition of magic, to explain what follows, when Saul, not being able to obtain an answer from God, as his prophet had been withdrawn in anger, had recourse to the devil. H.—Land, while he reigned virtuously, (M.) according to the law. Lev. xix. 31; Deut. xviii. 11.

VER. 7. Spirit. Heb. "an aub," or vessel distended, as such impostors seemed to swell at the presence of the spirit. Sept. "a belly talker." They endeavour to speak from that part. Saul must have been stupidly blind thus to depend on what he had formerly banished with such care. C.—Endor was distant from Gelboe about four hours' walk. Adrichomius.—But Saul made a long circuit to avoid the enemy. Salien, ver. 20.

VER. 8. Clothes, that he might not fill the woman or his army with dismay. C.

all that Saul hath done, and how he hath rooted out the magicians and soothsayers from the land: why then dost thou lay a snare for my life, to cause me to be put to death?

10 And Saul swore unto her by the Lord, saying: As the Lord liveth, there shall no evil happen to thee for this thing.

11 And the woman said to him: Whom shall I bring up to thee? And he said: Bring me up Samuel.

12 And when the woman saw Samuel, she cried out with a loud voice, and said to Saul: Why hast thou deceived me? for thou art Saul.

13 And the king said to her: Fear not: what hast thou seen? and the woman said to Saul: I saw gods ascending out of the earth.

14 And he said to her: What form is he of? And she said: An old man cometh up, and he is covered with a mantle. And Saul understood that it was Samuel, and he bowed himself with his face to the ground, and adored.

15 And Samuel said to Saul: Why hast thou disturbed my rest, that I should be brought up? And Saul said: I am in great distress: for the Philistines fight against me, and God is departed from me, and would not hear me, neither by the hand of prophets, nor by dreams: therefore I have called thee, that thou mayest show me what I shall do.

16 And Samuel said: Why askest thou me, seeing the Lord has departed from thee, and is gone over to thy rival?

17 For the Lord will do to thee as he spoke by me, and he will rend thy kingdom out of thy hand, and will give it to thy neighbour David:

18 Because thou didst not obey the voice of the Lord, neither didst thou execute the wrath of his indignation upon Amalec. Therefore hath the Lord done to thee what thou sufferest this day.

19 And the Lord also will deliver Israel with thee into

* Eccl. xlv. 23.

VER. 10. Thing. He adds this crime of swearing unjustly to all the rest. Salien.

VER. 12. Woman. The Rabbins pretend that she was Abner's mother, (C.) which is extremely improbable, as he was of the tribe of Benjamin, and a man of such renown. Salien.—Theodoret follows their opinion in supposing that the woman was startled because Samuel appeared in a standing posture, and not with his feet upwards, or lying down on his back, as in a coffin, which they say (C.) is the usual manner of spirits appearing to people of her character. Bellarm. Pargat. ii. 6.—She cried out, because he appeared before she had begun her incantations, and was arrayed like a priest, according to Josephus, (H.) in great majesty; or she pretended to see him, the better to impose upon the king; for some think that all was a delusion. C.

VER. 13. Gods, or one venerable and Divine personage. W.—Elohim is applied to Samuel for greater honour. It is a title given to the true God, to idols, and people in dignity. C.

VER. 14. Understood that it was Samuel. It is the more common opinion of the holy Fathers, and interpreters, that the soul of Samuel appeared indeed; and not, as some have imagined, an evil spirit in his shape. Not that the power of her magic could bring him thither, but that God was pleased, for the punishment of Saul, that Samuel himself should denounce unto him the evils that were falling upon him. See Ecclesiast. xlv. 23. Ch.—The passage is decisive (T.); he slept and he made known to the king, and showed him the end of his life, and he lifted up his voice from the earth, in prophecy, &c. Those who have called in question the reality of Samuel's apparition seem not to have remembered this passage. H.—Yet his soul was not united to his body, (Salien.) nor was he adduced by the power of the devil, but (D.) by a just judgment of God, to denounce destruction to the wicked king. S. Aug., &c. T.—The woman, beholding Samuel, fled out of the place, to Saul's companions, and left him alone with the king, ver. 21.—Adored Samuel with an inferior honour, as the friend of God, exalted in glory. Salien.—That Samuel really appeared is the more common opinion of the Fathers. S. Aug. Cura. 15. W the hands of the Philistines: and to-morrow thou and thy sons shall be with me: and the Lord will also deliver the army of Israel into the hands of the Philistines.

20 And forthwith Saul fell all along on the ground: for he was frightened with the words of Samuel, and there was no strength in him, for he had eaten no bread all that day.

21 And the woman came to Saul, (for he was very much troubled,) and said to him: Behold thy handmaid hath obeyed thy voice, and I have put my life in my hand: and I hearkened unto the words which thou spakest to me.

22 Now therefore, I pray thee, hearken thou also to the voice of thy handmaid, and let me set before thee a morsel of bread, that thou mayest eat and recover strength, and be able to go on thy journey.

23 But he refused, and said: I will not eat. But his servants and the woman forced him, and at length hearkening to their voice, he arose from the ground, and sat upon the bed.

24 Now the woman had a fatted calf in the house, and she made haste and killed it: and taking meal, kneaded it, and baked some unleavened bread,

25 And set it before Saul, and before his servants. And when they had eaten they rose up, and walked all that night.

CHAP. XXIX.

David going with the Philistines, is sent back by their princes.

NOW all the troops of the Philistines were gathered together to Aphec: and Israel also encamped by the fountain, which is in Jezrahel.

2 And the lords of the Philistines marched with their hundreds and their thousands: but David and his men were in the rear with Achis.

3 And the princes of the Philistines said to Achis: What mean these Hebrews? And Achis said to the princes of the Philistines: Do you not know David, who was the servant of Saul, the king of Israel, and hath been

b A. M. 2947.

VER. 15. Up. To inform a person of something very terrible is distressing; and though the saints deceased cannot partake in the afflictions of mortals, yet we read that "the angels of peace will weep, but they will approve of the just sentence of the judge" against the reprobate. H.—God does not encourage magical arts on this occasion, but rather prevents their operation, as he did when Balaam would have used some superstitious practices. Num. xxiv. D.

VER. 16. Rival. How vain is it to expect that a prophet can give an answer, when the Lord is silent! Heb. "is become thy enemy." H.

VER. 17. To thee. Heb. "to him." This was only a repetition of what Samuel had before denounced. Chap. xv. 28. If the evil spirit spoke this, he was not guilty of falsehood, no more than Matt. viii. 29. C.—But would he dare so often to repeat the name of the Lord? H.—Could he know what would happen to Saul, &c. the next day? W.

VER. 19. To-morrow. Usher supposes some days afterwards. But all might take place the day after this was spoken. C.—Sons, except Ishobeth, who enjoyed, for a time, part of his father's kingdom. H.—With me. That is, in the state of the dead, and in another world, though not in the same place. Ch.

CHAP. XXIX. VER. 1. Aphc. Hence they proceeded to Sunam, and attacked Saul near the fountain, which were all places in the vale of Jezrahel. The sacred writer thus leaves the two armies ready to engage, being intent on giving the particulars of David's history, and only relating the affairs of Saul, &c. inasmuch as they may refer to him. C.—David had retired from the army of the Philistines before Saul went to Endor, and some of the tribe of Manasses went after him, and were present in the battle in which the Amalecites were slain and plundered. 1 Par. xii. 19. Salien.

VER. 2. Thousands, making the troops pass in review, as the Heb. insinuates.—Were. Heb. "passed." David's band was connected with the troops of Achis, yet so that they might be easily distinguished by their dress, &c. C.

VER. 3. Know David. It seems they were not unacquainted with him, since they knew that Achis had given him a place, (ver. 4.) or city. H.—But they with me many days, or years, and I have found no fault in him, since the day that he fled over to me until this day?

4 But the princes of the Philistines were angry with him, and they said to him: Let this man return, and abide in his place, which thou hast appointed him, and let him not go down with us to battle, lest he be an adversary to us, when we shall begin to fight: for how can he otherwise appease his master, but with our heads?

5 Is not this David, to whom they sung in their dances, saying: Saul slew his thousands, and David his ten thousands?

6 Then Achis called David, and said to him: As the Lord liveth, thou art upright and good in my sight: and so is thy going out, and thy coming in with me in the army: and I have not found any evil in thee, since the day that thou camest to me unto this day: but thou pleasest not the lords.

7 Return therefore, and go in peace, and offend not the eyes of the princes of the Philistines.

8 And David said to Achis: But what have I done, or what hast thou found in me thy servant, from the day that I have been in thy sight until this day, that I may not go and fight against the enemies of my lord the king?

9 And Achis answering, said to David: I know that thou art good in my sight,^a as an angel of God: But the princes of the Philistines have said: He shall not go up with us to the battle.

10 Therefore arise in the morning, thou, and the servants of thy lord, who came with thee: and when you are up before day, and it shall begin to be light, go on your way.

11 So David and his men arose in the night, that they might set forward in the morning, and returned to the land of the Philistines: and the Philistines went up to Jezrahel.

CHAP. XXX.

The Amalecites burn Siceleg, and carry off the prey: David pursueth after them, and recovereth all out of their hands.

NOW^a when David and his men were come to Siceleg on the third day, the Amalecites had made an invasion on the south side upon Siceleg, and had smitten Siceleg, and burnt it with fire,

2 And had taken the women captives that were in it, prudently judged that it would be very hazardous to employ him on this occasion. Providence thus brought him honourably out of the scrape, as he could not have remained even inactive among the troops of the Philistines, without rendering himself suspected both to them and to his own people. C.—Years. Ahulensis thinks that Achis told an untruth, to persuade the lords that he had been long witness of David's fidelity. He might also allude to the first time when he came to his court, or the four months specified chap. xxvii. 9, might fall into different years. Sept. "he has been with us days, this is the second year." M.—Syr. "two years (Arab. "one year") and some months" C.—The true term was only four months. W.

VER. 4. Adversary. Heb. Satan, "a calumniator, enemy," &c. C.

VER. 8. King. He speaks thus that he might not increase the suspicions of the Philistines. M.—In the mean time God called him to fight against Amalec, and to defend his own property, which was actually, or the next day, taken from Siceleg (11.); so that nothing could have been more desirable to him than to be thus dismissed with applause. Salien.

VER. 9. Angel of God, equally incapable of any meanness.—This exaggerated compliment occurs, Gen. xxxiii. 10; 2 Kings xiv. 17, and xix. 27.

CHAP. XXX. VER. 1. Day. It was distant from Aphec about ninety miles. —Smitten, yet without killing any. C.—We may adore a merciful Providence, which prevented these barbarians from treating David's men as he had treated theirs. Chap. xxvii. 11. Salien. A. C. 1074.—He would allow them to burn the both little and great: and they had not killed any person, but had carried them with them, and went on their way.

3 So when David and his men came to the city, and found it burnt with fire, and that their wives, and their sons, and their daughters, were taken captives,

4 David and the people that were with him, lifted up their voices, and wept till they had no more tears.

5 For the two wives also of David were taken captives, Achinoam, the Jezrahelitess, and Abigail, the wife of Nabal of Carmel.

6 And David was greatly afflicted: for the people had a mind to stone him, for the soul of every man was bitterly grieved for his sons and daughters: but David took courage in the Lord his God.

7 And he said to Abiathar, the priest, the son of Achimelech: Bring me hither the ephod. And Abiathar brought the ephod to David.

8 And David consulted the Lord, saying: Shall I pursue after these robbers, and shall I overtake them, or not? And the Lord said to him: Pursue after them: for thou shalt surely overtake them and recover the prey.

9 So David went, he and the six hundred men that were with him, and they came to the torrent Besor: and some, being weary, stayed there.

10 But David pursued, he and four hundred men: for two hundred stayed, who, being weary, could not go over the torrent Besor.

11 And they found an Egyptian in the field, and brought him to David: and they gave him bread to eat, and water to drink, 12 As also a piece of a cake of figs, and two bunches of raisins. And when he had eaten them, his spirit returned, and he was refreshed: for he had not eaten bread, nor drunk water, three days and three nights.

13 And David said to him: To whom dost thou belong; or whence dost thou come? and whither art thou going? He said: I am a young man of Egypt, the servant of an Amalecite: and my master left me, because I began to be sick three days ago.

14 For we made an invasion on the south side of Cerethi, and upon Juda, and upon the south of Caleb, and we burnt Siceleg with fire.

city, &c., that David might be roused to execute the Divine vengeance upon them Theodoret.

VER. 6. Stone him, as the author of all their losses, because he had not left a sufficient garrison at Siceleg, and had irritated the Amalecites. Inconstant people! they thought that he was indebted to them for all that he possessed! C.—David, without being too much dejected, sought out for an immediate remedy, and led them on to battle. T.

VER. 7. To David. Some think that David put on the ephod; but this was the function of the high priest, who, according to Grotius, turned towards David, that he might see the brightness of the precious stones. See Exod. xxviii. 30. W.

VER. 10. Weary. Heb. pogru, denotes those who are "lazy and dead" Sept. "some sat down on the other side of the torrent." Syr. and Arab. insinuate, to defend the passage. But why then do the rest complain? C.—They acted irrationally, as David showed afterwards. Some of the six hundred might well be more exhausted than others, and these were selected to guard the baggage, ver. 24. This was only the third day since they left Aphec, ver. 1. H.

VER. 12. Raisins. Heb. tsomkim. See chap. xxi. 18. C.—The soldiers very prudently took some provisions with them, as they were going into a desert country. M.

VER. 14. Cerethi, denotes the Philistines, (R. David. See ver. 16. H.) who came originally from Crete. 2 Kings xv. 18; Ezec. xxv. 16. C.—Caleb. Hebr.

15 And David said to him: Canst thou bring me to this company? and he said: Swear to me by God, that thou wilt not kill me, nor deliver me into the hands of my master, and I will bring thee to this company. And David swore to him.

16 And when he had brought him, behold they were lying spread abroad upon all the ground, eating and drinking, and as it were keeping a festival day, for all the prey and the spoils which they had taken out of the land of the Philistines, and out of the land of Juda.

17 And David slew them from the evening unto the evening of the next day, and there escaped not a man of them, but four hundred young men, who had gotten upon camels, and fled.

18 So David recovered all that the Amalecites had taken, and he rescued his two wives.

19 And there was nothing missing small or great, neither of their sons or their daughters, nor of the spoils, and whatsoever they had taken, David recovered all.

20 And he took all the flocks and the herds, and made them go before him: and they said: This is the prey of David.

21 And David came to the two hundred men, who, being weary, had stayed, and were not able to follow David, and he had ordered them to abide at the torrent Besor: and they came out to meet David, and the people that were with him. And David coming to the people, saluted them peaceably.

22 Then all the wicked and unjust men, that had gone with David, answering, said: Because they came not with us, we will not give them any thing of the prey which we have recovered: but let every man take his wife, and his children, and be contented with them, and go his way.

23 But David said: You shall not do so, my brethren, with these things, which the Lord hath given us, who hath kept us, and hath delivered the robbers that invaded us into our hands:

and Cariath-sepher fell to his share. The enemy had a good opportunity to ravage all those places, as most of the soldiers were absent (C.) at Jezrahel, 11.

VER. 15. Him. David did not require this slave to betray his master, for the latter had lost all his claim, and David had acquired it by relieving the distressed. The Amalecites dwelt in tents, and the slave knew where they commonly lodged. C.

VER. 16. Drinking. Heb. adds, "and dancing," (Salien,) in honour of their gods. M.

VER. 17. Evening. Heb. "twilight," in the morning (C.) or evening. H.—Some think that the pursuit lasted three days; others only from three till five in the evening. But David more probably slaughtered the intoxicated people during the space of a whole day, from morning till evening. C.—Sept. VER. 24. Alike. Nothing could be more just and prudent; as this decision prevents continual murmurs and inconveniences. Those who are left behind are bound to defend the baggage at the hazard of their lives, and each man must obey the orders of the general.

"And this law had been observed in Israel from that day and before." David restored to its full vigour this ancient regulation. The Hebrews have no compound verbs, such as re-establish, re-build, &c., instead of which they say, to establish (C.) and build again. Thus, by the addition of adverbs, they can 24 And no man shall hearken to you in this matter. But equal shall be the portion of him that went down to battle, and of him that abode at the baggage, and they shall divide alike.

25 And this hath been done from that day forward, and since was made a statute and an ordinance, and as a law in Israel.

30 And that were in Arama, and that were in the lake Asan, and that were in Athach, 31 And that were in Hebron, and to the rest that were in those places, in which David had abode with his men.

CHAP. XXXI.

Israel is defeated by the Philistines: Saul and his sons are slain.

AND the Philistines fought against Israel, and the men of Israel fled from before the Philistines, and fell down slain in Mount Gelboe.

2 And the Philistines fell upon Saul, and upon his sons, and they slew Jonathan, and Abinadab, and Melchisua, the sons of Saul.

3 And the whole weight of the battle was turned upon Saul: and the archers overtook him, and he was grievously wounded by the archers.

4 Then Saul said to his armour-bearer: Draw thy sword, and kill me: lest these uncircumcised come, and slay me, and mock at me. And his armour-bearer would not: for he was struck with exceeding great fear. Then Saul took his sword, and fell upon it.

VER. 2. Jonathan. Ven. Bede, &c. doubt not of his salvation. Salien.

VER. 3. Overtook. Heb. "attacked, found, or hit him." He was running away. H.—Wounded. Some translate Heb. "terrified," as they believe the words of the Amalecite, "my whole life is in me." But that wretch deserves no credit; and Saul would probably not take the desperate resolution of killing himself, till he saw there was no possibility of escaping. Sept. "the archers fled him, and they wounded him in the lower belly." Theodotion, "in the part near the liver."

5 And when his armour-bearer saw this, to wit, that Saul was dead, he also fell upon his sword and died with him.

6 So Saul died, and his three sons, and his armour-bearer, and all his men that same day together.

7 And the men of Israel, that were beyond the valley, and beyond the Jordan, seeing that the Israelites were fled, and that Saul was dead, and his sons, forsook their cities, and fled: and the Philistines came and dwelt there.

8 And on the morrow the Philistines came to strip the slain, and they found Saul and his three sons lying in Mount Gelboe.

9 And they cut off Saul's head, and stripped him of his armour, and sent into the land of the Philistines round about, to publish it in the temples of their idols, and among their people.

10 And they put his armour in the temple of Astaroth, but his body they hung on the wall of Bethsan.

11 Now when the inhabitants of Jabes Galaad had heard all that the Philistines had done to Saul, 12 All the most valiant men arose, and walked all the night, and took the body of Saul, and the bodies of his sons, from the wall of Bethsan: and they came to Jabes Galaad, and burnt them there.

13 And they took their bones, and buried them in the wood of Jabes: and fasted seven days.

VER. 5. With him. Thus, to avoid a little shame and temporal punishment, they rushed into those which are inconceivably great and eternal. H.—Saul seems to have been afraid of receiving any insult himself, rather than to have been desirous of preventing the blasphemies of the infidels against God, as the Jews pretend. He gave no signs of repentance, and the Spirit of God pronounces his condemnation. So Saul died for his iniquities, because he transgressed; (C. VER. 10. Astaroth. The like custom was observed by the Hebrews, (chap. xxi. 9,) and by the Greeks and Romans, (C.) to acknowledge that victory was granted by God.—Body, with those of his three sons, ver. 12. H.—Saul's head was hung up in the temple of Dagon, at Azotus (1 Par. x. 10): his body was suspended on the wall or street of Bethsan (2 Kings xxi. 12); or in the most public place, near the gate of the city.

VER. 12. Burnt them, or the flesh, reserving the ashes and bones to be buried, as was customary among the Greeks (Homer, ψ.) and Romans. See Amos vi. 10.

VER. 13. Wood. Par. under the oak.—Days, at their own option. David fasted one day, (C.) as he did for Abner. Salien.—The usual term of mourning was seven days. Eccli. xxii. 13. C.—It is very difficult to ascertain the length of Saul's reign. Sanctius and Tirin allow him only 2 years, Petau 12, Calvisius 15, Salien 18, Bucholeer, and probably Josephus, 20, though most copies of the latter have 38, S. Aug., Serarius, Usher, &c., 40, which is the term mentioned Acts xiii. 20. But most chronologers suppose that the time of Samuel's administration is there also included. H.—Sulpitius thinks that Saul only "reigned a very short time," as "the ark was brought to Cariathiarim before he appeared on the throne, and was removed by David after it had been there twenty years."

THE SECOND BOOK OF SAMUEL;

OTHERWISE CALLED,

THE SECOND BOOK OF KINGS.

This Book contains the transactions of David till the end of the pestilence, occasioned by his numbering the people. Chap. xxiv. The last six chapters of the preceding book were probably written by Gad, who delivered God's orders to David, after he was deprived of the company of Samuel. Gad, Nathan, and other prophets, continued the sacred history, 1 Par. xxix. 29. After the unfortunate death of Saul, his general, Abner, instead of submitting quietly to the dominion of David, (H.) set the son of the deceased monarch upon the throne, at Mahanaim; and two years elapsed before the rival kings came to open war. Chap. ii. 10. Salien.—David was thirty years old when he was anointed at Hebron, (chap. v. 4,) where he reigned seven years and a half over Juda. On the death of Isboseth he was anointed a third time as king of all Israel, and reigned in that character thirty-seven years. H.—We here behold the many virtues of David, and his repentance for some faults into which he had fallen. His predictions, and the names and exploits of many of his valiant men, are likewise recorded. W.

CHAPTER I.

David mourneth for the death of Saul and Jonathan: he ordereth the man to be slain who pretended he had killed Saul.

NOW it came to pass, after Saul was dead, that David returned from the slaughter of the Amalecites and abode two days in Siceleg.

2 And on the third day, there appeared a man who came out of Saul's camp, with his garments rent, and dust strewed on his head: and when he came to David, he fell upon his face, and adored.

• A. M. 2949, A. C. 1055.

CHAP. I. VER. 6. Chance. He feigned this to obtain the favour of David; but the king punished him as he deserved. W.—Spear, or sword, as it is before expressed. M.

3 And David said to him: From whence comest thou? And he said to him: I am fled out of the camp of Israel.

4 And David said unto him: What is the matter that is come to pass? tell me. He said: The people are fled from the battle, and many of the people are fallen and dead: moreover Saul, and Jonathan, his son, are slain.

5 And David said to the young man that told him: How knowest thou that Saul, and Jonathan, his son, are dead?

6 And the young man that told him, said: I came by chance upon Mount Gelboe, and Saul leaned upon his spear: and the chariots and horsemen drew nigh unto him,

7 And looking behind him, and seeing me, he called me. And I answered: Here am I.

8 And he said to me: Who art thou? And I said to him: I am an Amalecite.

9 And he said to me: Stand over me, and kill me: for anguish is come upon me, and as yet my whole life is in me.

10 So standing over him, I killed him: for I knew that he could not live after the fall: and I took the diadem that was on his head, and the bracelet that was on his arm, and have brought them hither to thee, my lord.

11 Then David took hold of his garments and rent them, and likewise all the men that were with him:

12 And they mourned, and wept, and fasted until evening, for Saul, and for Jonathan, his son, and for the people of the Lord, and for the house of Israel, because they were fallen by the sword.

13 And David said to the young man that told him: Whence art thou? He answered: I am the son of a stranger of Amalec.

14 David said to him: *Why didst thou not fear to put out thy hand to kill the Lord's anointed?

15 And David calling one of his servants, said: Go near and fall upon him. And he struck him so that he died.

16 And David said to him: Thy blood be upon thy own head: for thy own mouth hath spoken against thee, saying: I have slain the Lord's anointed.

17 And David made this kind of lamentation over Saul, and over Jonathan, his son.

* Psal. civ. 15.

18 (Also he commanded that they should teach the children of Juda the use of the bow, as it is written in the Book of the just.) And he said: Consider, O Israel, for them that are dead wounded on thy high places.

19 The illustrious of Israel are slain upon thy mountains: how are the valiant fallen?

20 Tell it not in Geth, publish it not in the streets of Ascalon: lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph.

21 Ye mountains of Gelboe, let neither dew nor rain come upon you, nor let there be in you fields of first-fruits: for there was cast away the shield of the valiant, the shield of Saul, as though he had not been anointed with oil.

22 From the blood of the slain, from the fat of the valiant, the arrow of Jonathan never turned back, and the sword of Saul did not return empty.

23 Saul and Jonathan, lovely, and comely in their life, even in death they were not divided: they were swifter than eagles, stronger than lions.

24 Ye daughters of Israel, weep over Saul, who clothed you with scarlet in delights, who gave ornaments of gold for your attire.

25 How are the valiant fallen in battle? how was Jonathan slain in the high places?

26 I grieve for thee, my brother Jonathan, exceeding beautiful, and amiable to me above the love of women. As the mother loveth her only son, so did I love thee.

27 How are the valiant fallen, and the weapons of war perished?

and the French formerly wore them much, instead of iron. C.—Prot., however, agree with us.—In me. I have yet received no mortal wound. H.

VER. 10. I killed him. This story of the young Amalecite was not true, as may easily be proved by comparing it with the last chapter of the foregoing book. Ch.—Fall. This he says, apprehending that David would perhaps disapprove of what he had done.—Diadem, or riband, which was tied round his head as a badge of his dignity. Heb. “the crown.” But it was not of metal, though such were already common. Exod. xxviii. 36; 1 Par. xx. 2.

VER. 16. Head. None but thyself can be answerable for thy death. See Matt. xxvii. 25. David was already supreme magistrate, and he wished that all should be convinced that he rejoiced not at the death of the king, and that none might imitate the example of this wretch. C.

VER. 18. Bow. So this canticle was entitled, because it spoke in praise of the bow and arrows of Saul and Jonathan, ver. 22. So one of the works of Hesiod is called “a bucker;” of Theocritus, “a flute;” of Sannias, “a wing;” &c. Sept. have neglected this word entirely (C.) in the Roman edition. But it is found in the Alex. copy, which reads “Israel,” instead of Juda, perhaps properly. Grabe, Prol. iv. 2. H.—Chal. “to shoot with the bow.” Many suppose that David cautioned his men to exert themselves in that art, (M.) as they might soon expect to have to encounter the Philistines, (T.) who were very expert bowmen. W.—But the former interpretation seems preferable. C.—The bow might be also the beginning of some favourite song, to the tune of which (D.) David would have his men to sing this canticle, (H.) particularly when they went to battle. Grotius.—Just. See Jos. x. 3. M.—It seems this was a more ancient record, to which the author of this book refers. C.—The custom of composing canticles on such solemn occasions is very ancient and frequent. See 3 Kings iii. 33, and xiii. 29; Jer. xlviii. 31. Iliad ψ and χ . The style of this piece can hardly be equalled by the most polite writers. C.—David is chiefly occupied with the praises of Jonathan. H.—Consider . . . places. This sentence is omitted in Heb., Chal., Sept., and in some copies of S. Jerom's version. T. i. p. 365. Nov. edit. op. It is a further explication of the subsequent verse. C.—Yet the Sept. read, “Erect a pillar. O Israel, upon thy heights; the Vat. Sept. places this after slain. H.] in honour of the slain, thy wounded soldiers. How are the mighty fallen?” H.

VER. 19. Illustrious. Heb. “the glory (beauty, hart, &c.) of Israel hath been pierced,” &c. The comparison of Saul with a hart is noble enough in the ideas of the ancients. Psal. xvii. 34; Cant. ii. 9. and viii. 14. Syr. and Arab. “O hart of Israel, they have been slain.” &c.—Slain. Heb. elol, signifies also “a soldier;” and this word agrees perfectly well with gobrim, “valiant,” both here and ver. 22, and 25. Kennicott would apply it to Jonathan, upon whom David's attention is mostly fixed. “O ornament of Israel! O warrior, upon thy high places!”—How, &c. H.—In this manner many such pieces commence. Iamcut. i. T.

VER. 20. Triumph. He was aware of the exultation of the infidels. H.

VER. 21. Fruits, which may be offered to the Lord. Inanimate things could not offend, nor does David curse them in earnest. But (T.) nothing could more strikingly express his distress and grief than this imprecation. It is false that those mountains have since been barren. This canticle is one of the most fruitful of the country. Brocard. C.—Job (iii.) speaks with the same animation, and curses his day. M.—Of Saul, or “Saul, the shield of his people, was cast away, as,” &c. Prot. “as though he had not been anointed with oil.” H.—He is not reproached for throwing away his buckler, for nothing was deemed more shameful. The ancient Germans would not allow such a one to enter their temples or places of assembly. Taet. Mor. Germ.—A woman of Sparta told her son, when she delivered one to him, “Bring this back, or be brought upon it” dead. C.

VER. 22. From. Heb. “without the blood of soldiers, without the fat of the valiant, the bow of Jonathan had never returned.” Kennicott.—Fat. The entrails. It might also denote the most valiant of the soldiers, as we read of “the fat or marrow of corn” for the best. Psal. lxxx. 17. C.

VER. 23. Lovely, or united. Jonathan always behaved with due respect towards his father, though he could not enter into his unjust animosity against David. C.—The latter passes over in silence all that Saul had done against himself, and seems wholly occupied with the thought of the valour and great achievements of the deceased. H.

VER. 25. Battle. Heb. “in the midst of battle! O Jonathan, thou warrior upon thy high places! Kennicott, Diss. i. p. 123.

VER. 26. Brother. So they lament, Alas! my brother. Jer. xxii. 18. M.—Women. He indicates the ardour of his love, not any inordinate affection. D.—I love thee more than any person can love a woman, (C.) more than women can love their husbands or children. M.—Chal. “thy love is more wonderful to me than the love of two who are espoused.”—As, &c. This is not found in Heb., Sept., or S. Jerom. C.

VER. 27. Perished, falling into the hands of the enemy; though Saul and Jonathan may be styled the arms, as well as the shield, of Israel. M.—No character could be more worthy of praise than the latter. His breast was never agitated by envy, though he seemed to be the most interested to destroy David. Saul is one of the most striking figures of the reprobation and conduct of the Jewish church. As he was adorned with many glorious prerogatives, and chosen by God, yet he no sooner beheld the rising merit of David than he began to persecute him: so the Jews had been instructed by the prophets, and had been selected as God's peculiar inheritance; and nevertheless took occasion, from the virtues and miracles of the Son of God, to conspire his ruin. The Romans were sent to punish the Jews, who are now become the most abject of all mankind, and are filled with rage, seeing the exaltation of the Christian Church, as Saul was reduced by the Philistines to the greatest distress, and his children were forced to

CHAP. II.

David is received and anointed king of Juda. Isboseth, the son of Saul, reigneth over the rest of Israel. A battle between Abner and Joab.

AND *after these things David consulted the Lord, saying: Shall I go up into one of the cities of Juda? And the Lord said to him: Go up. And David said: Whither shall I go up? And he answered him: Into Hebron.

2 So David went up, and his two wives, Achinoam, the Jezrabelitess, and Abigail, the wife of Nabal of Carmel:

3 And the men also that were with him, David brought up, every man with his household: and they abode in the towns of Hebron.

4 And the men of Juda came, and anointed David there, to be king over the house of Juda. And it was told David, that the men of Jabes Galaad had buried Saul.

5 David therefore sent messengers to the men of Jabes Galaad, and said to them: Blessed be you to the Lord, who have showed this mercy to your master, Saul, and have buried him.

6 And now the Lord surely will render you mercy and truth, and I also will requite you for this good turn, because you have done this thing.

7 Let your hands be strengthened, and be ye men of valour: for although your master, Saul, be dead, yet the house of Juda hath anointed me to be their king.

8 But Abner, the son of Ner, general of Saul's army, took Isboseth, the son of Saul, and led him about through the camp, 9 And made him king over Galaad, and over Gessuri, and over Jezrahel, and over Ephraim, and over Benjamin, and over all Israel.

10 Isboseth, the son of Saul, was forty years old when he began to reign over Israel, and he reigned two years; and only the house of Juda followed David.

11 And the number of the days that David abode, reigning in Hebron over the house of Juda, was seven years and six months.

H.—Abner was aware that he should not retain his authority under David, and therefore conducted Isboseth to the camps in various places, (M.) but chiefly on the 12 And Abner, the son of Ner, and the servants of Isboseth, the son of Saul, went out from the camp to Gabaon.

13 And Joab, the son of Sarvia, and the servants of David went out, and met them by the pool of Gabaon. And when they were come together, they sat down over against one another: the one on the one side of the pool, and the other on the other side.

14 And Abner said to Joab: Let the young men rise, and play before us. And Joab answered: Let them rise.

15 Then there arose and went over twelve in number of Benjamin, of the part of Isboseth, the son of Saul, and twelve of the servants of David.

16 And every one catching his fellow by the head, thrust his sword into the side of his adversary, and they fell down together: and the name of the place was called: The field of the valiant, in Gabaon.

17 And there was a very fierce battle that day: And Abner was put to flight, with the men of Israel, by the servants of David.

18 And there were the three sons of Sarvia there, Joab, and Abisai, and Asael: now Asael was a most swift runner, like one of the roes, that abide in the woods.

19 And Asael pursued after Abner, and turned not to the right hand nor to the left from following Abner.

20 And Abner looked behind him, and said: Art thou Asael? And he answered: I am.

21 And Abner said to him: Go to the right hand, or to the left, and lay hold on one of the young men, and take thee his spoils. But Asael would not leave off following him close.

22 And again Abner said to Asael: Go off, and do not follow me, lest I be obliged to stab thee to the ground, and I shall not be able to hold up my face to Joab, thy brother.

23 But he refused to hearken to him, and would not turn aside: wherefore Abner struck him with his spear, with a back stroke in the groin, and thrust him through, and he died upon the spot: and all that came to the place where Asael fell down and died, stood still.

east side of the Jordan, (H. ver. 29,) where the people were particularly attached to Saul's family. Isboseth seems to have been a fit tool for his purpose.

VER. 9. Gessuri. There was one south of Juda; but this country was probably near Hermon, and might be tributary to Israel. David perhaps married this king's daughter, in order to detach him from the party of Isboseth. Chap. iii. 3. Heb. reads, "Assuri;" and S. Jerom observes that many explained it of the tribe of Aser, (Trad. Heb.) with the Chaldee, (D. M.) or of the Assurians. Gen. xxv. 3.

But there is no mention that Abner and Joab had authority to agree that these champions should decide the fate of the two kingdoms, (H.) whence they are generally accused of ostentation; though the soldiers, not being acquainted with their motives, were obliged to obey. T. M.

VER. 16. Together. Some understand this only of Abner's soldiers, as the original may be explained: "And they (David's men) caught every one his," &c. But it is more generally believed that all fell. C.

VER. 21. Spoils. Attack one who may be a more equal match for thee. H. VER. 22. Brother. It seems they were great friends, though they had espoused different parties. C.

VER. 23. Stroke (acersa). Heb. "with the hinder end of the spear, under the fifth rib." Sept. "in the loin."

24 Now while Joab and Abisai pursued after Abner, the sun went down: and they came as far as the hill of the aqueduct, that lieth over against the valley, by the way of the wilderness in Gabaon.

25 And the children of Benjamin gathered themselves together to Abner: and being joined in one body, they stood on the top of a hill.

26 And Abner cried out to Joab, and said: Shall thy sword rage unto utter destruction? knowest thou not that it is dangerous to drive people to despair? how long dost thou defer to bid the people cease from pursuing after their brethren?

27 And Joab said: As the Lord liveth, if thou hadst spoke sooner, even in the morning the people should have retired from pursuing after their brethren?

28 Then Joab sounded the trumpet, and all the army stood still, and did not pursue after Israel any farther, nor fight any more.

29 And Abner and his men walked all that night through the plains: and they passed the Jordan, and having gone through all Beth-horon, came to the camp.

30 And Joab returning, after he had left Abner, assembled all the people: and there were wanting of David's servants nineteen men, beside Asael.

31 But the servants of David had killed of Benjamin, and of the men that were with Abner, three hundred and sixty, who all died.

32 And they took Asael, and buried him in the sepulchre of his father, in Bethlehem: and Joab, and the men that were with him, marched all the night, and they came to Hebron at break of day.

CHAP. III.

David groweth daily stronger. Abner cometh over to him: he is treacherously slain by Joab.

NOW^a there was a long war between the house of Saul and the house of David: David prospering and growing always stronger and stronger, but the house of Saul decaying daily.

5 And the sixth, Jethraam, of Eglah, the wife of David: these were born to David in Hebron.

6 Now while there was war between the house of Saul and the house of David, Abner, the son of Ner, ruled the house of Saul.

7 And Saul had a concubine named Respha, the daughter of Aia. And Isboseth said to Abner:

8 Why didst thou go in to my father's concubine? And he was exceedingly angry for the words of Isboseth, and said: Am I a dog's head against Juda this day, who have shown mercy unto the house of Saul, thy father, and to his brethren and friends, and have not delivered thee into the hands of David, and hast thou sought this day against me, to charge me with a matter concerning a woman?

9 So do God to Abner, and more also, unless as the Lord hath sworn to David, so I do to him,

10 That the kingdom be translated from the house of Saul, and the throne of David be set up over Israel, and over Juda, from Dan to Bersabee.

11 And he could not answer him a word, because he feared him.

12 Abner therefore sent messengers to David for himself, saying: Whose is the land? and that they should say: Make a league with me, and my hand shall be with thee: and I will bring all Israel to thee.

13 And he said: Very well: I will make a league with thee: but one thing I require of thee, saying: Thou shalt not see my face before thou bring Michol, the daughter of Saul; and so thou shalt come, and see me.

14 And David sent messengers to Isboseth, the son of Saul, saying: Restore my wife, Michol, whom I espoused to me for a hundred fore-skins of the Philistines.

15 And Isboseth sent, and took her from her husband, Phaltiel, the son of Lais.

David does not approve of his conduct, but only makes use of him to obtain his right.—Michol. He might justly think that the people would have less repugnance to acknowledge him for their sovereign, when they saw that he had married the daughter of Saul. She had never been repudiated by him. VER. 16. Bahurim, in the tribe of Benjamin. Adric. 28.

Bahurim : And Abner said to him : Go and return. And he returned.

17 Abner also spoke to the ancients of Israel, saying : Both yesterday and the day before you sought for David, that he might reign over you.

18 Now then do it : because the Lord hath spoken to David, saying : By the hand of my servant David I will save my people Israel from the hands of the Philistines, and of all their enemies.

19 And Abner spoke also to Benjamin. And he went to speak to David, in Hebron, all that seemed good to Israel, and to all Benjamin.

20 And he came to David, in Hebron, with twenty men : and David made a feast for Abner, and his men that came with him.

21 And Abner said to David : I will rise, that I may gather all Israel unto thee, my lord the king, and may enter into a league with thee, and that thou mayest reign over all as thy soul desireth. Now when David had brought Abner on his way, and he was gone in peace, 22 Immediately David's servants and Joab came, after having slain the robbers, with an exceeding great booty : And Abner was not with David in Hebron, for he had now sent him away, and he was gone in peace.

23 And Joab and all the army that was with him, came afterwards : and it was told Joab, that Abner, the son of Ner, came to the king, and he hath sent him away, and he is gone in peace.

24 And Joab went in to the king, and said : What hast thou done ? Behold Abner came to thee : Why didst thou send him away, and he is gone and departed ?

25 Knowest thou not Abner, the son of Ner, that to this end he came to thee, that he might deceive thee, and to know thy going out, and thy coming in, and to know all thou dost ?

26 Then Joab going out from David, sent messengers after Abner, and brought him back from the cistern of Sira, David knowing nothing of it.

27 And when Abner was returned to Hebron, Joab took him aside to the middle of the gate, to speak to him, treacherously : and he stabbed him there in the groin, and he died, in revenge of the blood of Asael his brother.

30 So Joab, and Abisai, his brother, slew Abner, because he had killed their brother Asael, at Gabaon, in the battle.

31 And David said to Joab, and to all the people that were with him : Rend your garments, and gird yourselves with sackcloths, and mourn before the funeral of Abner. And king David himself followed the bier.

32 And when they had buried Abner in Hebron, king David lifted up his voice, and wept at the grave of Abner : and all the people also wept.

33 And the king, mourning and lamenting over Abner, said : Not as cowards are wont to die, hath Abner died.

34 Thy hands were not bound, nor thy feet loaden with fetters : but as men fall before the children of iniquity, so didst thou fall. And all the people repeating it, wept over him.

35 And when all the people came to take meat with David, while it was yet broad day, David swore, saying : So do God to me, and more also, if I taste bread or any thing else before sun-set.

36 And all the people heard, and they were pleased, and all that the king did seemed good in the sight of all the people.

37 And all the people, and all Israel understood that day, that it was not the king's doing, that Abner, the son of Ner, was slain.

38 The king also said to his servants : Do you not know that a prince and a great man is slain this day in Israel ?

39 But I as yet am tender, though anointed king : and these men, the sons of Sarvia, are too hard for me : the Lord reward him that doeth evil according to his wickedness.

2 Now the son of Saul had two men captains of his bands; the name of the one was Baana, and the name of the other Rechab, the sons of Remmon, a Berothite, of the children of Benjamin: for Beroth also was reckoned in Benjamin.

3 And the Berothites fled into Gethaim, and were sojourners there until that time.

4 And Jonathan, the son of Saul, had a son that was lame of his feet: for he was five years old, when the tidings came of Saul and Jonathan from Jezrahel. And his nurse took him up and fled: and as she made haste to flee, he fell and became lame: and his name was Miphiboseth.

5 And the sons of Remmon, the Berothite, Rechab and Baana, coming, went into the house of Isboseth in the heat of the day: and he was sleeping upon his bed at noon. And the door-keeper of the house, who was cleansing wheat, was fallen asleep.

6 And they entered into the house secretly, taking ears of corn; and Rechab, and Baana, his brother, stabbed him in the groin, and fled away.

7 For when they came into the house, he was sleeping upon his bed in a parlour; and they struck him and killed him: and taking away his head, they went off by the way of the wilderness, walking all night.

8 And they brought the head of Isboseth to David, to Hebron: and they said to the king: Behold the head of Isboseth, the son of Saul, thy enemy, who sought thy life: and the Lord hath revenged my lord the king this day of Saul, and of his seed.

David is anointed king of all Israel. He taketh Jerusalem, and dwelleth there. He defeateth the Philistines.

THEN all the tribes of Israel came to David, in Hebron, saying: *Behold we are thy bone and thy flesh.

2 Moreover yesterday also and the day before, when Saul was king over us, thou wast he that did lead out and bring in Israel: and the Lord said to thee: Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be prince over Israel.

3 The ancients also of Israel came to the king, to Hebron, and king David made a league with them in Hebron before the Lord: and they anointed David to be king over Israel.

4 David was thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years.

5 In Hebron he reigned over Juda seven years and six months: and in Jerusalem he reigned three and thirty years over all Israel and Juda.

6 And the king and all the men that were with him went to Jerusalem, to the Jebusites, the inhabitants of the land: and they said to David: Thou shalt not come in hither, unless thou take away the blind and the lame, that say David shall not come in hither.

7 But David took the castle of Sion: the same is the city of David.

Thus were God's promises sweetly fulfilled, and David obtained the quiet dominion over all Israel, excepting perhaps a few of the tribe of Benjamin, according to the Vulgate. 1 Par. xii. 29. 21 And they left there their idols: which David and his men took away.

22 And the Philistines came up again, and spread themselves in the valley of Raphaim.

23 And David consulted the Lord: Shall I go up against the Philistines, and wilt thou deliver them into my hands? He answered: Go not up against them, but fetch a compass behind them, and thou shalt come upon them over against the pear trees.

24 And when thou shalt hear the sound of one going in the tops of the pear trees, then shalt thou join battle: for then will the Lord go out before thy face, to strike the army of the Philistines.

Hugo of Vienna.—"The king promised to give the command of the army to the man who would pass through the cavities (φωρύγγων) below, and take the citadel." Josephus.—This reward is expressly mentioned in 1 Par. xi. 6, with the person who obtained it (S. Jer. Trad.); and it seems, after David, this ought to be inserted, "shall be the head and captain. And Joab, the son of Sarvia, went up first, and was made the general." H.—Hated. Heb. "that are hated by David's soul." Cajetan supposes that the Jebusites in the citadel are thus distinguished from those who dwelt peaceably in the lower town with the Israelites. C.—Proverb. Prot. insert, "He shall be head and captain. Wherefore they said, The blind . . . into the house." What is translated temple, may denote also "the house" of David, or "the place" where this provocation had been given. H.—Some think that the blind and the lame were excluded from the temple, or from David's palace. But we find that they had free access to the temple (Matt. xxi. 14; Acts iii. 2); and Miphiboseth sat at David's table, though he was lame. If the Jebusites be designated, they were already excluded from the temple, like other infidels of Chanaan. C.—Josephus (vii. 3) insinuates that "David drove them from Jerusalem," though we read of Areuna residing there. Chap. xxiv. 16. But he might be a proselyte before, and not dwell in the fort. The expression seems, however, to be proverbial, to signify any very difficult enterprise, which proves successful and contrary to expectation. H.—The Jebusites were thus derided (Sanctius) in their turn. T.—Whether Joab took this strong place by a subterraneous passage, (H.) or scaled the walls, and so got to the top, whence the water falls, as from a gutter (C.); it is certain that he displayed the utmost valour, and thus obtained the confirmation of his authority, which David would perhaps have willingly taken from him, (Salien,) if another had offered himself, and performed this hazardous enterprise. H.—He made a fair offer to all Israel, as they probably expected. Kennicott.

VER. 9. Inwards. He built or repaired the higher "city of David," beginning at Mello, to "fill up" the valley, which Solomon finished, and adorned with a palace. 3 Kings ix. 15; 4 Kings xii. 20. The place is probably called Asaramcl. 1 Mac. xiv. 27. C.—Sept. and Josephus generally understand Mello to designate the citadel of Zion, or "a complete fortification," to defend the city. Instead of inwards, the Sept. have, "and his house." But ubithe means, "and to the house," temple, or fort, whence he begun the enclosure, so as to make a complete communication. Ken.—This city became "the most famous in all the East." Plin. v. 14.—"Walls, built in a crooked manner, according to the rules of art, enclosed two hills, immensely high." Tacit. Hist. 5.—These hills were multiplied on account of their different summits, so that Josephus speaks of five hills. The palace of David stood on Zion, and the temple on Moria, which was a part of it still more elevated, towards the east. The other hill is often called Acra by Josephus, and lay southward of Zion. Here the ancient town of Jebus was built. C.—We read of ten gates, and of four towers, belonging to this city. It was not well supplied with water, and what it had was brackish. The walls seem never to have exceeded four and a half miles; now they are only three, and include Mount Calvary, which was formerly no part of the city. H.

VER. 17. Seek, or attack David. He went out to meet them. Par. But receiving an order not to join battle as yet, retired to Odollam, (chap. xxiii. 13; 1 Par. xi. 15. C.) a strong hold, with which he was perfectly acquainted. H.

VER. 18. Raphaim. Sept. "of Titans," (C.) or giants who had dwelt there. M.—It lay to the west (M.) or south of Jerusalem, and extended as far as Bethlehem. David was still more to the south, (C.) so that he seemed to be cut off from his capital. But it was secure enough. H.—On this occasion three of his brave men went through the midst of the enemies' ranks, to fetch water from the spring of Bethlechem. Chap. xxiii. 16.

VER. 21. Away, and burnt. Par. The ark had on the contrary proved fatal to the gods, and to the people of the Philistines; who might hence perceive the difference there was between the true God and their false gods.

VER. 23. Shall, &c. This consultation is omitted in Heb. C.—Prot. "and when David inquired of the Lord, he said, Thou shalt not," &c. Sept. "and David," &c. H.—Trees. Heb. Bochim. Sept. "of lamentation." Judg. ii. 1.

VER. 24. Trees. Many translate the Heb. "mulberry trees," or leave the original word, bocaim, "the heights of Bochim." Sept. seem to give a double version: "the sound of the agitation (or Alex. "shutting up," (H.) as with an army on all sides) of the woods, of the lamentation." M.

VER. 25. Gabaa, which some would understand of "the hill" of Bochim. C.—But in Sept. (Alex.) and in Par. we read Gabaon, a city near the birth-place of Saul. H.—David pursued the enemy by Gabaa, and took from them all the cities of which they had taken possession after their victory. C.—Gezer was in the tribe of Ephraim, (M.) on the confines of the Philistines. C.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Again, after he had been anointed. David consulted his officers, &c., (1 Par. xiii. 1,) and called a numerous assembly of the priests and people to meet him at Cariathiarim.—Thousand, in arms, to protect the rest, (C.) who might probably amount to 300,000. H.—This number Capel and Grotius would substitute for the one here mentioned. Some copies of the Sept read 70,000. In the former assembly there were 340,000, or 359,000, (C.) or 60,900 Chap. v. 1. H.

that were with him of the men of Juda, to fetch the ark of God, upon which the name of the Lord of hosts is invoked, who sitteth over it between the Cherubims.

3 And they laid the ark of God upon a new cart: and took it out of the house of Abinadab, who was in Gabaa; and Oza, and Ahio, the sons of Abinadab, drove the new cart.

4 *And when they had taken it out of the house of Abinadab, who was in Gabaa, Ahio, having care of the ark of God, went before the ark.

5 But David and all Israel played before the Lord on all manner of instruments made of wood, on harps, and lutes, and timbrels, and cornets, and cymbals.

6 And when they came to the floor of Nachon, Oza put forth his hand to the ark of God, and took hold of it: because the oxen kicked, and made it lean aside.

7 And the indignation of the Lord was enkindled against Oza, and he struck him for his rashness: and he died there before the ark of God.

8 ^bAnd David was grieved because the Lord had struck Oza, and the name of that place was called: The striking of Oza, to this day.

9 And David was afraid of the Lord that day, saying: How shall the ark of the Lord come to me?

10 And he would not have the ark of the Lord brought in to himself into the city of David: but he caused it to be carried into the house of Obedom, the Gethite.

11 And the ark of the Lord abode in the house of Obedom, the Gethite, three months: and the Lord blessed Obedom, and all his household.

12 *And it was told king David, that the Lord had blessed Obedom, and all that he had, because of the ark of God. So David went, and brought away the ark of God out of the house of Obedom, into the city of David, with joy. And there were with David seven choirs, and calves for victims.

13 ^dAnd when they that carried the ark of the Lord had gone six paces, he sacrificed an ox and a ram:

14 And David danced with all his might before the Lord: and David was girded with a linen ephod.

* 1 Kings vii. 1.—^b 1 Par. xiii. 11.—^c 1 Par. xv. 25.

VER. 2. Juda. But why are not the other tribes mentioned? and whither did they go? We should probably translate, "from the city of Baalim, in Juda;" which is another name of Cariathiarim, as the Par. intimate, ver. 6. See Jos. xv. 96, 0.—Invoked; or which is called "the ark of the Lord."

VER. 3. Cart, out of respect, as the Philistines had done, 1 Kings vi. 7. But God had ordered the Levites to carry it themselves, and the neglect here proved so dreadful; for which reason David required the priests to attend when he removed the ark from the house of Obedom, 1 Par. xv. 12.—Gabaa means "the hill of Cariathiarim," where the ark had been in the house of Abinadab from the time of its being restored back by the Philistines. Ch.

VER. 6. Nachon. 1 Par. Chidon. Heb. may be rendered, "prepared;" (Chal.) as they were almost arrived at the end (C.) of the procession.—His hand, is wanting in Heb. Kennicott.—Kicked. Prot. "shook it." H.

VER. 7. Rashness. Heb. ssol, means also "error, ignorance," &c. Syr. and Arab. better, "because he put forth his hand." Ken.—Oza had touched the ark uncovered, (Serarius,) showing too little confidence in God, as if he could not have hindered it from falling. T.—It is not certain that he was a Levite; and the privilege belonged to the sons of Caath, who could claim this honour only after the ark had been folded up with three covers. Moreover, the priests seem to have been always selected to carry the ark after they came into the promised land, ver. 3; 1 Kings iv. 4, &c. It is hoped that the fault of Oza would be expiated by his sudden death, (C.) as his intention was laudable. T.—But God would teach his ministers with what caution they were to treat sacred things, (C.) and how exactly all his injunctions were to be observed. H.

VER. 10. Gethite, a native of Geth-remmon, a Levitical city (Jos. xxi. 24); or he might have been born at Geth (C.); or his father might have resided there a long time, (Serar. T.) unless he was there with David. Salien.—He was a Levite, 1 Par. xv. 12, and xvi. 5, and xxvi. 4. C.

15 And David and all the house of Israel brought the ark of the covenant of the Lord with joyful shouting, and with sound of trumpet.

16 And when the ark of the Lord was come into the city of David, Michol, the daughter of Saul, looking out through a window, saw king David leaping and dancing before the Lord: and she despised him in her heart.

17 And they brought the ark of the Lord, and set it in its place in the midst of the tabernacle, which David had pitched for it: and David offered holocausts, and peace offerings before the Lord.

18 And when he had made an end of offering holocausts and peace-offerings, he blessed the people in the name of the Lord of hosts.

19 And he distributed to all the multitude of Israel, both men and women, to every one, a cake of bread, and a piece of roasted beef, and fine flour fried with oil: and all the people departed, every one to his house.

20 And David returned to bless his own house: and Michol, the daughter of Saul, coming out to meet David, said: How glorious was the king of Israel to-day, who uncovered himself before the handmaids of his servants, and was undressed, as if one of the vain fellows should strip himself.

21 And David said to Michol: Before the Lord, who chose me rather than thy father, and than all his house, and commanded me to be ruler over the people of the Lord in Israel, 22 I will both play, and make myself meaner than I have done: and I will be little in my own eyes: and with the handmaids, of whom thou speakest, I shall appear more glorious.

23 Therefore Michol, the daughter of Saul, had no child to the day of her death.

David's purpose to build a temple is rewarded with the promise of great blessings in his seed: His prayer and thanksgiving.

AND *it came to pass when the king sat in his house, and the Lord had given him rest, on every side, from all his enemies, ^d 1 Par. xv. 26.—A. M. 2960, A. C. 1044.

VER. 12. Choirs. Or companies of musicians. Ch.—This sentence is not found in Heb. nor in S. Jerom's version. C.—The Vat. and Alex. Sept. have, "David brought the ark of the Lord from the house of Obeddara, into the city of David, with joy; (13) and there were seven choirs with him, taking up the ark, and the sacrifice, a calf and lambs; (14) and David played on tuneful organs before the Lord; and David had on a beautiful stole." H.

VER. 13. Paces. So altars of turf (Grot.) were erected at this distance from each other, on each side of the road.

VER. 14. Ephod, which ordinarily was the habit of priests. But no law restrained others from using it, (C.) particularly on sacred occasions; as we often see laics in a surplice, when they have to sing Church music, &c. M.—David had also on a cloak of byssus (Paral.); and still Michol speaks as if he had been uncovered; because in this solemn ceremony he was inspired to divest himself of his royal robes, and to act with a degree of enthusiasm (H.); which would not have been otherwise becoming in a king. C.

VER. 16. Leaping. Sept. "beating" musical instruments. . . she counted him as nothing, &c. H.

VER. 18. Blessed. Wishing all sorts of happiness. Only priests and kings perform this function publicly. 3 Kings vii. 55.

VER. 19. Cake, made very thin, with a mixture of oil.—Beef, sufficient for a meal.—Oil. This was much esteemed in those days. Many would translate the Heb. "a bottle of wine."

VER. 20. Fellows. Sept. "dancers." Michol exaggerates, as David had been guilty of no indiscretion, ver. 14. C.—S. Gregory (Mor. xxvii. 27) styles her "insane." M.

VER. 22. Eyes. Humility in a king is truly noble.—Glorious. He accepts the compliment of Michol, though she had spoken ironically. H.

VER. 23. Death. Thus was she punished. The five sons who are attributed

2 He said to Nathan, the prophet: "Dost thou see that I dwell in a house of cedar, and the ark of God is lodged within skins?"

3 And Nathan said to the king: Go, do all that is in thy heart: because the Lord is with thee.

4 But it came to pass that night, that the word of the Lord came to Nathan, saying:

5 Go, and say to my servant David: Thus saith the Lord: Shalt thou build me a house to dwell in?

6 Whereas I have not dwelt in a house from the day that I brought the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt, even to this day: but have walked in a tabernacle, and in a tent.

7 In all the places that I have gone through with all the children of Israel, did I ever speak a word to any one of the tribes of Israel, whom I commanded to feed my people Israel, saying: Why have you not built me a house of cedar?

8 And now thus shalt thou speak to my servant David: Thus saith the Lord of hosts: "I took thee out of the pastures from following the sheep, to be ruler over my people Israel:

9 And I have been with thee wheresoever thou hast walked, and have slain all thy enemies from before thy face: and I have made thee a great name, like unto the name of the great ones that are on the earth.

10 And I will appoint a place for my people Israel, and I will plant them, and they shall dwell therein, and shall be disturbed no more: neither shall the children of iniquity afflict them any more, as they did before, 11 From the day that I appointed judges over my people Israel: and I will give thee rest from all thy enemies. And the Lord foretelleth to thee, that the Lord will make thee a house.

12 "And when thy days shall be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom.

13 "He shall build a house to my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom for ever.

to her, (chap. xxi. 8.) were only adopted; or perhaps we ought to read Morob instead of Michol (C.); as the latter had been connected with Phaltiel, and not with Adriel, who was the former's husband. H.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Enemies, before he had made war upon the surrounding nations. 1 Par. xviii. 1.

VER. 2. Nathan. An admirable courtier, (Grot.) and a great saint. Eccli. xlvii. He was neither too rough, nor too complaisant.—Skins. The outer veils of the tabernacle were made of skins, as other tents generally were. C.—Heb. and Chal. "of curtains."

VER. 3. Thee. David did not, perhaps, consult him as a prophet; and Nathan thought that the proposal was so just that it might be safely carried into effect. C.—God afterwards sent the same Nathan to rectify his former decision, that he might not pass sentence, in future, without consulting him. M.

VER. 10. Before, provided they be faithful. These promises are conditional.

VER. 11. House, or give thee children, who shall hold the sceptre. M.

VER. 12. I will establish his kingdom. This prophecy partly relateth to Solomon; but much more to Christ, who is called the Son of David in Scripture, and the builder of the true temple, which is the Church, his everlasting kingdom, which shall never fail, nor be cast off for any iniquity of his children. Ch.—God passes over all the children whom David had already, 3 Kings ii. 15. The temporal kingdom was enjoyed by David's posterity for a long time, sufficient to verify the expression for ever, as it is often used in Scripture. C.—But the spiritual kingdom of the Messiah will last till the end of time, and be perfected in eternity. H.—In these predictions we must always distinguish the type from the reality. C.

VER. 16. Faithful; or continue a long time. M. 3 Kings xi. 38.—Where is now the house of David? or how is this accomplished, except in the Church?—

14 "I will be to him a father, and he shall be to me a son: and if he commit any iniquity, I will correct him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men.

15 "But my mercy I will not take away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I removed from before my face

16 And thy house shall be faithful, and thy kingdom for ever before thy face, "and thy throne shall be firm for ever.

17 According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak to David.

18 And David went in, and sat before the Lord, and said: Who am I, O Lord God, and what is my house, that thou hast brought me thus far?

19 But yet this hath seemed little in thy sight, O Lord God, unless thou didst also speak of the house of thy servant for a long time to come; for this is the law of Adam, O Lord God.

20 And what can David say more unto thee? for thou knowest thy servant, O Lord God.

21 For thy word's sake, and according to thy own heart, thou hast done all these great things, so that thou wouldst make it known to thy servant.

22 Therefore thou art magnified, O Lord God, because there is none like to thee, neither is there any God besides thee, in all the things that we have heard with our ears.

23 And what nation is there upon earth, as thy people Israel, whom God went to redeem for a people to himself, and to make him a name, and to do for them great and terrible things, upon the earth, before the face of thy people, whom thou redeemedst to thyself out of Egypt, from the nations and their gods?

24 For thou hast confirmed to thyself thy people Israel, to be an everlasting people: and thou, O Lord God, art become their God.

25 And now, O Lord God, raise up for ever the word that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant, and concerning his house: and do as thou hast spoken,

26 That thy name may be magnified for ever, and it

Thy face. Sept. "before me," which is conformable to Psal. lxxxviii. 38. David saw Solomon on the throne, and beheld the Messiah in spirit. C.

VER. 18. Lord. "More in soul than by this posture of the body, remaining quiet in meditation and prayer." Cajet.—The Heb. expression may denote no more than that David continued for a long time in fervent prayer; Josephus says, prostrate on the ground before the ark. It is not so much the posture of the body, as the fervour of the soul, which God regards. See S. Aug. ad Simp. 2, q. 4. C.

VER. 19. God. Thus man wishes to be treated. This maxim prevails universally. People seek for their own and their children's happiness; a favour which thou hast graciously promised unto me. C.—Thus immortality, and all happiness, were proposed unto the first man. M.—Some use an interrogation; "Is this the law of Adam?" C.—Prot. "manner of man." Can this felicity attend a man in his fallen state? Does the greatest friend treat his companion with so much condescension and regard? H.—In 1 Par. xvii. 17, it is thus expressed, and hast made me remarkable above all men. O Lord God. Osiander translates, "Behold the law of man, of the Lord God." I now discern the mysterious union of the Godhead with our humanity, in the person of the Son. C.—David is full of admiration that God should treat a weak mortal in such a manner. D.

VER. 21. Word's sake. Some copies (H.) of the Sept. read "servant's sake," as 1 Par. xvii. C.

VER. 23. A name. So that all might praise God for the favours which he had bestowed upon his people, (H.) and admire his power and glory.—Gods, whom thou didst cast out of Chanaan. Par. C.—From, is not expressed in the Vulg. or Heb., though Prot. also supply it. H.—Some explain Elohim, "gods," of the chief men of the Hebrew nation. The power of the idols was overthrown (Num. xxxiii. 4); and the Israelites were rescued both from oppression and from the service of false gods. Eze. xvi. C.

may be said: The Lord of hosts is God over Israel. And let the house of thy servant, David, be established before the Lord.

27 Because thou, O Lord of hosts, God of Israel, hast revealed to the ear of thy servant, saying: I will build thee a house: therefore hath thy servant found in his heart to pray this prayer to thee.

28 And now, O Lord God, thou art God. and thy words shall be true: for thou hast spoken to thy servant these good things.

29 And now begin, and bless the house of thy servant, that it may endure for ever before thee: because thou, O Lord God, hast spoken it, and with thy blessing let the house of thy servant be blessed for ever.

CHAP. VIII.

David's victories, and his chief officers.

AND it came to pass after this, that David defeated the Philistines, and brought them down, "and David took the bridle of tribute out of the hand of the Philistines.

2 "And he defeated Moab, and measured them with a line, casting them down to the earth: and he measured with two lines, one to put to death, and one to save alive: and Moab was made to serve David under tribute.

3 David defeated also Adarezer, the son of Rohob, king of Soba, when he went to extend his dominion over the river^c Euphrates.

4 And David took from him a thousand and seven hundred horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen, and houghed all the chariot horses: and only reserved of them for one hundred chariots.

5 And the Syrians of Damascus came to succour Adarezer, the king of Soba: and David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men.

* 1 Par. xviii. 1.—A. M. 2960.

6 And David put garrisons in Syria of Damasens: and Syria served David under tribute: and the Lord preserved David in all his enterprises, whithersoever he went.

7 And David took the arms of gold, which the servants of Adarezer wore, and brought them to Jerusalem.

8 And out of Bete, and out of Beroth, cities of Adarezer, king David took an exceeding great quantity of brass.

9 And Thou, the king of Emath, heard that David had defeated all the forces of Adarezer.

10 And Thou sent Joram, his son, to king David, to salute him, and to congratulate with him, and to return him thanks; because he had fought against Adarezer, and had defeated him. For Thou was an enemy to Adarezer, and in his hand were vessels of gold, and vessels of silver, and vessels of brass.

11 And king David dedicated them to the Lord, together with the silver and gold that he had dedicated of all the nations which he had subdued:

12 Of Syria, and of Moab, and of the children of Ammon, and of the Philistines, and of Amalec, and of the spoils of Adarezer, the son of Rohob, king of Soba.

13 David also made himself a name, when he returned after taking Syria, in the valley of the salt-pits, killing eighteen thousand:

14 And he put guards in Edom, and placed there a garrison: and all Edom was made to serve David: and the Lord preserved David in all enterprises he went about.

15 And David reigned over all Israel: and David did judgment and justice to all his people.

16 And Joab, the son of Sarvia, was over the army: and Josaphat, the son of Ahilud, was recorder:

17 And Sadoc, the son of Achitob, and Achimelech

VER. 29. Begin. Heb. "please, or deign to bless." Sept. and Jonathan, "begin." C.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Tribute. Aquila, and probably S. Jerom, translated, "cubit." Others suppose that Amma, or Meteg-ama, is some unknown place, which David wrested from the hands of the Philistines. It is hardly probable that the Israelites would have paid the latter tribute till the twentieth year of his reign, (C.) or even till the twelfth. Salien.—He might now force them to pay tribute. S. Jerom, &c. H.

VER. 2. Earth, like criminals condemned to die. Theodoret.—Some of them he chose to spare, and made tributary, having levelled the strong places with the ground. Den. the Carthusian.—Sept. intimate that half were destroyed. C.—But the Heb. rather implies that the greatest part was saved, "a full cord to save alive" (M.); unless there were three lots, and only one of them, larger indeed than the rest, spared. H.—Tribute. Heb. "brought gifts," which is a softer term. The Moabites were thus punished for former, and probably for some recent offences, H.

VER. 3. Adarezer. He is styled Adarezer in Heb., and this seems to have been his true name, though it is written Adarezer in Paral. Adad, or "the sun," was the chief idol of Syria, and the kings inserted the name with their own; as Benadad did.—Euphrates, which had been promised by God. Gen. xv. 18; Num. xxiv. 17. C.

VER. 4. A thousand. Prot. supply chariots, (H.) after the Sept. and 1 Par., (xviii. 4), which have 7000 horsemen. Perhaps the numbers were expressed by single letters; and the Heb. final n. (700,) has been mistaken for z, (7000,) both here and ehap. x. 18. M.—Houghed. Aquila, "destroyed." He rendered them unfit for war, as Josue had done, (Jos. xi. 6,) supposing that this was the import of the decree, forbidding many horses to be kept. Deut. xvii. 16.—Horses is not expressed in Heb., though the Prot. supply the word; as also for. We should translate lit. "He left out of them 100 chariots" (H.); as we read elsewhere that Adarezer had 1000. M.—But this expression being unintelligible, no less than "he houghed all the chariots," as the text stands at present in the original, may lead us to suspect that this verse has been inaccurately printed. Sept. "David paralysed (or rendered useless) all the chariots; and 100 chariots were reserved for himself out of them." Josephus says the rest of the 1000 chariots were burnt, 9000 horse slain, and 20,000 foot. H.

VER. 5. Men. As Adarezer had brought upon himself the arms of David, 334 perhaps by attempting to succour the Moabites, as he afterwards did the children of Ammon (ehap. x.); so the king of Damascus was ruined by coming too late to his assistance. This king may be the Adad mentioned by Nicolaus: B. iv. Salien, A. 2993, the fourteenth year of David. See ver. 1, and 3.

The Sept. have read Edom, or Idumea, as the two names have often been confounded, on account of the similarity of the letters. The following verse seems favourable to this reading, as well as the title of the Psal. lix.; and 1 Par. xviii. 12, says, Abisai, a Gileadite of the Edomites, in the valley of the salt-pits, 18,000. It is probable that David was present. This Idumea was on the east of the Dead Sea, and had Bosra for its capital. C.

CHAP. IX.

David's kindness to Miphiboseth for the sake of his father Jonathan.

AND David said: Is there any one, think you, left of the house of Saul, that I may show kindness to him for Jonathan's sake?

2 Now there was of the house of Saul, a servant named Siba: and when the king had called him to him, he said to him: Art thou Siba? And he answered: I am Siba, thy servant.

3 And the king said: Is there any one left of the house of Saul, that I may show the mercy of God unto him? And Siba said to the king: There is a son of Jonathan left, who is lame of his feet.

4 Where is he? said he. And Siba said to the king: Behold he is in the house of Machir, the son of Ammiei, in Lodabar.

5 Then king David sent, and brought him out of the house of Machir, the son of Ammiei, of Lodabar.

6 And when Miphiboseth, the son of Jonathan, the son of Saul, was come to David, he fell on his face and worshipped. And David said: Miphiboseth? And he answered: Behold thy servant.

7 And David said to him: Fear not, for I will surely show thee mercy for Jonathan thy father's sake, and I will restore the lands of Saul, thy father, and thou shalt eat bread at my table always.

8 He bowed down to him, and said: Who am I, thy servant, that thou shouldst look upon such a dead dog as I am?

9 Then the king called Siba, the servant of Saul, and said to him: All that belonged to Saul, and all his house, I have given to thy master's son.

10 Thou therefore, and thy sons, and thy servants, shall till the land for him: and thou shalt bring in food for thy master's son, that he may be maintained: and families of Saul and of David, two high priests were acknowledged in their respective dominions. Sadoc was also permitted to officiate at Gabaon during the reign of David; and, as Abiathar took part against Solomon, he was invested with the whole authority, and thus were accomplished the predictions made to Phinees and to Heli Num. xxv. 12; 1 Kings ii. 35. C.—Yet Salien considers Abiathar as the sole pontiff, from the time that his father was murdered by Saul. Sadoc, in the mean while, was his arch-priest or delegate at Gabaon (11.); though Abulensis and Josephus acknowledge both as high priests, (1 Par. xxiv. 3.) officiating by turns. CHAP. IX. VER. 1. Saul. David was solicitous only about the descendants of Jonathan, who was the eldest son. The rest he afterwards gave up to be crucified, while he ordered the patrimony of Saul to be given to Miphiboseth, who was now about twenty years old. Salien, A. C. 1058.

Miphiboseth, the son of thy master, shall always eat bread at my table. And Siba had fifteen sons and twenty servants.

12 And Miphiboseth had a young son, whose name was Micha: and all the kindred of the house of Siba served Miphiboseth.

13 But Miphiboseth dwelt in Jerusalem: because he ate always of the king's table: and he was lame of both feet.

CHAP. X.

The Ammonites shamefully abuse the ambassadors of David: they hire the Syrians to their assistance: but are overthrown with their allies.

AND "it came to pass after this, that the king of the children of Ammon died, and Hanon, his son, reigned in his stead.

2 And David said: "I will show kindness to Hanon, the son of Naas, as his father showed kindness to me. So David sent his servants to comfort him for the death of his father. But when the servants of David were come into the land of the children of Ammon,

3 The princes of the children of Ammon said to Hanon, their lord: Thinkest thou that for the honour of thy father, David hath sent comforters to thee, and hath not David rather sent his servants to thee to search, and spy into the city, and overthrow it?

4 Wherefore Hanon took the servants of David, and shaved off the one half of their beards, and cut away half of their garments, even to the buttocks, and sent them away.

5 When this was told David, he sent to meet them: for the men were sadly put to confusion, and David commanded them, saying: Stay at Jericho, till your beards be grown, and then return.

6 And the children of Ammon seeing that they had done an injury to David, sent and hired the Syrians of Rohob, and the Syrians of Soba, twenty thousand foot-

If we add the seven years and a half of his uncle's reign, and suppose that David would take this notice of him as soon as he had it in his power, after the taking of Jerusalem, we may conclude that he was about thirteen years old when he was presented to the king, and behaved with the most engaging modesty and respect. CHAP. X. VER. 2. Naas, whom Saul had defeated, and who on that account is supposed to have received his rival more willingly, (C.) when he had retreated into the country of Moab. 1 Kings xxii. 3. VER. 4. Away, having forced them as it were to go into mourning for the deceased king. These nations adopted the same customs as the Hebrews: they cut their hair and rent their garments to express their deep affliction. Isa. xv. 2. The Arabs would deem it a great insult, and a piece of irreligion, to shave their beard. Darvieux 7, p. 175. Plutarch (Agesil.) observes, that the Laedæmonians obliged those who acted in a cowardly manner in war to wear only one whisker. The garments (Aquila says, "the tunic," Sept. "the cloak, or mandua," which is a military garment used in Persia) were cut (C.) for the same purpose, like our spencers, (H.) that the ambassadors might be exposed to derision.

VER. 6. Rohob, the capital, between Libanus and Antilibanus.—Soba was subject to Adarezer. Chap. viii. 3.—Maacha, at the foot of Hermon.—Istob (Heb. ais-tub) signifies, the man, or prince, or "the master of Tob," (C.) where Jephthe lived. Judg. xi. 5. D. Salien.—Josephus thinks that Isrob is the name of a fourth king, who, together with the king of Micha, brought 22,000 into the men, and of the king of Maacha a thousand men, and of stob twelve thousand men.

7 And when David heard this, he sent Joab, and the whole army of warriors.

8 And the children of Ammon came out, and set their men in array at the entering in of the gate: but the Syrians of Soba, and of Rohob, and of Istob, and of Maacha, were by themselves in the field.

9 Then Joab, seeing that the battle was prepared against him, both before and behind, chose of all the choice men of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians:

10 And the rest of the people he delivered to Abisai, his brother, who set them in array against the children of Ammon.

11 And Joab said: If the Syrians are too strong for me, then thou shalt help me: but if the children of Ammon are too strong for thee, then I will help thee.

12 Be of good courage, and let us fight for our people, and for the city of our God: and the Lord will do what is good in his sight.

13 And Joab, and the people that were with him, began to fight against the Syrians: and they immediately fled before him.

14 And the children of Ammon seeing that the Syrians were fled, they fled also before Abisai, and entered into the city: and Joab returned from the children of Ammon, and came to Jerusalem.

15 Then the Syrians, seeing that they had fallen before Israel, gathered themselves together.

16 And Adarezer sent and fetched the Syrians, that were beyond the river, and brought over their army: and Sobach, the captain of the host of Adarezer, was their general.

17 And when this was told David, he gathered all Israel together, and passed over the Jordan, and came to Helam: and the Syrians set themselves in array against David, and fought against him.

18 And the Syrians fled before Israel, and David slew of the Syrians the men of seven hundred chariots, and forty thousand horsemen: and smote Sobach, the captain of the army: who presently died.

19 And all the kings that were auxiliaries of Adarezer, seeing themselves overcome by Israel, were afraid, and fled away, eight and fifty thousand men, before Israel. And they made peace with Israel, and served them: and the Syrians were afraid to help the children of Ammon any more.

CHAP. XI.

David falleth into the crime of adultery with Bethsabee: and not finding other means to conceal it, causeth her husband, Urias, to be slain: then marrieth her, and she beareth him a son.

AND^b it came to pass at the return of the year, at the time when kings go forth to war, that David sent Joab, and his servants with him, and all Israel, and they ravaged the country of the children of Ammon, and besieged Rabba: but David remained in Jerusalem.

2 In the mean time it happened that David arose from his bed after noon, and walked upon the roof of the king's house: and he saw from the roof of his house, a woman washing herself, over against him: and the woman was very beautiful.

3 And the king sent, and inquired who the woman was. And it was told him, that she was Bethsabee, the daughter of Eliam, the wife of Urias, the Hethite.

4 And David sent messengers, and took her, and she came in to him, and he slept with her: and presently she was purified from her uncleanness:

5 And she returned to her house, having conceived. And she sent and told David, and said: I have conceived.

6 And David sent to Joab, saying: Send me Urias, the Hethite. And Joab sent Urias to David.

7 And Urias came to David. And David asked how Joab did, and the people, and how the war was carried on.

8 And David said to Urias: Go into thy house, and wash thy feet. And Urias went out from the king's house, and there went out after him a mess of meat from the king.

9 But Urias slept before the gate of the king's house, with the other servants of his lord, and went not down to his own house.

VER. 7. Warriors. The outrage offered to the ambassadors was a sufficient reason. The king of Ammon might have refused to receive them; but he could not, with any propriety, treat them with scorn. CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Year. Heb. "at the end of the year," (Chal., Syr.,) which may be explained either of the year after the preceding engagement, or at the end of the civil year, in the autumnal equinox, (C.) or of the sacred year, which begins in the spring, (H.) when kings more commonly go to battle, about the month of March. M.—Ammon. They had not been sufficiently chastised, as they had saved themselves within their strong cities. They had added to their other crimes that of stirring up the Syrians against David. VER. 2. Noon. He had been reposing, according to custom. Chap. iv. 7. C.—But the devil was not idle. He was meditating a temptation and crime, which involved a great part of the remainder of David's life in misery. H.—He had reigned eighteen years, and lived forty-eight, almost without blame. Salien, A 2908.—His house, as the Heb. explains it. The Vulg. might insinuate that the woman was upon "the roof of her house." But she was probably in her garden, as the Jews have their baths in the open air. C.

VER. 3. Eliam. By a transposition of letters he is called Ammiel in 1 Par. iii. 5. Both words signify "my people is God's." This son of Achitophel (chap. xxiii. 34) was one of David's valiant men, as well as Urias, who is styled the Hethite, being born at Eth (S. Jer. Salien); or on account of his extraction, or because he or his ancestors (H.) had performed some great exploit against that nation; as Germanicus, Africanus, &c. received those titles among the Romans for conquering the Germans, &c. C.—Eth was a place near Hebron. Adrie. 128. M. H. Kennic.

VER. 4. Purified. Lit. "sanctified." Heb. and Sept. "for she was," &c. H.

VER. 8. Feet. As they did not wear stockings, this practice was very common after a journey. C.

10 And it was told David by some that said : Urias went not to his house. And David said to Urias : Didst thou not come from thy journey ? why didst thou not go down to thy house ?

11 And Urias said to David : The ark of God, and Israel, and Juda dwell in tents, and my lord Joab, and the servants of my lord, abide upon the face of the earth : and shall I go into my house, to eat and to drink, and to sleep with my wife ? by thy welfare, and by the welfare of thy soul, I will not do this thing.

12 Then David said to Urias : Tarry here to-day also, and to-morrow I will send thee away. Urias tarried in Jerusalem that day and the next.

13 And David called him to eat and to drink before him, and he made him drunk : and he went out in the evening, and slept on his couch, with the servants of his lord, and went not down into his house.

14 And when the morning was come, David wrote a letter to Joab : and sent it by the hand of Urias, 15 Writing in the letter : Set ye Urias in the front of the battle, where the fight is hottest : and leave ye him, that he may be wounded, and die.

16 Wherefore, as Joab was besieging the city, he put Urias in the place where he knew the bravest men were.

17 And the men coming out of the city, fought against Joab, and there fell some of the people of the servants of David, and Urias, the Hethite, was killed also.

18 Then Joab sent, and told David all things concerning the battle.

19 And he charged the messenger, saying : When thou hast told all the words of the battle to the king, 20 If thou see him to be angry, and he shall say : Why did you approach so near to the wall to fight ? knew you not that many darts are thrown from above, off the wall ?

21 Who killed Abimelech, the son of Jerobaal ? * did not a woman cast a piece of a millstone upon him from the wall, and slew him in Thebes ? Why did you go near the wall ? Thou shalt say : Thy servant Urias, the Hethite, is also slain.

* Judg. ix. 53.

22 So the messenger departed, and came and told David all that Joab had commanded him.

23 And the messenger said to David : The men prevailed against us, and they came out to us into the field : and we vigorously charged and pursued them, even to the gate of the city.

24 And the archers shot their arrows at thy servants, from off the wall above : and some of the king's servants are slain, and thy servant Urias, the Hethite, is also dead.

25 And David said to the messenger : Thus shalt thou say to Joab : Let not this thing discourage thee, for various is the event of war : and sometimes one, sometimes another, is consumed by the sword : encourage thy warriors against the city, and exhort them, that thou mayst overthrow it.

26 And the wife of Urias heard that Urias, her husband, was dead, and she mourned for him.

27 And the mourning being over, David sent and brought her into his house, and she became his wife, and she bore him a son : and this thing which David had done, was displeasing to the Lord.

CHAP. XII.

Nathan's parable. David confesseth his sin, and is forgiven : yet so as to be sentenced to most severe temporal punishments. The death of the child. The birth of Solomon. The taking of Rabbath.

AND ^b the Lord sent Nathan to David : and when he was come to him, he said unto him : There were two men in one city, the one rich, and the other poor.

2 The rich man had exceeding many sheep, and oxen

3 But the poor man had nothing at all but one little ewe-lamb, which he had bought and nourished up, and which had grown up in his house, together with his children, eating of his bread, and drinking of his cup, and sleeping in his bosom : and it was unto him as a daughter.

4 And when a certain stranger was come to the rich man, he spared to take of his own sheep and oxen, to make a feast for that stranger, who was come to him ; but took the poor man's ewe, and dressed it for the man that was come to him.

VER. 11. Ark. Most people suppose that the ark and the priests were before Rabbah, as they seem to have been present in all expeditions of consequence. M. C.—But at any rate the ark was covered with skins or veils, even in the tabernacle at Gabaon, or at Sion. H.—Thing. He binds himself by an oath not to gratify his natural inclinations, that the king might desist from pressing him any further. Salien.—But David resolves to make him forget his oath during the moments of intoxication. The valour and temperance of Urias, and Divine Providence, render all his craft useless ; and a concatenation of crimes cannot hide the original offence. H.

VER. 13. Couch. It seems he was one of the guards. Josephus says he was Joab's armour-bearer, (Ant. vii. 7,) and one of David's heroes. Chap. xxiii. 39.

VER. 14. Morning of the fourth day, as Urias said three nights at Jerusalem. It is not clear that he was intoxicated the last of them. On that night David permitted him to act as he should think proper.

VER. 15. Die. We no longer behold the genius of that David who would not hurt his persecutor. What a change does a shameful passion introduce in the whole conduct of a man ! and how does one false step conduct from one abyss to another ! Proprium humani ingenii est odisse quem læscris. Tacit.—David could no longer bear the sight of a man whom he had injured so grievously. C.

VER. 17. Also. Hence David prays with reason ; Deliver me from blood (sanguinibus) of many slain. He was answerable for all. Cajetan.

VER. 21. Jerobaal ? Hebrews write Jeroboseth, to avoid the mention of Baal, as they also do with respect to the name of Isboseth, who was probably called Isbaal. C. See Judg. ix. 57.—Joab supposed that David might probably adduce this instance to show the danger of approaching too near the wall, as it had proved destructive to part of his army, and had been fatal to Abimelech. But it seems the messenger did not allow him to express any resentment before he told him the agreeable news, which he desired so much to hear, ver. 24. H.

VER. 26. For him. The mourning for the dead usually lasted seven days (Eccl. xxii.) ; and after that period David seems to have married Bethsabee. Abulen. q. 21.

VER. 27. Lord ; not that David had married the woman, but on account of his former conduct towards her and her husband. M.—The canon law forbids the marriages of those who have been accomplices in the death of their former partner. H.—In David's conduct we here behold a complication of the basest passions of lust and cruelty ; which make David neglect the sanctity of an oath, (ver. 11,) and attempt to ruin, by drunkenness, the soul of one to whom he was much indebted ; and, afterwards, to expose him to an untimely death, perhaps without repentance ; if indeed Urias exceeded the bounds of moderation. This however is not certain ; as the word drunk is often used to denote a degree of blameless conviviality. Gen. xliii. 34. Yet the design of David was equally criminal. How soon may the man according to God's own heart fall from his elevated station into the depth of the abyss ! Wherefore let him that thinketh himself to stand, take heed lest he fall. 1 Cor. x. 12. H.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Unto him, after the birth of the child. A whole year had nearly elapsed, and David continued blind and impenitent. The spirit of prophecy had left him ; and though he was clear-sighted and equitable enough to punish the faults of others, he could not discern his own picture till Nathan had removed the veil. The prophet acted with the utmost prudence, and did not condemn the king till he had pronounced sentence on himself. C.

VER. 4. To him. This wanton cruelty caused David to pronounce him deserving of death ; as simple theft was punished with only a four-fold restitution. Exod. xxii. 1. Judges sometimes diminish, and at other times increase, the 5 And David's anger being exceedingly kindled against that man, he said to Nathan: As the Lord liveth, the man that hath done this is a child of death.

6 He shall restore the ewe four-fold, because he did this thing, and had no pity.

7 And Nathan said to David: Thou art the man. Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel: I anointed thee king over Israel, and I delivered thee from the hand of Saul,

8 And gave thee thy master's house, and thy master's wives into thy bosom, and gave thee the house of Israel and Juda: and if these things be little, I shall add far greater things unto thee.

9 Why therefore hast thou despised the word of the Lord, to do evil in my sight? Thou hast killed Urias, the Hethite, with the sword, and hast taken his wife to be thy wife, and hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon.

10 Therefore, the sword shall never depart from thy house, because thou hast despised me, and hast taken the wife of Urias, the Hethite, to be thy wife.

11 Thus saith the Lord: Behold, I will raise up evil against thee out of thy own house, and I will take thy wives before thy eyes, and give them to thy neighbour, and he shall lie with thy wives in the sight of this sun.

12 For thou didst it secretly: but I will do this thing in the sight of all Israel, and in the sight of the sun.

13 And David said to Nathan: I have sinned against the Lord. And Nathan said to David: The Lord also hath taken away thy sin: thou shalt not die.

14 Nevertheless, because thou hast given occasion to the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme, for this thing, the child that is born to thee, shall surely die.

15 And Nathan returned to his house. The Lord also struck the child which the wife of Urias had borne to David, and his life was despaired of.

16 And David besought the Lord for the child: and David kept a fast, and going in by himself, lay upon the ground.

17 And the ancients of his house came to make him rise from the ground: but he would not, neither did he eat meat with them.

18 And it came to pass on the seventh day that the child died: and the servants of David feared to tell him that the child was dead. For they said: Behold, when the child was yet alive, we spoke to him, and he would not hearken to our voice: how much more will he afflict himself, if we tell him that the child is dead?

19 But when David saw his servants whispering, he understood that the child was dead: and he said to his servants: Is the child dead? They answered him: He is dead.

20 Then David arose from the ground, and washed and anointed himself: and when he had changed his apparel, he went into the house of the Lord, and worshipped; and then he came into his own house, and he called for bread, and ate.

21 And his servants said to him: What thing is this that thou hast done? thou didst fast and weep for the child, while it was alive: but after the child was dead, thou didst rise up and eat bread.

22 And he said: While the child was yet alive, I fasted and wept for him: for I said: Who knoweth whether the Lord may not give him to me, and the child may live?

23 But now that he is dead, why should I fast? Shall I be able to bring him back any more? I shall go to him rather: but he shall not return to me.

24 And David comforted Bethsabee, his wife, and went in unto her, and slept with her: and she bore a son, and he called his name Solomon, and the Lord loved him.

25 And he sent, by the hand of Nathan, the prophet, and called his name Amiah to the Lord, because the Lord loved him.

26 And Joab fought against Rabbath, of the children of Ammon, and laid close siege to the royal city.

27 And Joab sent messengers to David, saying: I have fought against Rabbath, and the city of waters is about to be taken.

VER. 11. I will raise, &c. All these evils, inasmuch as they were punishments, came upon David by a just judgment of God for his sin; and therefore God says, I will raise, &c. But inasmuch as they were sins, on the part of Absalom and his associates, God was not the author of them, but only permitted them. VER. 14. Occasion. Lit. "made" almost, in the same sense, as God threatened to do what was effected by Absalom, ver. 12. David did not cooperate with the malice of infidels; but he was responsible for it: inasmuch as he had committed an unlawful action, which gave them occasion to blaspheme God, as if he had not been able to foresee this scandalous transaction. Thus God and religion are often vilified on account of the misconduct of those who have the happiness to be well informed, but do not live up to their profession: but this mode of argumentation is very fallacious and uncandid. It ought, however, to be a caution to the servants of the true God never to do anything which may have such fatal consequences, and alienate the minds of weak men from the truth.—Die. 29 Then David gathered all the people together, and went out against Rabbath: and after fighting, he took it.

30 And he took the crown of their king from his head, the weight of which was a talent of gold, set with most precious stones; and it was put upon David's head, and the spoils of the city, which were very great, he carried away.

31 And bringing forth the people thereof, he sawed them, and drove over them chariots armed with iron: and divided them with knives, and made them pass through brick-kilns: so did he to all the cities of the children of Ammon. And David returned with all the army to Jerusalem.

Amnon ravisheth Thamar. For which Absalom killeth him, and flieth to Gessur.

AND ^ait came to pass after this, that Amnon, the son of David, loved the sister of Absalom, the son of David, who was very beautiful; and her name was Thamar.

2 And he was exceedingly fond of her, so that he fell sick for the love of her: for as she was a virgin, he thought it hard to do any thing dishonestly with her.

3 Now Amnon had a friend, named Jonadab, the son of Semmaa, the brother of David, a very wise man:

4 And he said to him: Why dost thou grow so lean from day to day, O son of the king? why dost thou not tell me the reason of it? And Amnon said to him: I am in love with Thamar, the sister of my brother Absalom.

5 And Jonadab said to him: Lie down upon thy bed, and feign thyself sick: and when thy father shall come to visit thee, say to him: Let my sister Thamar, I pray thee, come to me, to give me to eat, and to make me a mess, that I may eat it at her hand.

6 So Amnon lay down, and made as if he were sick: and when the king came to visit him, Amnon said to the king: I pray thee, let my sister Thamar come, and make in my sight two little messes, that I may eat at her hand.

was called the city of waters, from being encompassed with waters. Ch. See chap. v. 8.—The Heb. in the preceding verse seems to insinuate (H.) that "he had taken the royal city." But he was only on the point of doing it, or had, perhaps, made himself master of some part of it. Here the Heb. "I have taken," may be explained in the same sense, unless the city of waters were the lower part of Rabbath, lying on the Jaboc. Junius translates, "He cut off the waters, which entered the city;" and Josephus favours this explanation. It seems the siege lasted about two years. C.

VER. 28. Take it. The higher, and more impregnable part; which honour Joab reserved for David.

VER. 30. King. Heb. Melchom, "their king." Moloc, "king," or the chief idol of the Ammonites. It was forbidden to use the ornaments of the idols of Chanaan, but not of other nations. C.

VER. 31. Sawed. Heb. "he put them under saws, and under rollers of iron, and under knives," &c. H.—The Jews say that Isaias was killed by being sawed asunder; to which punishment St. Paul alludes. C.—Salien blames Joab for what may seem too cruel. But, though he was barbarous and vindictive, we need not condemn him on this occasion, no more than his master; as we are not to judge of former times by our own manners. H.—War was then carried on with great cruelty. C.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Thamar was born of Maacha, as well as Absalom.

VER. 3. A very wise man. That is, a crafty and subtle man: for the coun-

7 Then David sent home to Thamar, saying: Come to the house of thy brother Amnon, and make him a mess.

8 And Thamar came to the house of Amnon, her brother: but he was laid down: and she took meal and tempered it: and dissolving it in his sight, she made little messes.

9 And taking what she had boiled, she poured it out, and set it before him, but he would not eat: and Amnon said: Put out all persons from me. And when they had put all persons out,

10 Amnon said to Thamar: Bring the mess into the chamber, that I may eat at thy hand. And Thamar took the little messes which she had made, and brought them in to her brother Amnon, in the chamber.

11 And when she presented him the meat, he took hold of her, and said: Come, lie with me, my sister.

12 She answered him: Do not so, my brother, do not force me: for no such thing must be done in Israel. Do not thou this folly.

13 For I shall not be able to bear my shame, and thou shalt be as one of the fools in Israel: but rather speak to the king, and he will not deny me to thee.

14 But he would not hearken to her prayers, but being stronger, overpowered her, and lay with her.

15 Then Amnon hated her with an exceeding great hatred: so that the hatred, wherewith he hated her, was greater than the love with which he had loved her before. And Amnon said to her: Arise, and get thee gone.

16 She answered him: This evil, which now thou dost against me, in driving me away, is greater than that which thou didst before. And he would not hearken to her.

17 But calling the servant that ministered to him, he said: Thrust this woman out from me: and shut the door after her.

18 And she was clothed with a long robe: for the king's daughters, that were virgins, used such kind of garments. Then his servant thrust her out; and shut the door after her.

19 And she put ashes on her head, and rent her long robe, and laid her hands upon her head, and went on crying.

20 And Absalom, her brother, said to her: Hath thy brother Amnon lain with thee? but now, sister, hold thy sel he gave on this occasion shows that his wisdom was but carnal and worldly. Ch.—Jonadab seems to be styled Jonathan, chap. xxi. 21. C.

VER. 5. To me. Heb. "and give me meat, and dress the meat in my sight, that I may see it, and eat it," &c. H.—He pretends to be disgusted with food, (C.) unless he see his sister make it ready. H.

VER. 6. Messes. Heb. "cakes, or cordials;" what might refresh the heart, and give an appetite.

VER. 13. Folly, or implety, so directly contrary to the law. Lev. xviii. 6, and 9, and 11. H.

VER. 13. Thee. Was she ignorant that such marriages could not be allowed? C.—Some think she was. Grot. M.—Others believe that, in her present situation, she said what first came into her head, to get out of the hands of her brother. C.

VER. 15. Before. Such changes are not unfrequent in those who give way to disorderly passions. T.—God caused Amnon to be stung with remorse, and the evil spirit pushed him on to extremities, which filled the palace with scandal and bloodshed. M.

VER. 16. Greater, as being more public (T.); and all would think her guilty of some horrible misdemeanor. H.—It made the divulging of the crime in some degree necessary. M.

VER. 18. Robe. Heb. posim; long and variegated, like Joseph's. Gen. xxxvii. 3. The Sept. call it, καρπῶτος, to insinuate that it was "adorned with fruits," &c. H.

peace, he is thy brother : and afflict not thy heart for this thing. So Tamar remained pining away in the house of Absalom her brother.

21 And when king David heard of these things he was exceedingly grieved : and he would not afflict the spirit of his son Amnon, for he loved him, because he was his first-born.

22 But Absalom spoke not to Amnon, neither good nor evil : for Absalom hated Amnon, because he had ravished his sister Tamar.

23 And it came to pass, after two years, "that the sheep of Absalom were shorn in Baalhasor, which is near Ephraim : and Absalom invited all the king's sons :

24 And he came to the king, and said to him : Behold thy servant's sheep are shorn : Let the king, I pray, with his servants, come to his servant.

25 And the king said to Absalom : Nay, my son, do not ask that we should all come, and be chargeable to thee. And when he pressed him, and he would not go, he blessed him.

26 And Absalom said : If thou wilt not come, at least let my brother, Amnon, I beseech thee, come with us. And the king said to him : It is not necessary that he should go with thee.

27 But Absalom pressed him, so that he let Amnon and all the king's sons go with him. And Absalom made a feast, as it were the feast of a king.

28 And Absalom had commanded his servants, saying : Take notice when Amnon shall be drunk with wine, and when I shall say to you : Strike him, and kill him ; fear not : for it is I that command you : take courage, and be valiant men.

29 And the servants of Absalom did to Amnon, as Absalom had commanded them. And all the king's sons arose, and got up every man upon his mule, and fled.

30 And while they were yet in the way, a rumour came to David, saying : Absalom hath slain all the king's sons, and there is not one of them left.

31 Then the king rose up, and rent his garments, and fell upon the ground : and all his servants, that stood about him, rent their garments.

32 But Jonadab, the son of Semmaa, David's brother, answering, said : Let not my lord the king think, that all the king's sons are slain : Amnon only is dead, for he was appointed by the mouth of Absalom from the day that he ravished his sister, Tamar.

33 Now, therefore, let not my lord the king take this thing into his heart, saying : All the king's sons are slain for Amnon only is dead.

34 But Absalom fled away : and the young man that kept the watch, lifted up his eyes and looked : and behold there came much people by a by-way on the side of a mountain.

35 And Jonadab said to the king : Behold the king's sons are come : as thy servant said, so it is.

36 And when he had made an end of speaking, the king's sons also appeared : and, coming in, they lifted up their voice, and wept : and the king also, and all his servants, wept very much.

37 But Absalom fled, and went to Tholomai, the son of Ammiud, the king of Gessur. And David mourned for his son every day.

38 And Absalom, after he was fled, and come into Gessur, was there three years. And king David ceased to pursue after Absalom, because he was comforted concerning the death of Amnon.

CHAP. XIV.

Joab procureth Absalom's return, and his admittance to the king's presence.

AND^b Joab, the son of Sarvia, understanding that the king's heart was turned to Absalom,

2 Sent to Thecua, and fetched from thence a wise woman : and said to her : Feign thyself to be a mourner, and put on mourning apparel, and be not anointed with oil, that thou mayst be as a woman that had a long time been mourning for one dead.

3 And thou shalt go in to the king, and shalt speak to him in this manner. And Joab put the words in her mouth.

4 And when the woman of Thecua was come in to the king, she fell before him upon the ground, and worshipped, and said : Save me, O king.

5 And the king said to her : What is the matter with thee ? She answered : Alas, I am a widow woman : for my husband is dead.

6 And thy handmaid had two sons : and they quarrelled with each other in the field, and there was none to part them : and the one struck the other, and slew him.

VER. 21. And he, &c. This is not in Heb., &c., nor in S. Jerom's version. Josephus and some copies of the Sept. read it. But the reason here alleged would not suffice to excuse David. C.—Whatever faults he might have fallen into, he was not on that account to suffer crimes to remain unpunished (H.) ; and it is supposed that he testified his resentment to Amnon (Salien, &c.) ; though the Scripture be silent thereon. H.—Abulensis condemns him for too great remissness. M.

VER. 23. Two. Heb. "full years." He waited so long that he might put his murderous designs in execution with less suspicion. H.—Serp. VER. 4. Save me. So the Jews frequently repeated Hosanna ; and David addressed God, Save us. 1 Par. xvi. 35. T.

7 And behold the whole kindred rising against thy handmaid, saith: Deliver him that hath slain his brother, that we may kill him for the life of his brother, whom he slew, and that we may destroy the heir: and they seek to quench my spark which is left, and will leave my husband no name, nor remainder upon the earth.

8 And the king said to the woman: Go to thy house, and I will give charge concerning thee.

9 And the woman of Thecua said to the king: Upon me, my lord, be the iniquity, and upon the house of my father: but may the king and his throne be guiltless.

10 And the king said: If any one shall say aught against thee, bring him to me, and he shall not touch thee any more.

11 And she said: Let the king remember the Lord his God, that the next of kin be not multiplied to take revenge, and that they may not kill my son. And he said: As the Lord liveth, there shall not one hair of thy son fall to the earth.

12 Then the woman said: Let thy handmaid speak one word to my lord the king. And he said: Speak.

13 And the woman said: Why hast thou thought such a thing against the people of God? and why hath the king spoken this word, to sin, and not bring home again his own exile?

14 We all die, and like unto waters that return no more, we fall down into the earth: "neither will God have a soul to perish, but recallesh; meaning that he that is cast off, should not altogether perish.

15 Now therefore I am come, to speak this word to my lord the king, before the people. And thy handmaid said: I will speak to the king; it may be the king will perform the request of his handmaid.

16 And the king hath hearkened to me, to deliver his handmaid out of the hand of all that would destroy me, and my son together, out of the inheritance of God.

17 Then let thy handmaid say, that the word of my lord the king be made as a sacrifice. "For even as an angel of God, so is my lord the king, that he is neither moved with blessing nor cursing; wherefore the Lord thy God is also with thee.

18 And the king answering, said to the woman: Hide not from me the thing that I ask thee. And the woman said to him: Speak, my lord the king.

19 And the king said: Is not the hand of Joab with thee in all this? The woman answered, and said: By the health of thy soul, my lord O king, it is neither on the left hand, nor on the right, in all these things, which my lord the king hath spoken: for thy servant Joab, he commanded me, and he put all these words into the mouth of thy handmaid.

20 That I should come about with this form of speech, thy servant Joab commanded this: but thou, my lord the king, art wise, according to the wisdom of an angel of God, to understand all things upon earth.

21 And the king said to Joab: Behold I am appeased, and have granted thy request: Go, therefore, and fetch back the boy Absalom.

22 And Joab falling down to the ground upon his face, adored, and blessed the king: and Joab said: This day thy servant hath understood, that I have found grace in thy sight, my lord the king: for thou hast fulfilled the request of thy servant.

23 Then Joab arose and went to Gessur, and brought Absalom to Jerusalem.

24 But the king said: Let him return into his house, and let him not see my face. So Absalom returned into his house, and saw not the king's face.

25 But in all Israel there was not a man so comely, and so exceedingly beautiful, as Absalom: from the sole of the foot to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him.

26 And when he polled his hair (now he was polled once a year, because his hair was burdensome to him) he weighed the hair of his head at two hundred sicles, according to the common weight.

27 And there were born to Absalom three sons, and one daughter, whose name was Tamar; and she was very beautiful.

28 And Absalom dwelt two years in Jerusalem, and saw not the king's face.

VER. 9. Guiltless, if the murderer be not brought to execution. I am willing to bear all the blame and punishment. C.—Abigail and Rebecca speak in the same manner. 1 Kings xxv. 24; Gen. xxvii. 13. T.—Though kings may not pardon as they please, yet in this instance David might protect the widow's son, as there was no witness to prove that he had committed the murder. M.

VER. 11. Multiplied, or overwhelm me with their numbers. C.

VER. 13. Exile, the banished Absalom, (H.) who, in similar circumstances, has only committed a crime like that which the king is willing to pardon at the entreaty of a poor widow; though all the people of God seem interested for the welfare of Absalom, whom they look upon as the heir apparent. This was the drift of the whole parable. C.—To sin, may be referred to Absalom, who might be driven by despair to worship idols. M.

VER. 14. Earth; so great was the distress of the people at the absence of their darling prince. H.—Perish. Chal. "a just judge cannot take the money of iniquity." Le Clerc, "And cannot the prince (or judge) pardon a man, and devise means to leave his son no longer in exile?" C.—Prot. VER. 15. Before the people. Heb. also, "through fear, or respect for the

VER. 26. A year. Heb. and Sept. "from the end of days to days." Chal. "as it was convenient." But the Vulg. seems the best, (C.) and is followed by the Prot. version. H.—Sicles, including all his hair. The Hebrews wore their hair very long. C.—Weight. Heb. "after the king's stone," Babon; but one MS. has Boskol, with the Sept. "after the king's siele (Ken.) weight," at Babylon, as Pelletier supposes that this work was written towards the end of the captivity. Some suppose that r (200) has been substituted instead of d (4) or e (20), &c. But all are not convinced that the Hebrews formerly marked the numbers by letters. It is quite incredible that it should weigh 200 sicles, or 5 minæ of Alexandria, each consisting of 20 ounces. The Latin interpreter reads, "every eight months." C.—S. Epiphanius and Hero have 125 sicles, or about 31 ounces. H.—The Babylonian siele, here mentioned, was only the third part of that used by the Hebrews. D.

30 He said to his servants: You know the field of Joab, near my field, that hath a crop of barley: go now and set it on fire. So the servants of Absalom set the corn on fire. And Joab's servants coming, with their garments rent, said: The servants of Absalom have set part of the field on fire.

31 Then Joab arose, and came to Absalom to his house, and said: Why have thy servants set my corn on fire?

32 And Absalom answered Joab: I sent to thee, beseeching thee to come to me, that I might send thee to the king, to say to him: Wherefore am I come from Gessur? It had been better for me to be there. I beseech thee, therefore, that I may see the face of the king: and if he be mindful of my iniquity, let him kill me.

33 So Joab going in to the king, told him all: and Absalom was called for, and he went in to the king: and prostrated himself on the ground before him: and the king kissed Absalom.

Absalom's policy and conspiracy. David is obliged to flee.

VER. 29. To him. Joab, like a crafty courtier, would neither disoblige the king nor the prince, and therefore wished not to meddle in this affair; as he might either excite the suspicions of the one, or the resentment of the other, C.

VER. 33. Kissed Absalom, and thus was reconciled to his prodigal son. Luke xv. 20. The ungrateful wretch only took occasion, from his father's goodness, to alienate the minds of the people from him, by insinuating that he neglected the welfare of the people. H.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. Before him. Absalom's ambition could not wait patiently for the death of his father, who was not yet sixty years old, and had been first anointed forty years before, ver. 7. He looked upon himself as the heir apparent, Amnon being now slain, and Cheliab (or Daniel) either dead, as it is thought, or unfit for government, while Solomon was only eight years old. Salien.—The quality of his mother, and his own personal qualifications, made him despise his brethren, and he began to assume the equipage of a king. C.—David considered this as only the effect of juvenile vanity, and he had not a mind to irritate him without the utmost necessity. Salien.—Heb. "Absalom prepared for himself a chariot (Prot. chariots) and horses," &c. H.—It is not certain whether he had any other horsemen but those who mounted the chariots. Horses were then very scarce in Israel. C.—Adonias afterwards imitated his brother's ambition, during his father's life (3 Kings i. 5); so that evil was continually raised up against David out of his own house. Chap. xii. 11.

VER. 2. Israel. Absalom rises early for wickedness. He assumes the character of a most zealous and disinterested judge, as if to contrast his conduct with the remissness of some appointed by the king; though the Holy Ghost hears witness to the integrity of David. Chap. viii. 15. Who would not be deceived by such appearances, if the arts of hypocrites had not taught us to examine things to the bottom, and to be upon our guard? If thy eye be evil, thy whole body will be darksome. The intention decides all. H.

VER. 6. Enticed. Heb. "stole." The people were not aware of his designs. C.—Absalom rendered them dissatisfied with the present government, and led them to expect better days under his administration. H.

VER. 7. Forty, which Vatable dates from the time when the people petitioned for a king; Salien, from the first anointing of David. M.—It is probable enough that this number has been substituted instead of four, which Josephus, Theodoret, Syr., Arab., and many Latin MSS. read: and Absalom would employ this term that all that have business might come to me, and I might do them justice.

5 Moreover, when any man came to him to salute him, he put forth his hand, and took him, and kissed him.

6 And this he did to all Israel that came for judgment, to be heard by the king, and he enticed the hearts of the men of Israel.

7 And after forty years, Absalom said to king David: Let me go, and pay my vows which I have vowed to the Lord in Hebron.

8 For thy servant made a vow, when he was in Gessur of Syria, saying: If the Lord shall bring me again into Jerusalem, I will offer sacrifice to the Lord.

9 And king David said to him: Go in peace. And he arose, and went to Hebron.

10 And Absalom sent spies into all the tribes of Israel, saying: As soon as you shall hear the sound of the trumpet, say ye: Absalom reigneth in Hebron.

11 Now there went with Absalom two hundred men out of Jerusalem that were called, going with simplicity of heart, and knowing nothing of the design.

12 Absalom also sent for Achitophel, the Gilonite, David's counsellor, from his city, Gilo. And while he was offering sacrifices, there was a strong conspiracy, and the people running together increased with Absalom.

13 And there came a messenger to David, saying: All Israel, with their whole heart, followeth Absalom.

14 And David said to his servants, that were with him in Jerusalem: Arise, and let us flee: for we shall not escape else from the face of Absalom: make haste to go out, lest he come and overtake us, and bring ruin upon us, and smite the city with the edge of the sword.

15 And the king's servants said to him: Whatsoever our lord the king shall command, we, thy servants, will willingly execute.

16 And the king went forth, and all his household, on in securing the interest of Israel, before he declared himself openly their king. C.—He had been so long at Jerusalem since his return. Salien.—The Vulgate of Sixtus V. in that passage, as well as in the present, reads the smaller numbers, as he was guided by the best Latin copies, whereas Clement VIII. has also consulted "the Heb. fountains." "The former," says Kennicott, (Diss. ii. p. 205,) "seems to have been printed on a juster plan . . . and the old Latin version is likely to be found more pure in the edition of Sixtus than in that of Clement, since the latter seems to have corrected his Latin by the modern (i. e. the corrupted) Heb. copies." Dr. James observes, that "almost all the Latin editions received in the Church, for many years, (preceding 1590,) agree with Sixtus," who here reads quatuor, with many others; so that Grotius is well supported in having pronounced so decisively, "without doubt there is a mistake, two letters having been added at the end of arbā. The thing itself declares that four years had elapsed." Kennicott.—It appears to be indubitable, that some mistakes have taken place with regard to numbers. But that this place is incorrect may not be so certain, as the chronology of Salien, Usher, &c., explains it well enough. The Hebrew text was esteemed more correct when the last editions of S. Jerom and of the Vulg. were given, than it is at present. H.

VER. 8. Lord. The pretext seemed very bad, since he ought not to have delayed so long to perform his vow. Moreover, the usual places for sacrifice were Gabaon or Sion. But Absalom might plead a respect for the patriarchs, who were buried at Hebron, S. Jer. Trad. M.

VER. 10. Spies, or men to give a plausible appearance to his ambition, and to insinuate that all was done according to order, and with David's approbation. H.—Reigneth. He was solemnly anointed. Chap. xix. 10. M.

VER. 12. Achitophel, the grandfather of Bethsabee; to revenge whose dishonour he had instigated the young prince to revolt, and had planned his rebellion (Salien); so that he was ever ready to lend his assistance. C.

VER. 14. Ruin, of a house falling. Heb. "evil." David gives way to the fury of the rebels, hoping that they will enter into themselves, without bloodshed. He departs on foot, like a penitent, acknowledging the justice of God. Fear does not prompt him to leave Jerusalem, which was a place of such strength, (chap. v. 6,) nor are his attendants abandoned on a sudden by that courage, which made some of them a match for a whole army. David disposes of all things with great coolness and prudence. C.—He wishes to appease God. M foot: "and the king left ten women, his concubines, to keep the house.

17 And the king going forth, and all Israel, on foot, stood afar off from the house:

18 And all his servants walked by him, and the bands of the Cerethi, and the Phelethi, and all the Gethites, valiant warriors, six hundred men, who had followed him from Geth on foot, went before the king.

19 And the king said to Ethai, the Gethite: Why comest thou with us? return and dwell with the king; for thou art a stranger, and art come out of thy own place.

20 Yesterday thou camest, and to-day shalt thou be forced to go forth with us? but I shall go whither I am going: return thou, and take back thy brethren with thee, and the Lord will show thee mercy, and truth, because thou hast showed grace and fidelity.

21 And Ethai answered the king, saying: As the Lord liveth, and as my lord the king liveth: in what place soever thou shalt be, my lord the king, either in death, or in life, there will thy servant be.

22 And David said to Ethai: Come, and pass over. And Ethai, the Gethite, passed, and all the men that were with him, and the rest of the people.

23 And they all wept with a loud voice, and all the people passed over: the king also himself went over the brook Cedron, and all the people marched towards the way that looketh to the desert.

24 And Sadoc, the priest, also came, and all the Levites with him, carrying the ark of the covenant of God, and they set down the ark of God: and Abiathar went up, till all the people that was come out of the city had done passing.

25 And the king said to Sadoc: Carry back the ark of God into the city: if I shall find grace in the sight of the Lord, he will bring me again, and will show me both it, and his tabernacle.

26 But if he shall say to me: Thou pleasest me not; I am ready: let him do that which is good before him.

27 And the king said to Sadoc, the priest: O seer, return into the city in peace: And let Achimaas, thy son, and Jonathan, the son of Abiathar, your two sons, be with you.

28 Behold I will lie hid in the plains of the wilderness, till there come word from you to certify me.

* A. M. 2981.

29 So Sadoc and Abiathar carried back the ark of God into Jerusalem: and they tarried there:

30 But David went up by the ascent of Mount Olivet, going up and weeping, walking barefoot, and with his head covered; and all the people that were with him, went up with their heads covered, weeping.

31 And it was told David, that Achitophel also was in the conspiracy with Absalom; and David said: Infatuate, O Lord, I beseech thee, the counsel of Achitophel.

32 And when David was come to the top of the mountain, where he was about to adore the Lord, behold Chusai, the Arachite, came to meet him with his garment rent, and his head covered with earth.

33 And David said to him: If thou come with me, thou wilt be a burden to me.

34 But if thou return into the city, and wilt say to Absalom, I am thy servant, O king: as I have been thy father's servant, so I will be thy servant: thou shalt defeat the counsel of Achitophel.

35 And thou hast with thee Sadoc, and Abiathar, the priests: and what thing soever thou shalt hear out of the king's house, thou shalt tell it to Sadoc, and Abiathar, the priests.

36 And there are with them their two sons, Achimaas, the son of Sadoc, and Jonathan, the son of Abiathar: and you shall send by them to me every thing that you shall hear.

37 Then Chusai, the friend of David, went into the city, and Absalom came into Jerusalem.

CHAP. XVI.

Siba bringeth provisions to David. Semei curseth him. Absalom defleth his father's wives.

AND ^bwhen David was a little past the top of the hill, behold Siba, the servant of Miphiboseth, came to meet him, with two asses, laden with two hundred loaves of bread, and a hundred bunches of raisins, a hundred cakes of figs, and a vessel of wine.

2 And the king said to Siba: What mean these things? And Siba answered: The asses are for the king's household to sit on: and the loaves and the figs for thy servants to eat, and the wine to drink, if any man be faint in the desert.

3 And the king said: Where is thy master's son? And Siba answered the king: He remained in Jerusalem, saying: To-day will the house of Israel restore me the kingdom of my father.

4 And the king said to Siba: I give thee all that belonged to Miphiboseth. And Siba said: I beseech thee, let me find grace before thee, my lord the king.

5 And king David came as far as Bahurim: and behold there came out from thence a man of the kindred of the house of Saul, named Semei, the son of Gera; and coming out, *he cursed as he went on.

6 And he threw stones at David, and at all the servants of king David: and all the people, and all the warriors, walked on the right and on the left side of the king.

7 And thus said Semei, when he cursed, the king: Come out, come out, thou man of blood, and thou man of Belial.

8 The Lord hath repaid thee for all the blood of the house of Saul: because thou hast usurped the kingdom in his stead, and the Lord hath given the kingdom into the hand of Absalom, thy son: and behold thy evils press upon thee, because thou art a man of blood.

9 And Abisai, the son of Sarvia, said to the king: Why should this dead dog curse my lord the king? I will go, and cut off his head.

10 And the king said: What have I to do with you, ye sons of Sarvia? Let him alone, and let him curse: for the Lord hath bid him curse David: and who is he that shall dare say, why hath he done so?

11 And the king said to Abisai, and to all his servants: Behold my son, who came forth from my bowels, seeketh my life: how much more now a son of Jemini? let him alone, that he may curse as the Lord hath bidden him:

12 Perhaps the Lord may look upon my affliction, and the Lord may render me good for the cursing of this day.

13 And David, and his men with him, went by the way. And Semei, by the hill's side, went over against him, cursing, and casting stones at him, and scattering earth.

14 And the king, and all the people with him, came weary, and refreshed themselves there.

15 But Absalom and all his people came into Jerusalem, and Achitophel was with him.

16 And when Chusai, the Arachite, David's friend, was come to Absalom, he said to him: God save thee, O king; God save thee, O king.

VER. 10, 11. Hath bid him curse. Not that the Lord was the author of Semei's sin, which proceeded purely from his own malice, and the abuse of his free-will: but that knowing and suffering his malicious disposition to break out on this occasion, he made use of him as his instrument to punish David for his sins. 17 And Absalom said to him: Is this thy kindness to thy friend? why wentest thou not with thy friend?

18 And Chusai answered Absalom: Nay: for I will be his whom the Lord hath chosen, and all this people, and all Israel, and with him will I abide.

19 Besides this, whom shall I serve? is it not the king's son? As I have served thy father, so will I serve thee also.

20 And Absalom said to Achitophel: Consult what we are to do.

21 And Achitophel said to Absalom: Go in to the concubines of thy father, whom he hath left to keep the house: that when all Israel shall hear that thou hast disgraced thy father, their hands may be strengthened with thee.

22 *So they spread a tent for Absalom on the top of the house; and he went in to his father's concubines before all Israel.

23 Now the counsel of Achitophel, which he gave in those days, was as if a man should consult the oracle of God: so was all the counsel of Achitophel, both when he was with David, and when he was with Absalom.

CHAP. XVII.

Achitophel's counsel is defeated by Chusai: He sendeth intelligence to David. Achitophel hangeth himself.

AND *Achitophel said to Absalom: I will choose me twelve thousand men, and I will arise and pursue after David this night.

2 And coming upon him, (for he is now weary, and weak-handed,) I will defeat him: and when all the people is put to flight that is with him, I will kill the king, who will be left alone.

3 And I will bring back all the people, as if they were but one man: for thou seekest but one man: and all the people shall be in peace.

4 And his saying pleased Absalom, and all the ancients of Israel.

5 But Absalom said: Call Chusai, the Arachite, and let us hear what he also saith.

6 And when Chusai was come to Absalom, Absalom said to him: Achitophel hath spoken after this manner? shall we do it or not? what counsel dost thou give?

monly able, or allowed, to judge of the right which the prince has to the throne. But here Absalom was manifestly an usurper; and many still adhered to David. C.

VER. 21. Their hands may be strengthened, &c. The people might apprehend lest Absalom should be recoiled to his father; and therefore they followed him with some fear of being left in the lurch, till they saw such a crime committed as seemed to make a reconciliation impossible. Ch.—This was the most heinous outrage that a son could offer to his father. Jacob resented it to the last. Gen. xlix. 4.

VER. 23. Absalom. It tended to promote the end which was desired, (H.) whether good or bad. His prudence is hyperbolically compared with the Divine oracles (M.); and his authority must have had great weight, since David began to take precautions only after he had heard that Achitophel had joined the rebels. H.—The unjust commonly endeavour by all means to attach people to themselves: but God, in the end, turns their counsels against themselves. W.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. This night. Achitophel has a mind to show that he is not only an able statesman, but a good general. H.—By delays, "he would give the wicked an opportunity to repent, and the good would unite together. 7 And Chusai said to Absalom: The counsel that Achitophel hath given this time is not good.

8 And again Chusai said: Thou knowest thy father, and the men that are with him, that they are very valiant, and bitter in their mind, as a bear raging in the wood when her whelps are taken away: and thy father is a warrior, and will not lodge with the people.

9 Perhaps he now lieth hid in pits, or in some other place where he list: and when any one shall fall at the first, every one that heareth it, shall say: There is a slaughter among the people that followed Absalom.

10 And the most valiant man, whose heart is as the heart of a lion, shall melt for fear: for all the people of Israel know thy father to be a valiant man, and that all who are with him are valiant.

11 But this seemeth to me to be good counsel: Let all Israel be gathered to thee, from Dan to Bersabee, as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered: and thou shalt be in the midst of them.

12 And we shall come upon him in what place soever he shall be found: and we shall cover him, as the dew falleth upon the ground; and we shall not leave of the men that are with him, not so much as one.

13 And if he shall enter into any city, all Israel shall cast ropes round about that city, and we will draw it into the river: so that there shall not be found so much as one small stone thereof.

14 And Absalom, and all the men of Israel, said: The counsel of Chusai, the Arachite, is better than the counsel of Achitophel: and by the will of the Lord, the profitable counsel of Achitophel was defeated, that the Lord might bring evil upon Absalom.

15 And Chusai said to Sadoc, and Abiathar, the priests: Thus and thus did Achitophel counsel Absalom, and the ancients of Israel: and thus and thus did I counsel them.

16 Now therefore send quickly, and tell David, saying: Tarry not this night in the plains of the wilderness, but without delay pass over: lest the king be swallowed up, and all the people that are with him.

17 And Jonathan and Achimaas stayed by the fountain Rogel: and there went a maid and told them: and they went forward, to carry the message to King David, for they might not be seen, nor enter into the city.

18 But a certain boy saw them, and told Absalom. but they making haste, went into the house of a certain man in Bahurim, who had a well in his court, and they went down into it.

19 And the woman took, and spread a covering over the mouth of the well, as it were to dry sodden barley: and so the thing was not known.

20 And when Absalom's servants were come into the house, they said to the woman: Where is Achimaas, and Jonathan? and the woman answered them: They passed on in haste, after they had tasted a little water. But they that sought them, when they found them not, returned into Jerusalem.

21 And when they were gone, they came up out of the well, and going on, told king David, and said: Arise and pass quickly over the river: for this manner of counsel has Achitophel given against you.

22 So David arose, and all the people that were with him, and they passed over the Jordan, until it grew light, and not one of them was left that was not gone over the river.

23 But Achitophel, seeing that his counsel was not followed, saddled his ass, and arose, and went home to his house and to his city: and putting his house in order, hanged himself, and was buried in the sepulchre of his father.

24 But David came to the camp, and Absalom passed over the Jordan, he and all the men of Israel with him.

25 Now Absalom appointed Amasa in Joab's stead, over the army: and Amasa was the son of a man who was called Jethra of Jezrael, who went in to Abigail, the daughter of Naas, the sister of Sarvia, who was the mother of Joab.

26 And Israel encamped with Absalom in the land of Galaad.

CHAP. XVIII.

Absalom is defeated, and slain by Joab. David mourneth for him.

AND^a David having reviewed his people, appointed over them captains of thousands, and of hundreds,

2 And sent forth a third part of the people under the hand of Joab; and a third part under the hand of Abisai, the son of Sarvia, Joab's brother; and a third part under the hand of Ethai, who was of Geth: and the king said to the people: I also will go forth with you.

3 And the people answered: Thou shalt not go forth: for if we flee away, they will not much mind us: or if half of us should fall, they will not greatly care: for thou alone art accounted for ten thousand: it is better, therefore, that thou shouldst be in the city to succour us.

4 And the king said to them: What seemeth good to you, that will I do. And the king stood by the gate: and all the people went forth by their troops, by hundreds and by thousands.

5 And the king commanded Joab, and Abisai, and Ethai, saying: Save me the boy Absalom. And all the people heard the king giving charge to all the princes concerning Absalom.

6 So the people went out into the field against Israel, and the battle was fought in the forest of Ephraim.

7 And the people of Israel were defeated there by David's army, and a great slaughter was made that day of twenty thousand men.

8 And the battle there was scattered over the face of all the country, and there were many more of the people whom the forest consumed, than whom the sword devoured that day.

9 And it happened that Absalom met the servants of David, riding on a mule: and as the mule went under a thick and large oak, his head stuck in the oak: and while he hung between the heaven and the earth, the mule on which he rode passed on.

10 And one saw this, and told Joab, saying: I saw Absalom hanging upon an oak.

11 And Joab said to the man that told him: If thou sawest him, why didst thou not stab him to the ground, and I would have given thee ten sicles of silver, and a belt?

12 And he said to Joab: If thou wouldst have paid down in my hands a thousand pieces of silver, I would not lay my hands upon the king's son: for, in our hearing, the king charged thee, and Abisai, and Ethai, saying: Save me the boy Absalom.

13 Yea, and if I should have acted boldly against my own life, this could not have been hid from the king, and wouldst thou have stood by me?

14 And Joab said: Not as thou wilt; but I will set upon him in thy sight. So he took three lances in his hand, and thrust them into the heart of Absalom: and whilst he yet panted for life, sticking on the oak, 15 Ten young men, armour-bearers of Joab, ran up, and striking him, slew him.

16 And Joab sounded the trumpet, and kept back the people from pursuing after Israel in their flight, being willing to spare the multitude.

17 And they took Absalom, and cast him into a great pit in the forest, and they laid an exceedingly great heap of stones upon him: but all Israel fled to their own dwellings.

18 Now Absalom had reared up for himself, in his life-time, a pillar, which is in the king's valley: for he said: I have no son, and this shall be the monument of my name. And he called the pillar by his own name, and it is called the hand of Absalom, to this day.

19 And Achimaas, the son of Sadoc, said: I will run and tell the king, that the Lord hath done judgment for him from the hand of his enemies.

20 And Joab said to him: Thou shalt not be the messenger this day, but shalt bear tidings another day: this day I will not have thee bear tidings, because the king's son is dead.

21 And Joab said to Chusi: Go, and tell the king what thou hast seen. Chusi bowed down to Joab, and ran.

VER. 15. Ten. Naharai alone is specified. Chap. xxiii. 37. Why he had ten does not appear. C.—Slew him, inflicting many wounds on him; though Joab had already done sufficient. H.—It is asked whether Joab did wrong? He consulted the public welfare, rather than the parental affection of the king for a son, whom the law condemned to die for rebellion, incest, and murder. Lev. xviii. 29; chap. xiii. 28. But still he was not a proper judge to inflict this death in cold blood; and thus to render the salvation of Absalom's soul more desperate. David would, however, have done well to have punished this son, as incorrigible and dangerous to the state. II.

VER. 17. Him. Thus was the law executed upon Absalom. Deut. xxi. 18. S. Jerom. M.—History scarcely affords a more detestable character; and his punishment was no less terrible than instructive. C.

VER. 18. No son. The sons mentioned above, (chap. xiv. 27,) were dead when this pillar was erected; unless we suppose he raised this pillar before they were born (Ch.); or meant this pillar to perpetuate his memory, when they should be no more. Joseph. vii. 9.—This author says that it was a pillar of marble; so that it is different from that which Doubdan (15) mentions, observing that all who pass throw a stone at it. Thus was his vanity chastised!—Han, work. M.—The same word is translated, triumphal arch. 1 Kings xv. 9. C.

VER. 21. Chusi; perhaps of Ethiopian extraction. Grot said to him: Why wilt thou run, my son? thou wilt not be the bearer of good tidings.

23 He answered: But what if I run? and he said to him: Run. Then Achimaas, running by a nearer way, passed Chusi.

24 And David sat between the two gates: and the watchman that was on the top of the gate upon the wall, lifting up his eyes, saw a man running alone.

25 And crying out, he told the king: and the king said: If he be alone, there are good tidings in his mouth. And as he was coming apace and drawing nearer,

26 The watchman saw another man running, and crying aloud from above, he said: I see another man running alone. And the king said: He, also, is a good messenger.

27 And the watchman said: The running of the foremost seemeth to me like the running of Achimaas, the son of Sadoc. And the king said: He is a good man: and cometh with good news.

28 And Achimaas crying out, said to the king: God save thee, O king. And falling down before the king with his face to the ground, he said: Blessed be the Lord thy God, who hath shut up the men that have lifted up their hands against my lord the king.

29 And the king said: Is the young man, Absalom, safe? And Achimaas said: I saw a great tumult, O king, when thy servant Joab sent me thy servant: I know nothing else.

30 And the king said to him: Pass, and stand here.

31 And when he had passed, and stood still, Chusi appeared: and coming up, he said: I bring good tidings, my lord the king: for the Lord hath judged for thee this day, from the hand of all that have risen up against thee.

32 And the king said to Chusi: Is the young man, Absalom, safe? and Chusi answering him, said: Let the enemies of my lord the king, and all that rise against him unto evil, be as the young man is.

33 The king therefore being much moved, went up to the high chamber over the gate, and wept. And as he went, he spoke in this manner: "My son, Absalom; Absalom, my son: would to God that I might die for thee, Absalom my son, my son Absalom."

CHAP. XIX.

David, at the remonstrances of Joab, ceaseth his mourning. He is invited back, and met by Semei and Miphiboseth: a strife between the men of Juda and the men of Israel.

• Infra, xix. 4.

VER. 22. Tidings. People of reputation did not wish to perform this office. 1 Kings ii. 42. Heb. "these tidings will bring thee nothing;" or, "do not suit thee." C.—Prot. "seeing thou hast no tidings ready?" H.

VER. 24. Two gates, one leading into the town, the other into the country. In the middle was a chamber for public meetings, and another above. Job xxix. 7. On the roof a guard was stationed on this occasion.

VER. 29. Else. This was false, ver. 20. C.—But he wished not to communicate the bad news; for which reason he had got first to the king. H.

VER. 32. Is. This was as much as to tell plainly that he was dead, (M.) or, at least a prisoner. But David understood him right. H.

VER. 33. Wept, in private. M.—Would. David lamented the death of Absalom because of the wretched state in which he died; and therefore would have been glad to have saved his life, even by dying for him. In this he was a figure of Christ weeping, praying, and dying for his rebellious children, and even for them that crucified him. Ch. S. Amb. (de Ob. Valent.) Theod. q. 35. C.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 2. Mourning, as is commonly the case in civil wars. The king being oppressed with grief, a triumph was out of season. M.

VER. 3. Shunned. Heb. "stole away," fearing to enter; though they did at last, in a clandestine manner, (C.) by another gate. M.

AND it was told Joab, that the king wept and mourned for his son:

2 And the victory that day was turned into mourning unto all the people: for the people heard say that day. The king grieveth for his son.

3 And the people shunned the going into the city that day, as the people would do that hath turned their backs, and fled away from the battle.

4 And the king covered his head, and cried with a loud voice: O my son Absalom, O Absalom my son, O my son.

5 Then Joab, going into the house to the king, said: Thou hast shamed this day the faces of all thy servants, that have saved thy life, and the lives of thy sons, and of thy daughters, and the lives of thy wives, and the lives of thy concubines.
